1. CONSTRUCTION AND EFFECT OF STATUTES.

See also post, B, I., col. 148.

Barring of Remedy, not Right.]—In actions for debts, the statute bars the remedy only, not the debt. Higgins v. Scott, 2 B. & Ad. 413; 9 L. J. (o.s.) K. B. 262. Wainford v. Barker, 1 Ld. Raym. 232. Spears v. Hartly, 3 Esp. 81.

Where a foreign statute of limitations requires proceedings to be taken within a shorter period than that prescribed by the English statute, but like the English statute does not affect causes of action, but only the remedy in respect of them, a foreign judgment declaring that a claim is barred by the local statute of limitations is no bar to an action in this country for that same claim within the period prescribed by the English law. Harris v. Quine, 10 B. & S. 644; 38 L. J., Q. B. 331; L. R. 4 Q. B. 653; 20 L. T. 947; 17 W. R. 967.

A firm of attorneys in the Isle of Man was retained by the defendant, in 1858, to conduct a suit in one of the Manx courts in which he was defendant. The suit was dismissed in April, 1861; in September, 1861, the plaintiff in the suit appealed to a superior court, and the attorneys continued to act for the defendant, and conducted the appeal on his behalf up to the 1st of October, 1862. By the Manx statute law an action on a simple contract brought in the temporal courts of the island must be commenced within three years of the accrual of the cause of action. The attorneys brought an action in one of the Manx courts more than three years after October, 1862, and the court decided that the action was barred by the statute. They afterwards commenced an action in this country in January, 1868, to which the defendant pleaded, first, the judgment of the Manx court, and, secondly, the English Statute of Limitations:—Held, first, that, as the Manx statute barred the remedy only, and did not extinguish the debt, the judgment of the Manx court was no bar; and, secondly, that, under the circumstances, there was a continuous employment of the attorneys, and that therefore none of the items were barred by the statute. Ib.

Open Account.]—The Statute of Limitations is no plea in bar to an open account. Scudamore v. White, 1 Vern. 456.

Equitable Assignee of Leaseholds.] — The liability of, is by simple contract, and subject to the limitation of six years. Sanders v. Benson, 4 Beav. 350.

When Statute Pleaded, Onus of Proof on Plaintiff to shew the Debt not within It.]—See Wilby v. Henman, col. 147.

II. COMPUTATION OF PERIOD OF LIMITATION.

1. Time when Statute begins to Run.

a. In Actions on Bills and Notes.

Promissory Note—Payable "on Demand."]—A promissory note payable on demand is payable immediately, and the Statute of Limitations runs from the date of the note, and not from the time of demand. Christie v. Fonswick, 1 Selw. N. P. 136, 361.

So, a note, payable on demand, with lawful interest, is payable immediately, and therefore the statute runs from the date of the note. Norton v. Ellam, 2 M. & W. 461; M. & H. 69; 6 L. J., Ex. 121; 1 Jur. 433.

—— "Two Years after Demand."]—But where a note is made payable "two years after demand," the statute does not begin to run until the two years after the demand have elapsed. Thorpe v. Coombe, 8 D. & R. 347; R. & M. 388; 29 R. R. 485.

—— "Three Months after Demand."] — In May, 1857, J. R. gave to R. R. a promissory note for payment of 150*l.* three months after demand, no interest being reserved. J. R. died in 1869, and R. R. in 1878. The note was in R. R.'s possession at his death, and he had indorsed upon it receipts in November, 1857, and August, 1858, each for half a year's interest. It appeared that no other interest had ever been paid. J. R.'s estate being administered by the court, R. R.'s executor claimed to prove on the promissory note: — Held, on appeal, that the admissions by the payee of the payment of interest were evidence of a demand having been made in 1857 so as to make the 150*l.* immediately payable, and that the Statute of Limitations was a bar to the claim. Rutherford, In re, Brown v. Rutherford, 49 L. J., Ch. 654; 14 Ch. D. 687; 43 L. T. 105; 28 W. R. 802—C. A.

Semble, that apart from the Statute of Limitations the claim ought to have been rejected as a stale demand. Ib.

—— "Five Years after Date."]—A promissory note given by a defendant to the plaintiff, payable five years after date, for value received, is evidence of an account stated, against which the statute does not commence running until the maturity of the note. Fryer v. Roe, 12 C. B. 437.

—— "After Sight."]—The statute is no bar to an action on a note payable after sight, unless a presentation for payment six years before the action is proved. Holmes v. Kerrison, 2 Taunt. 323; 11 R. R. 594.

Where a note was payable after sight, with interest thereon, and the interest was duly paid for several years:—Held, that the note must be taken to have been acted upon, according to its form and tenor, and, therefore, that the presentment for sight must have been made before the interest was paid, and that the payment became due upon the note at the prescribed date after such presentment, and that the statute would begin to run from the time the payment so became due. Way v. Bassett, 5 Hare, 55; 15 L. J., Ch. 1; 10 Jur. 891.

—— On Conditions.]—A note was made more than six years ago, and deposited with a banker, to be delivered to the payee on his producing a certain other note cancelled; the cause of action to the payee on the first note accrues on receiving it from the banker, and is not barred by the lapse of six years from the date. Savage v. Aldren, 2 Stark. 232; 19 R. R. 707.

—— Falling Due on Sunday — Mercantile Usage — Ord. LXIV. r. 3.]—The plaintiff in the action sued on a promissory note at three months, dated the 11th March, 1874; the note was therefore primâ facie due on the 14th June of the same year. The 14th of June was a Sunday. The writ in the action bore date 14th June, 1880, which was a Monday. It was contended that the right of action was barred by the Statute of Limitations:—Held, that the action was barred, as the mercantile usage in the matter of days of grace had the effect of law, and that Ord. LXIV. r. 3, did not extend the time fixed by the Statute of Limitations. Morris v. Richards, 45 L. T. 210; 46 J. P. 37.

On Note given as Security for Banking Account.]—See Hartland v. Jukes, col. 9.

Against Right of Party to Note as against Co-Surety and Principal.]—See Davies v. Humphries, col. 10.

Bill of Exchange—Days of Grace.]—The three days' grace allowed by the custom of merchants is allowable on bills drawn and payable in Scotland. The limitation of an action on such a bill, therefore, only begins to run from the third or last day of grace. Ferguson v. Douglas, 6 Bro. P. C. 276.

—— Payable at Future Period.]—Where a bill of exchange is drawn payable at a certain future period, for the amount of a sum of money lent by the payee to the drawer at the time of drawing the bill, the payee may recover the money, although six years have elapsed since the time when the loan was advanced; the statute beginning to operate only from the time when the money was to be repaid, i.e. when the bill became due. Wittersheim v. Carlisle (Countess), 1 H. Bl. 631.

—— Non-Acceptance.]—A holder of a bill of exchange, on non-acceptance, and protest, and notice thereon, has an immediate right of action against the drawer, and does not acquire a fresh right of action on the nonpayment of the bill when due, and the statute, therefore, runs against him from the former, and not from the latter period. Whitehead v. Walker, 9 M. & W. 506; 11 L. J., Ex. 168.

—— Blank Bill.]—A defendant, in 1840, gave A. for value his acceptance in blank on a 5*s.* stamp. A., in 1852, filled in his own name as drawer for 200*l.*, at five months. The defendant being sued on the bill by an innocent indorsee for value, pleaded the statute:—Held, that the statute ran from the time the bill became due as filled up, and not from the time it would have become due if completed when it was accepted in blank, and that the plaintiff was entitled to recover. Montague v. Perkins, 22 L. J., C. P. 187; 17 Jur. 557; 1 W. R. 437.

—— Dishonour of.]—K. being indebted to the plaintiff and to the defendant, and also to a banking company, it was agreed between all the parties that, to secure K.'s debt to the company, the defendant should draw upon K. three bills of exchange, payable to the plaintiff, and that the plaintiff should indorse them to the company. The bills became due in 1843, and were dishonoured. In 1847 the company sued the plaintiff on the bills, and the plaintiff, in 1851, paid the amount:—Held, that the plaintiff was barred by the statute from suing the defendant as drawer. Webster v. Kirk, 17 Q. B. 944; 21 L. J., Q. B. 159; 16 Jur. 247.

—— Presentment and Dishonour of—Delay.]—B. was possessed of considerable funds invested in consols. In consequence of doubts having arisen as to whether B. was married or not, her bankers refused to receive and pay the dividends on those funds to her until they were satisfied of the fact of her not being married. In August, 1872, in order to raise money, B., who was living in France, drew a document purporting to be a bill of exchange, payable on demand, for 7,000*l.* in the Bank of England "on account of the dividends and interest due on the capital and dividends registered in the books of" the Bank of England. B. had no account with the bank. The document was in April, 1873, indorsed to G., with whom B. was living, and by him was indorsed in August, 1876, to the claimant. These indorsements purported to be for value, and the claimant, who was not cross-examined, deposed that the indorsement to him had been made to guarantee the payment of loans and advances made by him. B. died intestate in France in 1878. On the 2nd February, 1884, the document was presented on behalf of the claimant to the Bank of England, and on payment being refused it was duly protested. A claim in respect of the amount due under the document was made upon B.'s estate, which was being administered by the court:—Held, that the claim was not barred by the Statute of Limitations, as the time only began to run from the presentment and dishonour, but that G. had no right to deal with the bill, and that the lapse of time between the indorsement to G. and that to the claimant, and before presentment, and other circumstances of suspicion, were such as to affect the claimant with the equities between B. and G., and to disentitle him to receive payment. Boyse, In re, Crofton v. Crofton, 56 L. J., Ch. 135; 33 Ch. D. 612; 55 L. T. 391; 35 W. R. 247.

—— Action against Administrator of Acceptor.]—Where the bill prayed an account on foot of two bills of exchange, accepted by A., deceased, and due and unpaid at the time of his death; and of the costs and expenses incurred by the plaintiff as administrator of A. down to the time when the grant of administration was revoked; and that the amount of the bills due to the plaintiff as a creditor of A., and of the plaintiff's expenses as administrator, might be paid out of A.'s personal estate. It appeared that A. had no real estate. The expenses, &c., consisted nearly altogether of the plaintiff's costs in a cause instituted by him as administrator in 1838, for discovery of assets, which, after issue joined and publication passed, was frustrated by the present defendants, who were also defendants in that cause, and who, being A.'s next of kin, and in possession of his assets, for the purpose of avoiding a decree, lodged in the Prerogative Court the will of A., which they had previously suppressed, and procured a revocation of the grant of administration to the plaintiff, and a new grant to themselves cum testamento annexo. They now pleaded the Statute of Limitations as to the bills of exchange:—Held, that the plea should be allowed, as the plaintiff did not appear to have been under disability, and had not proceeded for his demand within six years after the right of action accrued. Howlett v. Lambert, 2 Ir. Eq. R. 254.

—— In case of Bill accepted after Death of Payee, Time runs only after Letters of Administration granted.]—See Murray v. E. India Co., col. 49.

—— Action for not Accepting.]—The Statute of Limitations, in an action by drawer against drawee for not accepting, does not begin to run from the time of refusal to accept or pay the bill, but from the time when the plaintiff sustains any damage from the breach of the implied promise to indemnify him. Huntley v. Sanderson, 1 C. & M. 489; 3 Tyr. 469; 2 L. J., Ex. 204.

—— On Contract to indemnify Accommodation Acceptor.]—See Reynolds v. Doyle, col. 9.

—— When Acceptor of Foreign Bill is here when Bill due, Time runs from then.]—See Don v. Lippmann, col. 38.

Undated Cheque.]—An undated cheque was given by C. B. to A. J. P. in March, 1878, and accepted by the latter in discharge of a larger sum. C. B. went abroad in March, 1878, and died there in 1884. At the time of drawing the cheque C. B. had not sufficient moneys at his bank to meet it, and was negotiating a loan, which he expected shortly to complete, out of which the cheque would be paid. The loan was not completed. A. J. P. was informed of that fact. The cheque remained undated, and was never presented for payment. In 1885 A. J. P. commenced proceedings upon the cheque:—Held, that the Statute of Limitations barred the claim, as the six years began to run when the letter was received stating that the loan would not be completed, and had long since elapsed. Bethell, In re, Bethell v. Bethell, 56 L. J., Ch. 334; 34 Ch. D. 561; 56 L. T. 92; 35 W. R. 330.

Money Lent in Form of Cheque.]—The plaintiff, in pursuance of an agreement to lend money to the defendant, sent him a cheque on the 14th

June, 1861, which was received by him on the following day, and presented for payment and paid on the 21st June, 1861. On the 21st June, 1867, an action was commenced to recover the amount of the cheque:—Held, that the cheque not having been given in payment of any pre-existing debt, the cause of action did not arise till it was actually paid, and that the action was not barred by the statute. Garden v. Bruce, 37 L. J., C. P. 112; L. R. 3 C. P. 300; 17 L. T. 544; 16 W. R. 366.

b. In Actions on Contracts of Indemnity or Guarantee.

Indemnity.]—A right to sue upon a contract of indemnity against the costs of an action is first vested, when the party to whom the indemnity is given pays the bill of costs, and not when it is delivered to him, and the statute therefore does not begin to run against his right of action until after such payment. Collinge v. Heywood, 1 P. & D. 502; 9 A. & E. 633; 2 W. W. & H. 107; 8 L. J., Q. B. 98.

Upon a contract to indemnify an accommodation acceptor, the statute begins to run from the time at which the plaintiff is damnified by actual payment, and not from the day when the bill became payable. Reynolds v. Doyle, 2 Scott (N.R.) 45; 1 Man. & G. 753; 1 Drink. 1; 4 Jur. 992.

A note being given by A. and a surety to a banker, and a contemporaneous memorandum of agreement, shewing the note to be given as security for the banking account to be kept by A. with the bank:—Held, that the statute did not run from the time when A. became indebted to the bank, but from the time when the balance was struck. Hartland v. Jukes, 1 H. & C. 667; 3 F. & F. 149; 32 L. J., Ex. 162; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 180; 7 L. T. 792; 11 W. R. 519.

When a party is called upon to pay the debt of another, his remedy over against such other runs from the time of actual payment by him, and not from the time when he became merely liable to pay. Angrove v. Tippett, 11 L. T. 708.

—— Action by Drawer of Bill against Drawee for not accepting.]—See Huntley v. Sanderson, col. 8.

—— Debtor and Co-Debtor.]—As between co-debtors the Statute of Limitations commences to run, not from the accrual of the joint debt to the creditor, but from the time when one of the co-debtors is damnified by being compelled to pay more than his just share of the common debt. Sect. 14 of the Mercantile Law Amendment Act, 1856, is intended only to give protection against the common creditor, and does not affect the rights and liabilities of the co-contractors inter se. Wolmershausen v. Gullick (62 L. J., Ch. 773; [1893] 2 Ch. 514) approved. Gardner v. Brooke, [1897] 2 Ir. R. 6—C. A.

—— Surety and Co-Surety.]—The Statute of Limitations does not begin to run as against a surety claiming contribution until his own liability is ascertained. Wolmershausen v. Gullick, [1893] 2 Ch. 514; 3 R. 610; 68 L. T. 753. See also Robinson v. Harkin, col. 45.

—— When Paid by Instalments.]—H., and plaintiff and D., as his sureties, joined in making a promissory note. The amount of the principal and interest due on the promissory note was paid by the plaintiff more than six years before the commencement of the suit, with the exception of 30*l.*, which was paid by him during that period. The plaintiff having brought an action for contribution against D.:—Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to recover only to the extent of 30*l.*, which had been paid within the six years, and that the statute was a bar to the rest, as the right of action attached as soon as the plaintiff had paid more than his proportion. Davies v. Humphries, 6 M. & W. 153; 9 L. J., Ex. 263; 4 Jur. 250.

Held, also, in an action on the same note against the principal, that the statute was a bar to all except 30*l.*, as the plaintiff had a right of action against the principal the moment he paid anything, for so much money paid to his use. Ib.

—— Guarantee.]—A., in consideration of B.'s supplying C. with goods, guaranteed to B. the payment of the price. B. having supplied C. with goods, and C. having neglected to pay the price, A. in consideration of B.'s extending to C. a period of two years and upwards for the liquidation of his debt, agreed to reserve to B. all right and claim which B. might then have against him, A., by virtue of the security previously entered into on C.'s behalf, and to be bound by it, if, at the expiration of such period, B.'s demand should not have been fully discharged:—Held, that A.'s liability attached upon default made by C. after the expiration of two years and a few days; that B.'s right of action then accrued; and that, therefore, the statute then began to run. Holl v. Hadley, 4 N. & M. 515; 2 A. & E. 758; 4 L. J., K. B. 126.

Payment on Demand—Present Debt—Collateral Sum—Condition Precedent.]—Where there is a present debt and a promise to pay on demand, the demand is not considered to be a condition precedent to the bringing of an action. Secus, where there is a promise to pay a collateral sum on demand. Birks v. Trippet (1 Wms. Saund. 32) followed. Brown's Estate, In re, Brown v. Brown, 62 L. J., Ch. 695; [1893] 2 Ch. 300; 3 R. 463; 69 L. T. 12; 41 W. R. 440.

In 1816 G. shipped goods on board a vessel, chartered by him for Calcutta, and B. & Co. made advances to enable him to do so, under an arrangement that the goods should be transmitted to the agents at Calcutta of B. & Co., who were to dispose of the outward cargo there, and send the proceeds in goods or bills to B. & Co. in London, who were to reimburse themselves their charges and hold the balance at the disposal of G. In November, 1817, G. being in difficulties, and indebted to the defendants in 850*l.*, they and G. applied to B. & Co. to pay off this debt by a further advance to G. on his consignment, and the defendants gave B. & Co. the following guarantee:—"Messrs. B. & Co., you having expressed some doubts of the propriety of paying G.'s draft on you for 850*l.*, in our favour, we hereby engage, if you will pay us the same, that we will reimburse you the amount on demand, with interest, in the event of your finding it necessary to call upon us to do so, either from the state of G.'s pending account with you or from any other circumstances." B. & Co. therefore accepted and paid a bill for 850*l.*, drawn by G. on them in favour of the defendants. The vessel returned to England with a cargo in April, 1818, when C., the owner, (G. having become bankrupt), gave notice to the East India Company (in whose docks she lay) not to deliver any part of the cargo without his authority; they thereupon sold the cargo and paid the owner's demand for freight, and in consequence of conflicting claims from G.'s assignees and from B. & Co., filed an interpleader bill, and paid the balance of the proceeds into court. Proceedings at law and equity were continued between all the parties, under legal advice, up to 1837, when the result was, that B. & Co. were obliged to pay C.'s costs. In 1838, B. & Co. demanded of the defendants the 850*l.* due by the guarantee, with interest, and their share of the expenses incurred by the law proceedings, and, on their refusing to pay, brought an action against them on the guarantee:—Held, that the statute began to run against the plaintiffs, not from the termination of the legal proceedings in 1837, but from the return and sale of the cargo in 1818, when all the facts were ascertained upon which the defendant's legal liability depended, and therefore it was a bar to the action. Colvin v. Buckle, 8 M. & W. 680; 11 L. J., Ex. 33.

Construction—Mortgage Debt.]—In January, 1881, A. executed a mortgage to secure an advance of 2,000*l.* and interest which contained the usual covenants for payment of the principal and interest. On 9th May, 1882, B. executed a document in which he was expressed to "guarantee" to the mortgagee "repayment of the sum of 2,000*l.* and interest for the same." A. paid off 600*l.* of the mortgage debt and also the interest down to July, 1891. The mortgagee in October, 1891, called upon B. to pay the balance remaining due with interest under his guarantee, and upon his refusal to do so the mortgagee in May, 1892, brought an action against him to recover the same:—Held, upon the construction of the document of 9th May, 1882, that B. made himself answerable for the repayment of the 2,000*l.* and interest in accordance with the terms of the mortgage; that as the mortgagee did not bind himself not to sue A., he must be treated as having agreed to abstain from suing for a reasonable time; that such time expired long before the commencement of six years before the action was brought, and that therefore the mortgagee's claim against B. was barred by the Statute of Limitations (21 Jac. 1, c. 16). Henton v. Paddison, 3 R. 450; 68 L. T. 405.

c. In Actions on Solicitors' Bills.

From Completion of Work.]—The cause of action in respect of work done by a solicitor arises upon the completion of the work, and not at the expiration of one month from the delivery of a bill of costs, and therefore the Statute of Limitations runs from the completion of the work. Coburn v. Colledge, 66 L. J., Q. B. 462; [1897] 1 Q. B. 702; 76 L. T. 608; 45 W. R. 488—C. A.

Conduct of Case—Items prior to Six Years.]—Where a client employs an attorney to conduct a suit, it is an entire contract to carry on the suit to its termination, and determinable only on reasonable notice; and where no such notice has been given, the statute is no bar to that part of the demand which is for business done more than six years before the commencement of an action by the attorney for business done in the suit, which was not brought to a termination till within six years of the commencement of the action. Harris v. Osbourn, 2 C. & M. 629; 4 Tyr. 445; 3 L. J., Ex. 182.

Where costs are incurred in a suit, the statute does not begin to run against the earlier items, until the suit is terminated. Martindale v. Falkner, 2 C. B. 706.

—— Effect of Appeal.]—Two attorneys in partnership having been retained to defend an action, it was decided in favour of the defendant, upon which the plaintiffs appealed. While the appeal was pending, the partnership was dissolved, and the proceedings were continued by one of the partners separately:—Held, that the partners were not entitled to sue for their costs till the appeal was decided, so that the statute did not until then begin to run as against their claim. Harris v. Quine, 10 B. & S. 644; 38 L. J., Q. B. 331; L. R. 4 Q. B. 653; 20 L. T. 947; 17 W. R. 967.

Case never Concluded.]—A solicitor was retained in a chancery suit in which his client was a defendant, and an order was made that a supplemental bill should be filed, to make the next of kin parties to the suit; no decree was ever made, nor was there any further step taken in the suit. Upwards of ten years after this order had been made the solicitor's client died:—Held, in an action by the solicitor, against the representative of the client for his bill of costs up to the time when the order was made, that the debt was not barred by the statute. Whitehead v. Lord, 7 Ex. 691; 21 L. J., Ex. 239.

Addition of Item within Six Years.]—A proctor sued for the amount of his bill, which was chiefly for work done in prosecuting an appeal to judgment: after the judgment a communication had been made by the adverse party to the proctor, and attended to by him, respecting the costs, and an item in respect of this transaction was added to his bill. No previous part of the demand accrued within six years:—Held, that the latter item did not take the rest out of the statute. Rothery v. Munnings, 1 B. & Ad. 15; 8 L. J. (o.s.) K. B. 386.

A. employed an attorney in procuring him money to pay off a mortgage. In an action against A. for the bill of costs, it appeared by items in the bill that the attorney had made applications in several quarters for this purpose, but without success, after which he wrote to A. informing him what he had done and requesting to know his wishes. This item bore date more than six years before action. The next, dated within six years, was, "Paid the postage of your answer." By subsequent items it appeared that further endeavours were made by the attorney to raise the money. Ultimately it was obtained:—Held, that the transaction was not one in which the attorney's employment was continuous, and that the latter items did not draw after them the previous ones, so as to take these out of the statute. Phillips v. Broadley, 9 Q. B. 744; 16 L. J., Q. B. 72; 11 Jur. 264.

From last Item in Bill, where Employment Continuous.]—See Harris v. Quine, col. 4.

d. In Trover.

From Time of Conversion.]—The statute is a bar to an action of trover commenced more than six years after the conversion, though the plaintiff was ignorant of the conversion till within six years; the defendant not having committed any fraud to prevent the plaintiff's earlier knowledge. Granger v. George, 7 D. & R. 729; 5 B. & C. 149; 29 R. R. 196. And see Compton v. Chandless, 4 Esp. 20.

In trover the statute runs from the time of conversion, and not from the time of sale. Denys v. Shuckburgh, 4 Y. & C. 42; 5 Jur. 21.

A.'s furniture was seized under an execution by the sheriff, who assigned it to the judgment creditor. A.'s friends afterwards purchased it from the judgment creditor, and the sheriff's officers then returned and left the goods in A.'s possession, who remained in undisturbed enjoyment for more than six years. After his death the furniture was claimed by his friends, who had purchased it, and, adversely, by his administratrix:—Held, that the rights of the former were not barred by the statute, and that as A.'s possession was rightful, the statute could only apply from six years from a conversion. Edwards v. Clay, 28 Beav. 145.

A mortgagor of boats, permitted by the mortgagee to remain in possession, sold them. They were subsequently seized by a canal company for rates due from the purchaser, and sold:—Held, in an action of trover by the mortgagee against the company, that the sale, and not the seizure, was the fact committed from which the time of limitation prescribed by the company's act began to run. Fraser v. Swansea Canal Navigation Co., 1 Ad. & E. 354; 3 N. & M. 391; 3 L. J., K. B. 153.

From Seizure of Goods as Smuggled, not from Order of the Exchequer for Re-delivery.]—See Saunders v. Saunders, col. 74.

From Refusal of Title Deeds.]—The plaintiff's son, without his father's knowledge in 1881, wrongfully obtained possession of a lease of certain premises of which his father was in possession, and deposited it with B. to secure a loan from B. to him. In 1889 B. became bankrupt, and his trustee in bankruptcy transferred the lease to the defendant. The plaintiff, having subsequently discovered his loss, demanded the return of the lease from the defendant, and, being refused, brought an action for conversion, to which the defendant pleaded the Statute of Limitations:—Held, that the plaintiff's cause of action against the defendant did not accrue until the demand and refusal to give up the lease, and that the Statute of Limitations was therefore no bar to the action. Wilkinson v. Verity (L. R. 6 C. P. 206) explained. Miller v. Dell, 60 L. J., Q. B. 404; [1891] 1 Q. B. 468; 63 L. T. 693; 39 W. R. 342—C. A.

e. In Detinue.

Demand and Refusal.]—Goods having been bailed by the plaintiffs to the defendant for safe custody, he wrongfully sold them; and the plaintiffs, more than six years after the date of the sale, being ignorant of the fact of its having taken place, demanded the return of the goods, which he refused:—Held, in an action of detinue for the goods that the statute ran from the date of the demand and refusal, and not from that of the sale, inasmuch as the plaintiffs, in such a case, though entitled if they had discovered the sale to sue immediately for a conversion of the goods, were also entitled to elect to sue upon the breach of the bailee's duty in the ordinary course by the refusal to deliver up on request. Wilkinson v. Verity, 40 L. J., C. P. 141; L. R. 6 C. P. 206; 24 L. T. 32; 19 W. R. 604.

Title deeds of the plaintiffs were fraudulently taken from them and deposited by a third person, without their knowledge, with the defendant in 1859, who held them without knowledge of the fraud to secure the repayment of a loan. The plaintiffs, on discovering the loss of the deeds in 1882, demanded them of the defendant, and upon his refusal to give them up brought an action to recover them, to which the defendant pleaded the Statute of Limitations:—Held, that until demand and refusal to give up the deeds to the real owners they had no right of action against which the statute would run. Spackman v. Foster, 52 L. J., Q. B. 418; 11 Q. B. D. 99; 48 L. T. 670; 31 W. R. 548; 47 J. P. 455.

—— Title Deeds—After Bankruptcy.]—Under 5 Geo. 2, c. 30, a commission of bankruptcy issued against a person entitled in remainder to real property, and no assignee was appointed; but neither under that act nor under 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, was any bargain and sale of the future real estate executed by the commissioners. In 1844, after the death of the assignee, the estate vested in the bankrupt in possession, and he afterwards (before the 12 & 13 Vict. c. 106) conveyed it to the defendant. In 1853 the bankrupt, without having obtained his certificate, died. No assignee had been reappointed since the estate came to him until 1859, when assignees were appointed, and they having recovered the property in ejectment, demanded the deeds, and on refusal brought detinue against the defendant, who pleaded, denying the assignees' property, and also the Statute of Limitations:—Held, that the action was maintainable, and that there was no defence under the statute. Plant v. Cotterill, 5 H. & N. 430; 29 L. J., Ex. 198; 2 L. T. 20; 8 W. R. 281.

f. In Actions on the Case for Acts causing Damage.

Where Cause of Action is not Act done but resulting Damage, Time runs from Damage.]—See Whitehouse v. Fellowes, and Gillon v. Beddington, col. 68.

Subsidence of Soil due to Mines.]—A. was owner of houses standing on land which was surrounded by the lands of B., C. and D. E. was owner of mines running underneath the lands of all these persons. He worked the mines in such a manner (without actual negligence) that the lands of B., C. and D. sank in; and after more than six years' interval the sinking occasioned an injury to the houses of A.:—Held, that a right of action accrued to A. when this injury actually occurred, and that his right was not barred by the statute. Backhouse v. Bonomi, 9 H. L. Cas. 503; 34 L. J., Q. B. 181; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 809; 4 L. T. 754; 9 W. R. 769.

Lessees of coal under the respondent's land worked the coal so as to cause a subsidence of the land and injury to houses thereon in 1868. For the injuries thus caused the lessees made compensation. They worked no more, but in 1882 a further subsidence took place causing further injury. There would have been no further subsistence if an adjoining owner had not worked his coal, or if the lessees had left enough support under the respondent's land:—Held (Lord Blackburn dissenting), that the cause of action in respect of the further subsidence did not arise till that subsidence occurred, and that the respondent could maintain an action for the injury thereby caused, although more than six years had passed since the last working by the lessees. Nicklin v. Williams (10 Ex. 259), and Backhouse v. Bonomi (9 H. L. Cas. 503; supra), discussed. Lamb v. Walker (3 Q. B. D. 389), overruled. Darley Main Colliery Co. v. Mitchell, 55 L. J., Q. B. 529; 11 App. Cas. 127; 54 L. T. 882; 51 J. P. 148—H. L. (E.) Affirming 32 W. R. 947—C. A.

See Spoor v. Green, col. 231.

Subsidence of Houses through Excavations for Sewer.]—Where a local board, in excavating a street for a sewer, sets up a gradual subsidence of the houses fronting the street, an action need not be commenced, under s. 264 of the Public Health Act, 1875, till within six months from the damage for which it is brought occurring, not from the completion of the work. Crumbie v. Wallsend Local Board, 60 L. J., Q. B. 392; [1891] 1 Q. B. 503; 64 L. T. 490. Fairbrother v. Bury Sanitary Authority, 37 W. R. 544. See Lloyd v. Wigney, col. 68.

From Time of Wall falling, not from Time of Its being undermined.]—See Roberts v. Read, col. 67.

Fresh Damage.]—When the continuance of a wrongful act causes fresh damage, it constitutes a new cause of action. A canal company in 1866 wrongfully obstructed a stream flowing by the plaintiff's lands and continued the obstruction down to 1873, when it caused the flooding of his lands:—Held, that the continuance of the wrongful obstruction in 1873 was a fresh cause for action in that year, and therefore the Statute of Limitations began to run from the time of damage in 1873. Devery v. Grand Canal Co., Ir. R. 9 C. L. 194—Ex. Ch.

From Date of Discovery.]—Questions having arisen in 1862 between the lessees of two adjoining collieries, one of such lessees being the West Hartlepool Railway Company, as to the boundaries of their respective collieries, new boundary maps were prepared, and in 1864 it was by an agreement mutually agreed between the parties that all claims on account of damage of every kind, whether by trespass or otherwise, should be condoned. Pending that agreement, an act of parliament was passed in 1863, under which the West Hartlepool Company were to sell their collieries within a period of five years, and in 1865 another act was passed whereby the West Hartlepool Company became amalgamated with, and all their assets, debts, liabilities and engagements were transfered to, the defendant railway company. In 1870 the plaintiffs for the first time discovered, and the evidence distinctly shewed, that in 1863, after the boundaries had been settled, the West Hartlepool Company had broken through the barrier between the collieries and worked out the plaintiff's coal. Upon a bill filed for an account of the coal worked by the West Hartlepool Company, and for damages in respect of the injury sustained by the breaking down of the barrier:—Held, that the working of the colliery by the West Hartlepool Company was not ultra vires, as the power to work for a period of five years must be implied from the authority to sell, and that whatever liability they were under at the time of their amalgamation with the railway company was transferred to the defendant company by the act of 1865. Ecclesiastical Commissioners v. North Eastern Ry., 47 L. J., Ch. 20; 4 Ch. D. 845; 36 L. T. 174.

Held, also, that the agreement of 1864 did not operate as a release of the injury then done, as the plaintiffs did not then know and had no means of knowing that the injury had been committed. Ib.

Held, also, that there being no laches on the part of the plaintiffs in not discovering the injury at an earlier period, the statute commenced to run only from the time of such discovery. Ib.

g. In Actions for Negligence.

Against Solicitors.] — Trust property was transferred to new trustees in July, 1875. The solicitor employed in the transaction did not give certain notices necessary to perfect the title of the new trustees; and in April, 1879, a subsequent mortgagee of the property obtained priority over the trustees by giving notice of his charge:—Held, that there was no complete cause of action against the solicitor in respect of negligence till April, 1879, from which date the Statute of Limitations therefore ran. Bean v. Wade, 1 Cab. & E. 519.

In an action on the case against an attorney for negligence, the court held that the cause of action arose at the time the negligence occurred, and not at the time the negligence was discovered, or the consequential damages ensued. Smith v. Fox, 6 Hare, 386; 17 L. J., Ch. 170; 12 Jur. 130.

In an action for negligence, where the declaration alleges a breach of duty, and a special consequential damage, the cause of action is the breach of duty, and not the consequential damage; and the statute runs from the time when the breach of duty is committed, and not from the time when the consequential damage accrued. Howell v. Young, 8 D. & R. 14; 5 B. & C. 259; 2 Car. & P. 238; 4 L. J. (o.s.) K. B. 160; 29 R. R. 237.

Where a client claimed against her solicitor for negligence in having advised an investment on a mortgage (which proved insufficient) without disclosing that there had been no independent valuation on behalf of the mortgagee:—Held, that the client's right of action arose when the negligent act was committed, and not when it was discovered by the client, it not being a duty on the part of the solicitor continuing day by day to disclose his negligent act. Wood v. Jones, 61 L. T. 551.

So, where a declaration against an attorney assigned for breach that he did not make diligent inquiry at the bank, to ascertain whether stock was standing in the name of certain persons there:—Held, that the cause of action arose on the breach of duty by the attorney, and not on its discovery by the client. Short v. M'Carthy, 3 B. & Ald. 626; 22 R. R. 503.

h. In Actions for Libel and Slander.

Libel—Publication—Purchase of Copy.]—A count, in an action for a libel, was in respect of a newspaper published more than seventeen years before action, the statute being pleaded:—Held, that the plea was negatived by proof that a single copy had been purchased from the defendant for the plaintiff by his agent within the six years. Brunswick (Duke) v. Harmer, 14 Q. B. 185; 19 L. J., Q. B. 20; 14 Jur. 110.

Other counts were, in respect of other libels, alleged to impute to the plaintiff the libellous matter charged in the first count, which was set out by way of inducement in each count. The libels themselves in those other counts did not refer to the libel in the first count. The statute was pleaded to so much of these counts as related to the matter in the first count:—Held, that the plea was negatived as to those counts also. Ib.

Slander.]—In the case of words spoken that are actionable without special damage, the period of limitation is two years, and runs from the speaking of the words. In the case of words actionable only by reason of a subsequent loss, the period of limitation is six years, and runs from the happening of the damage. Saunders v. Edwards, 1 Sid. 95; Raym. 61.

i. In Actions for False Imprisonment.

If in an action for false imprisonment the statute is pleaded to part, the plaintiff may reply that it was one continued duress. Coventry v. Apsly, 2 Salk. 420.

Action against Justice within Six Months of End of Imprisonment.]—See Massey v. Johnson; Pickersgill v. Palmer; and Hardy v. Ryle, col. 72.

Action for Maliciously procuring Debtor's Discharge from Prison to be opposed, not commenced within Six Years from Date of the Opposition.]—See Violett v. Sympson, col. 59.

k. In Actions for Waste.

Time Runs from Acts of Waste.]—If a tenant for life cuts timber which is ripe for cutting, but not decaying or overcrowding, the act is tortious, and the right of the remainderman accrues, and the Statute of Limitations begins to run immediately. Seagram v. Knight, 36 L. J., Ch. 918; 17 L. T. 47; 15 W. R. 1152.

A tenant for life was executrix of a preceding tenant for life, both being impeachable for waste, and both having committed waste by cutting timber:—Held, that the Statute of Limitations began to run against the remaindermen in fee from the time when the timber was cut, and not from the time of the death of the tenant for life. Higginbotham v. Hawkins, 41 L. J., Ch. 828; L. R. 7 Ch. 676; 27 L. T. 328; 20 W. R. 955.

Held, that though an injunction and an account were granted against the existing tenant for life, yet as no injunction could be granted against the preceding tenant for life, no account could be granted against her executrix for waste committed by the preceding tenant for life. Ib.

When after legal waste has been committed time has run so as to bar the legal remedy in respect thereof, the remedy in equity is also barred. Ib. See also Simpson v. Simpson, B. II. 3.

Time begins to run against Tenant in Tail's Claim for Equitable Waste on Death of Tenant for Life.]—See Leeds v. Amherst, post, col. 167.

l. In other Cases.

As soon as there was in England a Plaintiff capable of Suing.]—See Rhodes v. Smethurst, col. 25; Smith v. Hill; Townsend v. Deacon; Douglas v. Forrest; Fergusson v. Fyffe, col. 48; and Le Veux v. Berkeley, col. 61. But see now 19 & 20 Vict. c. 97, s. 10, and Pardo v. Bingham, col. 60.

Against Foreigner as soon as He comes to England.]—See Pardo v. Bingham, col. 60.

In Action on Special Contract for Payment of Loan.]—A. lent money to a building society upon the terms, in writing, that the sum lent should be repayable after the lender had given notice of his intention to withdraw it, and that no money would be paid out by the society, except on production, by the lender personally or by some one with his written authority, of a loan pass-book given to him when the loan was made:—Held, that the condition as to the production of the book was a condition precedent to the liability of the society to repay the money, so that, until that condition had been complied with, the Statute of Limitations did not begin to run against the lender. Atkinson v. Bradford Building Society, 59 L. J., Q. B. 360; 25 Q. B. D. 377; 62 L. T. 857; 38 W. R. 630—C. A.

—— Mortgage of Bonds.]—Where on a loan bonds are mortgaged by way of collateral security for repayment on a fixed day, and the mortgagee is authorised in the event of the loan remaining unpaid after it becomes due to realise the securities, an undertaking in the same instrument by the mortgagor to pay any difference between the nett proceeds of the securities and the amount due does not create a new and independent obligation, so as to postpone the operation of the Statute of Limitations until such realisation, but the statute begins to run as from the date fixed for repayment of the loan. McHenry, In re, McDermott v. Boyd, Barker, Ex parte, 63 L. J., Ch. 741; [1894] 3 Ch. 290; 7 R. 527; 71 L. T. 146; 43 W. R. 20—C. A.

Against Administrator of Creditor.]—If a creditor dies intestate on the day when a debt becomes payable to him, and there is no evidence to shew whether he died before or after the moment when the debt became payable, the Statute of Limitations does not run against his administrator until letters of administration have been taken out.—By Lord Esher, M.R., and Lindley, L.J. Atkinson v. Bradford Building Society, supra.

In favour of Executor or Administrator of Debtor dying Abroad.]—In the case of a debtor going abroad before the right of action accrues and dying there, the statute begins to run only from the time of probate or administration being taken out. Story v. Fry, 1 Y. & Coll. C. C. 603; 11 L. J., Ch. 373; 6 Jur. 1029.

A person, in satisfaction of a previous debt due from him, gave his creditor a bill of exchange, and before the bill arrived at its maturity went to India, whence he never returned. As soon as circumstances would permit after his death in India his will was proved by his executors in England, and within six years after his death a creditors' bill was filed against the executors:—Held, that the plaintiff was not barred by the Statute of Limitations. Ib.

Quære, whether when a debtor dies abroad, and the cause of action or suit has not accrued in his lifetime, a suit may not be instituted for the administration of his effects at any time within six years after probate of his will. Ib.

A testator, indebted on promissory notes, resided in Jersey and died there. By his will he appointed his wife executrix. She continued to reside in Jersey, and proved the will there. She did not prove the will in England, though she received money due to her husband. No interest was paid upon the debt from 1849 to 1860, but a writ of summons was issued in England, and kept on foot till 1858. Upon a bill filed for the administration of the personal estate of the testator:—Held, that the 19 & 20 Vict. c. 97, s. 12, was not retrospective; that the widow had not done any act which made her executrix in England; that there was no person whom the creditor could sue; and, consequently, that the debt was not barred by the Statute of Limitations. Flood v. Patterson, 29 Beav. 295; 30 L. J., Ch. 486; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 324; 4 L. T. 78; 9 W. R. 327.

From Discovery of Fraud.]—In cases of fraud, time runs in bar of relief from that period only at which the party injured became cognisant of his rights and injuries. Trevelyan v. Charter, 4 L. J., Ch. 209. Affirmed, sub nom. Charter v. Trevelyan, 11 Cl. & F. 714; 8 Jur. 1015.

In cases of fraud, time in order to bar the remedy will not begin to run till the party acquires a knowledge of the facts constituting the fraud. Blennerhassett v. Day, 2 Ball & B. 129.

—— Of One Partner.]—A sum was received from a client's solicitor by a partnership firm, to be invested in mortgage, which went off, but was represented by one of the firm to the client to have been executed. The interest was duly paid, and the fraudulent representation was not discovered until after dissolution of the partnership and bankruptcy of the fraudulent partner:—Held, that although the remedy as for a debt, by the receipt of the money by the firm, was barred by the statute at law, yet the solvent partner, having constructive notice of the fraud, was affected by the act of his co-partner within the scope of the joint duty undertaken; and the time running only from the discovery of the fraud, the remedy was not barred in equity, and was recoverable by the client against the solvent partner. Blair v. Bromley, 5 Hare, 542; 16 L. J., Ch. 105; 11 Jur. 115. Affirmed, 2 Ph. 354; 16 L. J., Ch. 495; 11 Jur. 617.

—— During Bankruptcy.]—A debtor who has made an arrangement with his creditors under s. 28 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1869, remains liable under s. 15 of the Debtors Act for a debt incurred by fraud, e.g. in selling as broker his customer's securities without authority. Where the fraud was not discovered until after the adjudication in bankruptcy:—Held, that the Statute of Limitations did not begin to run till the bankruptcy had been annulled. Crossley, In re, Munns v. Burn, 35 Ch. D. 266; 57 L. T. 298; 35 W. R. 790—C. A.

Composition Deed—Default—Fresh Promise to pay original Debts.]—On default made by a debtor in the payment of a composition under a composition deed the court implies a fresh promise on his part to pay the original debts, and the Statute of Limitations does not commence to run until such default. Irving v. Veitch (7 L. J., Ex. 25; 3 M. & W. 90) followed. Stock, In re, Amos, Ex parte, 66 L. J., Q. B. 146; 75 L. T. 422; 45 W. R. 480; 3 Manson, 324.

From Promise to sufficiently secure Money, not from Discovery that Security invalid.]—In an action for not laying out the plaintiff's money in an annuity on a good and sufficient security, which the defendant promised to do:—Held, that the statute was a bar to the recovery, as the promise of the defendant was the gist of the action, although it was commenced within the period of six years from the time it was discovered that the security was invalid, and he knew it to be so at the time the annuity was granted. Brown v. Howard, 4 Moore, 508; 2 Br. & B. 73.

From Discovery of Mistake.]—In cases of mistake, the time of limitation, which, by analogy to that prescribed by the 21 Jac. 1, c. 16, is held to bar the remedy in courts of equity, begins to run from the time of the discovery of the mistake. Brookshank v. Smith, 2 Y. & C. 58; 6 L. J., Ex. Eq. 34.

From Time of Work done for Turnpike Trustees, though no Fund then available for Payment.]—By a turnpike act the trustees were to pay first the expenses of obtaining the act, and next the expenses of erecting tollhouses, and a builder who brought an action for work and labour in so doing more than six years after the work done, but within six years of the time when the trustees had funds in hand by having paid off the expenses of the act:—Held, that he was too late, as the action was maintainable immediately after the work was done, though the execution would have been postponed. Emery v. Day, 1 C., M. & R. 245; 4 Tyr. 695; 3 L. J., Ex. 307.

Not in Favour of Company until Assets.]—A. and B. expended moneys in procuring a railway act in 1859. The railway was not constructed. The company had no assets till 1872. In 1872 the company obtained assets and A. and B. put in their claims:—Held, that these claims were not barred, as the statute did not begin to run in favour of the company until the company had assets to meet their claims. Kensington Station Act, In re, L. R. 20 Eq. 197; 32 L. T. 183; 23 W. R. 463.

Against Debt for Work and Money Lent, although Amount not adjusted.]—See Nash v. Hill, col. 120.

From Breach, not from Refusal to perform.]—In an action on promises, the breach of a contract is the cause of action, and the statute runs from the time of the breach, and not from the time of the refusal to perform the contract. East India Co. v. Paul, 7 Moore, P. C. 85; 14 Jur. 253.

From Breach, not from Damage.]—Where A., under a contract to deliver spring wheat to B., had delivered winter wheat, and B. having again sold the same as spring wheat, had in consequence been compelled to pay damages to the purchaser; and afterwards B. brought an action of assumpsit against A. for his breach of contract, alleging as special damage the damages so recovered:—Held, that although such special damage had occurred within six years before the commencement of the action by B. against A., yet that the breach of contract having occurred and become known to B. more than six years before that period, actio non accrevit infra sex annos was a good plea in bar to the action. Battley v. Faulkner, 3 B. & Ald. 288; 22 R. R. 390.

Against Debts payable on Demand.]—Where money was advanced to a firm to be repaid on demand with compound interest:—Held, that the Statute of Limitations ran from the date of the advance. Jackson v. Ogg, 1 Johns. 397; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 976; 7 W. R. 730.

In 1845 A. lent money to B., a trader, upon an agreement that interest was to be allowed at 10*l.* per cent., such interest to be left to accumulate by way of compound interest at that rate. B. carried the money to the account of A. in his books, and interest was from time to time duly credited in such account at the rate and in the manner specified. No communication whatever took place on the subject of the debt until 1857, and no payment of interest or principal was made:—Held, that the Statute of Limitations commenced running immediately on the advance being made, that the entry of interest did not take the case out of the statute, and that the debt was consequently barred. Ib.

In 1851 the plaintiff advanced money to the defendant to assist a certain undertaking. The plaintiff was to be paid out of profits, and the defendant was not to be personally liable. The undertaking was brought to an end in 1856, a similar undertaking forthwith started by the defendant being held by the court to be a distinct undertaking. In 1864 the plaintiff filed a bill for an account:—Held, that the plaintiff's claim was the proper subject for a suit in equity. Knox v. Gye, 16 L. T., 76; 15 W. R. 628.

Held, also, that the advance, having been made to aid the undertaking carried on by the defendant, was not to be considered, with reference to the Statute of Limitations, as a debt payable on demand, and that until the plaintiff made a demand the defendant was under no obligation to pay, and consequently that the statute did not begin to run until after the plaintiff's first demand. Ib.

A partner with the defendant in the undertaking died in 1854, having bequeathed a moiety of his share to the plaintiff, who also became his executor:—Held, that the plaintiff's right to an account in respect of this share was barred by the Statute of Limitations, and that an acknowledgment of the indebtedness to the concern given in 1867 to the defendant by a debtor upon the occasion of a compromise of the debt, did not call into existence any new interest which prevented the statute from running. Ib.

Against Action for not accounting—Necessity of Demand.]—As an action does not lie for not accounting till after a demand made of an account, the statute runs only from the time of a demand made. After a reasonable time has elapsed, a jury may presume that the consignor had made a demand, and that the factor had accounted. And fourteen years would be a sufficient time for such a presumption, if not rebutted by circumstances. Topham v. Braddick, 1 Taunt. 572; 10 R. R. 610.

Against Depositor with Bank.]—Money deposited with a banker in the usual way by a customer is money lent to the banker, with a superadded obligation that it is to be paid when called for; and consequently, if not noticed for six years, will be affected by the statute. Pott v. Cleg, 16 M. & W. 321; 16 L. J., Ex. 210; 11 Jur. 289.

Action by Customer against Bank for Account—No Item within Six Years.]—See Foley v. Hill, col. 76.

Against Depositor for Safe Custody.]—Where money is deposited with a person for safe custody, and not by way of loan, no right of action arises until demand made, and therefore the Statute of Limitations does not begin to run until such demand. Tidd, In re, Tidd v. Overall, 62 L. J., Ch. 915; [1893] 3 Ch. 154; 3 R. 657; 69 L. T. 255; 42 W. R. 25.

Warrant to enter up Judgment for Debt on Failure to pay any Instalment—Statute runs against whole Debt from first Default.]—In 1832 the defendant, being indebted to the plaintiff, gave a warrant of attorney for the amount of his debt, subject to a defeasance, stating that the warrant was given to secure payment of the debt by instalments, the last of which was payable in 1835; and that, in case default should be made in payment of any of the instalments, the plaintiff should be at liberty to enter up judgment and issue execution for all or so much of the debt as should be unpaid at the time, the same as if all the periods for payment had expired by effluxion of time. To an action brought to recover some of these instalments, the defendant pleaded the statute, and, at the trial, it appeared that the first default in payment of an instalment was made more than six years before the action:—Held, that the plaintiff might have sued on the first default for the whole amount remaining unpaid, and that, therefore, the statute was a bar as to all the instalments. Hemp v. Garland, 3 G. & D. 402; 4 Q. B. 519; 12 L. J., Q. B. 134; 7 Jur. 302.

Loan for Five Years, but Principal to be due on any Default in Payment of Interest—Statute runs from first Default.]—Money was advanced under an agreement whereby the borrower agreed to pay interest regularly on the sum advanced by quarterly payments, and the lender agreed not to call in the principal sum for five years so long as the borrower should regularly pay the interest, provided that, in case the borrower should make default in any quarterly payment of interest for twenty-one days, it should be lawful for the lender to call in the principal sum and interest. The lender sued the borrower on this agreement more than six years after the defendant had made default in payment of interest, but less than six years from the expiration of the period of five years mentioned in the agreement:—Held, that the claim was barred. Hemp v. Garland (4 Q. B. 519; supra) followed and approved. Reeves v. Butcher, 60 L. J., Q. B. 619; [1891] 2 Q. B. 509; 65 L. T. 329; 39 W. R. 626—C. A.

Against Action to recover Consideration for voidable Annuity — Statute only runs from Avoidance.]—Action to recover the consideration-money paid for an annuity in 1826, one of the securities given being a warrant of attorney on which judgment was entered up. The warrant and judgment were set aside in 1842; it did not appear on what grounds:—Held, that the statute, inasmuch as the annuity might be voidable only, and not void, was no bar, and would not begin to run until the annuity was avoided in 1842. Huggins v. Coates, D. & M. 433; 5 Q. B. 432; 13 L. J., Q. B. 46; 8 Jur. 434.

In an action to recover the consideration-money of a void annuity, when the annuity was granted more than six years before action, but was treated by the grantor as a subsisting annuity within that period, although subsequently avoided at his instance:—Held, that the statute did not begin to run until the annuity had been avoided. Cowper v. Godmond, 3 M. & Scott, 219; 9 Bing. 748; 2 L. J., C. P. 162.

Upon a Sale on Credit.]—On a sale of goods on credit the statute begins to run from the time of credit expired. Helps v. Winterbottom, 2 B. & Ad. 431; 9 L. J. (o.s.) K. B. 258.

In Favour of Ambassador.]—A writ of summons in an action cannot be issued against, and, therefore, the Statute of Limitations does not commence to run in favour of, the ambassador of a foreign state whilst he is accredited to this country or during such time after his recall as is reasonably occupied by him in winding up the affairs of his embassy and leaving the country. Musurus Bey v. Gadban, 63 L. J., Q. B. 621; [1894] 2 Q. B. 352; 9 R. 519; 71 L. T. 51; 42 W. R. 545—C. A.

In Action against Company for Rectification of Register.]—Railway stock was registered in the names of two persons who were executors and trustees of a will. One of them sold and transferred the stock, forging the signature of the other to the transfers, which were registered by the railway company. On the forgeries being discovered by the other executor, a new trustee of the will was appointed in place of the forger, who then left this country. The two trustees informed the company of the forgeries, and applied to be registered as owners of the stock. The company refused to comply with the application, and the two trustees thereupon brought an action for replacement of the stock in their names. Some of the stock was transferred more than six years before the action was brought:—Held, that the cause of action was the refusal by the company, when the forgeries were made known to them, to treat the plaintiffs as owners of the stock, and that, therefore, time under the Statute of Limitations would not begin to run against the plaintiffs until such refusal. Barton v. North Staffordshire Ry., 57 L. J., Ch. 800; 38 Ch. D. 458; 58 L. T. 549; 36 W. R. 754.

In Action against Husband for Wife's Ante-nuptial Debts.]—The Statute of Limitations runs in favour of a husband who is sued for the ante-nuptial debts of his wife from the time when such debts accrued against her, and not from the date of the marriage. Beck v. Pierce, 58 L. J., Q. B. 516; 23 Q. B. D. 316; 61 L. T. 448; 38 W. R. 29; 54 J. P. 198—C. A.

Against Action on Policy of Marine Insurance—Barratry.]—If a captain of a ship insured barratrously carries her out of the course of her voyage, and, procuring her to be condemned in a vice-admiralty court, sells and delivers her up to the purchaser, the statute as between the assured and the underwriter begins to run only from the delivery. Hibbert v. Martin, 1 Camp. 539.

Contingencies.]—The Statute of Limitations in a case of contingency runs from the time when the contingency happens. Fenton v. Imblers, 1 W. Bl. 354; 3 Burr. 1278.

Not in Favour of Devisee of Estate, charged with Salary of Schoolmaster to be appointed by Devisee, until Appointment.]—When testator by his will, in 1812, devised a rent-charge as a salary for a schoolmaster to be appointed by the owner for the time being of the estate upon which it was charged. No schoolmaster was ever appointed:—Held, that the Statute of Limitations could not commence to run until the appointment of a schoolmaster. Att.-Gen. v. Perse, 2 Dr. & War. 67.

Against Compensation in case of Election.]—An election gives a right to compensation. Assuming such compensation to be in the nature of a simple contract debt, the Statute of Limitations can only begin to run against it when the election has been made. Spread v. Morgan, 11 H. L. Cas. 588; 13 L. T. 164; 6 N. R. 269.

Scire facias.]—Where a judgment was revived by scire facias:—Held, that the scire facias created new rights, and the statute only ran from its date. Farrell v. Gleeson, 11 Cl. & F. 702.

2. TIME DURING WHICH STATUTE RUNS.

Subsequent Disability.]—When the statute once begins to run, it continues to do so, notwithstanding any subsequent disability. Cotterell v. Dutton, 4 Taunt. 826; 14 R. R. 675; S. P., Doe d. Duroure v. Jones, 4 Term Rep. 300; Doe d. Griggs v. Shane, 4 Term Rep. 306, n. (b).

In computing the time under 3 Jac. 1, c. 16, s. 17, it is not necessary to the operation of the statute that there must be continued laches on the part of the plaintiff during the full period of six years; but the rule is, that the statute begins to run so soon as there is in existence in England a plaintiff capable of suing; and having once begun to run, no subsequent interruption to the right of suing, even from causes beyond his control, will stop it. Rhodes v. Smethurst, 4 M. & W. 42; 1 H. & H. 237; 7 L. J., Ex. 273; 2 Jur. 893. Affirmed in error, 6 M. & W. 351; 9 L. J., Ex. 330; 4 Jur. 702—Ex. Ch.

If time has once begun to run against a debt in the debtor's lifetime, it does not afterwards cease to run during the period which may elapse between his death and the time at which a personal representative to him is constituted. Freake v. Cranefeldt, 3 Myl. & C. 499; 8 L. J., Ch. 61; 4 Jur. 1080. S. P., Howlet v. Lambert, 2 Ir. Eq. R. 254.

Where a creditor who has been abroad returns, the time will run, and his going abroad again will give him no privilege, for that was gone by his having once returned after the cause of action accrued. Stuart v. Mellish, 2 Atk. 614.

And see now 19 & 20 Vict. c. 97, s. 10.

If Statute begins to run, Incapacities do not affect It.]—See Raffety v. King, col. 210; Goodall v. Skerratt, col. 247; and Nevarre v. Rutton, col. 250.

Time continues to run against Legatee during Lunacy of Executrix.]—See Boldero v. Halpin, Hawes, Ex parte, col. 235.

Merger of Right and Liability.]—But if, after the statute has begun to run, the right to sue and the liability to be sued meet by act of law in the same person, the running of the statute is suspended. Seagram v. Knight, 36 L. J., Ch. 918; 15 W. R. 1152.

Effect of Licence.]—A mere letter of licence by a creditor to his debtor does not suspend the operation of the statute. Fuller v. Redman, 26 Beav. 614.

Assertion of Claim—Effect of.]—The continual assertion of a claim, unaccompanied by any act to give effect to it, will not keep alive a right which would otherwise be precluded. Clegg v. Edmondson, 8 De G. M. & G. 787.

Action commenced, but abandoned, does not stay Statute.]—See Dixon v. Gayfere, col. 256.

Statute continues to run in Favour of false Claimant in Possession as Heir, notwithstanding concealed Fraud subsequent to wrongful Entry.]—See Willis v. Howe, col. 308.

3. WHEN STATUTE CEASES TO RUN.

Not on Demand, or Assertion or Notice of Claim.]—Mere demand, without process or acknowledgment, not sufficient against Statute of Limitations. Hodle v. Healy, 1 Ves. & B. 540; 6 Madd. 181; 22 R. R. 270.

The continual assertion of a claim, unaccompanied by any act to give effect to it, will not keep alive a right which would otherwise be precluded. Clegg v. Edmondson, 8 De G. M. & G. 787.

Notice by a creditor of his claim in answer to advertisement by an executor under 22 & 23 Vict. c. 35, s. 29, does not prevent the Statute of Limitations from running. Stephens, In re; Warburton v. Stephens, 59 L. J., Ch. 109; 43 Ch. D. 39; 61 L. T. 609.

A testator, by his will, gave all his property to the plaintiff, his executor, in trust to sell and convert, and after payment thereout of his debts to divide the residue as therein mentioned. The testator died in 1882, possessed of real estate. The defendant, who claimed to be a creditor of the testator, in 1883 sent in his claim in answer to the plaintiff's advertisements, under 22 & 23 Vict. c. 35, s. 29, but took no other steps. The plaintiff in 1887, when more than six years, but less than twelve years, had elapsed since the alleged debt was incurred, took out an originating summons to have the defendant's claim adjudicated on, and set up the Statute of Limitations: —Held, that the alleged claim was barred as against the personal estate, but not as against the real estate. Ib.

Not on Letter of Licence.]—A mere letter of licence by a creditor to his debtor does not suspend the operation of the statute. Fuller v. Redman, 26 Beav. 614.

On Issue, not Return, of Writ.]—Where an action must be brought within three months, it is sufficient for the plaintiff to prove a writ sued out within such time, and his declaration within a year afterwards, without shewing such writ returned. Parsons v. King, 7 Term Rep. 6.

On Return of Writ not served.]—Under 2 & 3 Will. 4, c. 39, s. 10, it was not necessary to serve or endeavour to serve a writ which was issued to avoid the effect of the statute; it was sufficient to return it non est inventus, and enter it of record. Williams v. Roberts, 1 C. M. & R. 676; 3 D. P. C. 513; 5 Tyr. 421; 1 Gale, 56; 4 L. J., Ex. 78.

Against Crown for Forfeitures, on Issue of Process.]—The commencement of a suit by information by the attorney-general on the part of the Crown, for the recovery of forfeitures under a penal act, must, with reference to the Statute of Limitations, be taken to the issuing of process, and not the actual filing of the information. Att.-Gen. v. Hall, 11 Price, 760.

From Filing of Bill, not from Service of Subpœna.]—The commencement of a suit is reckoned, for the purposes of preventing the operation of the Statute of Limitations, from the filing of the bill and not from the service of the subpœna; and it was so held, in a case where the subpœna had not been served till two years after the filing of the bill. Coppin v. Gray, 1 Y. & Coll. C. C. 205; 11 L. J., Ch. 105; 6 Jur. 512.

A bill filed in time will take the case out of the operation of the Statute of Limitations as against the parties to it, though they have not been served with the subpœna within the time. Purcell v. Blennerhasset, 3 Jo. & Lat. 24; 9 Ir. Eq. R. 108.

On Proceeding against Defendant out of the Jurisdiction.]—When a defendant is out of the jurisdiction, and a bill in equity prays process against him when he shall come within it, the operation of the Statute of Limitations is suspended, though he has neither been served nor appeared in the suit. Hele v. Bexley (Lord), 20 Beav. 127.

When a bill was filed in 1819, and the plaintiff having died in 1825, a bill of revivor was filed in 1828, and the defendants being and continuing during all that time out of the jurisdiction, no subpœna had or could have been served on either bill, and one of the defendants having died in 1835, a bill of revivor was filed in 1838, and the service of subpœna effected under 2 Will. 4, c. 33:—Held, that the bill of 1828 prevented the bar of the Statute of Limitations. Forster v. Thompson, 2 Con. & L. 568; 4 Dr. & War. 303; 6 Ir. Eq. R. 168.

Semble, the bill of 1819 would of itself have had that effect. Ib.

The court would not allow process to be served at the house of the agent of a defendant out of the jurisdiction, in order to save the statute. Frith v. Donegal (Lord), 2 D. P. C. 527.

Evidence of Commencement of Proceedings.]—Before s. 12 of 15 & 16 Vict. c. 76, the nisi prius record, shewing that the writ of summons issued within six years of the accrual of the cause of action, was not conclusive evidence to prevent the operation of the statute. Pritchard v. Bagshawe, 11 C. B. 459; 2 L. M. & P. 323; 20 L. J., C. P. 161; 15 Jur. 730.

In order to save the statute, a second or a subsequent writ of summons must, at the time a copy was served, have contained the indorsement required by 2 Will. 4, c. 39, s. 10, and such indorsements must have been made by the plaintiff or his attorney, and the roll was no evidence of these facts. Walker v. Collick, 4 Ex. 171: 7 D. & L. 225; 18 L. J., Ex. 387. See also Morris v. Richards, 45 L. T. 210; 46 J. P. 37.

The issue, as set out in a writ of trial, stated the suing out of a former writ of summons to meet a plea of the statute. The plaintiff having obtained a verdict upon an issue taken on the accrual of the action within six years, the court refused to grant a new trial upon an affidavit that no such writ had ever been returned, and that no continuances had been entered upon the roll, and that the issue delivered contained no notice of a former writ. Harper v. Phillips, 7 Man. & G. 397; 8 Scott (N.R.) 115.

Demurrer to Allegation as to Return of Writ.]—To a plea of the statute, the plaintiff replied that a writ issued under 2 Will. 4, c. 39, s. 10, and alleged that the writ was returned "by Henry Weeks and William Gilbertson":—Held, no ground of demurrer. Williams v. Williams, 2 D. (N.S.) 209; 10 M. & W. 174; 11 L. J., Ex. 386.

Defendant's Appearance stays Statute.]—It was not necessary, in order to prevent the operation of the statute, that the writ of summons, should, after an appearance entered by the defendant subsequently to the issuing of a distringas, have been served on the defendant in person, or returned non est inventus, or entered of record in compliance with 2 Will. 4, c. 39, s. 10. Jones v. Boxer, 6 D. & L. 574; 7 C. B. 58; 18 L. J., C. P. 185; 13 Jur. 960.

Writ issued, but not entered on Record.]—A declaration stated that the plaintiff retained the defendant as an attorney to prosecute and conduct an action, for the recovery of a debt, and it became his duty, as such attorney, to use due care and diligence in prosecuting and conducting the action. Breach, that he did not use due care and diligence; but, on the contrary thereof, prosecuted and conducted the action in a careless and an unskilful manner, in this, to wit, that he, having sued out writs for the purpose of preventing the action from being barred, "did not duly file the writs with the proper officer of the court, according to the necessary and accustomed practice of the court":—Held, after verdict, and after judgment for the plaintiff, that the word "filing" might be understood of bringing the writ into the office for the purpose of its being entered on the record; and that the duty of the defendant was properly laid, and the breach of that duty properly assigned in the declaration. Hunter v. Caldwell, 10 Q. B. 69; 12 Jur. 285—Ex. Ch.

Issue of Process need not be specially replied.]—A plea of the statute stated that the cause of action did not accrue within six years next before the commencement of the suit. The plaintiff replied, that the cause of action did accrue within six years:—Held, that without specially replying process issued, the plaintiff might on this replication prove a quo minus to have issued within the six years, and produce the roll to shew the continuances regularly entered up accordingly. Dickenson v. Teague, 1 C. M. & R. 241; 4 Tyr. 450; 3 L. J., Ex. 266.

Non-continuance of Writ need not be specially pleaded.]—Where a writ, issued within six years after the cause of action accrued, had not been continued pursuant to 2 Will. 4, c. 39, s. 10, the defendant was not bound to plead such non-continuance specially, but might take advantage of it under the plea that the cause of action did not accrue within six years next before the suit; since for this purpose the last writ which was served was the commencement of the suit. Pratt v. Hawkins, 15 M. & W. 399.

Effect of re-sealing Writ.]—Where a writ of summons, tested in time to save the statute, was re-sealed in consequence of an alteration in the description of the defendant and the county in which he resided, and was not served until after the six years had expired:—Held, that the re-sealing did not amount to a re-issuing of the writ, and that it was not necessary for the plaintiff to shew when the re-sealing took place. Braithwaite v. Montford (Lord), 2 C. & M. 408; 4 Tyr. 276; 3 L. J., Ex. 91.

A writ of right was issued before the expiration of the time limited by the act 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, for bringing such writs. After that time had expired, the return day of the writ was altered, and the writ was re-sealed:—Held, that the writ must be considered as having been brought after the time limited by the act, and it was therefore superseded. Foot v. Collins, 1 Myl. & C. 250; 5 L. J., Ch. 225.

No Renewal of, or Sealing of, Writ, or Extension of Time, nunc pro tunc, when Statute has run.]—It is a rule of practice that the court will not extend the time for renewing a writ of summons after the expiration of twelve months from the day of the date of the writ, where the claim would, in the absence of such renewal, be barred by the statute. Hewett v. Barr, 60 L. J., Q. B. 268; [1891] 1 Q. B. 98; 39 W. R. 394. Magee v. Hastings, 28 L. R., Ir. 288.

The court has no power under Ord. LXIV. r. 7, to extend the time for renewing a writ of summons, where the claim would, in the absence of such renewal, be barred by the statute. Doyle v. Kaufman, 47 L. J., Q. B. 26; 3 Q. B. D. 7; 26 W. R. 98. Affirmed, 3 Q. B. D. 340—C. A.

The six months during which a writ continues in force after its renewal are to be computed inclusively of the day of renewal. The court refused to direct the writ to be renewed nunc pro tunc. Anon., 1 H. & C. 664; 32 L. J., Ex. 88; 7 L. T. 718; 11 W. R. 293.

A writ of summons was issued dated Nov. 7, 1853, with a view to save the statute. It was renewed on the 6th of May, 1854. On November 6th following, the plaintiff applied to the officer of the court to renew it again, but the latter refused, considering it too late, and that the six calendar months had expired. The court, without deciding whether the renewal would be valid, directed that the writ should be renewed nunc pro tunc, as the dates would appear on the record. Anon., 3 C. L. R. 78; 24 L. J., Q. B. 23; 18 Jur. 1104; 3 W. R. 74. S. P., Black v. Green, 15 C. B. 262; 3 C. L. R. 38; 24 L. J., C. P. 1; 18 Jur. 1017.

Within six months of issuing a writ, the plaintiff's attorney paid the proper fees at the office for its renewal, but he inadvertently neglected to get the seal of the court impressed upon it; after the lapse of the six months the omission was discovered. There having been no default in their officer, the court refused to order the seal to be impressed nunc pro tunc, in order to prevent the running of the statute. Nazer v. Wade, 1 B. & S. 728; 31 L. J., Q. B. 5; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 134; 5 L. T. 604. S. P., Bailey v. Owen, 9 W. R. 128.

The last day for re-sealing a writ, so as to save the statute, expired on Saturday, the 28th December, within the Christmas holidays. A party who attended at the office on that day for the purpose, found it shut, and the officer having refused to re-seal the writ on the following Monday, the court refused to order him to do it afterwards nunc pro tunc. Evans v. Jones, 2 B. & S. 45; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 641; 5 L. T. 693.

Order LXIV. r. 3, does not apply to extensions of time which prevent the operation of the Statute of Limitations. Morris v. Richards, 45 L. T. 210; 46 J. P. 37.

Amendment of Writ or Bill after Statute has run.]—The court will allow a writ of summons to be amended where the statute would otherwise operate as a bar. Green v. Kettleby, 8 D. P. C. 783.

The court refused to allow the dates of writs of summons to be altered, for the purpose of preventing the plaintiff's claim from being barred by the statute. Campbell v. Smart, 5 C. B. 196; 5 D. & L. 335; 17 L. J., C. P. 63.

A bill for an account of tithes was filed against five defendants, before the expiration of the time limited by the act 2 & 3 Will. 4, c. 100, s. 3; and after the expiration of that time was amended under orders of the court, and four other persons were introduced as defendants:—Held, that the suit as against these latter defendants must be taken to have commenced at the date at which they were actually introduced into the bill; that they could not, by relation backwards, be treated as defendants to the original bill, and that they were consequently entitled to the protection of the provisions of the statute. A decree against these defendants for an account was therefore reversed, and the bill, as to them, ordered to be dismissed with costs. Byron v. Cooper, 11 Cl. & F. 556.

A bill for tithes having been filed within the period limited by the statute 3 & 4 Will. 4, and amended after that period for the purpose of adding another party:—Held, sufficient as against the last party, inasmuch as the bill and amended bill formed but one record. Thorpe v. Mattingley, 2 Y. & Coll. 421; 8 L. J., Ex. Eq. 9. Doubted in Plowden v. Thorpe, 1 West, 42; 7 Cl. & F. 137.

The testator died in 1811. S. H. entered, &c., and, in 1825, died without having paid the legacies. T. P. H., who took a quasi estate tail under the will, sold part of the lands; and, having devised the remainder, died in 1833, leaving the legacies unpaid. On 31st of December, 1833, the legatees filed a bill for payment by sale of J. A.'s real estate, against the heir-at-law of J. A., and the devisees of T. P. H., and the persons who purchased from him, with notice of the legacies. No subpœna to appear and answer that bill was ever served. On the 24th of December, 1841, the legatees filed another bill, stating the filing and purport of the bill of December, 1833, "as by said original bill of record will appear"; and relying on the filing of that bill as a bar to the Statute of Limitations, prayed that J. A.'s will might be established, &c.; that the legacies might be decreed well charged on his real estate; and for the usual accounts, and, if necessary, for a sale, &c. On general demurrer to this bill, which was not described in any part of it as an amended bill, but was filed and marked as such by the proper officer:—Held, that the bill of 1841 should be considered as an amended bill; that the suit was pending from the date of the filing of the original bill in 1833; and that the filing of that bill, without service of subpœnas, was sufficient to save the plaintiff's demand from being barred by the Statute of Limitations, 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, s. 40. Boyd v. Higginson, 5 Ir. Eq. R. 97; Fl. & K. 603.

Semble, if a bill were filed as an illusory proceeding, to evade the provisions of the Statute of Limitations, the court might, on a proper application, order it to be taken off the file. Ib.

Where the time for suit or action allowed by the Statute of Limitations had elapsed between the filing the original bill and the argument of the demurrer, leave to amend was refused. Allison v. Herring, 8 L. J., Ch. 223.

A bill filed by a widow to raise the arrears of her jointure, charged upon certain lands by settlement. Defendant by his answer denied the husband's power to jointure, as he had at the time of the settlement only an estate tail, which had not subsequently been barred. An amended bill was then filed, praying for dower in case plaintiff was not considered entitled to jointure. Defendant neither answered amended bill nor appeared at the hearing, and the court decreed plaintiff entitled to dower, and directed an account of the arrears:—Held, that the amended bill was a continuation of the original suit, and that in taking the account the defendant could not set up in the office the 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, s. 40, limiting the recovery of arrears of dower to a period of six years, although the amended bill was not filed until after the act came into operation (31st December, 1833), the original bill having been filed previously thereto. Smith v. Walsh, 1 Ir. Eq. R. 167.

Renewal of Writ stays Statute as to all the Defendants.]—Where any one of several defendants named in a writ of summons has not been served, and there are others, upon whom service might have been, but is not, effected, a renewal of the writ, on the ground of the nonservice of such one, will prevent the operation of the statute in favour of such others. Dickson v. Capes, 11 Ir. C. L. R. 334.

No Stay of Statute if Action fails.]—An ejectment bill, filed in 1842, stated that the plaintiff's alleged right to the land accrued in 1812, that a bill had been filed, in 1824, to recover the property, and that an ejectment had been brought in 1832, which was stayed until the plaintiff had paid the costs of a former ejectment, but it did not state the result of the suit or action:—Held, that it must be inferred that they had failed, and that they did not prevent the operation of the Statute of Limitations. Bampton v. Birchall, 5 Beav. 67; 6 Jur. 815. And see 11 L. J., Ch. 200.

A suit, dismissed as against the principal defendant, and which, though pending as against the others, has yet been practically abandoned, does not prevent the operation of the Statute of Limitations. Dixon v. Gayfere, 17 Beav. 421; 23 L. J., Ch. 60.

—— Or if not proceeded with.]—Bill depending six years in chancery not sufficient to take case out of statute. Anon., 2 Atk. 1.

A bill in chancery depending almost six years ought not to be considered a sufficient demand of a debt, so as to take it out of the Statute of Limitations. Lake v. Hayes, 1 Atk. 282.

Though an original bill be filed at law, yet if there has been no proceeding upon it for six years, it will not prevent the Statute of Limitations from running. Lacon v. Lacon, 2 Atk. 395.

A bill was filed in 1828 by the representatives of the cestui que trust, against those of the trustee under a deed of which the trust expired in 1810; the answer was filed in 1829, but no further proceedings were taken till 1839:—Held, that as to the lapse of time, the case stood as it did when the bill was filed, and that there was not such laches as to bar the claim. Dickinson v. Holland (Lord), 2 Beav. 310.

Stay of Statute at Law on Commencement of Proceedings in Equity.]—A suit in a court of equity, properly instituted, will prevent time from running, and a court of law ought to act upon this principle, the same rule being prescribed by the statute for both courts. This court, however, will protect its own jurisdiction, and will not permit a suitor to be evicted at law who has an equitable right to sue for the land, and has filed his bill within the limits allowed, and duly pursued his remedy. Wrixon v. Vize, 3 Dr. & War. 104; 2 Con. & L. 138. Affirming 1 Con. & L. 298; 2 Dr. & War. 192.

Where the Statute of Limitations attaches to a demand pending the retention of the bill in equity, the validity of the debt being directed to be tried at law, the court restrained the debtor from insisting at law on the benefit of the statute. Sirdefield v. Price, 2 Y. & J. 73. S. P., Anon., Vern. 74.

Not in Equity, though Proceedings commenced at Law.]—A creditor issued a writ of summons in the Common Pleas against an administrator for a debt not then barred by statute. Within six months after issuing this writ (which was never served), at which time the debt was barred unless saved by the writ, the creditor took out an administration summons:—Held, that the writ only saved the bar for six months in the court of Common Pleas, and that the statute was a bar to the administration suit. Manby, In re, Fievet v. Manby, 3 Ch. D. 101; 35 L. T. 307; 24 W. R. 699.

Action that has failed stays Statute, if Order for New Trial obtained.]—In 1846 H. executed certain works for a railway company, for the payment of his claim, for which he brought an action against one of the acting committee of the company. A verdict on the 1st April, 1848, was found for the defendant. Subsequently a rule for a new trial was obtained by H., but before it was proceeded with, a winding-up order was, on the 28th May, 1849, obtained against the company. Afterwards a notice was served by H.'s attorney that the new trial would be commenced. On the 1st August, 1851, a judge made an order that all proceedings at law should be stayed until such proof should have been made or exhibited as required by the Winding-up Acts, the defendant being sued as a partner in or contributory to a company. H. died, and on the 7th October, 1852, his executrix brought a claim into the Master's office, which the Master disallowed, on the ground that it was barred by the Statute of Limitations:—Held, on motion to reverse or vary his decision, that the executrix was not barred by the Statute of Limitations from having a new trial to determine whether she was or was not a creditor. The question being purely a legal one, the executrix would have leave to bring such action as she might be advised, with liberty to the official manager to defend the action; and any judgment which might be recovered would be dealt with as the court should direct. Higgins, Ex parte, 2 Jur. (N.S.) 178.

Statute ceases to run against Set-off when Action brought.]—In cases under 21 Jac. 1, c. 16, s. 3, the statute is not a bar to a set-off, unless the six years have expired before the action is brought. Walker v. Clements, 15 Q. B. 1046.

Where there are cross demands between parties, which accrued at nearly the same time, for which bills are given, both of which would be barred by the statute, but the plaintiff has saved his limitation by suing out process, and the defendant has not, such process operates upon the set-off, and prevents the plaintiff from availing himself of the statute to defeat it. Ord v. Ruspini, 2 Esp. 570.

Against Debt, on Debtor's Bankruptcy.]—After a commission issued, the Statute of Limitations does not run against a creditor of the bankrupt. Ross, Ex parte, 2 Glyn & J. 46. Affirmed, Id. 330.

On Carrying in Claim in Winding-up.]—A creditor, within six years of the date of his debt, carried in his claim against a company ordered to be wound up; but the consideration of it was not then proceeded with. After the expiration of the six years, the Master proceeded with the consideration of the claim, but disallowed it as being barred by the Statute of Limitations. Upon appeal, the Master's decision was reversed, and it was referred to the Master to review his decision. Great Western Extension Atmospheric Ry., In re, Wryghte's Case, 5 De G. & Sm. 244; 16 Jur. 812.

When Proceedings of Creditors stayed at Instance of Debtor.]—By a decree in 1814, in a suit instituted by the heir-at-law of the debtor, the proceedings of the creditors under a decree in 1808 were stayed until a decree in 1836:—Held, that the defendant in the present suit, instituted in 1846, who was assignee of the insolvent heir, could not rely on the Statute of Limitations, the decree in 1808 being a proceeding that would, under the old statute, entitle the creditors to sue for twenty years previous to the expiration of which the suits were stayed until 1836, when under the new statute the creditors had a present right to receive their debts. A court of equity will not permit a party to rely on the interval of time during which he has himself stayed his creditor, in order to set up the Statute of Limitations. Baylee v. Browne, 10 Ir. Eq. R. 180.

Death of Defendant after Issue of Writ—Fresh Writ after Statute run, but within Twelve Months of Probate.]—A writ was issued, but before it was served the defendant died. Within a year from the proof of the will by the executors a fresh writ was issued against them for the same cause of action. In the meanwhile the period of statutory limitation had expired:—Held, that the executors could not rely on the statute as a defence to the action. Swindell v. Bulkeley, 56 L. J., Q. B. 613; 18 Q. B. D. 250; 56 L. T. 38.

Not against Creditors, on Administration Action by one Creditor on behalf of himself alone.]—A creditor of a person deceased filed a bill on behalf of himself alone against B., the personal representative of the debtor, and C., who had in his possession certain papers belonging to the debtor, on which he claimed a lien for a debt alleged to be due to him from the deceased. The bill prayed for the usual accounts of the deceased's estate, and that it might be applied in a due course of administration; that A. might have access to the papers; and that the amount of C.'s lien, if any, might be ascertained and paid. The decree in the cause directed an account to be taken of A.'s debt, and the amount to be paid out of a fund in court: and if the fund should be more than sufficient for that purpose, that what should be found due to the other incumbrancers should be paid to them; but it did not direct any account to be taken of those incumbrances; and accordingly the Master took an account of A.'s debt only. After it had been paid, C. presented a petition in the suit, praying an account of what was due to him, and for payment of it out of the remainder of the fund. The order made on that petition directed the Master to inquire and state who were the incumbrancers other than A. referred to by the decree:—Held, that neither the institution of the suit, nor any of the proceedings in it, prevented the Statute of Limitations from running against C.'s claim. Watson v. Birch, 15 Sim. 523; 16 L. J., Ch. 188; 11 Jur. 198.

Not on Administration Action being commenced by another Creditor.]—See Humble v. Humble, col. 224.

After Decree in Creditors' Administration Action.]—After a decree in a creditors' suit for administration, the Statute of Limitations cannot be set up to defeat the plaintiff's debt. Adams v. Waller, 35 L. J., Ch. 727; 14 W. R. 789.

Where debts of a testator had been paid out of the income of the estate of an infant in tail under his will, by the direction of the court, after decree in an administration suit, and the tenant in tail subsequently died an infant, and his administrators, more than six years after taking out administration to him, filed a bill to revive the administration suit, for the purpose of having such payments recouped out of the corpus of the estate, and for payment of the costs of the administration suit:—Held, first, that the payment on behalf of the infant having been made by the court, a merger of the charge could not be presumed; and, secondly, that the pendency of the suit prevented such claim being barred by lapse of time. Alsop v. Bell, 24 Beav. 451.

A bill filed by one creditor on behalf of himself and the others will prevent the Statute of Limitations from running against any of the creditors who come in under the decree. Sterndale v. Hankinson, 1 Sim. 393; 27 R. R. 210. And see Bennett v. Barnard, 12 Ir. Eq. R. 229; post, col. 312.

In an administration action commenced in December, 1878, by one executor of a testator, who was also a creditor of his testator, against his co-executor, the usual judgment in a creditors' action was pronounced in December, 1879, and some time afterwards a claim was brought in by a creditor against the estate upon a promissory note of the testator, dated in November, 1873:—Held, that the claim was barred by the statute. Sterndale v. Hankinson (1 Sim. 393; supra) observed upon. Greaves, In re, Bray v. Tofield, 50 L. J., Ch. 817; 18 Ch. D. 551; 45 L. T. 464; 30 W. R. 55.

A creditor who, in the regular stage of the suit, proves his demand under the decree in it, is entitled to consider that suit as having been instituted for his benefit from the period when it was so framed, as that the decree to be pronounced in it would have authorised him to prove his demand under it; and if it were so framed before the 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, his demand is not affected by the operation of that statute. Brown v. Lynch, 4 Ir. Eq. R. 316. And see Ebbs' Estate, In re, and Finch v. Finch, col. 82.

On Claim made under Decree, though Action necessary.]—A claim made under a decree, although not the proper mode of proceeding, a suit being necessary, stopped the running of the Statute of Limitations. Congreve v. Power, 1 Moll. 121.

Where no Claim made under Decree.]—The existence of a creditors' suit for the administration of the estate of a deceased debtor does not prevent the operation of the Statute of Limitations against a debt in respect of which no claim is made under the decree, semble. Tatam v. Williams, 3 Hare, 347.

A creditor who does not come in regularly to prove his demand under the decree to account in a creditors' suit, but obtains an order for liberty to file a charge and obtain a separate report at his own expense, upon an affidavit stating that he was ignorant of the existence of the suit until after the decree to account was pronounced, and the report thereunder made, cannot rely upon the suit as being his from the beginning, so as thereby to avoid the bar of the 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, s. 42. O'Kelly v. Bodkin, 3 Ir. Eq. R. 390.

Statute does not run against Executors after Decree.]—If, after a decree to account, an executor or administrator does not revive within six years, this is not within the Statute of Limitations. Hollingshead's Case, 1 P. W. 742.

Statute runs, notwithstanding Petition in Lunacy by Committee of deceased Lunatic.]—A petition in lunacy after the death of the lunatic, by his committee, and a reference to the Master thereon, followed by a report finding that a sum of money had been expended by the committee in the maintenance of the lunatic, is not a proceeding which will take the claim of the committee out of the Statute of Limitations, as against the heir of the lunatic, who was not a party to the application. Wilkinson v. Wilkinson, 9 Hare, 204.

Stay of Action pending Lunacy Proceedings.]—In 1823 the holder of a promissory note brought an action against the maker, who became lunatic; whereupon the lunatic and his committee filed a bill to restrain proceedings in the action, on the ground of alleged insufficiency of consideration for the note; and, upon the motion for an injunction, an order was made by consent, staying proceedings in the action and the suit, with liberty for the holder of the note to go in and establish his claim in the lunacy. He accordingly took proceedings to support his claim before the Master in lunacy, who, however, disallowed it, and in August, 1830, made his report, without including in it the name of the holder of the note as a creditor. The lunatic died in March, 1843; and in February, 1844, the holder of the note filed a creditor's bill against the representatives of the lunatic:—Held, that the plaintiff was not entitled to be relieved from the effect of the Statute of Limitations. Rock v. Cooke, 1 De G. & Sm. 675; 17 L. J., Ch. 93; 12 Jur. 5.

In 1823 an action was brought upon a promissory note, and the debtor was arrested. Soon afterwards the debtor was declared a lunatic, and in 1825 he by his committee filed a bill to restrain the action. In July, 1825, an arrangement was made, and carried into execution by an order of this court, whereby the action was stayed, and the creditor agreed to establish, and did proceed to establish, his debt under the lunacy; in 1843, however, and before the Master acting in the lunacy had made any report as to the creditor's claim, the lunatic died. The creditor then filed his bill against the lunatic's executors:—Held, upon demurrer, the court having no judicial knowledge of the effect of the death of the lunatic upon the proceedings in the lunacy, that the claim of the plaintiff was not barred by lapse of time. Rock v. Cooke, 1 Coll. 477; 8 Jur. 1005. But see decision at the hearing, supra.

Effect of Appointment of Receiver.]—Appointment of receiver does not affect the running of the Statute of Limitations. Anon., 2 Atk. 15.

Though the appointment of a receiver does not prevent the bar of the statute from operating against a stranger, yet it will serve to prevent, at least in this court, time from running in favour of a stranger to the suit. Wrixon v. Vize, 2 Con. & L. 138; 3 Dr. & War. 104; 5 Ir. Eq. R. 173. Affirming 1 Con. & L. 298; 2 Dr. & War. 192; 4 Ir. Eq. R. 463.

The appointment of a receiver over an estate will not prevent the operation of the Statute of Limitations on demands against that estate. Harrison v. Dignan, 1 Con. & L. 376; 2 Dr. & War. 298; 4 Ir. Eq. R. 562.

The fact of the Master having reported the demand as an existing incumbrance will not take it out of the statute. Ib.

Bill of Revivor.] — Statute of Limitations cannot be pleaded in bar to a bill of revivor, after a decree to account. Egremont (Earl) v. Hamilton, 1 Ball & B. 531.

In 1822 a bill was filed by the tenant in tail to have a purchase made in 1808, by the testator of the defendant, set aside as fraudulent and void as against the plaintiff, and for an account of mesne rates. In 1823 the defendant answered, and no further proceedings were had until 1839, when the present bill (of revivor and settlement) was filed :—Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to an account from 1839, the time of filing the bill of revivor, and that interest on certain sums of money, for which the defendant was declared entitled to credit, was to be computed from the same period only. Thornhill v. Glover, 3 Dr. & War. 195.

III. PLACES WHERE STATUTE APPLICABLE.

Lex fori.]—The time of limitation for bringing an action is governed by the law of the country where the action is brought, and not by the lex loci contractus. Huber v. Steiner, 2 Scott, 304; 2 Bing. (N.C.) 202; 1 Hodges, 206.

The English Statute of Limitations binds every one who comes to sue in the Court of Chancery. Pardo v. Bingham, 39 L. J., Ch. 170; L. R. 4 Ch. 735; 20 L. T. 464; 17 W. R. 419.

The law of prescription, or of limitation, is a law relating to procedure, having reference only to the lex fori; and when a court entertains a cause of action which originated in a foreign country, the rule is to adjudicate according to the law of that country, yet the court proceeds according to the prescription of the country in which it exercises jurisdiction. Ruckmaboye v. Lulloobhoy Mottichund, 5 Moore, Ind. App. 234; 8 Moore, P. C. 4.

In an action for a debt, it was averred, that before making the instrument and obligation thereinafter mentioned, the plaintiffs carried on business in Scotland, and that A. and the defendant were domiciled therein; and that by an instrument and obligation in writing, A. and the defendant became bound, and obliged themselves, conjointly and severally, to pay to the plaintiff 400*l.*, and that, by the law of Scotland, at the time of making such instrument, and thence hitherto in force, the time for bringing any suit or instituting any legal proceedings by the plaintiffs against the defendant upon the instrument, and the cause and right of action accruing thereon, had not yet elapsed; that is to say, by virtue of the said law, the plaintiffs had the right and privilege of suing and bringing any action thereon, at any time within forty years from the time of making and signing the bond. A plea, that the cause of action did not accrue within six years, is an answer to the action. British Linen Co. v. Drummond, 10 B. & C. 903; 9 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 213.

Legal proceedings in England to recover a debt contracted in India are not barred by the Indian Statute of Limitations, Art. XIV. 1859. Finch v. Finch, 45 L. J., Ch. 816; 35 L. T. 235. S. P., Alliance Bank of Simla v. Carey, 49 L. J., C. P. 781; 5 C. P. D. 429; 29 W. R. 306; 44 J. P. 735.

Where a claim is made in an administration suit in England by an Indian creditor of the testator, the English Statute of Limitations must be applied as part of the lex fori. Ib.

The laws of the country where a contract is enforced govern all questions as to the remedy and mode of proceeding, including those applicable to lapse of time. Fergusson v. Fyffe, 8 Cl. & F. 121.

As to contracts merely personal, it is a general rule that questions relating to the validity and to the interpretation of a contract, are to be governed by the law of the country where the contract was made; and if a remedy for non-performance of contract is sought in another country, the mode of suing, and the time within which the action must be brought, are to be governed by the law of the country in which the action is brought. Cooper v. Waldegrave (Earl), 2 Beav. 282.

Foreign Judgment.]—Where bills were drawn and accepted, and became due in France, but the acceptor, a Scotchman, before such bills became due, returned to Scotland, and there continued till his death :—Held, that more than six years having elapsed between the time of the bills becoming due and the action being brought, the Scotch law of prescription applied, and that its effect was not prevented by the fact that the payee had taken legal proceedings in France, during the absence of the debtor, and had obtained judgment against him. Don v. Lippmann, 5 Cl. & F. 1.

If a man recovers a judgment or sentence in France for money due to him, the debt must be considered here only as a debt on simple contract, and the Statute of Limitations will run upon it. Dupleix v. De Roven, 2 Vern. 540.

India.]—The 21 Jac. 1, c. 16, extends to India. East India Co. v. Paul, 7 Moore, P. C. 85; 14 Jur. 253.

And applies to Hindoos and Mahomedans as well as to Europeans, in civil actions in the supreme court. Ruckmaboye v. Lulloobhoy Mottichund, 5 Moore, Ind. App. 234; 8 Moore, P. C. 4.

Scotland.]—The Statute of Limitations extends to persons in Scotland. Rex v. Walker, 1 W. Bl. 286. And see Campbell v. Stein, 6 Dow, 116; Surtees v. Allan, 2 Dow, 254.

Ireland.]—A debtor in Ireland is beyond seas within the statute. Lane v. Connell, 5 L. J., Ex. 98; 1 M. & W. 701; 1 Tyr. & G. 441.

IV. APPLICATION OF STATUTE TO PARTICULAR PERSONS.

1. Crown.

See also post, A, VI. 8 (col. 85), and B, II. 14 (col. 248).

Generally.]—The Crown not being mentioned in the 21 Jac. 1, c. 16, s. 3, is not within its operation. Lambert v. Taylor, 4 B. & C. 138; 6 D. & R. 188; 3 L. J. (o.s.) K. B. 160.

Statute pleadable to Claim by Crown upon a Bill of Exchange.]—The statute may be pleaded to a scire facias issued by the Crown against the drawer of a bill of exchange in the hands of the Crown debtor, and which has been seized by the sheriff under an inquisition on prerogative process. Rex v. Morrall, 9 Price, 24.

Statute not applicable to Claim by Crown against Army Agent.]—Moneys issued by the Crown to an army agent for the pay, subsistence, &c.; of officers, and carried in the books of the agent to the credit of the respective officers, but not paid over to them, and not made the subject of any private arrangement with them, continue the moneys of the Crown in the hands of the agent, for which he is accountable to the Crown; and may be called back by the attorney-general, as representing the Crown, even after a lapse of more than thirty years. Brummell v. M'Pherson, 5 Russ. 263; 7 L. J. (o.s.) Ch. 1.

Suit by Crown for Penalties commences with Issue of Process, not on filing Information.]—See Att.-Gen. v. Hall, col. 27.

Crown not barred, though only Trustee for Subject.]—See Reg. v. Bayly, col. 248.

2. Corporations.

Corporations are not less liable to the operation of prescription than private persons. Dundee Harbour Trustees v. Dougall, 1 Macq. H. L. 317.

A corporation shall have the benefit of the Statute of Limitations as well as any private person. Wych v. East India Co., 3 P. W. 310.

Statutory Debt or Action on Case—Contagious Diseases (Animals) Acts—County Council.]—The justices of a county, as the local authority for the county, neglected between the years 1869 and 1878 to recoup to the plaintiffs, as the local authority for a borough within the county, the proportionate amount contributed by the borough to the expenses incurred by the local authority of the county, in carrying out the provisions of the Contagious Diseases (Animals) Act, 1869, which they were bound to repay under s. 97 of that act. After the passing of the Local Government Act, 1888, the plaintiffs sued the defendants, as successors of the local authority for the county, to recover the sums which should have been recouped:—Held, that if any action would lie, it would be an action on the case and not action for debt on a statute, and therefore the Statute of Limitations was a bar to the claim. Salford Corporation v. Lancashire County Council, 59 L. J., Q. B. 576; 25 Q. B. D. 384; 63 L. T. 409; 38 W. R. 661; 55 J. P. 85—C. A.

Dividends, a Debt from Company—Right of Action.]—Dividends declared by a company are, when payable, debts due from the company to the shareholders, which the shareholders can recover in an action against the company; and the claims of the shareholders in respect thereof are liable to become barred under the Statutes of Limitations. Severn and Wye and Severn Bridge Ry., In re, 65 L. J., Ch. 400; [1896] 1 Ch. 559; 74 L. T. 219; 44 W. R. 347; 3 Manson, 90.

A declaration by the company that the dividends are payable does not make the company a trustee for the shareholders so as to prevent the application of the statutes; neither does an entry in the books of the company of its liability in respect of the unclaimed dividends, there being no special part of the assets set apart as representing them, and no notice of the entry given to the shareholders. An incorporated company and its shareholders are not in a position analogous to that of partners as regards each other. Ib.

3. Trustee and Cestui que Trust.

See also post, B, II. 7 (col. 180).

By the Trustee Act, 1888 (51 & 52 Vict. c. 59), s. 8, the benefit of the statute is given to trustees, except in the case of an action for fraud, or to recover trust property still in the trustee's hands, or which he has converted to his own use.

Statute not applicable as between.]—Where a party receives money in the character of a trustee, the statute will not run in his favour. Bolton, Ex parte, 1 Deac. & C. 556.

Although as between the cestui que trust and a stranger, the claim of the cestui que trust is barred by lapse of time operating against his trustee, lapse of time is no bar as between the cestui que trust and his trustee. Cross, In re, Harston v. Tenison, 51 L. J., Ch. 645; 20 Ch. D. 109; 45 L. T. 777; 30 W. R. 376—C. A.

Trustee for Infant neglecting to sue, Infant barred.]—See Wych v. E. India Co., col. 65.

Moneys received virtute officii.]—Plaintiff, who was made chief justice at Oxford during the differences between the King and his parliament, but never sat at Westminster, brought his bill against the prothonotaries for an account of the moneys received by them, by an implied trust, virtute officii, to which they pleaded the statute. Plea overruled, for the Statute of Limitations does not extend to a trust. Sheldon v. Wildman (1 Ch. Ca. 26; Freem. 156) followed. Heath v. Henley, 1 Ch. Ca. 21; 3 Ch. Rep. 8.

Trustees of Funds for an Association.]—A fund was established at Bombay by the covenanted civil servants of the East India Company serving in that presidency, for granting pensions and annuities to members, their widows and children. By the original articles certain persons were appointed managers, and they were declared to be "the trustees of the fund," and the property was vested in them:—Held, that they were not mere trustees for the association, but trustees properly so-called, and that the members of the fund were the beneficiaries, so that the defence of the Statute of Limitations could not be set up against a claimant on the fund, merely on account of lapse of time. Edwards v. Warden, 45 L. J., Ch. 713; 1 App. Cas. 281; 35 L. T. 174.

Testamentary Guardian.]—A testamentary guardian is a trustee, and therefore the Statute of Limitations is inapplicable to accounts as between him and his ward. Mathew v. Brise, 14 Beav. 341.

Administration Suit—Claim against Manager of Estate.]—B. had acted for the testator during the life of the latter, with full and unrestricted powers of management; the wife of B. was the testator's daughter and sole executrix. The testator's widow was entitled to a legacy of 1,500*l.* under her husband's will, and also to the furniture, effects, &c., of the testator. The testator's will was extremely brief and informal; and she on that ground filed a bill for the administration of the testator's estate, praying the usual account. The defendants in answer to an interrogatory of the plaintiff, furnished an account of all dealings with the testator's property up to the date of the suit from a date six years prior to his death, and claimed the benefit of the Statute of Limitations as to the period antecedent to these six years:—Held, that the defendant was a trustee, and could not avail himself of the Statute of Limitations. Gray v. Bateman, 21 W. R. 137.

Mistake in distributing Trust Fund.]—Trustees had, by mistake, paid to A. (one of the cestuis que trustent) a portion of the trust funds to which he was not entitled. In a suit by another party interested against A. to make him refund:—Held, that the Statute of Limitations was inapplicable; that he was bound to repay, though more than six years had elapsed, and that all his interest in the trust fund was liable to make good the amount. Harris v. Harris, 29 Beav. 110.

—— Mistake in Payment of Dividends in Bankruptcy.]—In 1806 P. proves a debt against the estate of B. & Co., bankrupts, on a bill of exchange, and dies in 1807, appointing G. his executor; G. becomes bankrupt in 1816, and obtains his certificate in 1817. But before that time, viz., in the years 1811, 1814, 1815, G. had, as executor, received three dividends on P.'s debt, and in 1817, 1822, and 1828, he receives three other dividends. It afterwards turns out that the bill of exchange was paid by another party in 1807, so that no dividend was ever due. On petition by B. & Co.'s assignees to expunge the proof, and that G. should refund the six dividends:—Held, first, that it being in the nature of a trust, the Statute of Limitations did not run in favour of G. But, second, that as the first three dividends were paid in error, and were a legal debt against G., and might have been proved under his bankruptcy, the claim as to them was barred by G.'s certificate. The other three, received since his bankruptcy, were ordered to be refunded. Bolton, Ex parte, Baillie, In re, 1 Deac. & C. 556; 1 Mont. & Ayr. 60; 3 L. J., Bk. 22. But see *S. Receipt of Trust Property with Notice.]—Where a trustee lends trust money in breach of the trust, and the borrower, with notice of the trust, applies the money to his own use, he cannot be permitted to separate the loan from the trust, and insist that the loan being barred by the statute, the trust is barred also. Ernest v. Croysdill, 6 Jur. (N.S.) 740; 2 L. T. 616; 8 W. R. 736.—L.JJ.

If property is delivered by a trustee to an auctioneer for sale, who retains the proceeds, and pays interest thereon to the cestuis que trustent, he is a constructive trustee; so that, on his bankruptcy, the statute is no bar to a proof. Gowers, Ex parte, 3 Mont. & Ayr. 172.

Action by Company to recover Bribe from Directors—Person in Fiduciary Position—No Express Trust.]—An action was brought by a company in 1879 against a former director to recover 250*l.*, on the ground that the defendant had received it from a debtor to the company as a bribe, to induce him to use his influence to obtain favourable terms of compromise for the debtor. The allegations that this bribe had been given had in 1872 been brought before the directors at a board meeting, they had investigated it, and as it seemed came to the conclusion that the charge was unfounded, as no proceedings were taken, and it was not alleged that the other directors had been acting otherwise than bonâ fide in the matter:—Held, that the claim of the company was barred by the Statute of Limitations. Although where a trustee receives money upon an express trust and wastes it, the Statute of Limitations does not run against the claim of the cestui que trust, yet where a trustee receives money not belonging to the cestui que trust, but which the cestui que trust can claim on the ground that the receipt of it was a fraud upon him, the Statute of Limitations will run against the claim of the cestui que trust from the time when he discovers the fraud. Metropolitan Bank v. Heiron, 5 Ex. D. 319; 43 L. T. 676; 29 W. R. 370—C. A.

Statute no Bar to Claim against Directors in respect of a Payment of Dividends out of Capital.]—The articles of association of a company provided that interest at the rate of 5 per cent. per annum should be payable half-yearly on all money paid on the shares until otherwise determined by the directors, and also that no dividend or bonus should be paid except out of the profits. Although the company never earned any profits, the directors, acting under a bonâ fide mistake of law, made half-yearly payments of interest to the shareholders from 1869 till 1878. In 1886 the company was ordered to be wound up. In June, 1889, the liquidator sued the representatives of a director, who died in December, 1883, to recover the moneys so misapplied:—Held, that the Statute of Limitations had no application; and, further, that time would not begin to run until the director ceased to hold office on his death in 1883. Held, also, that the circumstances did not justify the defence of staleness of demand. Masonic and General Life Assurance Co. v. Sharpe, 61 L. J., Ch. 193; [1892] 1 Ch. 154; 65 L. T. 806; 40 W. R. 241. See also Exchange Banking Co., In re, Flitcroft's Case, col. 80.

Effect of Trustee Act, 1888, s. 8.]—Since the Trustee Act, 1888, s. 8, directors, who by mistake or carelessness misapply money under their control belonging to the company, can rely on the statute. Lands Allotment Co., In re, 63 L. J., Ch. 291; [1894] 1 Ch. 616; 70 L. T. 286; 42 W. R. 404.

A claim by an annuitant against a trustee for an account of moneys which ought to have been appropriated as a security for the payment of the annuity, but which were otherwise disposed of by the trustee in breach of trust more than six years before action brought, is barred by s. 8 of the Trustee Act, 1888. Bowden, In re, Andrew v. Cooper (59 L. J., Ch. 815; 45 Ch. D. 444) explained. How v. Winterton (Earl), 65 L. J., Ch. 832; [1896] 2 Ch. 626; 75 L. T. 40; 45 W. R. 103—C. A.

An action brought by a newly-appointed trustee against the representative of a deceased trustee for a breach of trust in making improper investments is an action brought to recover money to which no existing statute of limitations applies within the Trustee Act, 1888, s. 8, and is, therefore, barred after six years from the breach of trust. Bowden, In re, Andrew v. Cooper, 59 L. J., Ch. 815; 45 Ch. D. 444; 39 W. R. 219.

So also an action by residuary legatees against an executor and trustee for breach of trust. Swain, In re, Swain v. Bringeman, 61 L. J., Ch. 20; [1891] 3 Ch. 233; 65 L. T. 296.

In 1878 first mortgagees employed the mortgagor's solicitor to sell the property under their power of sale. The solicitor received the sale moneys, and paid off the first mortgage, but kept the balance for himself instead of paying off the second mortgagee, continuing to pay interest on the second mortgage as if it were still subsisting. In 1892 the second mortgagee discovered the fraud, and brought an action against the first mortgagees for an account and payment of the amount due to him:—Held, that the action was barred by s. 8 of the Trustee Act, 1888. A trustee cannot be said to be party or privy to a breach of trust within the exception in s. 8, who derives no benefit from it, has no knowledge of it, and is not concerned in it in any way; nor to retain trust property, within the exception, unless he has control of it when the action is brought. Thorne v. Heard, 64 L. J., Ch. 652; [1895] A. C. 495; 11 R. 254; 73 L. T. 291; 44 W. R. 155—H. L.

A testatrix gave all her residuary estate to two trustees in trust for an infant, to be paid to him at twenty-one. He attained twenty-one in 1880. In 1892 he took out a summons against the two trustees for administration of testatrix's estate. One of the defendants, who had been acting trustee, alone appeared. There was no allegation of fraud, or any evidence that the defendant still retained any part of the trust funds, or had converted them to his own use. The defendant admitted that he had rendered no account to the plaintiff, but deposed that he had spent all the trust funds in maintaining the plaintiff during his infancy:—Held, that s. 8 of the Trustee Act, 1888, applied, and that the summons must be dismissed. Page, In re, Jones v. Morgan, 62 L. J., Ch. 592; [1893] 1 Ch. 304; 3 R. 171; 41 W. R. 357.

Where trust moneys are advanced on mortgage and are handed over by the mortgagor's directions to a bank, in which one of the trustees is a partner, in payment of a prior charge of the bank on the property mortgaged, this is not, in the absence of fraud, "trust property received by the trustee and converted to his use," within s. 8, sub-s. 1, of the Trustee Act, 1888, and consequently the trustee may rely on the Statute of Limitations as a defence to an action to recover the trust property. Gurney, In re, Mason v. Mercer, [1893] 1 Ch. 590; 3 R. 148; 68 L. T. 289; 41 W. R. 443.

A breach of trust had been committed by trustees in 1878 by investing trust money on mortgage upon property of insufficient value:—Held, that payment of interest to the tenant for life by the trustees from 1878 to 1890 was not an acknowledgment by the trustees of a liability to repay the principal, and that the action against the trustees by the tenant for life for breach of trust was barred by s. 8 of the Trustee Act, 1888. Somerset, In re, Somerset v. Poulett, 63 L. J., Ch. 41; [1894] 1 Ch. 231; 7 R. 34; 70 L. T. 541; 42 W. R. 274.

In 1876 a husband took from his wife by force a legacy bequeathed to her separate use, which she had, to his knowledge, just received on her separate receipt. The wife repeatedly demanded the money until the husband's death in 1894, and in 1895 she brought an action against his executors for the amount:—Held, that the husband had made himself a trustee for the wife of the legacy, and that as he had retained the money and not accounted for it, his executors could not, under the Trustee Act, 1888. s. 8, claim the benefit of the statute. Wassell v. Leggatt, 65 L. J., Ch. 240; [1896] 1 Ch. 554; 74 L. T. 99; 44 W. R. 298.

By a marriage settlement made in 1875, property of the wife was vested in trustees upon trust to pay the income to her during the joint lives of herself and her husband for her separate use without power of anticipation; and after her death, in case he should survive her, to pay the income to him during his life; and after the death of the survivor to hold the trust funds in trust for the children of the marriage. The husband died in April, 1885. The action was commenced in November, 1890:—Held, that the wife took by resulting trust a reversionary life interest, which was different from and could not coalesce with the interest during the joint lives limited to her by the settlement; that the second life interest did not become an "interest in possession" until the death of the husband, and that, consequently, the defence of the Statute of Limitations under s. 8, sub-s. 1 (b) of the Trustee Act, 1888, was not a bar to the action. Mara v. Browne, 64 L. J., Ch. 594; [1895] 2 Ch. 69; 72 L. T. 765. Reversed on another point, 65 L. J., Ch. 225; [1896] 1 Ch. 199; 73 L. T. 638.

When Time runs against Right to Contribution from Co-Trustee.]—The law as stated in Wolmershausen v. Gullick (1893, 2 Ch. 514; ante, col. 9), that in a case of contribution between two co-sureties time does not begin to run under the statute until the liability of one of the sureties is ascertained, is applicable to the case of co-trustees. Robinson v. Harkin, 65 L. J., Ch. 773; [1896] 2 Ch. 415; 74 L. T. 777; 44 W. R. 702.

As between First and Second Mortgagee.]—The second mortgagee of a ship claimed an account against the first mortgagee, who had sold the vessel upon the mortgagor becoming bankrupt. Defendant offered to pay a specific amount. The action having been commenced more than six years after the sale, the defendant pleaded the Statute of Limitations. The plaintiff set up an express trust as a bar to the statute:—Held, that there was no express trust; that in case of an ascertained surplus the first mortgagee might be constructively a trustee of the surplus, but after six years evidence could not be adduced to prove a surplus. Tanner v. Heard (23 Beav. 555) explained. Banner v. Berridge, 50 L. J., Ch. 630; 18 Ch. D. 254; 44 L. T. 680; 29 W. R. 844; 4 Asp. M. C. 420.

4. Master and Servant.

Wages of Servant.]—Where it appeared that the course of dealing between master and steward had been to allow the steward to retain his salary from time to time out of money in his hands, the steward was allowed, after the master's death, to claim in account his salary for twenty years, the Statute of Limitations being held not to apply to such a claim. Hawkins, In re, Hawkins v. Hawkins, 28 W. R. 240.

A testator gave all his real and personal property to his wife, out of which he desired that she would discharge all his legal debts and enjoy the surplus for her life, and at her death the property was to be divided as in the will mentioned. A farm servant of the testator left his wages from time to time in his master's hands, and it was agreed between them that the debt thus due should carry interest:—Held, in an administration suit, that the statute did not operate as a bar to arrears of interest upon the sum left by the servant in his master, the testator's hands. Blower v. Blower, 28 L. J., Ch. 181; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 33; 7 W. R. 101.

5. Partners.

Partnership Accounts.]—In 1858 the plaintiff and defendant entered into partnership transactions which came to a final termination in 1861, when the defendant admitted that 787*l.* was due to the plaintiff, but he never subsequently made any admission of the debt, or promise to pay. The plaintiff brought an action for an account of the partnership dealings:—Held, that the Statute of Limitations was a good defence to a claim for partnership accounts. Noyes v. Crawley, 48 L. J., Ch. 112; 10 Ch. D. 31; 39 L. T. 267; 27 W. R. 109.

A., in 1799, purchased shares in a ship of G. R., who, also having shares in the same, was intrusted by A., and the other part owners, with the whole management of the ship, and to keep the accounts relating to it, from the time of the purchase until the ship was sold by G. R., with the consent of all the owners, in 1805. Upon the occasion of the sale G. R. stated and settled accounts with W., one of the part owners, and paid him the balance due upon the earnings of the ship and the proceeds of the sale. In 1824 G. R. died. Upon a bill filed by A., in March, 1826, for an account against the executors of G. R., it appeared by a ledger found in a room wholly disused by G. R., containing the accounts of the ship, that the credit and debit account between him and A. was not carried beyond 1805. On the debit side there were two items, one in 1811, and another in 1812. It appeared in evidence, that A. left England in 1820, and some time after his departure his brother-in-law (a witness for A.) called several times upon G. R., with messages from A., and on those occasions asked him to come to a settlement with A. respecting the ship; that G. R. evaded the subject, but never stated that he was not indebted to A. Under these circumstances, an account was decreed against the executors of A., and that decree affirmed on appeal. Robinson v. Alexander, 8 Bli. (N.S.) 352; 2 Cl. & F. 717.

To bill to dissolve partnership and take usual accounts, the defendant pleaded the statute on the ground that the partnership had been discontinued more than six years before bill; but the court granted the decree. Miller v. Miller, L. R. 8 Eq. 499.

The statute will not in general run as between the representatives of a deceased partner and the surviving partner, so long as there are any outstanding assets to be got in, or liabilities to be discharged; unless, possibly, where six years elapse without any assets being got in. Millington v. Holland, 18 W. See also post, A. VI. 3 (col. 81), and B. II. 11 (col. 232).

Death of Creditor Abroad.]—If a plaintiff is in England at the time the cause of action accrues, the time of limitation begins to run; so that if he dies abroad, and his executor or administrator does not sue within six years, he is barred. Smith v. Hill, 1 Wils. 134.

But when a person dies abroad, to whom a right of action has accrued during his residence there, and he never returned to this country after the accrual thereof, his executors may sue for it, although more than six years have elapsed since it accrued. Townsend v. Deacon, 3 Ex. 706; 6 D. & L. 659; 18 L. J., Ex. 298; 13 Jur. 366.

When a creditor of a firm in India died there before his right of action was barred by lapse of time, and his personal representative in Scotland brought an action there against the partner of the firm, twenty-three years after the creditor's death:—Held, that the English Statute of Limitations did not take effect, the action having been brought within six years after English letters of administration were taken out to the deceased creditor. Fergusson v. Fyffe, 8 Cl. & F. 121.

Death of Debtor Abroad.]—No one has a complete cause of action—that is, a right to prosecute an action with effect—until there is some one within the jurisdiction of the courts whom he can sue; and therefore, where a testator resided and died abroad:—Held, that his executor in England might be sued at any time within six years after taking out probate for a cause of action arising whilst the testator was abroad. Douglas v. Forrest, 4 Bing. 686; 1 M. & P. 663; 6 L. Executrix in Jersey.]—See Flood v. Patterson, col. 60.

Statute continues to run between Death and Probate or Letters of Administration.]—If time has once begun to run against a debt in the debtor's lifetime, it does not afterwards cease to run during the period which may elapse between his death and the time at which a personal representative to him is constituted. Freake v. Cranefeldt, 3 Myl. & C. 499; 8 L. J., Ch. 61; 4 Jur. 1080. S. P., Rhodes v. Smethurst, 4 M. & W. 42; 1 H. & H. 237; 7 L. J., Ex. 273; 2 Jur. 893. S. C., 6 M. & W. 351; 4 Jur. 702—Ex. Ch.

It is not competent to an executor to maintain an action for a debt which accrued to his testator more than six years before the issuing of the writ of summons. Penny v. Brice, 18 C. B. (N.S.) 393; 11 L. T. 632; 13 W. R. 342.

A. had a right of action against B. for a debt, in respect of which the statute began to run in September, 1856. A. died on the 31st of May, 1862. His executor proved his will on the 12th of July, and commenced an action against B. on the 5th of November:—Held, that the statute was a bar to the claim, notwithstanding a jury (or an arbitrator) might think that the executor had commenced the action within a reasonable time. Ib.

A testator being, at the time of his death in 1857, indebted to B. on simple contract, gave by his will his real and personal estate to his wife for life, and appointed executors. The will was not proved for many years, but the widow took possession of all the property, and paid interest on the debt to February, 1864. In September, 1870, the will was proved, and then B. filed a bill on behalf of himself and other creditors against the widow and the executors:—Held, that the claim was barred by the Statute of Limitations, and that the bill must be dismissed with costs. Boatwright v. Boatwright, 43 L. J., Ch. 12; L. R. 17 Eq. 71; 29 L. T. 603; 22 W. R. 147.

Fresh Action after Abatement.]—Where an action by a creditor against his debtor, commenced within six years, abates by reason of the death of the debtor, the reasonable time allowed for commencing a fresh action against the personal representatives of the debtor, in order to prevent the operation of the statute, under the 21 Jac. 1, c. 16, s. 4, dates from the grant of the letters of administration; and the right of a creditor in this respect is not affected by delay or laches on the part of the next of kin of the debtor in obtaining administration. Curlewis v. Mornington (Earl), 7 El. & Bl. 283; 26 L. J., Q. B. 181; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 660; 5 W. R. 266. Affirmed 27 L. J., Q. B. 439; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 1102; 6 W. R. 682—Ex. Ch.

Bill accepted after Death of Testator.]—In an action by an administrator upon a bill of exchange, payable to the testator, but accepted after his death, the statute begins to run from the time of granting the letters of administration, and not from the time the bill becomes due, there being no cause of action until there is a party in a capacity to sue. Murray v. East India Co., 5 B. & Ald. 204; 24 R. R. 325.

Onus on Debtor to shew that Debt due before Creditor died so as to make Statute run before Administration.]—See Atkinson v. Bradford Building Society, col. 18.

Action against Administrators on Bill of Exchange.]—Where the bill prayed an account on foot of two bills of exchange, accepted by L., deceased, and due and unpaid at the time of his death; and of the costs and expenses incurred by the plaintiff as administrator of L., down to the time when the grant of administration was revoked; and that the amount of the bills due to the plaintiff as a creditor of L., and of the plaintiff's expenses as administrator, might be paid out of L.'s personal estate. It appeared that L. had no real estate. The expenses, &c., consisted nearly altogether of the plaintiff's costs in a cause instituted by him as administrator in 1838, for discovery of assets, which after issue joined and publication passed, was frustrated by the present defendants, who were also defendants in that cause, and who being L.'s next of kin, and in possession of his assets, for the purpose of avoiding a decree, lodged in the Prerogative Court the will of L. which they had previously suppressed, and procured a revocation of the grant of administration to the plaintiff and a new grant, to themselves cum testamento annexo. They now pleaded the Statute of Limitations as to the bills of exchange, and demurred generally to so much of the bill as sought an account, &c., of the plaintiff's costs and expenses as administrator:—Held, first, that the plea should be allowed, as the plaintiff did not appear to have been under disability, and had not proceeded for his demand within six years after the right of action accrued. Secondly, that the demurrer should be overruled; as the costs claimed by the plaintiff were incurred by him not merely in his private right as a party in another cause, but in his official character of administrator; and as the grant of administration to him, though voidable, was not void, and conferred on him during its continuance the rights of a lawful administrator, entitled to be paid out of the personal estate of the deceased the expenses properly incurred in the duties of the office. Thirdly, that as the demurrer was overruled, the plaintiff was entitled to the costs of the hearing. Howlett v. Lambert, 2 Ir. Eq. R. 254.

Executor de son tort.]—Effect of length of time as a bar, as between executor de son tort, who afterwards obtains administration, and the next of kin. Scott v. Knox, 4 Ir. Eq. R. 397.

Plea of Statute of Limitations by an executor, the testator having died in 1786, the probate not taken till 1802, allowed; the allegation of the bill upon a fair construction being, that the defendant had possessed the personal estate, and therefore might have been sued as executor de son tort previously to 1792. Webster v. Webster, 10 Ves. 93; 7 R. R. 351.

Revivor by personal Representative more than six years after Plaintiff's Death—Pleading.]—A suit for an account of the rents and profits of real estate, having become abated by the plaintiff's death; after answer, but before decree, the plaintiff's personal representative, more than six years afterwards, filed a bill of revivor to which the personal representative of the original defendant, who had also died, pleaded the Statute of Limitations, but did not state in his plea that six years had elapsed since representation had been taken out to the original plaintiff: the plea was overruled. Perry v. Jenkins, 1 Myl. & C. 118; 5 L. J., Ch. 82.

Executor or Administrator not bound to set up Statute.]—Executor is not compellable to plead statute in aid of the residuary legatee. Castleton (Lord) v. Fanshaw, 1 Eq. Abr. 305. S. P., Aplyn v. Brewer, Pre. Ch. 173.

An executor is not compellable, either in law or equity, to take advantage of the Statute of Limitations against a demand otherwise well founded. Norton v. Frecker, 1 Atk. 526.

An administrator is not bound to set up the Statute of Limitations in respect of the payment of the balance of a sum of money promised by the deceased to be paid to his daughter on her marriage. Garratt, In re, 18 W. R. 684.

As to effect of Administration Action and Decree, and as to setting up Statute in.]—See A, VI. 3, post (col. 81).

Residuary Legatee may set up Statute.]—Upon the hearing of an originating summons, taken out by the executor, under Ord. LV. r. 3, to determine whether a defendant is a creditor or not, it is competent for the residuary legatee, also a defendant, to set up the objection of the Statute of Limitations, notwithstanding the refusal of the executor to interfere. Wenham, In re, Hunt v. Wenham, 61 L. J., Ch. 565; [1892] 3 Ch. 59; 67 L. T. 648; 40 W. R. 636.

Statute-barred Debt due from Legatee.]—An executor is entitled to set off against a legacy a debt due from the legatee to the testator, though such debt may have been barred by the statute before the testator's death. Courtnay v. Williams, 13 L. J., Ch. 461; 15 L. J., Ch. 204; 3 Hare, 539. And see Coates v. Coates, 33 L. J., Ch. 448; 9 L. T. 795.

Payment by Executor of Debt held to be statute-barred, a Devastavit.] — An executor who pays a debt, after a judicial decision that it is not recoverable out of the testator's estate by reason of its being statute-barred, commits a devastavit; and the creditor who receives payment of such debt, with knowledge of the circumstances, is also liable to the testator's estate for its repayment. Midgley v. Midgley, 62 L. J., Ch. 905; [1893] 3 Ch. 282; 2 R. 561; 69 L. T. 241; 41 W. R. 659.

Devastavit, Claims in Respect of.]—A. executed a money bond, binding himself and his heirs, and died in 1794, leaving B. his heir and executor, to whom real and personal assets devolved sufficient to satisfy the bond. B. paid interest on the bond during his life. He died in 1813, leaving his widow, C., his executrix and general legatee and devisee. C. paid interest on the bond down to February, 1817. In May following she married D., who paid the interest and part of the principal due on the bond during the coverture, which was determined in June, 1834, by the death of C.; and he afterwards paid the interest down to his own death. C. by will, under a power of appointment, gave to D. a life interest in her real estate, and he took out administration to her with her will annexed. D. died in May, 1852, leaving E. his executor. Subsequently the bond creditor took out administration de bonis non to A., B. and C., and filed a bill against E. and the devisees of C., seeking to obtain payment out of the real and personal estate of C.:—Held, that the claim of the creditor against C. personally was a claim on simple contract only as for a devastavit, and was therefore barred by lapse of time. Thorne v. Kerr, 2 Kay & J. 54; 25 L. J., Ch. 57; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 322; 4 W. R. 131.

Testator mortgaged an estate to plaintiffs, and devised it to the three executors upon trusts in favour of his daughters, and after the death of all his children for sale. The executors distributed the whole personal estate without providing for the mortgage debt. After this one of the executors died. The daughters occupied the farm for twenty years after the distribution of the personal estate, paying rent to the executors, and, until 1880, paying the interest on the mortgage. The mortgagees then brought an action for foreclosure or sale, and claimed to have any deficiency made good by the two surviving executors and the executors of the deceased executor:—Held, that any claim founded on the devastavit in distributing the personal estate was barred after six years, but that the plaintiffs were entitled to foreclosure, and to an order for administration of the mortgagor's estate. Gale, In re, Blake v. Gale, 53 L. J., Ch. 694; 22 Ch. D. 820; 48 L. T. 101; 31 W. R. 538.

Testator mortgaged freeholds, and died in May, 1867, having devised all his real and personal estate to A. and B. upon certain trusts, and having appointed them his executors. The executors, without making provision for the mortgage debt, applied the whole of the personal estate in payments to simple contract creditors and beneficiaries. In 1869, A. died, and C. was appointed trustee in his place in 1871. The rents of the real estate were received by the trustees, and after payment of the interest on the mortgage the balance was applied in accordance with the trusts of the will. The mortgage property became an insufficient security, and, interest having fallen into arrear, the mortgagees in 1886 commenced proceedings against B. and C., under which accounts of the testator's personal estate received by A. and B., or by B. alone, were directed, and also the usual accounts of the testator's real estate, including an account of rents and profits, against B. and C. Accounts were accordingly carried in, in which B. and C. claimed credit for all payments and disbursements made to simple contract creditors and beneficiaries, and, further, that as to such of the payments as were made by A. and B. upwards of six years prior to the action, any claim on a devastavit was statute-barred, and that as to the rents and profits they were not liable to account for them at all:—Held, following Marsden, In re (26 Ch. D. 783; infra), on this point, and distinguishing Gale, In re, Blake v. Gale (22 Ch. D. 820; supra), that B. could not set up his own and A.'s wrongful payments by way of devastavit as a defence, in order to claim the benefit of the Statute of Limitations. Hyatt, In re, Bowles v. Hyatt, 57 L. J., Ch. 777; 38 Ch. D. 609; 59 L. T. 297.

A testator mortgaged leaseholds. On his death his executors took possession of his estate, including the leaseholds, and received the rents, and for a long time paid the interest on the mortgages, and applied the surplus of the rents for the benefit of the beneficiaries. The mortgaged property proved insufficient to pay the mortgaged debt, and in an action for the administration of the testator's estate the executors claimed to be credited with the payments made to the beneficiaries on the ground of acquiescence on the part of the mortgagees, and as to such of them as were made more than six years before the commencement of the action they relied on the Statute of Limitations:—Held, that acquiescence by the mortgagees had not been established, and that as the executors were trustees for the creditors, the Statute of Limitations furnished no bar to a claim in respect of a devastavit committed by them. Marsden, In re, Bowden v. Layland, 54 L. J., Ch. 640; 26 Ch. D. 783; 51 L. T. 417; 33 W. R. 28.

Action against Executor for Testator's Breach of Trust.]—The analogy of the Statute of Limitations cannot be set up by an executor in answer to a claim founded on a breach of trust by his testator. Brittlebank v. Goodwin, L. R. 5 Eq. 545.

Time runs in favour of Executors, notwithstanding Charge of Debts on Personalty.]—A debt which, at the death of a testator, is not barred by the Statute of Limitations, may become so afterwards as to the executors and legatees, notwithstanding a charge by the testator of his debts upon his personal estate, nor will the operation of the statute be prevented though the testator, erroneously supposing part of his personal estate to be real estate, has so described it in his will, and charged his debts upon it. Scott v. Jones, 4 Cl. & F. 382; 7 L. J., Ch. 242. S. P., Freake v. Cranefeldt, 3 Myl. & C. 499; 8 L. J., Ch. 61; 2 Jur. 1080; Evans v. Tweedy, 1 Beav. 55; 8 L. J., Ch. 46.

Claim of simple contract Creditor against Testator's real Estate and residuary Legatees.]—The testator devised certain estates to trustees for the payment of his debts, and appointed the same trustees his executors, and devised other estates in various portions, some to the same trustees for the separate use of married women for life with remainders over, others to devisees in fee, and others to devisees for life with remainders over in tail; and of some of which estates the testator created terms for raising specific sums of money, and others he charged with legacies and annuities. The testator died in January, 1843. On a bill filed in August, 1849, by the payee of a promissory note made by the testator (on which it was proved that interest had been paid by the executors up to 1847), for payment of the note out of the real as well as the personal estate, against the executors and trustees, some of whom were insolvent, against the residuary legatees who had received payments on account of their residuary shares, and against the parties beneficially interested in the real estate, of whom some set up the Statute of Limitations in bar of the demand, some omitted to do so, and others were out of the jurisdiction:—Held, that the creditor was entitled to a decree as against the parties beneficially interested in the real estate who had omitted to claim the benefit of the Statute of Limitations; that the heir or devisees of the real estate of a testator might themselves take proceedings for securing the due application of the personal estate in the payment of debts, and in exoneration of the real estate; and that they cannot, therefore, after a lapse of time, successfully resist the claim of a creditor as against the real estate, on the ground of his laches in not suing earlier for the recovery of the debt; that the demand of a simple contract creditor, as against the real estate of the testator, which would otherwise be barred by the Statute of Limitations, was not kept alive so as to preclude the operation of the statute, by the effect of any right which might exist or might have existed among the parties, to have the assets of the testator marshalled; that payment by executors to residuary legatees, whilst the debts of the testator remained unpaid, was a breach of trust; and that, the debts having been kept alive against the executors, the statute was no bar to the claim of the creditor, as against the residuary legatees, to the extent of their interest in the residue, and they must therefore refund the moneys they had received, on account of the estate. Fordham v. Wallis, 10 Hare, 217; 22 L. J., Ch. 548; 17 Jur. 228; 1 W. R. 118.

Simple contract Debt, after six years, excluded from Devise of Realty.]—Simple contract creditor, having suffered his demand by laches to become barred at law, will be held excluded from benefit of a trust of real estate, devised as an auxiliary fund for payment of debts; equity will not help the creditor to change the order of application of funds. Magennis v. Fallon, 2 Moll. 573.

The right of simple contract creditors to proceed against real estates devised by the debtor under the statute 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 104, is barred by the Statute of Limitations in six years from the death of the debtor. Dunne v. Doran, 13 Ir. Eq. R. 545.

Devise in Trust to pay Debts.]—See Hughes v. Wynne; Fergus v. Gore; and Dundas v. Blake, col. 185; Tulloch v. Simpson; Williamson v. Naylor; and Crallan v. Oulton, cols. 186, 7; and Moore v. Petchell, col. 188.

Liability of Executor taking Note from Debtor.]—A testator died in 1829; part of his assets consisted of a promissory note for 100*l.* of five persons. All interest on it was paid down to 1837, but by whom did not appear. In 1837, the executor took the note of one of the five for the 100*l.*, and interest was paid until 1842. Subsequently nothing was done, and the debt became barred by the Statute of Limitations:—Held, that the taking the second note was equivalent to payment of the first, and the executor was charged with the 100*l.* Sparkes v. Restal, 22 Beav. 587.

Money paid by Mistake by Executors.]—Executors of obligor of bond having, by mistake, paid debt and interest without making deductions for property tax provided for by bond, though six years had elapsed:—Held, entitled to have it refunded. It would have been different had the obligor himself paid it. Smith v. Alsop, 1 M'Clel. 623; 13 Price, 823.

—— Right to have Accounts taken.]—The Statute of Limitations does not run in equity against the right of an executor, or of an executor of an executor, to have his accounts taken and his liability as an accounting party defined by inquiries under the direction of the court. Smith v. O'Grady, 7 Moore, P. C. (N.S.) 106; 39 L. J., P. C. 63; L. R. 3 P. C. 311; 23 L. T. 476; 19 W. R. 22.

The Statute of Limitations does not run in equity against the right of an executor, or of an executor of an executor, to sue the persons beneficially interested in the estate for recovery of payments made in excess of assets in hand. Ib.

An executor coming to the court after twelve years' delay, asking to have the accounts of his estate taken, is not disentitled. Ib.

A person bequeathed all his real and personal estate in Jamaica, after payment of debts and legacies, to his grandchildren, to be apportioned when they should attain twenty-one, and appointed R. executor of his will and guardian in respect of his real estate. The testator died in 1832, and R. entered into possession of the real and personal estate. R. died in 1850, and appointed S. his executor. The grandchildren attained their majority in 1865, and in that year S. filed a petition praying that an account might be taken of the real and personal estate of the testator:—Held, that he was entitled, notwithstanding the delay, as a matter of right to have an account taken of the personal estate of the testator, and inasmuch as R. had been appointed guardian in respect of the real estate, and had entered into possession of the same, accounts should also be taken of the rents and profits of the real estate of testator. Ib.

Statute no Bar to Suit to recover Assets retained by Mistake by Administrator.]—See Reed v. Fenn, col. 232.

Statute no Bar to Claim to Assets left by Administrator in Bank.]—A testator died in 1818; A., as his administrator, received assets and placed them in a bank to an account, "A.'s trustee," where they still remained. A. died in 1853, and to a suit, instituted by the administrator de bonis non of the original testator against the representatives of A. and the bankers, to recover the fund, the representatives of A. set up the Statute of Limitations, but the bankers were willing to pay the amount:—Held, that the statute was inapplicable, and a decree was made for the plaintiff. Smith v. Acton, 26 Beav. 210.

Held, also, that in such a suit the representatives of A. could not be charged with interest. Ib.

Claim by Executor to be indemnified for unauthorised Advance, in pursuance of Family Arrangement, not barred.]—Under a deed of indemnity of October, 1841, in the nature of a family arrangement, W. K. the younger and an executor of the testator was indemnified by the rest of the family from any claim in respect of having allowed the advancement of a considerable portion of the testator's estate to two of the sons, G. and C., on their promissory notes. These promissory notes had been barred by the Statute of Limitations, no interest having been demanded in respect of them, or any acknowledgment taken. A creditors' suit had been instituted to administer the estate of G., and a claim to be indemnified against any claim in that suit had been carried into chambers in respect of the money so advanced to the sons. This claim was disallowed:—Held, that such claim was not barred by the Statute of Limitations. Tunstall v. Bartlett, 14 L. T. 400.

Statute does not run against Liability of Legatees to refund to Creditors.]—The testator leaves assets sufficient to pay all debts and legacies; the legatees receive payment, which the creditors might also have had, if they had demanded it in time; they lie by for eleven years, and the estate is wasted; yet the legatees shall refund. Hardwick v. Mynd, 1 Anstr. 112; 3 R. ### 7. Solicitor and Client.

See also post, A, VI. 4 (col. 84).

Solicitor's Lien.]—The statute does not run against a solicitor's lien. Higgins v. Scott, 9 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 262; 2 B. & Ad. 413.

Solicitor not a Trustee of Money deposited with him by Client.]—A railway company, at various times in 1851 and 1852, deposited with C., who was their solicitor and confidential agent, certain sums of money, with directions to apply them in payment of each of several claims for compensation for lands taken by the company. A separate account was opened in C.'s books for each sum, shewing the amount received by him from the company, and the amount paid by him, on the foot of each claim. The entire sum received by C. was not in all cases applied by him as directed, and in January, 1855, his books shewed a balance of 428*l.* 8*s.* 5*d.* in favour of the company, on the foot of balances unapplied. C. died in 1861, intestate, and his administrator settled an account with the company, whereby a sum of 6,243*l.* 8*s.* was admitted to be due to C. This account included a judgment recovered against the company by C. in 1856.; but there was no evidence that it included the 428*l.* 8*s.* 5*d.*:—Held, that C. was not a trustee of the sums deposited with him, and that the Statute of Limitations was therefore a bar to the claim. Crawford v. Crawford, 16 W. R. 411.

Whether Statute applies to Action by Client against Solicitor.]—The Statute of Limitations, in the absence of fraud, applies to an action or suit brought by a client against his solicitor. Hindmarsh, In re, 1 Dr. & Sm. 129; 1 L. T. 475; 8 W. R. 203.

After a dissolution of partnership, by which the continuing partner covenanted to pay the debts and to pay the retiring partner a sum equal to half the next half-year's profits:—Held, that nonpayment of a debt by the continuing partner during the half-year could not be set up against the retiring partner as an answer to the Statute of Limitations. Watson v. Woodman, 45 L. J., Ch. 57; L. R. 20 Eq. 721; 24 W. R. 47.

Held, also, that though the debt was from solicitors to a client in respect of moneys received, there was no express trust to exclude the operation of the statutes. Ib.

The ordinary relation of a solicitor to his client in questions of account is not of such a fiduciary character as to bar the Statute of Limitations, 21 Jac. 1, c. 16. Ib.

—— Solicitor of Trustees in Possession of Trust Fund.]—In 1876, a sum of money, which, under the will of S., was vested in trustees on trust for the plaintiff's father for life, and after his death for the plaintiff, was in the hands of A., the solicitor for the trustees. A. invested the money on mortgage, and in January, 1879, it was repaid by the mortgagor to A. In that month, and again in July, 1879, A. paid interest on the said sum to the plaintiff's father. In November, 1879, A. died. From that time till January, 1886, the plaintiff's father received half-yearly instalments of interest on the said sum from a person who had been a clerk of A., and was employed in winding up his business. In July, 1886, the plaintiff's father died. In February, 1891, the plaintiff, who was then the sole trustee of the will, brought an action against the executrix of A., claiming an account and payment of what might be found due:—Held, that A. was to be treated as an express trustee, and therefore the plaintiff's claim was not barred by the Statute of Limitations. Soar v. Ashwell, [1893] 2 Q. B. 390; 4 R. 602; 69 L. T. 585; 42 W. R. 165—C. A. See Friend, In re, col. 127.

—— Action against Firm for Money received by one Partner.]—In 1832, A. employed B. and C., then in partnership as attorneys, to lay out 500*l.* on mortgage. It was invested accordingly on a mortgage to D. D. subsequently sold the property, subject to the mortgage, and the purchaser shortly afterwards paid 500*l.* to C., who, however, did not inform either D., or his partner, or A. of such receipt; and again lent the purchaser 300*l.*, and continued to receive the interest thereon. The partnership was dissolved in 1838; but both before and after the dissolution, and after the death of A., which took place in 1840, interest was paid as upon a mortgage of 500*l.* to A. and his representatives, up to 1848, by C. In 1846 the 300*l.* was paid to C., and the mortgage deed was given up by C., but no conveyance was ever executed. Neither A. nor his representatives had any knowledge of these facts till 1848. Entries had been made by C. in the partnership books of the receipts and payments; but B. had no knowledge of the transaction subsequent to the original advance of 500*l.*:—Held, in an action by the executors of A. against B. and C., that the statute was a bar to the action. Sims v. Brutton, 5 Ex. 802; 20 L. J., Ex. 41.

—— Court will not prevent Solicitor pleading Statute.]—Action by an administratrix of A. for money received by the defendant, who was an attorney, to the use of A. in his lifetime. Plea, the statute. Replication, that A. was beyond the seas when the cause of action accrued, and did not return to England before his death, and that until the grant of administration there was no one to sue, and that the action was brought within three days after administration granted. Rejoinder, that before and at the time of his death, the plaintiff was his wife, and might, within a reasonable time after his death, have obtained administration of his effects; but that she suffered more than seven years to elapse after his death before she took out letters of administration:—Held, that if there were circumstances which, at law, prevented the defendant, being an attorney, from setting up the defence of the statute to a money demand at the suit of his client, the proper way for the plaintiff to avail herself of them was by a surrejoinder, and not by calling on the court to interpose its summary jurisdiction and prevent the defendant from pleading the statute. Triston, In re, 1 L. M. & P. 74.

Bankruptcy—Solicitors to the Commission—Statute not a Bar as between Creditors and Solicitors.]—A. and B., partners, were solicitors to the commission. More than six years back they received various sums of money on account of the estate, having a set-off in respect of their bill of costs, but which bill they did not deliver to the assignee till within six years. Beyond the six years, A. and B. (upon an agreement that A. should pay all the debts) dissolved partnership, and the assignee, with knowledge of this fact, continued to employ A. alone as the solicitor to the commission, and no attempt was made to charge B. with the moneys received by A. and B., till very lately, viz., when an official assignee was appointed; nor had B. ever acknowledged any liability to account:—Held, first, that, as between B. and the creditors, neither the Statute of Limitations, nor laches, nor other conduct of the assignee, would operate as a bar, A. and B. being solicitors to the commission. But, secondly, that as the assignee was able to recoup the estate, he could not, under such circumstances of conduct on his part, call on B. to account. A. had become bankrupt. Semble, nevertheless, that he or his assignees were necessary parties. Gould, Ex parte, Robertson, In re, 4 Deac. & C. 547; 2 Mont. & Ayr. 48; 4 L. J., Bk. 7.

Action for Negligence—Mortgage.]—A solicitor in advancing money on mortgage may be employed, (1) to invest in a particular mortgage; (2) to find securities to be approved by the client and then invest the money; (3) to find securities and invest the money, the client taking little or no part in the business. In an action for negligence against the solicitor, the Statute of Limitations is a good defence in the first case and also in the second case if the client has approved of the mortgage, no relation of trustee and cestui que trust then existing between them. Dooby v. Watson, 57 L. J., Ch. 865; 39 Ch. D. 178; 58 L. T. 943; 36 W. R. 764.

—— Action against Firm.]—In 1869, P., a member of a firm of solicitors, by his advice induced the plaintiff to invest moneys upon the security of an equitable mortgage of a lease which he represented as renewable, and which had previously been renewed by custom every fourteen years, but the future renewal whereof was prohibited by a statute passed in 1868. In 1875 P. fraudulently, and without the knowledge of his partners, gave a legal mortgage of the lease to a third party without notice of the plaintiff's mortgage. The security proved insufficient, and P. having absconded, the plaintiff sought to make P.'s firm liable for the loss sustained by him:—

Held, that since the transaction of 1869 was within the ordinary limits of the partnership business, the firm was liable for negligence in respect thereof, but that the remedy against them was barred by the statute 21 Jac. 1, c. 16; that P.'s fraud of 1875, not being committed in the ordinary course of the business, the firm was not liable in respect thereof. Hughes v. Twisden, 55 L. J., Ch. 481; 54 L. T. 570; 34 W. R. 498.

8. Persons in Prison.

By the Mercantile Law Amendment Act, 1856 (19 & 20 Vict. c. 97), s. 10, the further time given by 21 Jac. 1, c. 16, s. 7, to a plaintiff who was in prison when the action accrued, is taken away.

19 & 20 Vict. c. 97, s. 10, retrospective.]—Sect. 10 of 19 & 20 Vict. c. 97 applies to cases where the cause of action accrued before the act came into operation, and no action is commenced till after that period. Cornill v. Hudson, 8 El. & Bl. 429; 27 L. J., Q. B. 8; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 1257; 6 W. R. 37. See Pardo v. Bingham, col. 60.

Action for maliciously opposing Plaintiff's Discharge from Debtors' Prison—Statute runs during Imprisonment.]—Action for maliciously procuring the plaintiff's creditor to oppose the discharge of the plaintiff by the Insolvent Debtors Court, whereby the plaintiff was detained in prison longer than he otherwise would have been. The action was commenced more than six years from the order of the court and the lodging of a detainer by the defendant at the suit of the creditor, but within six years of the determination of the imprisonment:—Held, that the action was barred by the statute. Violett v. Sympson, 8 El. & Bl. 344; 27 L. J., Q. B. 138; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 1217; 6 W. R. 12.

Before 19 & 20 Vict. c. 97, s. 10—Action for Damages.]—An action of assumpsit for unliquidated damages was within the saving clause of the 21 Jac. 1, c. 16, s. 7, and therefore, such an action accruing whilst the plaintiff was in prison, might be brought at any time within six years from the first time of his being at large. Or it might be commenced whilst the plaintiff continued in prison, or before his enlargement, although more than six years after the cause of action accrued. Piggott v. Rush, 6 N. & M. 376; 4 A. & E. 912; 2 H. & W. 29; 6 L. J., K. B. 272.

9. Persons Beyond Seas.

See also post, B, II. 13.

By 4 & 5 Anne, c. 3, s. 19, and 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 42, s. 4, an action may be brought within six years from the return of a defendant who was beyond seas when the right to bring it accrued. By the Mercantile Law Amendment Act, 1856 (19 & 20 Vict. c. 97), s. 10, the further time given to a plaintiff who was beyond seas when the action accrued by 21 Jac. 1, c. 16, s. 7, and 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 42, s. 4, is taken away.

19 & 20 Vict. c. 97, s. 10, retrospective.]—The 10th section of the 19 & 20 Vict. c. 97, is retrospective, and therefore, even where the cause of action has accrued before the statute was passed, no person is entitled to any time within which to commence an action beyond the time fixed by the statute, by reason of such person being beyond the seas when the cause of action accrued. Pardo v. Bingham, 39 L. J., Ch. 170; L. R. 4 Ch. 735; 20 L. T. 464; 17 W. R. 419. See Cornill v. Hudson, col. 59.

Residence in Jersey.]—A person resident in Jersey died in 1850 indebted to a person resident in England. He appointed his wife executrix, and she proved the will in Jersey alone. The executrix had in 1851 been in England for three weeks, and had, while in Jersey, received a sum due to her testator in this country:—Held, in 1860, that the 19 & 20 Vict. c. 97, s. 12, did not apply, the executrix not having been liable to be sued in this country, and having done no act here to constitute herself an English executrix. Flood v. Patterson, 29 Beav. 295; 30 L. J., Ch. 486; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 324; 4 L. T. 78; 9 W. R. 294.

Out of the Realm.]—The words in 21 Jac. 1, c. 16, s. 7, beyond the seas, are synonymous in legal import with the words out of the realm, or out of the land, or out of the territories, and are not to be construed literally. Ruckmaboye v. Lulloobhoy Mottichund, 5 Moore, Ind. App. 234; 8 Moore, P. C. 4.

A debtor in Ireland is beyond seas within the statutes. Lane v. Connell, 5 L. J., Ex. 98; 1 M. & W. 701; 1 Tyr. & G. 441.

But not a debtor in Scotland, King v. Walker, 1 W. Bl. 286.

Residence Abroad until Death.]—If a party is resident abroad at the accrual of a cause of action, and continues abroad until his death, his executors are entitled to sue within six years from his death, although more than six years had elapsed between the period of the accruing of the cause of action and of the testator's death. Townsend v. Deacon, 6 D. & L. 659; 3 Ex. 706; 18 L. J., Ex. 298; 13 Jur. 366. See Smith v. Hill; Douglas v. Forrest; and Fergusson v. Fyffe, col. 48.

Defendant Abroad when Action accrued.]—The statute does not apply to a defendant who was abroad when the cause of action accrued, and who has not since returned to this country; for, by 4 Anne, c. 16, s. 19, a plaintiff is not barred of his action, unless the defendant has returned, and six years have elapsed since his return. Forbes v. Smith, 11 Ex. 161; 24 L. J., Ex. 299; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 503. See also Le Veux v. Berkeley, 2 D. & L. 31; 5 Q. B. 836; 13 L. J., Q. B. 213; 8 Jur. 666.

—— Writ for Service out of the Jurisdiction.]—The Statute of Limitations does not commence to run in favour of a defendant whilst he is beyond seas, notwithstanding that the action is one in which leave to serve the writ out of the jurisdiction could have been obtained under R. S. C., 1883, Ord. XI. Musurus Bey v. Gadban, 63 L. J., Q. B. 621; [1894] 2 Q. B. 352; 9 R. 519.

—— One of Joint Debtors Abroad.]—Under 4 Anne, c. 16, s. 19, if a right of action accrued against several, one of whom was beyond seas, the statute did not run till his return or death, though the others had never been absent from the kingdom. Townes v. Mead, 16 C. B. 123; 3 C. L. R. 381; 24 L. J., C. P. 89; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 355. See King v. Hoare, 13 M. & W. 494; 2 D. & L. 383; 14 L. J., Ex. 29; and Fannin v. Anderson, 7 Q. B. 811; 14 L. J., Q. B. 282; 9 Jur. 969.

Return—What is.]—Where two partners were sued in 1812 for a debt, and, one of them being abroad, writs were issued against him, with a view to outlawry; but a commission of bankruptcy having been sued out against the other partner, resident in this country, the proceedings as to the outlawry were suspended; and the absent partner never returned to this country, except by touching at Deal, in 1814, for a mere temporary purpose, in his passage from one foreign port to another:—Held, that the touching at Deal was not a return to this country from beyond seas. Gregory v. Hurrill, 8 Moore 189; 1 Bing. 324; 4 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 262; 1 L. J. (O.S.) C. P. 115.

The word "return" in 21 Jac. 1, c. 16, s. 7, means being in England at the time when the statute begins to run, although the person has never been in England before. Pardo v. Bingham, 39 L. J., Ch. 170; L. R. 4 Ch. 735; 20 L. T. 464; 17 W. R. 419.

Where, therefore, a creditor who was domiciled abroad, and had visited England in 1846, made no claim in this country against his debtor's estate for debts contracted abroad before the passing of that act, within the time fixed by the Statute of Limitations:—Held, that he was barred from recovering with regard to debts contracted both before and after he was in England. Ib.

A temporary sojourn in England by a foreigner is a return within s. 10. Ib.

—— Evidence by One of Two Partners.]—A. and B., bankers at Frankfort, sued C. on a bill of exchange, which became due on the 2nd of December, 1848. He pleaded the statute, to which they replied, that, at the time of the accruing of the debt they were beyond the seas, and that they did not, nor did either of them, come to this country until within six years before the commencement of the action. In support of the replication, A. was called. He stated that he was not in England at any time between the maturity of the bill and 1851; and that his partner B. had never been in England. Upon cross-examination he admitted that B. was occasionally absent from Frankfort for three or four days, and sometimes for a week or a month together:—Held, evidence to go to the jury, and that it was not necessary to call B. himself to negative his having been in England. Koch v. Shepperd, 18 C. B. 191; 4 W. R. 529.

—— To England from place within English Jurisdiction.]—Though the cause of action accrued within the jurisdiction of the Supreme Court at Calcutta while both the parties were resident there, and by the king's charter, granted in pursuance of the 13 Geo. 3, c. 63, that court is authorised to exercise the same jurisdiction in civil cases as is exercised by the Court of K. B. within England by the common law, and assuming that by such authority the provisions of the 21 Jac. 1, c. 16, s. 7, and 4 Anne, c. 16, s. 19, are transferred to India, as part of the law of England, auxiliary to the common law; yet, by the express terms of the savings in those statutes, as applicable to the courts here, the plaintiff's right of action upon an assumpsit is saved, if he (having returned home before the defendant) commenced such action within six years after the defendant's return home, though more than six years had elapsed in India after the cause of action accrued there, and during the defendant's stay within the jurisdiction of the court in that country. Williams v. Jones, 13 East, 439; 12 R. R. 401.

—— Foreigners.]—A foreigner who always resides beyond sea is not bound by the Statute of Limitations. Strithorst v. Græme, 2 W. Bl. 723; 3 Wils. 145.

The proviso in favour of persons under disabilities in 21 Jac. 1, c. 16, s. 7, applied as well to foreigners who had never been in this country as to parties residing abroad at the time of the accruing of the cause of action, and returning afterwards to England. Lafond v. Ruddock, 13 C. B. 813; 1 C. L. R. 339; 22 L. J., C. P. 217; 17 Jur. 624; 1 W. R. 371.

Before 19 & 20 Vict. c. 97, s. 10.]—A person beyond sea, and so within the saving of the Statute of Limitations, need not have returned to enable him to commence a suit. Gage v. Bulkeley, Ridgw. 278.

Effect of Coverture.]—In an action by payee against a maker of a note, he pleaded the statute. Replication, that when the cause of action accrued, the plaintiff was the wife of B., and that she continued to be so until B. died, and the plaintiff became discovert, and that she sued within six years after the death:—Held, good. Scarpellini v. Atcheson, 7 Q. B. 864; 14 L. J., Q. B. 333.

Debt due from Husband's to Wife's Estate.]—Where the husband's debt has been satisfied out of the wife's estate:—Held, that her estate is entitled to be recouped out of the husband's; and a mortgage creditor of the husband having obtained payment out of the wife's estate in 1832, the estate of the husband having accumulated since his death in 1776, and the produce brought into court in 1782, a bill by a judgment creditor of the wife against the heir of the husband, who had obtained upon petition a reference to ascertain the incumbrances thereon, held not barred by the Statute of Limitations. Lancaster v. Evors, 10 Beav. 154; 16 L. J., Ch. 8.

Wife's Separate Estate.]—In 1875 a married woman borrowed money from her husband upon a parol agreement to repay him the amount with interest out of her separate estate. She died in 1884, without having paid anything in respect either of interest or principal, and without having given any acknowledgment in writing of her liability to repay the debt. After her death her husband claimed repayment:—Held, that the debt was barred by analogy to the Statute of Limitations. Norton v. Turvill (2 P. Wms. 144) explained. Hastings (Lady), In re, Hallett v. Hastings, 56 L. J., Ch. 631; 35 Ch. D. 94; 57 L. T. 126; 35 W. R. 584; 52 J. P. 100—C. A.

Moneys advanced by a stranger in providing necessaries for the support of a married woman, living separate from her husband, are debts binding her separate estate; and, being debts payable out of funds held in trust for her separate use, are not barred by the Statute of Limitations. Barber, In re, Hodgson v. Williamson, 15 Ch. Action against Agent for an Account.]—An agent who stands in a fiduciary relation to his principal cannot set up the statute in bar of a suit for an account by his principal. Burdick v. Garrick, 39 L. J., Ch. 369; L. R. 5 Ch. 233; 18 W. R. 387.

An agent, who was a solicitor in London, held a power of attorney from his principal in America to sell his property and invest the proceeds in his name. The agent received certain moneys under the power, and paid them into his own bankers to the general account of his firm. The principal died in 1859 intestate. In 1867 his widow took out administration to his estate, and in 1868 she filed a bill against the agent for an account:—Held, that the agent held the money in trust for his principal, and, therefore, the statute was no bar to the suit. Ib.

There being no proof that the agent had made any interest or profit by the money in his hands, he was charged with simple interest at 5*l.* per cent. Ib.

Account between, kept open by annual Payment of Tax for Principal.]—The bankrupt had been in the habit, for a long course of years, of making payments and receiving moneys for the petitioner, no account of which had been rendered by the bankrupt, but the account was extracted from his books after his bankruptcy; it did not appear, however, that for the last six years he had made any payment to the petitioner, or had received any money for him, but that the only transaction, during that period, was an annual payment made by him for the petitioner, of the drainage tax:—Held, that such payment was evidence of a running account between the parties, so as to take the case out of the Statute of Limitations. Peachey, Ex parte, Seaber, In re, 1 Deac. 551.

V. SPECIAL LIMITATIONS WITH REGARD TO ACTIONS FOR THINGS DONE UNDER PARTICULAR STATUTES.

By the Public Authorities Protection Act, 1893 (56 & 57 Vict. c. 61), s. 1, any proceeding against any person for an act done in, or in respect of any alleged default in, execution of an act of parliament or of a public duty or authority must be commenced within six months after the act or default, or in case of continuance of damage within six months after the ceasing thereof.

11 & 12 Vict. c. 43, s. 11—Encroachment on Carriage Way.]—Building within fifteen feet from the centre of any carriage-way, contrary to 27 & 28 Vict. c. 101, s. 51, is not a continuing offence, and the six months' limitation imposed by 11 & 12 Vict. c. 43, s. 11, runs from the completion of the building. Coggins v. Bennett, 2 C. P. D. 568.

—— Proceedings to recover Extraordinary Expenses in repairing Highway.]—The six months' period of limitation, provided by 11 & 12 Vict. c. 43, s. 11, within which a complaint must be preferred to recover extraordinary expenses under s. 23 of the Highways and Locomotives Amendment Act, 1878, must be reckoned from the date of the surveyor's certificate, and not from the time payment is demanded. Pool and Forden Highway Board v. Gunning, 51 L. J., M. C. 49; 46 L. T. 163.

Where the summons was taken out more than six months after the repairs were done, but within six months of the surveyor's certificate and of the demand of payment, it was held to be in time. White v. Polson, 46 J. P. 565.

—— 38 & 39 Vict. c. 55, s. 158—Continuing Offence—Building without Approval of Local Authority.]—An information for commencing the execution of works that had not been approved by the local authority must be preferred within six months of the work being commenced under s. 11 of 11 & 12 Vict. c. 43. The period of limitation mentioned in s. 158 of the Public Health Act, 1875, applies only to the case of a continuing offence. Reay v. Gateshead, 55 L. T. 92; 34 W. R. 682.

Highway Act, 1835 (5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 50), s. 109 (repealed).]—The three months' limit under the Highway Act applies to local authorities for acts done by them as surveyors of highways. Graham v. Newcastle Corporation, 62 L. J., Q. B. 315; [1893] 1 Q. B. 643; 69 L. T. 6.

In an action against a corporation for negligence, as surveyors of highways, commenced more than three, but less than six, months after the cause of action accrued:—Held, that the defendants were entitled to rely on the limitation of three months provided by 5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 50, and therefore that the action could not be maintained. Taylor v. Meltham Local Board (infra) distinguished. Burton v. Salford Corporation, 52 L. J., Q. B. 668; 11 Q. B. D. 286; 49 L. T. 43.

H., late in the evening, was crossing a bridge, from which the handrail had fallen into the brook below. He stretched out his hand to hold it, believing it to be in its usual place, fell over the bridge, and sustained injuries for which he sued the highway board in the county court. Notice that the rail was unsafe had previously been given to the board, and it was repaired by them a few days after. The county court judge nonsuited the plaintiff on the ground that the action was not brought within three months, according to the Highway Act, 1835 (5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 50), s. 109:—Held, that this omission to repair was something done in pursuance or under the authority of that act, and that the county court judge was right. Holland v. Northwich Highway Board, 34 L. T. 137.

—— 11 & 12 Vict. c. 63, s. 139.]—By s. 109 of the Highway Act (5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 50), no action is to be brought against any person for anything done under that act after three months after the fact committed, for which such action was brought. The Public Health Act, 1848 (11 & 12 Vict. c. 63), s. 117, constitutes the local board of health surveyor of highways with all the powers of any such surveyor in England; and by s. 139, every action against any inspector, or any person acting under the general board of health, or the officer of health, clerk, surveyor, inspector of nuisances, or the officer acting under the direction of the local board, for anything done under the provisions of that act, is to be commenced within six months after the accrual of the cause of action, and not afterwards:—Held, that an action of trespass against a local board of health for an act done by the board as surveyor of highways, which was commenced less than six months, though more than three months after the alleged trespass, was not too late. Taylor v. Meltham Local Board, 47 L. J., C. P. 12.

22 & 23 Vict. c. 49, s. 1—Action against Guardians.]—No action or other proceeding can be maintained against the guardians of a union or a parish for any debt, claim or demand due from them unless such action is commenced within the half-year in which the same shall have been incurred or become due, or within three months after the expiration of such half-year, or unless the time has been extended by the Poor Law Board, under 22 & 23 Vict. c. 49, s. 1. Baker v. Billericay Union Guardians, 2 H. & C. 642; 33 L. J., M. C. 40; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 1201; 9 L. T. 486; 13 W. R. 11. Reg. v. Stepney Union, 43 L. J., M. C. 145; L. R. 9 Q. B. 383; 30 L. T. 808.

The limit of time for payment of debts by guardians under 22 & 23 Vict. c. 49, s. 1, is not applicable to debts contracted by them when acting as rural sanitary authority under s. 9 of the Public Health Act, 1875. Dearle v. Petersfield Union, 57 L. J., Q. B. 640; 21 Q. B. D. 447; 60 L. T. 85; 37 W. R. 113.

Leeds Improvement Act, 1877, s. 96.]—A private act provided that summary proceedings before justices for the recovery of expenses must be brought within a year:—Held, that the limitation did not apply to an action of debt in the county court for the expenses. Leeds v. Robshaw, 51 J. P. 441.

25 & 26 Vict. c. 102, s. 107.]—A summons for laying out a new street of less than the required width must be brought within six months of notice being given to the district surveyor of the intended work, such notice, though not communicated to the board, being discovery by the board within 25 & 26 Vict. c. 102, s. 107. Metropolitan Board of Works v. Lathey, 49 J. P. 245.

13 Geo. 3, c. 78, s. 81.]—Though the 13 Geo. 3, c. 78, s. 81, directed that actions against any persons for anything done or acted in pursuance thereof should be commenced within three calendar months after the fact committed, and not afterwards; yet if surveyors of highways, in the execution of their office, undermined a wall adjoining to the highway, which did not fall till more than three months afterwards, they were subject to an action on the case for the consequential injury within three months after the falling of the wall. Roberts v. Read, 16 East, 215; 14 R. R. 335.

An action against a surveyor of highways for adding a portion of a close to the public road must be brought within three months from there being a complete separation between the part of the close taken and the residue, the fact being then committed within 13 Geo. 3, c. 78, s. 81. It is not sufficient to shew that the separating wall was raised and finished within the three months. Wordsworth v. Harley, 1 B. & Ad. 391; 9 L. J. (O.S.) M. C. 50.

6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 44—Actions against Assignees.]—Trover may be brought against the assignees of a bankrupt after the expiration of three months from the time of the alleged conversion, and, therefore, they are not within the protection of 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 44. Carruthers v. Payne, 2 M. & P. 429; 5 Bing. 270.

Where assignees of a bankrupt entered the premises of a third person to seize goods which were the property of the bankrupt, it is not necessary that an action should be brought against them within three months after the fact committed; the act of the assignees not being done "in pursuance of the statute," within 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 44. Edge v. Parker, 8 B. & C. 697; 3 M. & Ry. 365; 7 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 101.

Local Drainage Act—Protection of Surveyor.]—A surveyor under a local drainage act may take advantage of a clause limiting the commencement of actions to six months after the act done, where the injury happened to the plaintiff within six months of the action brought, although it does not appear that a compensation, as directed by the statute for the act complained of, has been made, or a certain course therein specified pursued, on the observance of which only he could have a right of entry on the lands of others. Boothby v. Morton, 7 Moore, 51; 3 Br. & B. 239.

A local improvement act enacted that actions against persons proceeding under the act shall be brought within six calendar months next after the matter or thing done. The treasurer, surveyor and contractors under the act dug a sewer near the plaintiff's house, in consequence of which the foundation was sunk and the walls were cracked:—Held, that the right of action was limited to six months from the day the cracks were occasioned. Lloyd v. Wigney, 4 M. & P. 222; 6 Bing. 489; 8 L. J. (O.S.) C. P. 161; 31 R. R. 474.

Action for Resulting Damage.]—By a statute, it was provided that no action should be brought "after six calendar months after the cause of such action should have arisen." A nuisance was caused on the 2nd April, and continued until the 2nd July, and the jury gave damages at the rate of 10*l.* per month; the action was not commenced until the 30th December:—Held, that damages for two days only could be recovered, the action being brought too late to sustain the previous damage. Wilks v. Hungerford Market Co., 2 Scott, 446; 2 Bing. (N.C.) 281; 1 Hodges, 281; 5 L. J., C. P. 23.

Where a statute limits the period within which an action is to be brought for an act done or committed, if the cause of action is a single act, or one which amounts to a trespass (except it is a continuing trespass), the action must be brought within the prescribed period after the actual doing of the thing complained of; but if the cause of action is not the doing of the thing, but the resulting of damage only, the period of limitation is to be computed from the time when the party sustained the injury. Whitehouse v. Fellowes, 10 C. B. (N.S.) 765; 30 L. J., C. P. 305; 4 L. T. 177; 9 W. R. 557.

By a private act it was enacted, that a company should be sued within "six calendar months after the fact committed":—Held, that the limitation ran from the time of the consequential injury happening, and not from the doing of the act which caused that consequential injury; the act itself not being tortious or injurious, except from those consequences which occurred some time after. Gillon v. Boddington, 1 Car. & P. 541; R. & M. 161.

A. was mortgagee from B. of leasehold coal-mines and barges. B. afterwards demised the mines, and assigned the barges to C.:—Held, that A. might bring trover against a canal company, who tortiously seized and sold the barges and part of the produce of the mines for tolls claimed to be due. Held, also, that no injury resulted to A. until the sale; and that therefore an action brought within six months of the sale, but more than six months after the seizure, was not barred by a clause in the canal act, limiting the commencement of actions for anything done in pursuance of that act to within six months after the fact committed. Frazer v. Swansea Canal Co., 3 N. & M. 391; 1 A. & E. 354; 3 L. J., K. B. 153.

And see Oakley v. Kensington Canal Co., and Jenkins v. Cooke, col. 71; and Blakemore v. Glamorganshire Canal Co., col. 70.

Accrual of Cause of Action—Public Health Act, 1875, s. 264—Action against Local Board for Subsidence by Excavation—Within Six Months of Damage, not of Excavation.]—See Crumbie v. Wallsend Local Board, col. 15.

5 & 6 Vict. c. 97, s. 5—Local and Personal Act, What is.]—An act which was printed as a local and personal act, and containing a clause enacting that it should be deemed a public act, and judicially noticed as such, gave jurisdiction to the commissioners appointed under it over debts wheresoever contracted, and any person might sue in this court, if the defendant happened to be in any of the places named in the act:—Held, a public local and personal act, within 5 & 6 Vict. c. 97, s. 5. Cock v. Gent, 1 D. & L. 413; 12 M. & W. 234; 13 L. J., Ex. 24.

But the Metropolitan Police Acts (2 & 3 Vict. c. 47; 2 & 3 Vict. c. 71; and 3 & 4 Vict. c. 84) are not. Barnett v. Cox, 2 New Sess. Cas. 487; 9 Q. B. 617; 16 L. J., M. C. 27; 11 Jur. 118.

—— Harbour Acts.]—The Ramsgate Harbour Acts (32 Geo. 3, c. lxxiv., and 55 Geo. 3, c. lxxxiv.) are acts of a local and personal nature. Shepherd v. Sharp, 1 H. & N. 115; 25 L. J., Ex. 254; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 617; 4 W. R. 570—Ex. Ch. S. P., Moore v. Shepherd, 10 Ex. 424; 24 L. J., Ex. 28.

—— 55 Geo. 3, c. 51, s. 23—Rating Act—Distress Warrant by Justices.]—The 8 & 9 Vict. c. 21, empowers justices of the county of Lancaster to make rates on the division of Manchester for the purposes of the act; and s. 21 enacts, that all the provisions of any subsisting act, relating to the enforcing of county rates, shall be taken to apply to rates made under this act. The 55 Geo. 3, c. 51 (a County Rate Act), by s. 23, enacted, that all actions against any person, for anything done by virtue of that act, should be brought within three months after the fact committed:—Held, that an action against the justices, for issuing a warrant of distress against the goods of an overseer for not collecting and paying over a rate made under 8 & 9 Vict. c. 21, ought to have been brought within three months, as s. 21 of the latter act incorporated s. 23 of 55 Geo. 3, c. 51. Boden v. Smith, 18 L. J., C. P. 121; 13 Jur. 428.

Held, also, that even supposing the 8 & 9 Vict. c. 21, to be a local act, it repealed the 5 & 6 Vict. c. 97, so far as regarded the period of limitation for bringing this action. Ib.

Whether Thing done in Execution of Powers given by Act—Abstraction of Water—Continuing Damage.]—A., who was entitled by an act of parliament to all the surplus water and such as was not necessary for the purposes of a canal, brought an action against the canal company for an illegal abstraction of water, and alleged in his declaration continuing acts of commission and omission from an antecedent period, by which he was deprived of the water for nine weeks in 1825, and for seventeen weeks in 1826:—Held, that the company was within the protection of the limitation clause of the 30 Geo. c. 82, s. 79, which enacts, that any action for anything done in pursuance of the act shall be brought within six calendar months next after the fact committed, unless there was a continuation of damage; and also, that there was no continuation of damage, inasmuch as there was a cessation of injury, although the cause from which the injury proceeded was continuing. Blakemore v. Glamorganshire Canal Co., 3 Y. & J. 60.

Where a canal company was empowered to supply the canal with water from all streams whatsoever within the distance of 2,000 yards, except as thereinafter mentioned, with a proviso that nothing should extend to authorise them to take water from certain specified streams, between 10th June and 10th September, except only that, if one of those streams should overflow, the same might be taken into the canal so long as such overflowing should continue, and that all actions should be brought for anything to be done in pursuance of the act, or in the execution of the powers and authorities before given, within six calendar months after the fact committed; or, in case of a continuation of damages, within three calendar months after the committing such damages should have ceased:—Held, that the taking and continuing to take the water by the company from one of the specified streams, during the prohibited times, might, nevertheless, be so far a thing done in execution of the powers and authorities given them by the act, as to entitle the company to the protection of the act as to the time of commencing the action against them. Gaby v. Wilts and Berks Canal Co., 3 M. & S. 580.

—— Dock Company—Improper Directions of Dock Master.]—An act authorised a company to make and maintain docks, and to appoint a dock master, who should have power to direct the mooring, unmooring, moving and removing of all vessels into or in the docks, and should have control over the space of 100 yards from the entrance into the docks, so far as related to the transporting of vessels in and out; the company to be sued in the name of their treasurer; and every action brought against any person for anything done in pursuance of the act, to be commenced within six calendar months after the fact committed. In an action brought against the treasurer for damage done to a vessel by means of improper directions given by the dock master in transporting her into the docks:—Held, that giving such directions was a thing done in pursuance of the act, and that the action should have been commenced within six calendar months after those directions were given. Smith v. Shaw, 5 M. & Ry. 225; 10 B. & C. 277; 8 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 111.

—— Taking of Land.]—By acts of parliament enabling a company to make and maintain a canal navigation, and to take lands for that purpose, making satisfaction, it was provided, that the company should not take any garden ground without the consent of the owners and occupiers, and that any action to be brought for anything done in pursuance of those acts should be commenced within six calendar months next after the facts should have been committed; or, if there should be a continuance of damage, then within six calendar months next after the committing of such damage should have ceased. The company, wishing to take garden ground for the purpose of sloping the banks of the canal, told the occupier, a tenant, that they had obtained the consent of the owner's agent, without which the tenant would not have given them permission; but the statement was not true. They then paid him a sum which he demanded on account of a former transaction, after which they entered and sloped away the ground. The land in consequence was thenceforth overflowed by the Thames at every high tide. For this damage the landlord sued the company, but not before more than six calendar months after the ground was taken and the tide let in:—Held, that the injury was one for which an action should have been brought within six calendar months after the taking away of the land; and that the company was within the protection of the limiting clause, inasmuch as the act complained of was really done for the purpose contemplated by the statutes, though in the prosecution of that purpose the company had been guilty of a misrepresentation amounting to bad faith towards the occupier. Oakley (Lord) v. Kensington Canal Co., 5 B. & Ad. 138; 2 L. J., K. B. 208.

—— Distress for Tolls.]—A canal company was authorised by statute to demand and sue for tolls upon the carriage of goods, and to distrain any carriage or goods in respect of which such tolls ought to be paid, and to detain the same until payment made of such tolls and of all arrears of the same due from the owner of such carriage or goods; and in case such distress should not be redeemed within five days, to appraise and sell the same, as in the case of a distress for rent; they were not expressly authorised to levy any toll upon carriages. The statute enacted, that any action brought for anything done in pursuance of the act, or in execution of the powers and authorities granted by it, should be brought within six calendar months next after the fact committed:—Held, first, that a distress for nonpayment of tolls was a thing done in pursuance of the act. Jenkins v. Cooke, 1 A. & E. 372.

Held, secondly, that where the owner of trams let them to a third person, and during such letting they were illegally distrained for arrears due from the person hiring, while not carrying such person's goods, and afterwards sold, such owner might sue within six months from the time of sale on a count complaining of injury done to his reversionary interest by the seizure and sale. Ib. S. P., Collins v. Rose, 5 M. & W. 194; 8 L. J., Ex. 273.

Actions against Justices of the Peace—2 & 3 Vict. c. 71, s. 53—10 Geo. 4, c. 44, s. 41—Three Months' Limitation—When Allowed.]—A complaint having been made against a pawnbroker before a police magistrate, appointed under 2 & 3 Vict. c. 71, the pawnbroker called his assistant as a witness, and he was sworn and examined before the magistrate, who cautioned him against committing perjury. The case was subsequently dismissed from want of jurisdiction in the magistrate; but he, being dissatisfied with the evidence of the assistant, ordered him to be detained without any complaint being made, and afterwards took bail for his appearance, as on a charge of perjury, upon a subsequent day. Upon that day the parties attended, and the charge of perjury was gone into, and the magistrate subsequently took the recognizance of the assistant for his appearance to answer an indictment for perjury. A bill was preferred, but returned not found. The assistant afterwards brought an action for trespass and false imprisonment against the magistrate. The action was not commenced until more than three months after the commission of the alleged trespass, but within six months:—Held, that the magistrate was entitled to the statutory protection of s. 53 (repealed), which limits the time for commencing the action to three months after the fact committed, and that therefore the action was too late. Haseldine v. Grove, 3 G. & D. 210; 3 Q. B. 997; 12 L. J., M. C. 10; 7 Jur. 36.

—— In Metropolis.]—The time limited for bringing actions against justices of a metropolitan police district, in respect of a conviction under 2 & 3 Vict. c. 47, s. 18, made in exercise of the jurisdiction given them by 3 & 4 Vict. c. 84, s. 6, is three calendar months, the period prescribed by 2 & 3 Vict. c. 71, s. 53, and not six calendar months, the period given by 10 Geo. 4, c. 44, s. 41. Barnett v. Cox, 9 Q. B. 617; 2 New Sess. Cas. 486; 16 L. J., M. C. 27; 11 Jur. 118.

—— 11 & 12 Vict. c. 44, s. 8—Six Months' Limitation.]—A magistrate is liable to answer in an action for such part of an imprisonment suffered under his warrant, as was within six calendar months before the action commenced against him. Massey v. Johnson, 12 East, 67.

An action brought within six months after the end of a long imprisonment by a justice's warrant is sufficient. Pickersgill v. Palmer, Bull. N. P. 24.

In an action against a justice of the peace, for false imprisonment, it appeared that the plaintiff was discharged from prison on the 14th December, and the writ issued on the 14th of June:—Held, that the action was commenced in time. Hardy v. Ryle, 9 B. & C. 603; 4 M. & R. 295; 7 L. J. (o.s.) M. C. 118.

In an action against magistrates for an act done by them ex officio, the plaintiff must shew at nisi prius that he proceeded upon a writ sued out within six months after notice to them of the action, although there is a continuing cause of action; and therefore he must shew a return and a continuance of the first writ, if the second is out of the time fixed by the notice. Weston v. Fournier, 14 East, 491.

Actions against Constables—24 Geo. 2, c. 44, s. 8—Six Months' Limitation—In what Cases.]—A constable who does an act bonâ fide, intending to do his duty, is within the protection of 24 Geo. 2, c. 44, s. 8 (repealed). Gosden v. Elphick, 4 Ex. 445; 7 D. & L. 194; 19 L. J., Ex. 9; 13 Jur. 989.

A constable, acting bonâ fide under a warrant commanding him to take the goods of one person, and by mistake taking those of another, is protected, and, therefore, an action must be brought against him within six calendar months. Parton v. Williams, 3 B. & Ald. 330; 22 R. R. 414.

So, where constables were directed under a warrant to search a house for black cloth, and took cloths of another description, and carried them before a magistrate, refusing at the time they took them to tell the owner of the house searched whether they had any warrant or not: —Held, within the protection of the statute, and that an action against them ought to have been commenced within six calendar months. Smith v. Wiltshire, 5 Moore, 322; 2 Br. & B. 619; 23 R. R. 521.

A constable acting colore, not virtute, officii, is not protected from actions not commenced within six months. Alcock v. Andrews, 2 Esp. 542, n.

So, if he acts without a warrant at all. Postlethwaite v. Gibson, 3 Esp. 226.

It seems that if a constable acts in his character as such, even without a warrant, he is within the statute. Field v. Croft, 5 Moore, 329, cited. And see Graves v. Arnold, 3 Camp. 242.

A. obtained a magistrate's warrant for the apprehension of B. upon a criminal charge which, on the hearing, was dismissed. This warrant was directed "To the constable of D." (a parish in the county of W.). A. delivered the warrant to a county constable of W., and directed him to execute it, which he did:—Held, that the warrant could not be executed by any other constable than by a constable of the parish of D., and consequently that the execution of it by the county constable was illegal, and that the action not having been brought within six months after the commission of the trespass, the constable was protected. Freegard or Treegard v. Barnes, 7 Ex. 827; 21 L. J., Ex. 320.

53 Geo. 3, c. 127, s. 12—Distress for Rates—Three Months' Limitation.]—Where a constable having a magistrate's warrant of distress to levy a church rate, under 53 Geo. 3, c. 127, broke the door of and entered the plaintiff's dwelling-house:—Held, that although he thereby exceeded his authority, yet that no action could be maintained after the expiration of three calendar months. Theobald v. Crichmore, 1 B. & Ald. 227; 19 R. R. 297.

Under 53 Geo. 3, c. 127, s. 12 (repealed), which requires that an action for anything done in pursuance of the act shall be commenced within three calendar months after the fact committed, an action for seizing, taking and carrying away and distraining and selling the plaintiff's goods, under a warrant of distress for arrears of a church rate, may be brought within three calendar months after the sale. Collins v. Rose, 5 M. & W. 194; 8 L. J., Ex. 273.

—— Right of Overseer.]—An overseer of the poor, who distrains for a poor-rate under a justice's warrant, is an officer within the protection of the act. Nutting v. Jackson, Bull. N. P. 24.

Actions against Officers of Excise — 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 53, s. 115—28 Geo. 3, c. 37, s. 23—Seizure of Forfeited Goods.]—By 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 53, s. 115, an action cannot be maintained against officers of the customs, for seizing goods as forfeited by the revenue laws, unless brought within three months after the actual seizure: notwithstanding a suit is instituted in the Court of Exchequer for the condemnation of the goods, which is depending at the expiration of the three months. Goding v. Ferris, 2 H. Bl. 14; 3 R. R. 339.

Where the commander of one of the king's armed vessels seized a vessel and cargo at sea, and brought them into the next port on suspicion of smuggling, and after process in the Exchequer the owner obtained an order for re-delivery, under which he obtained only part of the goods from the defendant; the owner could not maintain trover for the remainder, if the action was brought after three months from the original seizure, though within three months from the order for redelivery. Saunders v. Saunders, 2 East, 254; 6 R. R. 424.

Where an officer in the preventive service boarded a ship, and left three men on board, and two days afterwards decided on seizing her; and the owner having sued him for such seizure: —Held, that the three months within which the action should have been commenced under 28 Geo. 3, c. 37, s. 23 (repealed), must be computed from the day of boarding the vessel. Crook v. M'Tavish, 8 Moore, 265; 1 Bing. 167; 1 L. J. (o.s.) C. P. 43.

Penal Actions—31 Eliz. c. 5, s. 5.]—The 31 Eliz. c. 5, s. 5, includes penal actions where the penalty is given to a common informer alone, and therefore he must sue within one year after the offence committed. Dyer v. Best, 4 H. & C. 189; 35 L. J., Ex. 105; L. R. 1 Ex. 152; 12 Jur. (N.S.) 142; 13 L. T. 753; 14 W. R. 336.

In a penal action the plaintiff is at liberty to shew the action commenced within a year, as well after as before the objection is made that it does not appear on the record. Maugham v. Walker, Peake, 164; 5 Term Rep. 98.

—— Turnpike Act, 3 Geo. 4, c. 126.]—The proviso in the 143rd section of the Turnpike Act (3 Geo. 4, c. 126) is not confined to that part of the section which immediately precedes it, but extends to the whole matter in the section; and, therefore, if a party seeking to recover the penalties imposed by that act omits to commence his action within the prescribed time, he is not merely barred of his right to costs, but of his right of action altogether. Cobbett v. Warner, 1 H. & N. 388; 26 L. J., Ex. 11—Ex. Ch.

—— 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 42, s. 3—Action by Officer of Goldsmiths' Company.]—An action by an officer of one of the Company of Goldsmiths mentioned in 7 & 8 Vict. c. 22, for penalties under s. 3 of that act, is not an action by a common informer within 31 Eliz. c. 5, nor is it an action by a "party grieved" within 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 42, s. 3, and consequently can be brought more than two years after the cause of action accrued. Robinson v. Currey, 50 L. —— Railway Act—Obstruction of Canal—Six Months' Limitation runs from Obstruction ceasing, not from Demand of Penalties.]—By a railway act it was provided that no action should be brought against any person for anything done, or omitted to be done, in pursuance of the act, unless such action should be commenced within six months next after the act committed, or in case of a continuation of damages, then within six months next after the committing such damages should have ceased. By a subsequent act the company was authorised to alter the course of a canal, provided that, if in the execution of the works, the canal should be obstructed, the company should pay to the proprietors of the canal 10*l.* an hour as liquidated damages during the continuance of the obstruction, and in default of payment of such sum on demand, the proprietors might recover the same in an action. The company in the execution of their works obstructed the canal in 1840 and June, 1841. In May, 1842, the proprietors of the canal made a demand on the company for the penalties for the two obstructions, the last of which they described in their demand as having ceased on the 11th June, 1841. In June, 1842, they brought an action for the penalties: — Held, that the action was not brought in time, as the limitation of six months for bringing the action began to run from the ceasing of the obstruction, and not from the demand and nonpayment of the penalties. Kennet and Avon Canal Co. v. *G. ## VI. APPLICATION OF STATUTES IN PARTICULAR PROCEEDINGS.

1. In Equity.

See Medlicott v. O'Donel; Hyde v. Price; and Bond v. Hopkins, col. 150.

Courts of Equity act either in Obedience or by Analogy to Statute.]—Courts of equity, though not within the words of the Statute of Limitations (which apply to particular legal remedies), are within the spirit and meaning of them. Hovenden v. Annesley (Lord), 2 Sch. & Lef. 630; 9 R. R. 119.

Courts of equity act not by analogy, but in obedience to the Statute of Limitations. Ib.

Upon all legal titles and legal demands, courts of equity are bound by the Statute of Limitations. Ib.

Though the 21 Jac. I, c. 16, does not apply to any equitable demand, equity takes the same limitation in cases analogous to those at law. Stackhouse v. Barnston, 10 Ves. 466.

Length of time adopted in equity by analogy to Statute of Limitations. Hodle v. Healey, 1 Ves. & B. 539; 6 Madd. 181; 22 R. R. 270.

See also Smith v. Clay, 3 Bro. Ch. C. 639, n.; and Greaves, In re, 18 Ch. D. at p. 554.

—— Bequest of Share of Sum advanced to Partnership—Bill for an Account.]—When the remedy in equity is correspondent to a remedy at law, and the latter is subject to a limitation in point of time by the Statute of Limitations through being included within the words of the statute, a court of equity there acts in analogy to the statute, and adopts the enactment of the statute as its own rule of procedure. But if any proceeding in equity is included within the words of the statute, there a court of equity, like a court of law, acts in obedience to the statute. Knox v. Gye, 42 L. J., Ch. 234; L. R. 5 H. L. 656.

The phrase "comprised in the same account" in the 19 & 20 Vict. c. 97, s. 9, means that "would have been comprehended in." Ib.

T. advanced 12,000*l.* to G. on the terms of partnership. T. made a will, leaving this money equally between K. and G. T. died in December, 1854, before old Covent Garden Theatre was burned down, which event took place in March, 1856. There had been before December, 1854, negotiations between G. and H. to allow G. the use of Her Majesty's Theatre; but though 5,000*l.* (part of T.'s 12,000*l.*) had been paid to H. under these negotiations, he had never performed his contract. G. finally brought an action against H., and recovered judgment for 5,000*l.*, but ultimately (after the death of T., yet within six years of the date of a bill filed by K., for an account) consented to accept 2,500*l.* as a compromise. K., in December, 1864, filed a bill against G. for an account of profits in the partnership with T., and what was due to K. in respect thereof under T.'s will:—Held, that his right under T.'s will began in December, 1854, and was barred in equity by analogy to the Statute of Limitations, the bill not having been filed till 1864. Ib.

Held, also, that the surviving partner not being a trustee for the executors of his deceased partner, the payment of the 2,500*l.* from H. within six years from filing the bill did not take the case out of the statute. Ib.

—— Claim by Customer against Bankers for an Account.]—In the case of a legal demand, a court of equity acts in obedience, and not merely by analogy, to the Statute of Limitations. A banking firm who, on opening an account with a customer, had agreed to allow him interest at 3 per cent. on the balances which should from time to time be standing to his credit, set up the Statute of Limitations as a defence to a bill filed against them by the customer for an account. The account as it stood in the bankers' book showed a considerable balance due to the plaintiff, but there being no item in it, or evidence of any transaction connected with it, of a date within six years prior to the filing of the bill, nor any suggestion in the bill that the bankers were bound, by the agreement or otherwise, to have actually entered the interest as it became due to the credit of the customer in the account, or that they had omitted so to do with a fraudulent intent, the defence was allowed to prevail. Foley v. Hill, 1 Ph. 399; 8 Jur. 347. Affirmed, 2 H. L. Cas. 28.

Claim for an Account of Coal wrongfully taken.]—When by underground working a party had taken the coal of his neighbour, a court of equity limited the account to six years, but intimated that the amount wrongfully abstracted being proved, the onus of proof would lie on the wrongdoer to shew that it was not taken within six years. Dean v. Thwaite, 21 Beav. 621.

Restraining Defendant from pleading Statute at Law.]—A woman, at the time of her marriage, was indebted on two promissory notes. After the marriage the husband gave his bond for the amount to the creditor, who thereupon delivered up the notes. The bond having been put in suit, the husband pleaded his infancy at the time of giving the bond. On a bill filed in this court for relief, the court ordered the notes to be returned to the plaintiff with directions that the defendant should not plead Statute of Limitations to any action the plaintiff should bring on the notes or any other plea, which the defendant could not have pleaded at the time the bond was given; but this court will not order the immediate payment of the money. Clarke v. Cobley, 2 Cox, 173; 2 R. 2. In Bankruptcy and Winding-up of Companies.

Actions by Bankrupt's Assignees.]—Where the statute had begun to run against a petitioning creditor's debt, before the commission issued, it shall not be taken advantage of by a third person against the assignees. Quantock v. England, 2 W. Bl. 702; 5 Burr. 2628.

A debtor to a bankrupt, when sued by his assignees, cannot set up the statute as an objection to the petitioning creditor's debt. Mayor v. Pyne, 2 Car. & P. 91; 3 Bing. 285; 11 Moore, 2; 4 L. J. (o.s.) C. P. 36; 28 R. R. 625.

To an action by the assignees of an insolvent debtor to recover money owing to him before his insolvency, in which they declared that, in consideration of the money being due to the insolvent, the defendant promised to pay it to them as assignees, it is a bad plea to say "that the cause of action first accrued to the insolvent before the plaintiffs became assignees, and that six years had elapsed after the cause of action first accrued to the insolvent, and before the suing out the writ of the plaintiffs." Kinder v. Paris, 2 H. Bl. 561.

Bill lies by assignee for account and delivery of goods pledged by the bankrupt, notwithstanding the Statute of Limitations. Kemp v. Westbrook, 1 Ves. 278.

A motion by a trustee in a liquidation that rents of property of the debtor received by N. should be paid over to him, notice of which is given more than six years after the rents were received, is barred by the statute. Norton, Ex parte, Mansel, In re, 66 L. T. 245.

Claims by Creditors.]—The statute does not attach to a debt proved under a commission or a fiat of bankruptcy. A surviving assignee is, therefore, liable for the payment of dividends, if his co-assignee ever admitted proof of the debt, although the creditor has failed to apply for the dividends for many years. Healey, Ex parte, 1 Deac. & C. 361. Cf. Clarkson, Ex parte, Clarkson, In re, 3 Mont. & Ayr. 154; and Brunger or Burgess, Ex parte, Tyrell, In re, Mont. & Bli. 415; 2 L. J., Bk. 96.

A person who had taken the benefit of the Insolvent Act, for the relief of insolvent debtors, first in 1814, and again in 1823, died in 1826, leaving assets more than sufficient for the payment of all the debts which he had contracted subsequently to his second insolvency:—Held, that the assets ought to be applied in payment, first, of those subsequent debts, and, secondly, of the debts scheduled under the second insolvency, and thirdly, of the debts scheduled under the first insolvency; that a court of equity had power so to administer the fund, and that the right of the creditors to that relief was not affected by the Statute of Limitations. Barton v. Tattersall, 1 Russ. & M. 237; Tam. 378.

The 25 Geo. 3, c. 165, s. 54, by which a right was reserved to creditors to obtain payment out of the future effects of the insolvent, did not prevent the operation of the statute. Browning v. Paris, 5 M. & W. 117; 7 D. P. C. 398; 2 H. & H. 65; 8 L. J., Ex. 222.

A debtor executed a deed of inspectorship, which was intended to operate under the Bankruptcy Act, 1861, s. 192, and which provided for payment of the debts by instalments, and the avoidance of the deed in certain contingencies, one of which happened, and for the revivor of the debts in that event, deducting dividends received under the deed. A certain creditor was mentioned as such in one of the schedules to the deed. The debt of this creditor was also mentioned in the statutory account of debts of the debtor, which was verified by his affidavit; and the creditor received a dividend on his debt from the inspectors under the inspectorship:—Held, that the debt, being otherwise barred by the Statute of Limitations, was not, by any of these circumstances, taken out of its operation. Topping, Ex parte, Levy, In re, 4 De G. J. & S. 551; 34 L. J., Bk. 44; 12 L. T. 787; 13 W. R. 1025.

Sale of Shares by Bankrupt's Assignee avoided after Fifteen Years.]—When a mining concern, in which a bankrupt had more than one-third of the shares, was wound up, and a new company formed, who paid 18,000*l.* as the purchase-money for the mine, &c., which sum was to be applied in payment of the debts of the old concern ; and the property of the new company was divided into fifty-four shares, of which eleven were assigned to the assignee of the bankrupt for himself and friends ; and of these eleven, four were purchased by the trustees of the defendant, then a minor, and the purchase-money, which was exactly four fifty-fourths of the 18,000*l.*, was paid to the assignee :—Held, on a suit by a new assignee, fifteen years afterwards, that the four shares were to be considered as the property of the bankrupt, and the assignee as the agent of the defendant in the purchase, and that the shares still belonged to the bankrupt's estate, and an account of profits decreed. Turner v. Trelawney, 12 Sim. 49 ; 10 L. Winding-up of Company — Statute does not run against Creditors after Order for.] — A company was ordered to be wound up in February, 1865. The certificate of debts and claims was made in December, 1870 ; and in January, 1871, a dividend was paid on the debts which had been established. In March, 1871, the holder of bills of exchange to a large amount, which had been accepted by the company and had become payable in February, 1865, gave the first notice of his claim and applied for leave to prove, not disturbing previous dividends :—Held, that by the Companies Act, 1862, the assets are made applicable to the payment of all liabilities of the company subsisting at the date of the winding-up order ; that from that time the Statute of Limitations does not run against a creditor, and that the claimants were entitled to prove, not disturbing former dividends. General Rolling Stock Co., In re, Joint Stock Discount Co.'s Claim, 41 L. —— Claim of Liquidator against Directors—Payment of Dividends out of Capital.] — The directors of a limited company for several years presented to the general meetings of shareholders reports and balance-sheets in which various debts known by the directors to be bad were entered as assets, so that an apparent profit was shewn though in fact there was none. The shareholders, relying on these documents, passed resolutions declaring dividends, which the directors accordingly paid. An order having been made to wind up the company, the liquidator applied, under s. 165 of the Companies Act, 1862, for an order on the directors to replace the amount of dividends thus paid out of capital :—Held, that the claim was for a breach of trust, and that the Statute of Limitations could not be set up. Exchange Banking Co., In re, Flitcroft's Case, 52 L. —— Claim against Director for Misfeasance—When Statute begins to run—Disclosure to Board not to Company.]—An application was made in the winding-up of a company, seeking to recover from a director the value of shares allotted to him under circumstances which amounted to a misfeasance. It appeared that the transaction in question had been disclosed at a board meeting of the directors in 1873, but that two of the directors then present had taken part in the transaction in question, and the third had received shares under the arrangement :—Held, that disclosure to the directors could not, under these circumstances, be considered as disclosure to the company, and that the claim, therefore, was not barred by the Statute of Limitations. Fitzroy Bessemer Steel Co., In re

As to Right of Creditors, Residuary Legatees and Devisees to set up Statute.]—Under the common decree in an administration suit, a creditor applied to prove a debt which was barred by lapse of time, and the executors refusing to interfere, the plaintiff, a residuary legatee, insisted on setting up the objection of the statute:—Held, that it was competent for the plaintiff, or any other party interested in the fund, to take advantage of the statute before the master, notwithstanding the refusal of the executors. Whether the master himself is bound to take the objection, quære. Shewen v. Vanderhorst, 1 Russ. & M. 347; 1 L. J. (O.S.) Ch. 107.

In taking the accounts in an administration suit, any creditor may object that another creditor's debt is barred by the Statute of Limitations; but, semble, that such an objection cannot be taken to the debt, which is the foundation of the decree. Fuller v. Redman, 26 Beav. 614.

A residuary legatee may set up the Statute of Limitations as against the creditors in an administration suit, though the executors do not take the objection. Moodie v. Bannister, 4 Drew. 432; 28 L. J., Ch. 881; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 402; 7 W. R. 278.

Where an executor has not in the pleadings set up the Statute of Limitations against the plaintiff's claim, it is not competent for a creditor to do so at chambers after the decree. Adams v. Waller, 14 L. T. 727.

Where an executor does not set up the Statute of Limitations on a creditor's administration summons, the residuary legatees cannot set it up against the plaintiff. Briggs v. Wilson, 5 De G. M. & G. 12; 2 Eq. R. 153.

Court not bound to notice Statute.]—After decree in an administration suit, the court is not bound, on behalf of an absent party beneficially interested in the estate to disallow claims against the estate, barred by the Statute of Limitations, if the personal representative, and such of the persons beneficially interested as are parties to the suit or have come under the decree do not set up the statute. Alston v. Trollope, 35 Beav. 466; 35 L. Time runs against Creditors from Decree.]—An ordinary administration decree in a legatee's suit operates as a judgment in favour of creditors; so that time under the Statute of Limitations begins to run from the date of the decree. Finch v. Finch, 45 L. J., Ch. 816; 35 L. T. 235.

Statute continues to run against Creditors generally till Decree.]—In an administration action commenced in December, 1878, by one executor of a testator, who was also a creditor of his testator, against his co-executor, the usual judgment in a creditor's action was pronounced in December, 1879, and some time afterwards a claim was brought in by a creditor against the estate upon a promissory note of the testator, dated in November, 1873:—Held, that the claim was barred by the statute. Sterndale v. Hankinson (1 Sim. 393) observed upon. Greaves, In re, Bray v. Tofield, 50 L. Statute ceasing to run against Incumbrancer from Commencement of Administration Action.]—Where an incumbrancer who has proved his demand in an administration action, presents a petition for sale in pursuance of the judgment in that action, and carries on the proceedings to a sale, the Statute of Limitations does not run against his demand after the commencement of the administration action. Ebbs' Estate, In re, 31 L. Where Assets marshalled—Simple Contract Creditor's Right against Realty, when barred.]—Simple contract creditors who have, in consequence of the payment of specialty creditors out of the personal estate of the deceased debtor, acquired a right of marshalling his real estate, are not barred, under the Statute of Limitations, by the lapse of less than twenty years. Ellard v. Cooper, 1 Ir. Ch. R. 376.

A simple contract creditor who has acquired a right of marshalling real estate is not barred by the lapse of less than twenty years. Vickers v. Oliver, 1 Y. & Coll. C. C. 211; 11 L. J., Ch. 112; 6 Jur. 273.

Upon the death of a testator who had devised his real estates for payment of his debts, a bill was filed on behalf of his creditors, both by specialty and simple contract, to have his assets administered and his real estates marshalled. In that suit a receiver was, in 1821, appointed of all his estates. It was afterwards discovered that the testator had died seised of an estate which had not passed by his will, but had descended to his heiress-at-law, M., upon whose death, in 1822, it descended to O. In 1840, eighteen years after M.'s death, a supplemental bill was filed against O. by one of the plaintiffs in the original suit, being a simple contract creditor of the testator, praying to have the benefit of that suit as against the descended estate:—Held, that as the original suit was treated as a suit for the administration of all the testator's real estates, and as the plaintiff sought to affect the descended estate by standing in the place of the specialty creditors, he was not, barred by the Statute of Limitations, but was entitled to have the descended estate marshalled in his favour. Ib.

When a Breach of Trust or Misappropriation alleged, Statute no Bar.]—G., by his will, bequeathed all his property to H., upon the trusts thereinafter mentioned. He then bequeathed his leaseholds to H. for life, and after her death he gave part of them to B. for life with remainder to G. the younger absolutely, and gave the residue of his property to G. absolutely, and appointed H. his executrix. G. the younger survived the testator and died intestate in March, 1838. H. took out administration to his estate in May, 1838, and died in 1841; appointed B. her executrix, who thus became the representative of the testator as well as of H. B. afterwards took out administration to G. the younger. One of the next of kin to G. the younger, in 1858, filed a bill against B. for the administration of the estate of G. the younger:—Held, that B. could not avail herself of any defence founded on the Statutes of Limitations, but that an account of the rents of the leaseholds received by B. which was not limited to six years before the filing of the bill, and an account of the personal estate of G. the younger, received by H. and B. respectively, had been rightly directed against her. Obee v. Bishop, 1 De G. A person has a lien on goods for a debt, though his remedy for part is barred by the statute. Spears v. Hartly, 3 Esp. 81; 6 R. R. 814.

L., a partner in the firm of B. & Co., retired from it, and shortly afterwards borrowed from the plaintiffs 20,000*l.* on his promissory note payable on 31st May, 1848, and agreed, by way of collateral security, to give them a lien on his share of the assets of the partnership, which had not yet been ascertained and paid. In furtherance of this, B., one of the continuing partners, in July, 1847, at L.'s request, and with the consent of the other continuing partners, gave the plaintiffs an order on C. & Co., the agents of B. & Co., directing them to pay to the plaintiffs out of the funds of B. & Co. in their hands, 5,000*l.*, and engaged to pay to the plaintiffs the residue of L.'s share. C. & Co. had not at the time, nor afterwards, nearly so much as 5,000*l.* of B. & Co.'s money in their hands. In August, 1847, the plaintiffs presented the order to C. & Co., and were informed they had not funds to pay it. The plaintiffs gave B. no notice of this. In September, 1847, C. & Co. became insolvent, without having paid any part of the 5,000*l.* The promissory note was dishonoured. B. died in February, 1849. The share of L. was finally ascertained in 1853, and L. died in March, 1855. In November, 1855, the plaintiffs filed a bill to enforce their lien:—Held, that the plaintiffs were not, under the circumstances, barred from relief by delay, there being no statutory bar. Glyn v. Hood, 1 De G. 9. In Actions on Merchants' Accounts.

The exception, in 21 Jac. 1, c. 16, s. 3, of merchants' accounts from the limitation of six years prescribed by that section was abolished by 19 & 20 Vict. c. 97, s. 9, which also provided that no statute-barred claim should be enforceable by reason only that some other matter of claim comprised in the same account arose within six years.

Construction of 19 & 20 Vict. c. 97, s. 9.]—The phrase "comprised in the same account" in the 19 & 20 Vict. c. 97, s. 9, means that "would have been comprehended in." Knox v. Gye, 42 L. J., Ch. 234; L. R. 5 H. L. 656.

What were Merchants' Accounts (before 19 & 20 Vict. c. 97, s. 9) within the Exception in 21 Jac. 1, c. 16, s. 3.]—The exception as to merchants' accounts in the 21 Jac. 1, c. 16, s. 3, was confined to cases where an action of account would lie, or an action upon the case for not accounting. Cottam v. Partridge, 4 Scott (N. R.) 819; 4 M. & G. 271; 11 L. J., C. P. 161.

An open account between two tradesmen for goods sold by each to the other, without any agreement that the goods delivered on the one side should be considered as payment for those delivered on the other, did not constitute such an account as concerned the trade of merchandise between merchant and merchant within the exception of the 21 Jac. 1, c. 16, s. 3. Ib.

The exception of the 21 Jac. 1, c. 16, s. 3, as to merchants' accounts did not apply to an action of indebitatus assumpsit, but only to the action of account, or to an action on the case for not accounting. Inglis v. Haigh, 8 M. & W. 769; 9 D. Transactions with a foreign prince and his government do not concern the trade of merchandise, within the 21 Jac. 1, c. 16, s. 3. Sturt v. Mellish, 2 Atk. 612.

A letter of attorney from one merchant to another to get in debts will not make a person so deputed a merchant within the exception of 21 Jac. 1, c. 16, s. 3. Ib.

The creditor, by 4 Anne, c. 16, s. 19, has the same privilege of the debtor's being beyond sea as he had by the statutes of James, on his being beyond sea himself. Ib.

These statutes must not be so considered as if the clauses in the last had stood originally in the first. Ib.

Where the plaintiffs, as joint-owners, worked in co-partnership plantations in I., and kept an account with the merchants and agent at B., to whom they became largely indebted:—Held, not to be merchants' accounts within the exception in the statute; and a plea of the statutes of 21 Jac. 1, and 9 Geo. 4, held not double. Forbes v.

Shelton, 8 Sim. 335; 6 L. J., Ch. 159; 1 Jur. 117.

Will by assignees of a bankrupt, claiming a debt, which had been paid to his partner, as paid after notice of dissolution of the partnership, that partner retiring, and the bankrupt continuing, dismissed; the terms of the alleged arrangement not being made out, so as to establish the right in equity of the bankrupt, and the legal right of the other partner. The other questions therefore were not determined: 1st. Whether a demand, the result of an over-payment in advance, upon a single transaction of sale between merchants, or merchant and factor, was within the exception as to merchants' accounts in the Statute of Limitations. 2nd. As to the effect of that exception; whether including merchants' accounts generally, or those only with items continuing within the six years. 3rd. Upon the objection of laches, independent of the statute. Duff v. East India Co., 15 Ves. 198.

The bankrupt and the petitioner had numerous dealings together, from January, 1820, to June, 1835, of which no account was actually delivered by the bankrupt to the petitioner, but the various items of which were entered in the bankrupt's books; the date of the last item being in April, 1835, which was an entry of a payment of 300*l.* by the bankrupt to the petitioner on account:—Held, that the petitioner was not barred by the Statute of Limitations, or by 9 Geo. 4, c. 14, from proving such balance as he could prove to be due to him, on the result of these transactions, and that they constituted a running and continuous account between the parties. Seaber, Ex parte, 1 Deac. 543; 2 Mont. & Ayr. 588; 5 L. Under By-Laws.]—An action for a penalty incurred under a by-law made by virtue of a royal charter under the great seal, is an action of debt grounded upon a contract without specialty, within 21 Jac. 1, c. 16, s. 3, and therefore a plea of the statute bars the recovery of the penalty if the action is not commenced within six years after it was incurred. Tobacco-pipe Makers' Co. v. Loder, 16 Q. Claim for Past Maintenance of Lunatic.]—A claim for the past maintenance of a lunatic being simply a debt of the lunatic, the court will not pay out of the lunatic's estate in court more than six years' arrears of such maintenance. Harris, In re, 49 L. J., Ch. 327.

The brother of a lunatic lady, not so found by inquisition, advanced money for the maintenance of his sister for several years under circumstances which left it doubtful whether he intended it for a gift or expected to be repaid. He died, and his sister was then found to be lunatic by inquisition. His executors having brought in a claim against the lunatic's estate for repayment of the advances, the court made an allowance to the testator's estate for past maintenance, but limited it to advances made within six years before the testator's death. Weaver, In re, 21 Ch. D. 615.

Delay by Foreigner in enforcing against Estate here.]—The plaintiffs, who were foreigners, and had always resided beyond seas, obtained judgment in 1842, in a foreign court, against H. In 1855 they filed a bill to enforce the foreign judgment against the estate of H., who had died in 1846:—Held, that although the Statute of Limitations did not apply, yet, in the absence of evidence accounting for the delay, they were not entitled to the assistance of the court to enforce their demand. Reimers v. Druce, 23 Beav. 145; 26 L. J., Ch. 196; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 147; 5 W. R. 211.

VII. MATTERS IN AVOIDANCE OF THE STATUTES.

1. Acknowledgment.

a. What amounts to.

Nature of—Promise to Pay.]—To take a case out of the statute, the acknowledgment of a debt must contain an express or implied promise to pay. Linley v. Bonsor, 2 Scott, 399; col. 90.

The acknowledgment in writing must either amount to a distinct promise to pay, or to a distinct acknowledgment that the sum is due. Buckett v. Church, 9 Car. & P. 209.

When a debt is barred by the statute there must be, in order to take it out of the statute, one of three things: an acknowledgment of the debt, from which a promise to pay it must be implied; or an unconditional promise to pay the debt; or a conditional promise to pay the debt in writing, and evidence that that condition has been performed. River Steamer Co., In re, Mitchell, Ex parte, L. R. 6 Ch. 822; 25 L. T. 319; 19 W. R. 1130. See also Skeat v. Lindsay, 46 L. J., Ex. 249; 2 Ex. D. 314; 36 L. T. 98; 25 W. R. 322.

The legal effect of acknowledging a debt barred by the Statute of Limitations is that of a promise to pay the old debt, which promise the law implies from the acknowledgment, and for which the old debt is a consideration in law; but if the promise is limited to payment of the old debt in a certain time, or in a particular manner, or out of a specific fund, the creditor can claim nothing more than the promise gives him, for the old debt is revived no further than as a consideration for the new promise. Philips v. Philips, 3 Hare, 299; 13 L. J., Ch. 445.

An acknowledgment must, in order to take a case out of the Statute of Limitations, contain an express or implied promise to pay. Wolmershausen, In re, Wolmershausen v. Wolmershausen, 62 L. T. 541; 38 W. R. 537.

To take a debt out of the Statute of Limitations, there must be a direct admission of it; and in several cases it has been held that there must be an express promise to pay. Lacon v. Briggs, 3 Atk. 107.

"If C. has any claim on me, which I much doubt, I should wish it to be arranged":—Held, not a promise to pay, nor such an unqualified acknowledgment of liability that a promise could be implied from it. Cassidy v. Firman, 15 W. R. 432.

A debtor, on application for payment of a debt, handed over to the creditor certain book debts due to himself, with the following acknowledgment in writing: "I give the above accounts to you; so you must collect them, and you and I will be clear":—Held, that this was no bar to the statute, for, though an acknowledgment of the debt, no general promise to pay could be inferred from it, but merely a promise to pay in one particular manner. Routledge v. Ramsay, 3 N. & P. 319; 8 A. & E. 221; 1 W. W. & H. 232; 7 L. J., Q. B. 156; 2 Jur. 789.

Question for Jury whether Letter amounts to.]—A letter written by a debtor to the creditor's attorney (pleading the statute) on being served with a writ, couched in ambiguous terms, neither expressly admitting nor denying the debt, should be left to the jury to consider whether it amounts to an acknowledgment of the debt, so as to take it out of the statute. Lloyd v. Maund, 2 Term Rep. 760.

A debtor having accompanied an acknowledgment of debt with an assertion that he should have nothing to do with the claim; that he wished the claimant would make him a bankrupt, and that he would rather go to gaol than pay the claimant:—Held, that it was properly left to a jury to consider whether the acknowledgment was one from which a promise to pay could be implied. Linley or Linsell v. Bonsor, 2 Scott, 399; 2 Bing. (N.C.) 241; 1 Hodges, 305; 5 L. J., C. P. 40.

In an action on a promissory note, the defendant having pleaded the statute, the plaintiff gave in evidence, as proof of an acknowledgment within six years, the following letter from the defendant to the plaintiff: "Business calls me to Liverpool. Should I be fortunate in my adventures, you may depend on seeing me in Bristol; otherwise, I must arrange matters with you as circumstances will permit." The defendant did not shew that there were any other matters besides the promissory note to which the letter could refer:—Held, that it was properly left to the jury to decide whether this letter referred to the matter of the promissory note and was a sufficient acknowledgment to take the case out of the statute. Frost v. Bengough, 1 Bing. 267; 1 L. J. (O.S.) C. P. 96; 25 R. R. 621.

Made after Action.]—An acknowledgment of a debt bars the statute, because it amounts to a new promise; and, therefore, if made after action, it is no bar. Bateman v. Pinder, 3 Q. B. 574; 2 G. & D. 790; 11 L. J., Q. B. 281.

Verbal Acknowledgment of Written Contract.]—Where a person having entered into a written guarantee, and become liable upon it, at a period of more than six years before the commencement of the action, verbally promised, within six years, that the matter should be arranged; and afterwards, on an action being brought, pleaded action non accrevit infra sex annos:—Held (before 9 Geo. 4, c. 14, s. 1), that the Statute of Frauds having been once satisfied by the original promise being in writing, it was not necessary in order to take the case out of the Statute of Limitations, that the latter promise should also be in writing. Gibbons v. M'Casland, 1 B. & Ald. 690.

Parol Statement.]—A mere parol statement of an antecedent debt, without any new contract or consideration, made within six years before action brought, does not constitute a sufficient cause of action to prevent the operation of the statute. Jones v. Ryder, 4 M. & W. 32; 1 H. & H. 256; 7 L. J., Ex. 216.

Verbal Admission of Debt by deceased Debtor —Statement in Affidavit of Third Person.]—See Edwards v. James, col. 114.

Admission of Debt, subject to Set-off, in Statement of Cross Accounts.]—L., being the holder for value of certain promissory notes made by the defendant, and being indebted to the defendant and D., as executors in a large amount, it was agreed between them that the amount of the notes should be set off against, and satisfied by, the same amount of L.'s debt. On that occasion the defendant gave to L. a paper, in which the amounts of the several notes and the interest thereon were enumerated, at the foot of which the defendant wrote as follows: "8th June, 1842. Approved due to T. L.—W. D." L. retained possession of the notes, and afterwards indorsed them to the plaintiff for value:—Held, that the paper so signed by the defendant was not such an acknowledgment in writing as to defeat a plea of the statute, inasmuch as, coupling it with the evidence, no promise to pay the debts could be inferred from it. Cripps v. Davis, 12 M. & W. 159; 13 L. J., Ex. 217.

A., being indebted to B., supplied him with goods, and afterwards sent 10*l.* on account of his own debt, and a bill for the goods supplied. B. replied by letter: "I beg to acknowledge the receipt of 7*l.* and a bill amounting to 17*l.*, both of which sums I have placed to your credit. I have enclosed your bill; receipt it and return the same by post.—B." No receipt was returned:—Held, that the letter was sufficient to defeat the statute for the price of the goods. Evans v. Simon, 9 Ex. 282; 2 C. L. R. 416; 23 L. J., Ex. 16; 2 W. R. 40.

One of two persons who had dealings together, and were mutually indebted to one another, had supplied some bricks on the credit of the other, in 1834, but no account had been delivered or made out on either side. In 1845 they signed, in duplicate, a memorandum, thus expressed: "It is agreed that Mr. R., in his general account, shall give credit to Dr. H. for 174*l.*, being for bricks delivered in 1834":—Held, that this was not such an acknowledgment as to take the general account out of the Statute of Limitations, and that the delivery of the bricks could not be treated as a part payment so as to have that effect. Hughes v. Paramore, 7 De G. M. & G. 229; 24 L. J., Ch. 681; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 1101; 3 Eq. R. 677; 3 W. R. 388.

M. agreed with a company to build for them certain ships, to be delivered at certain times, and to be paid for by instalments. In case of delay in delivery of the ships, fortnightly sums were to be paid as liquidated damages, and the company was to be at liberty to deduct them from the unpaid purchase-money. The agreement contained a provision for referring all disputes to arbitration. The ships having been supplied, M., who had received some instalments, sent in at the end of 1861 an account, shewing the final balance which he claimed. The company insisted that he was liable to deductions for delay to an amount exceeding this balance and that nothing was due to him. A correspondence ensued, and the company proposed to refer the dispute to arbitration; and in 1863, a draft reference having been approved, they named an arbitrator on their part, but M. would not name one on his. On the 19th of February, 1867, the managing director wrote to M. saying that his account omitted all the deductions to which the company was entitled, and which would leave the balance in their favour, but that they were still willing to have all questions decided by arbitration, according to the contract, and calling on M. to concur in referring them. This letter was expressed to be "without prejudice." M. did not answer this letter, nor take any steps to proceed to arbitration. A petition to wind up the company was presented in October, 1869, and an order made. M. claimed to prove for his balance, which was resisted, on the ground of the statute:—Held, that the letter did not contain an acknowledgment taking the case out of the statute, for that it did not contain any admission of a debt, since under the contract the liquidated damages were a deduction from the price, and not merely matter of set-off; and, semble, even the admission of a debt, if coupled with a claim to a set-off of larger amount, would not take a case out of the statute, as no promise to pay could be implied from it. Nor did it contain any unconditional promise to pay. Nor did it contain any promise to pay upon a condition which had since been performed; for on its fair construction it contained at most only a promise to pay what should be found due on an arbitration under the contract, if M. named an arbitrator within a reasonable time, which he had not done. River Steamer Co., In re, Mitchell, Ex parte, L. R. 6 Ch. 822; 25 L. T. 319; 19 W. R. 1130.

To an action by the executor of an attorney, for his bill of costs, the defendant pleaded a set-off. The testator had transacted the law business of the defendant, and received his tithes and rents. The defendant, for the purpose of taking his set-off out of the statute, put in evidence an account furnished by the testator to the defendant, in obedience to a rule of court; and also an affidavit made and signed by the testator, on the occasion of his furnishing such account. The account contained items to the credit of the defendant, for tithes and rents received by the testator for the defendant, and also items to the credit of the testator, for cash paid to the defendant, and for work done; and the account claimed a balance as due to the testator. The affidavit in like manner claimed a balance as due to the testator on the same account:—Held, that the account and affidavit were not sufficient to take the set-off out of the statute. Williams v. Griffith, 3 Ex. 335; 18 L. J., Ex. 210.

—— Proposal not accepted.]—A creditor, in order to take a debt, pleaded as a set-off, out of the operation of the statute, gave in evidence a letter written by the debtor to a third person, stating an account shewing the existence of the debt, but also that a balance was due from the creditor to the debtor; and proposing to settle the matter upon payment by the creditor to the debtor of a sum named. The creditor had not acceded to the proposal :—Held, that the letter was not a sufficient acknowledgment of the debt to defeat the operation of the statute. Francis v. Hawkesley, 1 El. & El. 1052 ; 28 L. J., Q. B. 370 ; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 1391 ; 7 W. R. 509.

Balance of Accounts struck within six Years, not sufficient.]—See Clark v. Alexander, col. 112.

Item within six Years in open Account.]—If there was a mutual account of any sort between the plaintiff and defendant, for any item of which credit had been given within six years, that was evidence of an acknowledgment of there being such an open account between the parties, and of a promise to pay the balance, as to take the case out of the statute. Catling v. Skoulding, 6 Term Rep. 189.

Since the 9 Geo. 4, c. 14, s. 1, the existence of items within six years in an open account will not operate to take the previous portion of the account out of the statute. Cottam v. Partridge, 4 Scott (N.R.) 819 ; 4 Man. & G. 271 ; 11 L. J., C. P. 161.

A occupied a house and land under B., at the rent of 16*l.* a year, and A. at B.'s request, entered into his employment as a farming bailiff, and to perform other services, in the place of another person who had been employed by A., and had been paid 12*s.* a week. A. continued in B.'s service for more than twelve years ; but there was no payment of rent on the one hand or of wages on the other. In an action brought by A., to recover wages for twelve years, deducting the rent :—Held, that it was not such an open account as would take the case out of the statute since the 9 Geo. 4, c. 14 ; but there must be a part payment in cash, or what is equivalent to it, to have that effect. Williams v. Griffiths, 2 C. M. & R. 45 ; 1 Gale, 65 ; 5 Tyr. 748 ; 4 L. J., Ex. 129.

The plaintiff, having lent the defendant a sum of money, took from him the following memorandum :

"I O U 100*l.*—C. R. 30 July, 1821."

"August 17th, received 50*l.*—C. R."

The last item alone was infra sex annos :—Held, that it did not amount to an acknowledgment of the existence of the prior debt, so as to take it out of the statute. Robarts v. Robarts, 1 M. & P. 487 ; 3 Car. & P. 296 ; 6 L. J. (O.S.) C. P. 117.

Admission of open Account.]—Semble, an unqualified admission of an account being open, or one which either party is at liberty to examine, implies a promise to pay the balance found due. Banner v. Berridge, 50 L. J., Ch. 630 ; 18 Ch. D. 254 ; 44 L. T. 680 ; 29 W. R. 844.

Correspondence and expressions with regard to an open account, from which the court collected (without resort to the above implication) a promise to pay the amount due. Ib.

To prevent the right to have an account from being barred by the Statute of Limitations it is not necessary to have an acknowledgment that a debt is actually due ; but it is sufficient that there should be an acknowledgment that the account is pending and a promise to pay the balance, if it should be found to be against the accounting party. Prance v. Sympson, 1 Kay, 678 ; 18 Jur. 929.

Asking for Account.]—In an action for work done, the plaintiff, in answer to a plea of the statute, put in the two following letters, written within six years of the commencement of the action by the defendant's testator, the person for whom the work was done, to the plaintiff : "I shall be obliged to you to send in your account, made up to Christmas last. I shall have much work to be done this spring, but cannot give further orders till this be done." "You have not answered my note. I again beg of you to send in your account, as I particularly require it in the course of this week" :—Held, that they amounted to a promise to pay the balance due on the account, and took the case out of the statute. Quincey v. Sharpe, 45 L. J., Ex. 347 ; 1 Ex. D. 72 ; 34 L. T. 495 ; 24 W. R. 373.

A debtor, whose debt to his creditor was barred by the Statute of Limitations, wrote to the creditor within six years before action the following letter : "I return to Shepperton about Easter. If you send me there the particulars of your account with vouchers, I shall have it examined and cheque sent to you for the amount due ; but you must be under some great mistake in supposing that the amount due to you is anything like the sum you now claim" :—Held, that the debt was revived, as the request to be furnished with an account with vouchers at a particular time and place did not negative the implied promise to pay arising from the admission of a balance due. Skeat v. Lindsay, 46 L. J., Ex. 249 ; 2 Ex. D. 314 ; 36 L. T. 98 ; 25 W. R. 322.

In 1847, the plaintiffs, who were solicitors, lent to the defendant 100*l.* on a mortgage, 40*l.* on a promissory note, and they had also a claim against him for costs. In 1857 the defendant wrote to the plaintiffs as follows : "September 26. I wish to inform you that I received yours this morning. I am going to leave my situation on the 1st November, and when the policy is paid, on the 29th October, I hope that you will have the whole of your account ready for me, as I hope to be with you on that day." "October 25. Mr. V., when here on Saturday, stated that the amount due against me was about 280*l.* ; of course this includes the 100*l.*, and interest, that I had some years since, and the 40*l.* promissory note, that I jointly signed with the late Mr. B ; of course, you are aware that you have paid 25*l.* to my credit that Mr. Y. paid over when he could not complete the purchase of the property in the High-street" :—Held, a sufficient acknowledgment. Godwin v. Culley, 4 H. & N. 373.

The following passages in a letter written by a debtor to his creditor : "Before closing this, I have to request you will be pleased to send me in any bill or what demands you have to make on me, and if just, I shall not give you the trouble of going to law. If you refer to your books you will find the last payment I made was in May, 1839. I shall leave town to-morrow, but shall be back in a few days for a month, and if you will bring my bill in here to me, by eleven, I shall be at your service"—are not sufficient to take the debt out of the statute. Spong v. Wright, 9 M. & W. 629 ; 12 L. J., Ex. 144.

A. having employed B. as his solicitor and agent for some years, on the 23rd April, 1813, writes him a letter in these words : "I have for a length of time been in expectation of receiving the account of whatever I may stand indebted to you ; let me again request you will oblige me with it, that everything may be settled." A. died in August, 1814, having made his will, by which he devised his real and personal estates in trust for sale, and directed his trustees to stand possessed of the moneys to arise by the sale thereof, after paying his debts, and the charges and expenses attending his will upon the trusts therein mentioned. B. shortly after A.'s death delivered his bill, the last item of which was in August, 1808, and on the 18th November, 1820, he files his bill on behalf of himself and the other creditors of the testator:—Held, that the debt was taken out of the Statute of Limitations by the testator's letter of the 23rd April, and was continued to be kept out of the statute by the devise in the testator's will, and decreed for the plaintiff accordingly, but in consequence of his laches, and some misconduct, without costs. Rendell v. Carpenter, 2 Y. & J. 484; 31 R. R. 621.

A debtor wrote to her creditor as follows: "As I have been very unwell during the past winter, my state of health renders me anxious to know the exact relation I hold towards you. I must, therefore, once more request you to furnish me with an account of my debt to you. On looking over my papers, with a view of myself ascertaining the amount, I have found some inaccuracies of calculation in the dockets which you from time to time gave me; and in general, sums lent by you have got so mixed up with the receipts of yours from me that I have got rather confused by them." She then proceeded to suggest a plan by which to ascertain "clearly the position we hold to each other":—Held, a sufficient acknowledgment to prevent the debt being barred by the statute. Burrows v. Baker, Ir. R. 3 Eq. 596.

In an action commenced in 1885 for the administration of C. B.'s estate, on inquiries for creditors, A. J. P. brought in a claim to be paid a sum of 441*l.* 16*s.* 7*d.*, for commission and moneys lent before March, 1878. C. B. was sent to the Cape of Good Hope in March, 1878, and died there in 1884. He, while on board ship, wrote a letter in which he asked A. J. P. to make out his account, and send it to him, and added "I will send it to you as soon as possible." The account was sent in March, 1878, and C. B. afterwards wrote letters to A. J. P. in which he said, "I will send you a cheque as soon as I can," and "I will send some coin home as soon as ever I can":—Held, that there had not been an acknowledgment sufficient to enable the court to infer an absolute promise to pay. Bethell, In re, Bethell v. Bethell, 56 L. J., Ch. 334; 34 Ch. D. 561; 56 L. T. 92; 35 W. R. 330.

M. had acted for many years as solicitor for C.; but becoming dissatisfied with M., C. signed an authority to other solicitors to obtain and receive from M. all deeds in his possession belonging to C. The new solicitors accordingly wrote to M. inclosing a copy of the authority and requesting him to deliver particulars of his charges. Later on they wrote: "Our client only requires you to deliver particulars of any unsettled bill of costs you may have against him":—Held, that there was a sufficient acknowledgment to take the case out of the statute. Curwen v. Milburn, 42 Ch. D. 424; 62 L. T. 278; 38 W. R. 49.

Offer to account sufficient.]—Offer to account will take case out of the statute. Pomfret (Earl) v. Windsor (Lord), 2 Ves. 485.

By a memorandum, dated the 28th April, 1874, it was witnessed that the defendant deposited with the plaintiff certain title deeds by way of equitable mortgage for 6,000*l.* and interest. The defendant also agreed to pay to the plaintiff on demand 6,000*l.* and interest, and to execute a proper mortgage with all the usual powers and authorities usually given to a mortgagee. This memorandum was not under seal. No interest was paid under this agreement, and nothing was done until about eleven years after the date of it, when this action was brought for the specific performance of the agreement. At the trial it was declared that the plaintiff was entitled to a lien on the property comprised in the deeds for the money advanced, and to have the agreement specifically performed, but that was without prejudice to the defendant's right to insist on the Statute of Limitations as a defence against any principal sum or interest. The question was, whether the plaintiff was entitled to have in the mortgage a covenant for principal and interest. The statute was relied on as a bar to any such right. A correspondence had in 1885 passed between the parties, in which the plaintiff had demanded an account of how matters stood between them. The defendant answered that he was unable to make out the account, but that he should be glad to leave the whole thing entirely in the plaintiff's hands, and adopt whatever he suggested. He also wrote: "There is only one thing which gives me uneasiness, which is, that, should I survive you, your executors might sell the land at a forced sale for little or nothing, and make a claim against me, which I have no funds to meet":—Held, that the defendant's letters amounted to an admission of his liability to account, and also of his present liability to the plaintiff; that there was nothing in those letters to prevent the admission from carrying with it a promise to pay; and that the case was taken out of the Statute of Limitations, and the plaintiff was entitled to have a covenant for the payment of principal and interest. Firth v. Slingsby, 58 L. T. 481.

Tenant for Life rendering Account to Remainderman.]—If tenant for life has rendered account to remainderman of timber cut by him during more than six years before bill is filed against him for account of such timber, and value thereof, statute cannot be pleaded to bill. Hony v. Hony, 1 Sim. & S. 568; 24 R. R. 235.

Statement of Debt in Account between Debtor and Third Persons.]—An account stated between a debtor, being part owner and ship's husband, and his co-owners, in which the items of the creditor's account for work done and money advanced are included, is not such an acknowledgment as will take the case out of the operation of the statute. Nash v. Hill, 1 F. & F. 198.

Request for Delay.]—A creditor having applied for payment of a debt, the debtor wrote in answer, "I shall repeat my assurance to you of the certainty of your being repaid your generous loan. Let matters remain as they are a short time, and all will be right. The works I have been appointed to, but they are not yet worked with the full complement of labour; this term will decide the matter":—Held, a sufficient acknowledgment. Collis v. Stack, 1 H. & N. 605; 26 L. J., Ex. 138.

The question in these cases is, whether the statement as to the time of payment is merely an excuse, or the condition on which payment is to be made. Ib.

The following letter is an acknowledgment from which a promise to pay may be implied so as to rebut the statute: "In reply to your statement of account received, I am ashamed the account has stood so long. I must beg to trespass on your kindness a short time longer till a turn in trade takes place, as for some time things have been very flat. Yours, J. J." Cornforth v. Smithard, 5 H. & N. 13; 29 L. J., Ex. 228; 8 W. R. 8.

An agent wrote to his principal: "I am now quite ready to go into the account, but it is necessary to have an appointment, to dispose of it satisfactorily. I understood you were to be here on the 29th of November, otherwise I should before this have gone over to London. I will, on hearing from you, go over and vouch the account"; and some time afterwards he again wrote: "I am going shortly to London, and will take with me the vouchers and papers necessary to close what remains open in the account":—Held, that the letters per se did not afford an answer to the statute to a claim for a balance due on the account. Crawford v. Crawford, Ir. R. 2 Eq. 166; 16 W. R. 414.

"As soon as my situation will allow, Mr. F.'s claim, with that of others, shall receive that attention which, as an honourable man, I consider them to deserve, and it has been and is my intention to pay them. But I must be allowed time to arrange my affairs; and if I am proceeded against, any exertion of mine will be rendered abortive":—Held, not a sufficient acknowledgment. Fearn v. Lewis, 6 Bing. 349; 4 M. & P. 1; 8 L. J. (o.s.) C. P. 95; 31 R. R. 434.

—— Offer to Pay Interest.]—A wife had lent the defendant 20*l.* (her own money) during her husband's lifetime, for which the defendant, shortly after the husband's death, viz., on the 16th of July, 1867, gave her an I O U. On the 12th of October, 1870, the defendant wrote to her agent: "Yours of the 10th instant received respecting Mrs. W.'s claim upon me. It is totally out of my power at the present time to liquidate the whole or even part of the same. I am in the anticipation of a better position, and, should I be successful, Mrs. W.'s claim shall have my first consideration. Meanwhile, I shall be pleased to pay a reasonable interest on the amount. Show this letter to Mrs. W., and tell her the claim has not been forgotten by me, and shall be liquidated at the earliest opportunity possible." And on the 6th of March, 1871, he again wrote: "At present it is utterly out of my power to do anything. I am willing to endeavour to pay it off by easy instalments; or I am willing to pay you any reasonable interest to let the matter remain for the present." In an action for money lent, with a count upon a promise to pay in consideration of the plaintiff's forbearance to sue upon the I O U:—Held, that these letters amounted to a sufficient promise, founded upon a good consideration, to take the case out of the Statute of Limitations. Wilby v. Elgee, 44 L. J., C. P. 254; L. R. 10 C. P. 497; 32 L. T. 310.

Suggesting Mode of Payment.]—A letter as follows: "I beg to say I cannot comply with your request. The best way for you would be to send me the bill you hold, and draw another for the balance of your money, 30*l.* 9*s.* 9*d.*," is a sufficient acknowledgment that the balance was due. Dabbs v. Humphries, 10 Bing. 446; 4 M. & Scott, 285; 3 L. J., C. P. 139.

Promise to remit Sum.]—A., having become bankrupt in August, 1819, wrote, in November, 1826, a letter, in which he alluded to a debt of 98*l.* 15*s.*, due from him to B., and stated as follows: "By the end of next month I shall have my bankers' account here, and I shall remit the sum due to you in a draft on them":—Held, that the letter contained a sufficient promise in answer to a plea of the statute. Lang v. Mackenzie, 4 Car. & P. 463.

A letter from a debtor to his creditor contained the following expressions: "I was in hopes of being able to send you some coin by small instalments, but as I have been ordered home, the matter must be in abeyance a little longer, which won't ruin you. I know you must live in hopes as I do, for a good time is rather long coming. . . . I can assure you such behaviour would not induce me to put myself out to attempt to square off your account. I think you ought to know me by this time. When I have had the means you have pot luck":—Held, not a sufficient acknowledgment of a debt to take the case out of the Statute of Limitations. Jupp v. Powell, 1 Cab. & E. 349. Affirmed in C. A.

J. H. was the trustee of a settlement by which the T. B. estate was settled on the wife of the defendant for life, to her separate use without power of anticipation. J. H. lent money to the defendant, and for some time, with the wife's consent, the rents of the T. B. estate were applied towards payment of the debt, the wife giving receipts for them. In October, 1879, the defendant wrote to J. H.: "I thank you for your very kind intention to give up the rent of T. B. next Christmas, but I am happy to say at that time both principal and interest will have been paid in full":—Held, that this was not an acknowledgment which would take the debt out of the Statute of Limitations. Green v. Humphreys, 53 L. J., Ch. 625; 26 Ch. D. 474; 51 L. T. 42—C. A.

A debtor wrote in reply to a demand by his creditor for payment: "I don't see how it is possible for me to be indifferent on the matter of this debt. If I were able in any way to reduce it further, you may be quite sure I should do so":—Held, a sufficient acknowledgment to take the debt out of the Statute of Limitations. Buskin, In re, Farlow, Ex parte, 15 R. 117.

"I shall go to my attorney's and pay the debt and settle it":—Held, a sufficient acknowledgment. Triggs v. Newnham, 1 Car. & P. 631.

Wish to Pay.]—In a letter written to the creditor within six years, the debtor says: "I can never be happy until I have not only paid you everything, but all to whom I owe money"; and "your account is quite correct; and, oh! that I were now going to inclose you the amount of it":—Held, that this was evidence to go to the jury of an acknowledgment. Dodson v. Mackey, 4 N. & M. 327; 8 A. & E. 225, n.

Held, that such promise, accompanied by this expression: "It is impossible to state to you what will be done in my affairs at present; it is difficult to know what will be best, but immediately it is settled you shall be informed," is an absolute unconditional promise, and not a qualified or a conditional promise. Ib.

T. owed P. & Co. before their bankruptcy 275*l.* as surviving partner of T., Y. & Y., and 6,565*l.* due independently of such partnership. As part security for the latter debt, he had given P. & Co. a mortgage for 5,000*l.* The official assignee of

P. & Co. wrote to T.: "By the books of these bankrupts, there is a balance of 275*l.* standing against you," and requested immediate payment. T. replied: "You have no occasion to blame yourself respecting any claim on me from the estate of P. & Co. The matter has been arranged with the assignees here: and at the last meeting it was arranged that I should pay 450*l.* on the 20th of May, 450*l.* on the 20th of August, 450*l.* on the 20th of November, and 450*l.* on the 20th of February next; after which I am in hopes that I shall be able to transfer the 5,000*l.* mortgage, to enable me to clear off the whole that may be standing against me." It was admitted that the instalments of 450*l.* were to be paid in respect of the debt of 6,565*l.*; that the mortgage mentioned in the letter was the mortgage for 5,000*l.* given as part security for that debt; that the 275*l.* mentioned by the official assignee was the debt due to P. & Co. from T., as surviving partner of T., Y. and Y., and that T. had paid off the 6,565*l.*:—Held, that the judge was right in directing the jury that the two letters did not amount to a sufficient acknowledgment or promise to take the debt of 275*l.* out of the statute, the letters not containing any absolute acknowledgment of a debt, or unqualified promise to pay, but only expressing a hope that, in the transfer of the mortgage, T. might be able to clear off the whole that might be standing against him. Smith v. Thorne, 18 Q. B. 134; 21 L. J., Q. B. 199; 16 Jur. 332—Ex. Ch.

In answer to an application for payment of a debt, the debtor wrote: "I hope to be at H. soon, when I trust everything will be arranged with W. (the creditor) agreeably to her wishes":—Held, a sufficient promise. Edmonds v. Goater, 15 Beav. 415; 21 L. J., Ch. 290.

The following letter by a debtor to a clerk of the creditor, in answer to one applying for payment of a debt, is insufficient to defeat the statute: "I will not fail to meet Mr. H. (the creditor) on fair terms, and have now a hope that, before perhaps a week from this date, I shall have it in my power to pay him at all events a portion of the debt, when we shall settle about the liquidation of the balance." Hart v. Prendergast, 14 M. & W. 741; 15 L. J., Ex. 223.

The following letter from a debtor to the creditor's attorney is a sufficient acknowledgment: "Since the receipt of your letter, and indeed for some time previously, I have been in almost daily expectation of being enabled to give a satisfactory reply to your application respecting the demand of Messrs. M. against me. I propose being in Oxford to-morrow, when I will call upon you on the matter." Morrell v. Frith, 3 M. & W. 402; 8 Car. & P. 246; 1 H. & H. 100; 7 L. J., Ex. 172; 2 Jur. 619.

A letter containing the following passage: "I wish I could comply with your request, for I am very wretched, on account of your account not being paid; there is a prospect of an abundant harvest, which must turn into a goodly sum, and very considerably reduce your account; at all events, if it does not, the concern must be broken up to meet it at last," is a sufficient acknowledgment. Bird v. Gammon, 5 Scott, 213; 3 Bing. (N.C.) 883; 3 Hodges, 224; 6 L. J., C. P. 258.

A letter written by a debtor to his creditor before the debt was barred, in the following terms: "It is quite true that I have not sent any money for years, but really I have none of my own. We just manage to exist on my wife's, at least, on what is left of her's. We have hard work to get on, but I will try to pay you a little at a time, if you will let me. I am sure that I am anxious to get out of your debt. I will endeavour to send you a little next week"—is a sufficient acknowledgment. Lee v. Wilmot, 4 H. & C. 469; 35 L. J., Ex. 175; L. R. 1 Ex. 364; 12 Jur. (N.S.) 762; 14 L. T. 627; 14 W. R. 993.

Admission of Debt coupled with Refusal to Pay.]—On a debtor being arrested for a debt more than six years old, he said, "I know that I owe the money, but the bill I gave is on a three-penny receipt stamp, and I will never pay it":—Held, not such an acknowledgment as would revive the debt. A'Court v. Cross, 3 Bing. 329; 11 Moore, 198; 4 L. J. (O.S.) C. P. 79.

In an action against an acceptor of a bill of exchange, evidence that he acknowledged his acceptance, and that he had been liable, but said that he was not liable then, because it was out of date, and that he could not pay it, and it was not in his power to pay it, was sufficient to take the case out of the statute. Leaper v. Tatton, 16 East, 420.

"It is ten years ago, and I cannot pay my new debts, much less my old ones":—Held, not a sufficient acknowledgment. Knott v. Farren, 4 D. & R. 179; 2 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 122.

Where, after the lapse of six years, a debtor being asked for the payment of a debt said: "I owed the money, but I have a receipt in full of all demands; I shall search for it, and let you know in the event of my not being able to find it":—Held, that this was not sufficient to take the case out of the statute. Brydges v. Plumptree, 9 D. & R. 746. S. P., Berk v. Guy, 4 Esp. 184.

A debtor admitted a debt, but claimed to be discharged by a written instrument, which upon production did not amount to a legal discharge:—Held, that the acknowledgment was sufficient. Partington v. Butcher, 6 Esp. 66.

Plea of the Statute of Limitations to a bill of discovery overruled, upon letters assigning reasons for declining to pay, and recommending the plaintiff to bring an action, as amounting to an acknowledgment of the debt sufficient to take it out of the statute, upon the authorities, though against principle. Baillie v. Sibbald, 15 Ves. 185.

See Linley v. Bonsor, 2 Scott, 399; supra, col. 90; and Brigstock v. Smith, infra.

Denial that Debt as large as alleged.]—The following letter does not raise the implication of a promise to pay, and is not sufficient to take the case out of the statute: "In reply to your application of the 19th inst. for the payment of 89*l.* 10*s.* 11½*d.* to Mr. D. Brigstock, I beg to say that it is a claim I am by no means prepared to admit to the full extent, and to make the following observation respecting it. Of that sum, 68*l.* 3*s.* 8*d.* is made up of items for business and materials, stated to have been done and furnished between 1817 and 1821, a period during which I was concerned in two successive partnerships, to one or other of whom the accounts Mr. B. was entitled to recover ought to have been charged. Having at different times wound up both those concerns and quitted Carmarthen as long back as 1824, I was surprised to receive Mr. B.'s bill in 1829, five years afterwards; and it is certainly not a little strange that he should now send in a charge of so old a date, when, if any account was due, it could hardly be expected that the means would remain of ascertaining its correctness. I cannot, therefore, allow that I am liable to pay any part of the account previous to 1825; but as I anticipate being in Carmarthen shortly, I will then communicate with Mr. B. personally respecting it. The remainder of the account is for repairs ordered by an agent under the late firm of Robert Smith & Co., to be done at the works in Carmarthen, in 1827, together with a few items for glazing in 1825, making together 20*l.* 17*s.* 5*d.*, which, I believe, to be correctly charged, and for which I enclose a cheque, and will thank you to acknowledge the receipt of it." Brigstock v. Smith, 1 C. & M. 483; 3 Tyr. 445; 2 L. J., Ex. 187.

The defendant wrote to the plaintiff's attorney as follows: "I have received yours respecting the plaintiff's demand; it is not a just one. I am ready to settle the account whenever the plaintiff thinks proper to meet on the business; I am not in his debt 90*l.*, nor anything like that sum; shall be happy to settle the difference by his meeting me":—Held, that the judge was justified in directing the jury, that after this letter the statute was out of the question. Colledge v. Horn, 10 Moore, 431; 3 Bing. 119; 3 L. J. (O.S.) C. P. 184; 28 R. R. 606. See Skeet v. Lindsay, col. 94.

Offer of Property in Lieu of Payment.]—The following letter, addressed by the defendant to the plaintiffs, within six years, respecting a debt otherwise barred by the statute, is not a sufficient acknowledgment: "I am surprised at receiving a letter from H. (the plaintiffs' attorney) this morning, for the recovery of your debt. I must candidly tell you once for all I never shall be able to pay you in cash, but you may have any of the goods we have at the Pantechnicon, by paying the expenses incurred thereon, without which they cannot be taken out, as before agreed when Mr. F. (one of the plaintiffs) was in town." Cawley v. Furnell, 12 C. B. 291; 20 L. J., C. P. 197; 15 Jur. 908.

Promise to see an Account Paid.]—In an answer to a plea of the Statute of Limitations in an action upon a promissory note, a letter from the defendant written within six years of the commencement of the action was put in evidence by the plaintiff: "The old account between us, which has been standing over so long, has not escaped our memory, and as soon as we can get our affairs arranged, we will see you are paid; perhaps in the meantime you will let your clerk send me an account of how it stands":—Held, that this letter was a sufficient acknowledgment to bar the statute. Chasemore v. Turner, 45 L. J., Q. B. 66; L. R. 10 Q. B. 500; 33 L. T. 323; 24 W. R. 70—Ex. Ch.

Offer to Pay.]—In July, 1882, K. gave a promissory note payable on demand for 3,000*l.* to B., the money being intended to buy a seat for K. on the New York Stock Exchange. In April, 1884, B. died, having appointed his son residuary legatee. In November, 1885, K. wrote to B.'s son: "The great kindness of your father on every occasion, and more especially the money that he loaned me to purchase my seat on the New York Stock Exchange, place me now in your debt. I must now leave it entirely to your generosity whether you will have me liquidate the loan I have mentioned on the sale of my seat in New York." In December, 1888, the present action was brought by B.'s son:—Held, that there was a sufficient acknowledgment of the debt to take the case out of the statute. Buccleuch (Duke) v. Eden, 61 L. T. 360.

Promise to Pay Interest on Loan.]—In an action to recover 170*l.* with interest, the plaintiff proved the loan of between 150*l.* and 180*l.*, and offered in evidence this document: "170*l.*, 16th March, 1841. Received from B. and T. 170*l.*, for which I promise to pay her at the rate of 5*l.* per cent. from the above date":—Held, a sufficient acknowledgment. Taylor v. Steele, 16 M. & W. 665; 16 L. J., Ex. 177; 11 Jur. 806.

Asking Explanation of Bill.]—In an action for work, labour and materials, it appeared that the work had been done more than six years before, but within the six years the debtor, in answer to a bill sent in to him by the creditor, wrote the following letter: "I have received your bill. It does not, I think, specify sufficiently to which cottages the work is done. For instance you say—" [The letter here repeated the first six items of the bill.] "I do not know where all this is done. I shall feel obliged if you will more particularly explain, and take your agreement to Mrs. H. It is my wish to settle your account immediately, but being at a distance, I wish everything very explicit and correct. I have asked Mrs. H. to mark the agreements, and send them to me, and I will return them by the first post, with instructions to pay if correct":—Held, a sufficient acknowledgment, within the 9 Geo. 4, c. 14, to take the case out of the 21 Jac. 1, c. 16. Sidwell v. Mason, 2 H. & N. 303; 26 L. J., Ex. 407; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 649; 5 W. R. 72.

Giving Credit for Debt in Bill.]—The defendant having a claim against the plaintiff, the latter, at the foot of his bill, acknowledged the debt as follows: "By Mr. Lacy's bill," leaving a blank for the amount. He then wrote below: "Agreeably to your request above, I send you my bill, which I will thank you to peruse, and, if correct, favour me with a bill for the balance":—Held, a sufficient acknowledgment of the defendant's claim. Waller v. Lacy, 1 Scott (N.R.) 186; 1 Man. & G. 54; 8 D. P. C. 563; 9 L. J., C. P. 217; 4 Jur. 435. See Waugh v. Cope, 6 M. & W. 824; 10 L. J., Ex. 145.

Promise to Pay, if Debt still Owing.]—A letter in these terms: "I have received a letter from Messrs. P. & L., solicitors, requesting me to pay you an account of 40*l.* 9*s.* 6*d.* I have no wish to have anything to do with lawyers, much less do I wish to deny a just debt. I cannot, however, get rid of the notion that my account with you was settled when I left the army. But as you declare it was not settled, I am willing to pay you 10*l.* per annum until it is liquidated. Should this proposal meet with your approbation, we can make arrangements accordingly," is not a sufficient acknowledgment to take the case out of the statute. Buckmaster v. Russell, 10 C. B. (N.S.) 745; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 155; 4 L. T. 552; 9 W. R. 749.

"I will see Davis, or write him; I have no doubt he has paid it; if, by chance, he has not paid it, it is very fit it should be," in a letter, is not a sufficient acknowledgment of the debt.

Poynder v. Bluck, 5 D. P. C. 570; W. W. & D. 191.

A letter, the fair effect of which is, that the writer is not certain whether the debt is owing, and will have the matter examined into, is not a sufficient acknowledgment, notwithstanding that it contains expressions of regret that the debt should have been left so long unpaid. Collinson v. Margesson, 27 L. J., Ex. 305.

Referring Creditor to Trustee for Payment of Debts.]—Where a debtor referred a creditor, who applied to him for payment of a statute-barred debt, to a trustee to whom his estate had been assigned for payment of his debts:—Held, a sufficient acknowledgment. Baillie v. Lord Inchiquin, 1 Esp. 435.

Insertion of Debt in Debtor's Statement of Affairs.]—A debtor in making out a statement of his affairs for a creditor, inserted his name for 510*l.*, the amount of two promissory notes:—Held, a sufficient acknowledgment. Holmes v. Mackrell, 3 C. B. (N.S.) 789.

In Bankrupt's Examination.]—An entry in a bankrupt's examination, of a certain sum being due to A., is evidence of an account stated between them, and is a sufficient acknowledgment to take the case out of the statute. Eicke v. Noakes, 1 M. & Rob. 359.

In Bankrupt's Schedule.]—One of three joint makers of a note became insolvent, and inserted the note and the holder's name in his schedule, and a dividend was afterwards paid to the holder by order of the Insolvent Debtors Court in respect of the note:—Held, that such was not sufficient to take the case out of the statute, either as against the other makers of the note or as against the insolvent himself. Davis v. Edwards, 7 Ex. 22; 21 L. J., Ex. 4; 15 Jur. 1014.

A creditor proved that, within six years of action brought, the debtor presented a petition for arrangement with his creditors, under 7 & 8 Vict. c. 70, and had inserted the debt upon which the action was brought in the account of his debts; and his proposal was, that, "for the future payment or compromise of such debts and engagements," he proposed to assign all his estate and effects to trustees:—Held, not to be sufficient to take the case out of the statute, as not shewing that from which the court could infer an unconditional promise, or a promise upon a condition fulfilled. Everett v. Robertson, 1 El. & El. 16; 28 L. J., Q. B. 23; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 1083; 7 W. R. 9.

Neither an entry by a debtor in his balance-sheet, nor a statement made by him upon an examination in his bankruptcy, will constitute an acknowledgment of the debt within the statute. Courtnay v. Williams, 3 Hare, 539; 13 L. J., Ch. 461.

The insertion of a debt in the schedule to a deed of inspectorship executed for the purpose of administering the estate of a debtor, is not, although the schedule is verified by the affidavit of the debtor, a sufficient acknowledgment to take the debt out of the operation of the statute, so as to entitle the creditor to prove for the debt under a subsequent administration of the debtor's estate in bankruptcy. Topping, Ex parte, Levy, In re, 4 De G. J. & S. 551; 34 L. J., Bk. 44; 12 L. T. 787; 13 W. R. 1025.

And the payment by the inspectors of a dividend upon the debt is not a sufficient part payment for that purpose. Ib.

Admissions by Bankrupt and by Accountant employed by Assignees insufficient as against Assignees.]—See Pott v. Clegg, col. 118.

Entry in Books of Town Commissioners.]—Commissioners under a town improvement act, being in debt, appointed a finance committee, who made a report, to which was appended a schedule of liabilities, including arrears of salary due to the clerk of the commissioners more than six years. The commissioners made an entry in their minute-book that they accepted the report:—Held, no sufficient acknowledgment of the debt. Bush v. Martin, 2 H. & C. 311; 33 L. J., Ex. 17; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 347; 8 L. T. 501; 11 W. R. 1078.

Surety consenting to Creditor's Rights.]—In 1853 H., as principal, and the defendant as surety, gave to the plaintiff their joint and several note for payment of 200*l.* on demand. In 1861 H. assigned all his property for the benefit of his creditors, and the defendant signed and gave to the plaintiff the following letter: "I hereby consent to your receiving the dividend under H.'s assignment, and agree that your so doing shall not prejudice your claim upon me for the same debt." The plaintiff accordingly received the dividend, and in 1862 sued the defendant for the balance of the note:—Held, that the letter was not an acknowledgment of the debt, so as to take the case out of the statute. Cockrill v. Sparke, 1 H. & C. 699; 32 L. J., Ex. 118; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 307; 7 L. T. 752; 11 W. R. 428.

Claims referred by Surety to Principal.]—In 1859 B. M., with his two brothers, made a joint and several promissory note to secure a sum of money advanced by the plaintiff to one of the brothers. No acknowledgment of liability was made by him until September, 1870, when the brother to whom the money was advanced having failed to pay the amount, the lender applied for payment to B. M., who, in reply, wrote to the lender as follows: "I suppose I and my brother Thomas signed a note of hand to serve my brother Robert, therefore we trust you will use such means that you know will make him pay (he having plenty by him) before you ask us, you being able to do that which we should not like to take in law with a brother. Please don't let him know you have applied for the money, and oblige, yours respectfully, B. Mitchell. You had better send him a writ at once":—Held, that this was a sufficient acknowledgment or promise to prevent the operation of the statute. Fisk v. Mitchell, 24 L. T. 272; 19 W. R. 798.

In an action against one of the makers of a note, it appeared that he had signed the note as surety for the other maker, and after the expiration of six years, having been applied to by letter for the amount, wrote to request that application might be made to the executrix of the other maker, adding, "and what she may be short, I will assist to make up." Application was accordingly made to the executrix, who did not pay the amount:—Held, that this acknowledgment was sufficient to take the case out of the statute as against him, and that it was not necessary to take legal proceedings against the executrix before proceeding against the surety. Humphreys v. Jones, 14 M. & W. 1; 14 L. J., Ex. 254; 9 Jur. 333.

Renewal of Notes.]—The renewal of notes cannot be considered as a promise to pay the original notes. Foster v. Dawber, 6 Ex. 839; 20 L. J., Ex. 385.

Indorsement on a Note.]—In 1846 L. gave to B. a promissory note for 500*l.* payable "to B., or S., his wife," and in 1866, B. being dead, L. indorsed on the note his name and the year thus, "W. H. L., 1866," and on production of the note the date 1846 appeared to have been altered to 1866:—Held, that under the circumstances this indorsement was a sufficient acknowledgment to take the debt out of the statute. Bowdin v. Greenwood, 41 L. J., Ch. 73; L. R. 13 Eq. 281; 25 L. T. 782; 20 W. R. 166.

Acknowledgment of a Note taken to be Acknowledgment of the Note sued on in the Absence of Proof of any other Note.]—See Spickernell v. Hotham, col. 115.

Giving Bill of Exchange for Debt.]—A bill of exchange was given by a bankrupt to a creditor in consideration of an advance of money made more than six years before the bill was given; five years after the proof was made, and dividends had been received upon it, the commissioners ordered the proof to be expunged, on the ground that the bill was not such an acknowledgment in writing of the debt as took the case out of the Statute of Limitations:—Held, that the bill was sufficient for that purpose, and, consequently, that the proof must be restored. Wilson, Ex parte, Bentley, In re, 1 Mont. D. & D. 586.

Letter containing Note insufficiently Stamped.]—A debtor sent to one of the persons beneficially interested, under the will of his creditor, a note insufficiently stamped for the amount of the debt, with a letter referring to the note as being for the money due:—Held, that the letter was not of itself a sufficient promise or acknowledgment to exclude the operation of the statute, and that the note being unstamped could not be received in evidence to shew what the promise was, that being a direct and not a collateral purpose. Parmiter v. Parmiter, 3 De G. F. & J. 461; 30 L. J., Ch. 508; 3 L. T. 799.

Letter written "without prejudice."]—A letter from a debtor which is stated to be "without prejudice," can never be relied upon to take the case out of the Statute of Limitations, for such a letter does not amount to a new contract, but is merely an offer which, if not simply accepted by the creditor, is intended to have no effect at all. River Steamer Co., In re, Mitchell, Ex parte, L. R. 6 Ch. 822; 25 L. T. 319; 19 W. R. 1130. See Cory v. Bretton, col. 115.

Incidental Reference.]—To an action by the executor of an attorney for his bill of costs, the defendant pleaded the statute. The testator had transacted the law business of the defendant, and received his tithes and rents. A letter, written to the testator by the steward of the defendant by his desire, stated that the defendant wished to have the testator's account, for the purpose of settling it. Another letter, written in Welsh, stated that the defendant intended to borrow money on his estates, and that the writer would come to the testator's house for the deeds, and if any account required looking over, the writer and testator might do that at the same time. With reference to the last-mentioned letter, the testator wrote to the defendant as follows: "I have received a (Welsh) letter from your agent, and as far as I am able to understand it, he requests to have the abstract of title, and my bill against you, and account, as you are about to receive a sum of money to pay off the mortgages on your estates. I should be glad to hear from you, as I am no Welsh scholar myself, precisely what is wanted." In answer, the defendant wrote: "Being one of those people who think short accounts make long friends, I directed my agent, last year, to apply to you for your bill, in order that we might settle the tithe accounts. What he applied to you in Welsh the other day, was for my title-deeds":—Held, that the letters were not sufficient to take the plaintiff's claim out of the statute. Williams v. Griffith, 3 Ex. 335; 18 L. J., Ex. 210.

Admission on receiving inoperative Discharge.]—An admission of a debt made to a person who at the same time signed a paper, purporting to be a discharge of the debt, is not a sufficient acknowledgment of the debt to prevent the operation of the statute, though the discharge was inoperative in itself, and was given upon a consideration which the debtor failed to observe. Goate v. Goate, 1 H. & N. 29.

Amount Unspecified.]—A promise in writing, signed by the party chargeable thereby, to pay his proportion of a joint debt more than six years old, is a sufficient compliance with the provisions of the 9 Geo. 4, c. 14, s. 1, to take the case out of the statute, though no amount is specified in the promise; and a creditor suing on such promise is not confined to nominal damages, but may recover the whole of such proportion, upon proving the amount by extrinsic evidence. Lechmere v. Fletcher, 1 C. & M. 623; 3 Tyr. 450; 2 L. J. Ex. 219.

If a debtor by a letter admits a balance to be due, without stating the amount, this will take the case out of the statute. Dickinson v. Hatfield, 5 Car. & P. 46; 1 M. & Rob. 141.

But, if the whole evidence is merely proof of the writing, and no proof of the original cause of action, the creditor can only recover nominal damages. Ib.

A letter was written by the debtor to his creditor as follows: "I do not desire that you or any one of my creditors should lose what I owe them; on the contrary, it is very much my wish not only to pay my debts, but interest upon them if I can. As you have mentioned the Limitation Act, I answer at once that I am ready to put it out of my power to take advantage of that act, and will immediately give you my note for whatever sum is due to you. To pay you now or within the year I am utterly unable; I really have not, as you imagine, received 600*l.* It is of course indispensable that the exact sum I owe you should be fixed, whether you accept my note or not. I have clearly shewn you, in a former letter, that your account is not in accordance with the estimate upon which you agreed. If you really cannot produce the original estimate, or the rough draft of it, it certainly is reasonable that some (and considerable) deduction should be made from your charges. You will perhaps say what deduction you are prepared to make, and I shall be glad if it be such as will allow me, with justice to my other creditors, to give you my note for the amount, or, if it be possible, to borrow it from a friend, which I have a hope of doing, and so wipe the account entirely from your books. I am fully sensible of and thankful for the forbearance you have shewn, but I cannot move a step in the way to give you satisfaction, and do justice to my other creditors, until the sum actually due to you be ascertained":—Held, that the letter contained an unconditional promise to pay, and prevented the statute from operating. Gardner v. M'Mahon, 3 Q. B. 561; 2 G. & D. 593; 11 L. J., Q. B. 297; 6 Jur. 712.

—— Recital of Debt in Deed referring Amount to Arbitration.]—Where a deed, executed by A. and B., recited that A. was indebted to B. in various sums, the amount of which was not yet ascertained, and a balance not yet struck, and that A. was willing to pay B. the amount which might appear to be due to B. in respect of such sums, such amount to be ascertained and paid as thereinafter mentioned, and the deed afterwards provided for taking the accounts by the arbitration of two persons named in the deed:—Held, that, notwithstanding the clause as to the arbitration, the recitals amounted to an absolute promise to pay the amount when ascertained, and that, when coupled with extrinsic parol evidence as to the amount, they were sufficient, consistently with the statute 9 Geo. 4, c. 14, to take the debt out of the Statute of Limitations. Cheslyn v. Dalby, 4 Y. & Coll. 238; 10 L. J., Ex. Eq. 21. And see 2 Y. & Coll. 171.

Devise, Direction, or Charge, for Payment of Debts.]—A devise in trust for payment of debts does not revive a debt, upon which the statute had taken effect by the expiration of time before the testator's death. Burke v. Jones, 2 Ves. & B. 275; 13 R. R. 83.

A direction for the payment of debts in a will of personal estate will not stop the running of the statute. Freake v. Cranefeldt, 3 Myl. & C. 499; 4 Jur. 1080.

A debt which, at the death of a testator, is not barred by the statute, may become so afterwards as to the executors and legatees, notwithstanding a charge by the testator of his debts upon his personal estate; nor will the operation of the statute be prevented, though the testator, erroneously supposing part of his personal estate to be real estate, has so described it in his will, and charged his debts upon it. Scott v. Jones, 4 Cl. & F. 382.

A stale debt, bearing interest, is not taken out of the statute by an engagement, signed by the debtor, to charge his estate with a sum corresponding in amount with the debt, with interest from the date of the engagement. Martin v. Knowles, 1 N. & M. 421; 2 L. J., K. B. 100.

Letter to Creditor, to be Opened after Debtor's Death, directing that Debts should be Paid.]—See Clinton v. Brophy, col. 297.

Interest on Loan Credited to Lender in Debtor's Books.]—Entries made in the books of a firm crediting the person who advanced money to it, to be repaid on demand, with interest from time to time, on the footing of periodical rest:—Held, not to bar the statute. Jackson v. Ogg, 1 Johns. 397; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 976; 7 W. R. 730.

Request by Debtor to Partner to Pay, or Obtain a Release of, Debt.]—An acknowledgment of a debt, contained in a letter from one partner to another, undertaking to assign to the latter the debts and liabilities of the firm, upon his satisfying debts due to a person named in the letter, and others, or "obtaining a release of my liabilities in respect of such debts":—Held, not to amount to a promise to pay the debts, and therefore not to take the debts out of the Statute of Limitations. Hindmarsh, In re, 1 Dr. & Sm 129; 1 L. T. 475; 8 W. R. 203.

Letter of Debtor asking Third Person to make an Offer to Creditor—Letter of Agent offering Composition.] — See Gibbon v. Bagshott, col. 118.

Promise to One of a Class to Rectify Mistake that affected all.] — Where A., through misrepresentation, received from B. and several other persons, his tenants, sums of money to which he was not entitled; and B. applied to him to have the money returned, stating that he and the other tenants had been induced to pay more than was due; and A. replied, "that, if there was any mistake it should be rectified";—Held, that this obviated the statute as to payments made by the other tenants, as well as by B. Clark v. Hougham, 3 D. & R. 322; 2 B. & C. 149; 1 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 249.

Non-dissent of Debtor to Creditor's Account.]—The mere sending of an account to a debtor appropriating money of the debtor, over which the creditor has control, to his debt, and from which appropriation the debtor does not dissent, does not amount to an "acknowledgment" by the debtor within the Statute of Limitations. McHenry, In re, McDermott v. Boyd, Barker, Ex parte, 8 R. 337; 71 L. T. 146; 42 W. R. 491.

Resolution of Directors.]—A resolution by a board of directors that "L. shall have the option of taking, within one month, any number of shares not exceeding 1,600, at par, in liquidation of 1,600*l.*, part of his claim" (the claim therein referred to having been made only as to a collateral security for part of an alleged debt), is no acknowledgment sufficient to defeat the operation of the statute. Lowndes v. Garnett and Moseley Gold Mining Co., 33 L. J., Ch. 418; 10 L. T. 229; 12 W. R. 572.

Semble, that an acknowledgment made by a board of directors, of whom L. was one, in order to revive a debt claimed to be due to L., would not bind the company. Ib.

Trespass.]—An admission of a trespass will not take the case out of the statute. Hurst v. Parkes, 2 Chit. 249.

Admission in Pleading.]—Debt within Statute of Limitations taken out by words in answer. Galway v. Barrymore (Earl), Dick. 163. But see Bateman v. Pinder, 3 Q. B. 574, supra, col. 90.

b. Conditional.

See also A, VII. 1, a., ante (col. 89).

Promise to Pay when able.]—A statement by the defendant that he could not pay the debt, but would do so as soon as he was able:—Held, to be a conditional promise only. Scales v. Jacobs, 3 Bing. 638; 4 L. J. (o.s.) C. P. 209.

"These sums I mean honourably to pay, and I shall not avail myself of the Statute of Limitations. When I may be able to pay you I cannot now say":—Held, at most only a promise conditional upon the defendant's ability, which it was for the plaintiff to prove. Woodham v. Hollis, 3 L. J., K. B. 70.

A debtor writing, "I cannot pay the debt at present, but will pay it as soon as I can," is not sufficient to take it out of the statute without proof of his ability to pay. Tanner v. Smart, 6 B. & C. 603; 9 D. & R. 549; 5 L. J. (o.s.) K. B. 218; 30 R. R. 461.

A debtor within six years from the time of contracting a debt stated in a letter written to his creditor, "that he was incapable at that time to pay the money, but that he would pay as soon as he had it in his power to do so":—Held, that this was a conditional promise only, and therefore not sufficient, per se, to take the case out of the statute. Haydon v. Williams, 4 M. & P. 811; 7 Bing. 163; 9 L. J. (o.s.) C. P. 16.

A debtor wrote to his creditor: "I will pay you as soon as I get it in my power":—Held, that the statute did not commence running until the debtor became of ability to pay. Hammond v. Smith, 33 Beav. 452; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 117; 9 L. T. 746; 12 W. R. 328.

"As soon as Convenient."]—In an action on a note payable with interest, the words in the letter acknowledging the debt were as follows: "I shall be most happy to pay you both interest and principal as soon as convenient":—Held, that this was a conditional promise, and that the creditor was bound to give some evidence to shew that the debtor was able to pay, or that it was convenient for him to do so. Edmunds v. Downes, 2 C. & M. 459; 4 Tyr. 173; 3 L. J., Ex. 98.

If Third Party would Pay.]—On a demand being made for payment of a debt barred by the statute, the debtor said he would be happy to pay it if he could, that a sum was due to him from one G., and that if the creditor could recover that debt he might pay himself thereout:—Held, that this was a mere conditional promise, and that the debtor's ability to pay must be shewn to entitle the creditor to recover. Ayton v. Bowles, 12 Moore, 305; 4 Bing. 105; 5 L. J. (o.s.) C. P. 109. S. P., Gould v. Shirley, 2 M. & P. 581; 7 L. J. (o.s.) C. P. 117.

"If in Funds."]—In a letter from a drawer to the holder of a bill of exchange, he said: "If in funds I would immediately pay the money, and take the bill out of your hands":—Held, insufficient. Richardson v. Barry, 29 Beav. 22.

—— Conditional on Better Position.]—In May, 1874, a debtor, in answer to a demand of a debt incurred by him in 1865, wrote to his creditor as follows: "Believe me that I never lose out of sight my obligations towards you, and that I shall be glad, as soon as my position becomes somewhat better, to begin again and continue with my instalments." It was admitted that in one year since 1874 the debtor's income had been 14*l.* more than it was and since had been:—Held, that, assuming the letter to amount to such an acknowledgment as to warrant the inference of a promise to pay, it was a conditional promise only, and there was no affirmative proof of the substantial fulfilment of the condition. Meyerhoff v. Froehlich, 48 L. J., C. P. 43; 4 C. P. D. 63; 39 L. T. 620; 27 W. R. 258—C. A.

In answer to an application for payment of a debt, the debtor wrote as follows: "I do not wish to avail myself of the Statute of Limitations to refuse payment of the debt. I have not the means of payment, and must crave a continuance of your indulgence. My situation as a clerk does not afford me the means of laying by a shilling, but in time I may reap the benefit of my services in an augmentation of salary that may enable me to propose some satisfactory arrangement. I am much obliged to you for your forbearance":—Held, that the letter contained no sufficient acknowledgment or promise to take the case out of the statute. Rackham v. Marriott, 2 H. & N. 196; 26 L. J., Ex. 315; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 495; 5 W. R. 572—Ex. Ch.

Promise to Pay in Two Years.]—The plaintiffs and S. sold a library of books for the defendant, some of which were returned by the purchasers as imperfect. The defendant thereupon wrote to the plaintiffs the following letter, dated the 18th December, 1827: "I have received the imperfect books, which, together with the cash overpaid on the settlement of your account, amounts to 80*l.* 7*s.*, which sum I will pay in two years":—Held, evidence of an account stated of debts which would become due in two years, so as to defeat a plea of the statute. Wheatley v. Williams, 1 M. & W. 533; Tyr. & G. 1043; 5 L. J., Ex. 237. See Clark v. Alexander, col. 112.

Refusal to Pay till after a Specified Event.]—In an action on a solicitor's bill of costs incurred more than six years before the issue of the writ, in which the client had refused payment (by letter) till taxation was completed:—Held, that a promise to pay might be inferred when the bills were taxed. Nichols v. Regent's Canal Co., 63 L. J., Q. B. 641; 71 L. T. 249. See S. C. in C. A., 71 L. T. 836.

Conditional on Reference to Arbitration.]—An agreement to refer certain accounts between the parties thereto, after reciting that disputes had arisen between them in respect of them, empowered the arbitrators to ascertain what was due and of right payable, and to order any sum which might be found due to be paid at such times and in such proportions as they should deem fit. The arbitration having proved abortive:—Held, that the agreement amounted to a conditional recognition of the debt only on the part of the debtor, and that the condition being unfulfilled, it did not amount to a sufficient acknowledgment of the debt to take it out of the operation of the statute. Hales v. Stevenson, 9 Jur. (N.S.) 300; 7 L. T. 317; 11 W. R. 33. Affirmed, 8 L. T. 798; 11 W. R. 952—Ex. Ch.

Recital in Deed of Assignment to Trustee for Creditors.]—A debtor, by a deed reciting that he was indebted to the plaintiff and others, assigned his property to the plaintiff in trust to pay all such creditors as should sign the schedule of debts annexed, provided that, if all did not sign, the deed should be void. The plaintiff never signed, nor was the amount of his debt stated:—Held, not a sufficient acknowledgment to take his debt out of the statute, although it was admitted orally that he had but one debt. Kennett v. Milbank, 8 Bing. 38; 1 M. & Scott, 102; 1 L. J., C. P. 8.

Denial of Liability, "unless H. did not act as S.'s Agent"—Sufficient Acknowledgment on Proof that H. did not so act.]—In 1854 H., a solicitor, who had also acted as land agent to S., furnished his bill of costs. Both died. In 1862 the solicitor for S.'s executors, in answer to an application for payment, wrote that the executors had handed him the costs and account on foot of rents, which had been furnished; that the bill of costs at the time it was furnished, save a small sum, was barred by the Statute of Limitations; "but the instructions I have received were to look at the matter fairly, and if anything appeared due to settle it, notwithstanding Mr. H. not being legally entitled to recover. I have accordingly done so, and without entering into any particulars of the costs, but merely looking at the matter of the rents, it seems to me that Mr. H. is indebted to Mr. S.'s executors." The letter then made a claim in respect of rents of another property, alleged to have been lost by the agent's default, and concluded: "Therefore the executors are not in any way called on to pay, unless you can within a week show me in any reasonable way that Mr. H. did not act over these properties as Mr. S.'s agent, or that he used due diligence to collect the rents." The Master, in a suit in equity to administer the assets of S., found that H. was not agent over the latter property:—Held, that the letter contained a sufficient acknowledgment to save the bar of the Statute of Limitations. Leland v. Murphy, 16 Ir. Ch. R. 500.

An acknowledgment in writing by an agent after the Mercantile Law Amendment Act is sufficient to save from the bar of the Statute of Limitations a debt contracted before the act. Ib.

c. Signature of.

By 9 Geo. 4, c. 14 (Lord Tenterden's Act), s. 1, an acknowledgment, to take a case out of the statute, must be signed by the party chargeable; [or by his agent duly authorised: 19 & 20 Vict. c. 97 (Mercantile Law Amendment Act, 1856), s. 13].

At Top of Document.]—A debtor being called upon by his creditor (the holder of two promissory notes for 510*l.*, more than six months overdue) for a statement of his affairs, made out an account in which the notes were inserted as a debt for which he was liable:—Held, that the whole document being in the handwriting of the debtor, his name written at the top was a sufficient signature to bind him. Holmes v. Mackrell, 3 C. B. (N.S.) 789.

By a Firm.]—A defendant pleaded the Statute of Limitations. To prove the case on the part of the plaintiff a series of accounts for several years between himself and the house of A. & Co., in which the defendant was a partner, was put in evidence. In the last of those accounts the balance of the preceding account was carried over. The date of this item, as well as those of the other items, with three exceptions, were beyond six years from action brought. The exceptions were, that, on the credit side, there was one item within the six years—"Balance of interest to this day at 8*l.* per cent."; and on the debit side there were two items within that period, viz., "postage, petty charges and commission on disbursements." The balance of account, for which the action was brought, was then struck at a date also within the six years. The signature to the account was A. & Co., in the same handwriting as that affixed to the accounts of other customers with the firm; but there was no evidence that such signature was in the handwriting of the defendant, or in that of any of the partners:—Held, first, that the signature to the account was not "an acknowledgment in writing, signed by the parties chargeable thereby," within 9 Geo. 4, c. 14, s. 1. Clark v. Alexander, 8 Scott (N.R.) 147; 13 L. J., C. P. 133; 8 Jur. 496.

Held, secondly, that the account was not evidence of any payment of principal or interest admitted to be due within the six years, so as to take the debt out of the statute. Ib.

Held, thirdly, that there was no evidence of an account stated between the parties, so as to be a new transaction, and to give a new right of suit, independent of, and distinct from, the original debt. Ib.

Letter signed by Debtor, not by Party chargeable thereby.]—The statute is not barred by a letter in which the debtor states, "that family arrangements have been making to enable him to discharge the debt; that funds have been appointed for that purpose, of which A. is trustee; and that the debtor has handed the account to A.; that some time must elapse before payment, but that the debtor is authorised by A. to refer the creditor to him for any further information." For, by 9 Geo. 4, c. 14, s. 1, the acknowledgment in writing to bar the statute must be signed by the party chargeable thereby, and such letter does not charge the debtor, as it is at most only a promise to pay as soon as the trustee is in cash. Whippy v. Hillary, 3 B. & Ad. 399; 5 Car. & P. 209; 1 L. J., K. B. 178.

Unsigned Letter.]—An unsigned letter acknowledging a debt, written by a debtor's wife at his dictation, and sent to the creditor in the same envelope with a letter to the creditor, written and signed by the wife, and which referred to the unsigned letter, is not a sufficient acknowledgment of a debt by a duly authorised agent of the debtor, so as to take the case out of the Statute of Limitations. Ingram v. Little, 1 Cab. & E. 186.

An admission in an unsigned letter, sent by order of the assignees of a bankrupt, will not take a debt out of the statute. Pott v. Clegg, 16 M. & W. 321; 16 L. J., Ex. 210; 11 Jur. 289.

Authorised Agent signing Debtor's Name insufficient.]—See Hyde v. Johnson, col. 117.

d. Proof of.

By 9 Geo. 4, c. 14, s. 1, an acknowledgment to take a case out of the statute, must be in writing. By s. 8, it need not have an agreement stamp.

Before 9 Geo. 4, c. 14, s. 1.]—Where a person having entered into a written guarantee, and become liable upon it at a period of more than six years before the commencement of the action, verbally promised within six years that the matter should be arranged; and afterwards on an action being brought, pleaded actio non accrevit infra sex annos:—Held (before 9 Geo. 4, c. 14, s. 1), that the Statute of Frauds having been once satisfied by the original promise being in writing, it was not necessary in order to take the case out of the Statute of Limitations that the latter promise should also be in writing. Gibbons v. M'Casland, 1 B. & Ald. 690.

Effect of 9 Geo. 4, c. 14, s. 1.]—The statute does not alter the law as to the nature of the promise, but merely substitutes a different mode of proof. Haydon v. Williams, 4 M. & P. 811; 9 L. J. (o.s.) C. P. 16; 7 Bing. 163. S. P., Dickinson v. Hatfield, 5 Car. & P. 46; 1 M. & Rob. 141.

Construction of Documents.]—The construction of a doubtful document, given in evidence to defeat the statute, is for the court and not for a jury; if it is explained by extrinsic facts, they are for the consideration of the jury. Morrell v. Frith, 3 M. & W. 402; 8 Car. & P. 246; 1 H. & H. 100; 7 L. J., Ex. 172; 2 Jur. 619.

The question whether a particular document takes a case out of the statute, is for the judge and not for the jury. Sidwell v. Mason, 2 H. & N. 306; 26 L. J., Ex. 407; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 649.

Ambiguous Letter should be left to Jury.]—See Lloyd v. Maund, and Linley v. Bonsor, col. 90.

When oral Evidence admissible.]—When a written promise to pay a debt barred by the statute has been lost, oral evidence of the contents of the writing may be given. Haydon v. Williams, 4 M. & P. 811; 7 Bing. 163; 9 L. J. (o.s.) C. P. 16.

When a letter, acknowledging the existence of a debt, which was produced for the purpose of taking the case out of the statute, did not contain any date:—Held, that the time when the letter was written might be supplied by parol evidence. Edmunds v. Downes, 2 C. & M. 459; 4 Tyr. 173; 3 L. J., Ex. 98. And see Hartley v. Wharton, 3 P. & D. 529; 11 A. & E. 934; 9 L. J., Q. B. 209.

Evidence of verbal admissions, in 1850, by A., since deceased, that he owed a debt of 2,300*l.* to B.'s estate, the interest of which he had arranged to discharge, and which was discharged by paying two annuities bequeathed by B.'s will, together with a statement in an affidavit made by B.'s executor in 1850, which was inserted in the draft affidavit from the dictation of A., to the effect that B.'s executor had received in August, 1850, from A. a half-year's interest on 2,300*l.*, and had paid the said annuities the same half-year:—Held, sufficient to take the debt of 2,300*l.* out of the Statute of Limitations. Edwards v. James, 1 Kay & J. 534; 3 W. R. 566.

Evidence to Construe Writing—Facts negativing Promise to pay.]—See Cripps v. Davis, col. 91.

Where Proof of Debt necessary to supplement Acknowledgment.]—See Dickinson v. Hatfield, col. 106.

When exempt from Stamp Duty.]—The following memorandum: "I acknowledge to owe M. 36*l.*, which I agree to pay him as soon as my circumstances will permit," is exempt from stamp duty, under 9 Geo. 4, c. 14, s. 8, as a writing made necessary by that statute, provided it is put in for the mere purpose of barring the statute, the debt itself being proved by other evidence. Morris v. Dixon, 6 N. & M. 438; 4 A. & E. 845; 2 H. & W. 57.

A note improperly stamped is not admissible as a memorandum, the 9 Geo. 4, c. 14, s. 8, applying only to instruments which might be stamped with an agreement stamp. Jones v.

Ryder, 4 M. & W. 32; 1 H. & H. 256; 7 L. J., Ex. 216.

P. being indebted to the executors of C. in 11,000*l.*, to which A. was beneficially entitled, sent a letter to A. as follows: "I have sent you a note for the money due to you which your mother left for you." Inclosed in this letter was a promissory note, on a receipt stamp, for 11,000*l.*, and 4*l.* per cent. interest. At the time of this letter and note being sent, the debt was barred by the statute:—Held, that there was not a sufficient acknowledgment by P., without referring to the note, to see what was the promise made, and this could not be done for the want of a proper stamp. Parmiter v. Parmiter, 3 De G. F. & J. 461; 30 L. J., Ch. 508; 3 L. T. 799; 8 W. R. 578.

A. gave to B. a promissory note, dated October, 1834, for 837*l.* 1*s.* 6*d.* payable on demand. In December, 1834, demand was made, and A. then promised to pay interest, and signed an unstamped memorandum, dated the 2nd December, 1834, as follows: "I promise to pay to B. 837*l.*, with 4*l.* per cent. interest thereon." Neither principal nor interest was paid, but in January, 1848, A. wrote to B. a letter referring to a promissory note for a debt, which he acknowledged, and promised thereby to pay:—Held, that the memorandum of December, 1834, and a letter accompanying it, shewed that interest was running; and that, though in form a promissory note, and unstamped, it could be looked at to see to what debt this interest was to be referred; and that as no other debt was proved to exist, the 837*l.* there mentioned was to be assumed to be part of the 837*l.* 1*s.* 6*d.* secured by the former promissory note. Held, also, that in the absence of proof of the existence of any other promissory note to which it could relate, the letter of 1848 must be taken to refer to the promissory note of October, 1834, and thus to take it out of the Statute of Limitations. Spickernell v. Hotham, 1 Kay, 669; 2 W. R. 638.

Claim in Action of Negligence not supported by Acknowledgment.]—In an action for negligence by a solicitor, where the statute is pleaded, the only question is whether the negligence took place within six years. If a solicitor is liable at all for negligence committed more than six years before any action against him, but acknowledged by him within six years of an action, he can only be so when the action is brought specially upon such acknowledgment. Short v. M'Carthy, 3 B. & Ald. 626; 22 R. R. 503.

The plaintiff declared that the defendant promised to invest his money on good security, and assigned for breach that he invested it on bad security, and the defendant pleaded the statute: replication, that he promised within six years, and it was proved that, within that time, he acknowledged the security to be bad, and promised that the plaintiff should be paid:—Held, that as the declaration did not state a debt to which a subsequent promise could be applied, the plaintiff was not entitled to recover. Whitehead v. Howard, 2 Br. & B. 372; 5 Moore, 105; 23 R. R. 471.

Letter written without Prejudice.] — An acknowledgment of a debt contained in a letter, which was "not to be used in prejudice of" the debtor's rights, cannot be given in evidence. Cory v. Bretton, 4 Car. & P. 462. See River Steamer Co., In re, Mitchell, Ex parte, col. 105.

Verbal Order by Turnpike Trustees to pay a Bill.]—Where a turnpike act provided that all orders of the trustees should be entered in a book kept for that purpose, an order by them to pay a bill is not an act done so as to take a debt out of the statute, unless it is so entered in writing. Emery v. Day, 1 C. M. & R. 245; 4 Tyr. 695; 3 L. J., Ex. 307.

Acknowledgment after Action, no Bar.]—See Bateman v. Pinder, col. 90.

e. By and to whom made.

By 9 Geo. 4, c. 14, s. 1, an acknowledgment by one joint contractor shall not bind any other.

To Stranger.]—An acknowledgment, in order to exclude the statute, must be one from which a promise to pay the debt can be inferred, and must, therefore, be made to the creditor or his agent. Tanner v. Smart, 6 B. & C. 603; 9 D. & R. 549; 5 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 218.

An acknowledgment of a debt barred by the Statute of Limitations, and given by the debtor to a person who was neither agent of, nor in privity with, the creditor, is not sufficient as a promise to pay the debt so as to enable the creditor to sue the debtor. Tanner v. Smart (6 B. & C. 603) followed. Rogers v. Quinn, 26 L. R., Ir. 136.

An acknowledgment by the acceptor of a bill of exchange of his liability to the payee, accompanied by a declaration that he was not liable to the drawers, there being no consideration for the acceptance, is not sufficient in an action by the drawers against the acceptor to take the case out of the statute. Easterly v. Pullen, 3 Stark. 186. See also Stamford Banking Co. v. Smith, 61 L. J., Q. B. 405; [1892] 1 Q. B. 765; 66 L. T. 306; 40 W. R. 355; and per Pollock, C. B., in Godwin v. Culley, 4 H. & N. 373. Contra, Peters v. Brown, 4 Esp. 46.

A deed made between the debtors and a third person, in which they acknowledged the existence of a debt, was sufficient to take the case out of the statute, although the creditors were wholly strangers to the deed. Mountstephen v. Brooke, 3 B. & A. 141. See Halliday v. Ward, 3 Camp. 32.

Semble, that, since the statute 9 Geo. 4, c. 14, an acknowledgment of a debt to a third person is not sufficient to take the case out of the statute. Grenfell v. Girdlestone, 2 Y. & Coll. 662; 7 L. J. (N.S.) Ex. Eq. 42; 1 Jur. 940. See Francis v. Hawkesley, col. 93.

To Creditor or Agent.]—An acknowledgment to take a case out of the statute must be made to the creditor, and, semble, that one to his agent is sufficient. Fuller v. Redman, 26 Beav. 614.

An administratrix sueing for a debt due to the intestate more than six years before action was held to be entitled to recover upon an account stated between her agent and the debtor within six years. Smith v. Forty, 4 Car. & P. 126.

To Executrix.]—A statement made by the debtor to the creditor's executrix that the creditor always promised never to distress him for the debt is no evidence of a promise to pay made to the debtor. Ward v. Hunter, 6 Taunt. 210.

Statute avoided, as to Claims by several Tenants for Over-payments, by Undertaking to one to rectify any Mistake.]—See Clark v. Hougham, col. 108.

By Agents.] — An acknowledgment by a wife, who had been accustomed to act as the agent of her husband, in purchasing the goods and managing the business generally, was sufficient. Anderson v. Sanderson, 2 Stark. 204; Holt, 591; 17 R. R. 681; 19 R. R. 703. S. P., Palethorp v. Furnish, 2 Esp. 511, n.

So, in an action against a husband for goods supplied to his wife for her accommodation while he occasionally visited her, a letter written by the wife acknowledging the debt within six years was admissible to take the case out of the statute. Gregory v. Parker, 1 Camp. 394; 10 R. R. 712.

But as the 9 Geo. 4, c. 14, s. 1, directed that no acknowledgment or promise should be sufficient to take a case out of the statute, unless in writing, "and signed by the party chargeable thereby," an acknowledgment contained in a letter which was written by the wife of the debtor, in his name, and at his request, was insufficient, because the statute gave no authority to an agent to make the acknowledgment. Hyde v. Johnson, 3 Scott, 289; 2 Bing. (N.C.) 776; 2 Hodges, 94; 5 L. J., C. P. 291.

Where an agent had been employed to pay money for work done, and the workmen were referred to him for payment, and he assented to it, an acknowledgment or a promise by him to pay was sufficient. Burt v. Palmer, 5 Esp. 145.

An acknowledgment signed by the solicitor of the administrator of the debtor in 1862 will save from the bar of the Statute of Limitations a debt accrued before the passing of the 16 & 17 Vict. c. 113, s. 20. Archer v. Leonard, 15 Ir. Ch. R. 267.

The solicitor for the administrator, who had been furnished with several bills of costs by A., who had been solicitor for the intestate, by notice required him to tax any bills of costs properly payable out of the assets, the administrator thereby undertaking to pay any sum which might be found due on foot of said costs (after all fair credits), when the same should be taxed and certified, and the credits given, less the costs of taxation, if one-sixth should be taxed off, and requiring to be furnished with a requisition for taxation:—Held, that the notice saved the bar from the Statute of Limitations. Ib.

A son, who acts as his father's agent in matters of his trade, is not his agent to make an acknowledgment that money is due from the father, as an executor, to a legatee, so as to take the legacy out of the statute. Whitehouse v. Abberley, 1 Car. & K. 642.

—— Unsigned Acknowledgment, enclosed in Letter from Debtor's Wife, insufficient.]—See Ingram v. Little, col. 113.

—— By Directors for Company.]—See Lowndes v. Garnett and Moseley Gold Mining Co., col. 108.

—— In Writing.]—See Leland v. Murphy, col. 112.

—— By one Creditor authorised to arrange with the others.]—A debtor had written a letter to T., to make a proposition to the creditor respecting a debt he owed him; and in this letter he desired T. to arrange with the whole of his creditors. T. wrote a letter to the creditor, offering an acceptance for 7*s.* 6*d.* in the pound on the debt:—Held, not sufficient to take the case out of the statute. Gibbon v. Bagshott, 5 Car. & P. 211.

—— By Accountant employed by Bankrupt's Assignees.]—An accountant employed by the assignees of a bankrupt, sent to a creditor an unsigned statement of the account between the bankrupt and the creditor, in which he stated a balance in favour of the creditor:—Held, that this was not a sufficient acknowledgment of a debt to take the case out of the statute, as against the assignees. Pott v. Clegg, 16 M. & W. 321; 16 L. J., Ex. 210; 11 Jur. 289.

An admission by a bankrupt in his balance-sheet will not take a debt out of the statute as against his assignees. Ib.

By Executors or Administrators.]—In 1835, A. filed a creditors' bill against the administrator of his debtor, founded on a debt due on a note, but in respect of which no payment of either principal or interest had been made since 1823. In 1832 the administrator, on the citation of a third person, signed and exhibited, in the Ecclesiastical Court, an inventory and account of the debtor's assets and debts, in which A.'s debt was entered:—Held, that the entry was a sufficient acknowledgment. Smith v. Poole, 12 Sim. 17; 10 L. J., Ch. 192.

An acknowledgment of, or promise to pay, a debt of a testator by one of several executors is sufficient to take the case out of the Statute of Limitations. Tullock v. Dunn (Ry. & M. 416) and Scholey v. Walton (13 L. J. Ex. 122; 12 M. & W. 510) distinguished. Macdonald, In re, Dick v. Fraser, 66 L. J., Ch. 630; [1897] 2 Ch. 181; 76 L. T. 713; 45 W. R. 628.

Semble, per Parke, B., an acknowledgment in writing by one of two executors of a debt due from the testator is not sufficient to take the debt out of the statute as against his co-executors, even although made by him in his representative capacity. Scholey v. Walton, 12 M. & W. 510; 13 L. J., Ex. 122; 8 Jur. 319.

Where one of two joint executors was applied to for payment of a debt of his testator's, who had been dead twenty years, and as against whom the debt was barred, and said: "I believe the debt is a just one, and has never been paid; I should be happy to serve you in the matter if I could, but I cannot do anything without the consent of the testator's family":—Held, in an action against both the executors, that there was no such acknowledgment of the debt as took the case out of the statute as against them, there being no promise, express or implied, to pay the debt. M'Culloch v. Dawes, 9 D. & R. 40; 5 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 56; 30 R. R. 515.

In an action against several executors:—Held, that neither a mere acknowledgment of the debt by all the executors, nor an express promise by one of them, took the case out of the statute; there must be an express promise by all. Tullock v. Dunn, R. & M. 416; 27 R. R. 765.

After an administration decree, an executor has no right, as against the parties interested in the estate, to give an acknowledgment to take a debt barred by the statute out of its operation. Phillips v. Beal, 32 Beav. 26.

Where the statute had run against a debt, due from a testator before his death, and the executor wrote thus to the creditor: "The legatees object to my paying the claim, though I think it just," and "I not only do not dispute the claim, but admit it, thinking it just, but am compelled to refuse payment without an order of the court": —Held, that the debt was not revived, and that the real estate could not be subjected to it by any act of the devisees in trust, though they were also executors. Briggs v. Wilson, 5 De G. M. & G. 12; 17 Beav. 330; 2 Eq. R. 153.

A debt is not taken out of the statute by an advertisement published by the administrator requesting all persons, having claims on the estate, to send in statements of their demand, prior to their being laid before A., by whom the persons claiming to be creditors are to submit to be examined touching the same, if he shall see occasion, in order to their being approved and paid, or rejected, if such latter course be deemed expedient. Scott v. Jones, 4 Cl. & F. 382; 7 L. J., Ch. 242.

Semble, notice in a newspaper, by a personal representative, that he will pay all debts justly due from his testator, will prevent a debt from being barred by the Statute of Limitations. S. C., 1 Russ. & M. 255; 8 L. J. (o.s.) Ch. 83.

Advertisement by executor for creditor to come in to prove debts against testator revives a debt barred by the Statute of Limitations. Sed quære. Andrews v. Brown, 1 Eq. Abr. 305.

An admission by an executrix, in her answer, of the fact of there having been a debt due by the testator, is sufficient to prevent the debt from being barred by the 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 42, s. 5. Moodie v. Bannister, 4 Drew. 432; 28 L. J., Ch. 881; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 402; 7 W. R. 278.

An acknowledgment, in order to take a case out of the statute (3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27), must appear to have been made with the intention of charging the party making it, and it must have been made to a party then entitled to make the demand. Accordingly, where the demand was against two executors for a legacy due to deceased wife of plaintiff, and the arrears of interest accrued since her death, and the acknowledgment was made by one executor, with the object apparently of throwing the burden on the other, and it was made also before the plaintiff had entitled himself by taking out administration to his wife, it was held insufficient on both grounds. Holland v. Clark, 1 Y. & Coll. C. C. 151.

An admission of a debt by the executrix of a trader, within six years before the filing of a creditors' bill, will not take the debt out of the Statute of Limitations, so as to enable the creditor, under the 47 Geo. 3, c. 74, to claim payment out of the real estate in the hands of a devisee. Putnam v. Bates, 3 Russ. 188.

Acknowledgment by Executors, who are also Trustees of Realty, not necessarily binding on Realty.]—See Fordham v. Wallis, col. 134.

By Joint Debtors.]—An acknowledgment of a debt, contained in a letter from one partner to another, undertaking to assign to the latter the debts and liabilities of the firm, upon his satisfying debts due to a person named in the letter, and others, or "obtaining a release of my liabilities in respect of such debts," does not amount to a promise to pay the debts, and therefore does not take the debts out of the statute. Hindmarsh, In re, 1 Drew. & Sm. 129; 1 L. T. 475; 8 W. R. 203.

An admission made by one of two partners after the dissolution of the partnership, concerning joint contracts, that took place during the partnership, was sufficient to bar the statute. Wood v. Braddick, 1 Taunt. 104; 9 R. R. 711.

But the admission of one partner to bind another must be clear and explicit. Holme v. Green, 1 Stark. 488.

Where one of two partners, who was a certificated bankrupt, acknowledged a debt due to the plaintiff by his partner and himself:—Held, that it was not a sufficient acknowledgment to take the case out of the statute in an action against both, when the bankrupt pleaded his bankruptcy and the other the statute. Marten v. Bridges, 3 Car. & P. 83.

An acknowledgment of one of several makers of a joint and several note took it out of the statute as against the others, and might be given in evidence in a separate action against any of the others. Whitcomb v. Whiting, 2 Dougl. 628.

So, in the case of a joint note, even though one of the makers had never made any acknowledgment, and had signed the note as a surety only. Perham v. Raynal, 9 Moore, 566; 2 Bing. 306; 3 L. J. (o.s.) C. P. 271.

An account stated between a debtor, being part-owner and ship's husband, and his co-owners, in which the items of the creditor's account for work done and money advanced are included, is not such an acknowledgment as will take the case out of the operation of the statute. Nash v. Hill, 1 F. & F. 198.

The circumstance of there being no ascertained or adjusted debt till within six years, will not delay the operation of the statute. Ib.

A debt is not to be kept alive against one party by the admission of another, except in cases of continuing joint contract. Fordham v. Wallis, 10 Hare, 228; 22 L. J., Ch. 548; 17 Jur. 228.

The existence or non-existence of the demand depends upon the act of the person, and not upon the relative liability of the property. Ib.

—— After Marriage of one.]—Where an action was brought on a joint note, made by A. and B. whilst B. was sole, against A., B. and C., the husband of the latter, who was joined for conformity; and they pleaded actio non accrevit infra sex annos; to which the plaintiff replied, that the cause of action arose within six years: —Held, that an acknowledgment by A., within six years, that the debt was due, would not take the case out of the statute, such acknowledgment being made after the intermarriage of B. and C. Pittam v. Foster, 2 D. & R. 363; 1 B. & C. 248; 1 L. J. (o.s.) K. B. 81; 25 R. R. 385.

By Infants.]—An acknowledgment in writing given by an infant of a debt due for necessaries is effective for the purpose of taking the debt out of the statute. Willins v. Smith, 4 El. & Bl. 180; 3 C. L. R. 16; 24 L. J., Q. B. 62; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 163; 3 W. R. 22.

2. CONCEALED FRAUD.

See also post, B, IX.

Discovery prevented by Defendant's Fraud.]—It is no answer to a plea of the statute that the plaintiff was prevented by the fraud of the defendant from knowing of the cause of action, until after the time of limitation expired. Imperial Gaslight and Coke Co. v. London Gaslight Co., 10 Ex. 39; 2 C. L. R. 1230; 23 L. J., Ex. 303; 18 Jur. 497; 2 W. R. 527. See Hunter v. Gibbons, 1 H. & N. 459; 26 L. J., Ex. 1; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 1249; 5 W. R. 91; post, col. 123.

In an action to recover by way of damages money lost by the fraudulent representations of the defendant, a reply to a defence of the Statute of Limitations that the plaintiff did not discover and had not reasonable means of discovering the fraud within six years before action, and that the existence of such fraud was fraudulently concealed by the defendant until within such six years, was held good. Gibbs v. Guild, 9 Q. B. D. 59; 51 L. J., Q. B. 313; 46 L. T. 248; 30 W. R. 591—C. A. Contra, Imperial Gaslight and Coke Co. v. London Gaslight Co., and Hunter v. Gibbons, supra.

In an action to recover damages for fraudulent representation of the quality (viz. "the sheep-carrying power") of certain lands, whereby the plaintiff was induced to take leases thereof, the defendants pleaded the Statute of Limitations. Reply: That the cause of action relied on is the fraud and fraudulent misrepresentation of the defendants, and the injuries occasioned to the plaintiff thereby; and the plaintiff says that he did not, and could not, by the exercise of reasonable diligence, have discovered the said fraud, or that the said representation was untrue and fraudulent, until within six years before the commencement of this action:—Held, that the reply was no answer to the plea relying on the statute. Gibbs v. Guild, supra, commented on and distinguished. Barber v. Houston, 18 L. R., Ir. 475—C. A.

—— Or by Fraud of Defendant's Partner.]—Money of the plaintiff came into the hands of a firm of solicitors for investment, and was converted to the use of the firm. Owing to misrepresentations attributable to the firm the plaintiff was prevented from discovering the fraud until more than six years after the cause of action arose. In an action to recover the money, a partner, innocent of the fraud, claimed that under s. 8 of the Trustee Act, 1888, he was entitled to the benefit of the Statute of Limitations:—Held, that the principle of Blair v. Bromley (5 Hare, 542) applied, and he was deprived of the benefit of the statute by the misrepresentations, which bound him as a partner. Moore v. Knight, 60 L. J., Ch. 271; [1891] 1 Ch. 547; 63 L. T. 831; 39 W. R. 312.

—— Taking Partnership Accounts.]—For the purpose of taking partnership accounts, a partnership between three persons, carried on without any break after the death of one by the survivors, is, as between the survivors, one continuous partnership. As between partners, in cases of concealed fraud the Statute of Limitations does not commence to run from the time when with reasonable diligence the fraud might have been discovered, but only from the time when it has in fact been discovered unless the person complaining has had his suspicion aroused, and, having the means of knowledge, has not chosen to avail himself of that means. Rawlins v. Wickham (3 De G. & J. 304) followed. Gibbs v. Guild (9 Q. B. D. 59) examined. Betjemann v. Betjemann, 64 L. J., Ch. 641; [1895] 2 Ch. 474; 12 R. 455; 73 L. T. 2; 44 W. R. 182—C. A.

Fraud must be Defendant's or known to him.]—If non-discovery of fraud is relied on to take a case out of the statute, it must be the fraud of the person who invokes the aid of the statute or of his agent when acting for him. Thorne v. Heard, 64 L. J., Ch. 652; [1895] A. C. 495; 11 R. 254; 73 L. T. 291; 44 W. R. 155—H. L.

A personal representative having found among the papers of the deceased a mortgage deed, and having assigned it more than six years ago for the mortgage-money, affirming and reciting in the deed of assignment that it was a mortgage deed, made or mentioned to have been made between the mortgagor and mortgagee for that sum, the assignee shall not recover back the mortgage-money, although it turns out that the mortgage was a forgery, and that the assignee did not discover the forgery till within six years before he brings his action, unless the assignor knew it to be a forgery. Bell v. Holbeck, 2 Dougl. 654.

Averment necessary that Fraud only discovered within six years of Action.]—The Statute of Limitations is no plea where the bill charges a fraud, but then it should be charged by the bill that the fraud was discovered within six years before the bill was filed. South Sea Co. v. Wymondsell, 3 P. W. 143.

Time does not run till Facts constituting Fraud known.]—See Blennerhassett v. Day, and Blair v. Bromley, col. 19.

Or till they might with reasonable Diligence have been known.]—See Willis v. Howe, col. 308.

Statute not avoided by Concealment without Fraud.]—In an action for negligence, concealment of the negligence until within six years before action is no answer to the defence of the Statute of Limitations if the defendant has not been guilty of fraud. Armstrong v. Milburn, 54 L. T. 723—C. A.

Wrongful Working of Mines.]—The plaintiffs, the owners of coal mines, discovered in 1872 that the defendant more than six years previously had, when working an adjoining colliery, worked a large quantity of the plaintiffs' coal by breaking their boundary. There had been no subsidence of the surface or anything to put the plaintiffs on inquiry, and the defendant in plans which he kept of the workings in his own mine, had not marked the illegal workings:—Held, that the omission in the plans was not sufficient to constitute a case of concealed fraud so as to entitle the plaintiffs to an account and damages. Dawes v. Bagnall, 23 W. R. 690.

The owner of a mine commenced to work from his own mine into an adjoining mine vested in trustees, in the bonâ fide belief that he was about to obtain from them a contract authorising him so to work, and gave to one of the trustees notice that he was about to commence working:—Held, that the working, though no contract was afterwards entered into, and the trustees had no power to make one, ought to be treated on the same footing as if it had been commenced inadvertently; and in taking an account of the minerals gotten without authority the defendant was allowed the cost of severing them, as well as the cost of bringing them to bank. But, from the time that notice was given to the defendant that no contract would be made with him authorising him to work, his working was treated as fraudulent, and he was allowed only the cost of bringing the minerals to bank. Trotter v. Maclean, 49 L. J., Ch. 256; 13 Ch. D. 574; 42 L. T. 118; 28 W. R. 244.

So long as a wrongful working is to be treated as inadvertent the Statute of Limitations applies, and the account will only be directed for six years from the issue of the writ. But the onus is on the defendant to shew that minerals gotten by him were gotten before the six years. Ib.

To a plea of the statute, in an action of trespass, or trespass on the case, the plaintiff will not be allowed to reply as an equitable answer that the trespasses were underground, and had been fraudulently concealed from the plaintiff till within six years before action. Hunter v. Gibbons, 1 H. & N. 459; 26 L. J., Ex. 1; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 1249; 5 W. R. 91. But see Gibbs v. Guild, 51 L. J., Q. B. 313; 9 Q. B. D. 59; 46 L. T. 248; 30 W. R. 591; ante, col. 121.—C. A.

Liability to refund Sum knowingly paid to Person not entitled.]—In 1842 B. lent to G. 600*l.* upon a promissory note. By a will made in the same year B. bequeathed 600*l.*, which he described as being in the hands of G., to his son-in-law, upon trust to invest and pay the dividends and interest to his daughter, the wife of R., for life, free from the debts and control of her husband; and after her death for R. for life; and after the death of the survivor, for their children. On the death of the testator R. became indebted to G., and in order to discharge part of the debt, in 1842 he delivered to G. the note for 600*l.*:—Held, that as G. had information of the manner of the bequest, he was a party to the fraudulent abstraction of the trust property, and liable to refund the amount. The relief in such a case is founded on fraud and not on constructive trust, and being so founded, it is governed by the principle that the right of the party defrauded is not affected by lapse of time. Rolfe v. Gregory, 34 L. J., Ch. 274; 11 Jur. (N.S.) 98; 12 L. T. 162; 13 W. R. 355—L. C.

Family Settlement procured by.]—Agreement in settlement of family disputes, one party being guilty of gross fraud and concealment of the rights of the other, set aside after great length of time. Gordon v. Gordon, 3 Swan. 400; 19 R. R. 230.

Bond obtained by False Pretences.]—A., under pretence that B. was instrumental in procuring a beneficial marriage for C., obtains a bond from C. to B. for one thousand guineas, as a reward for his services. The bond is paid when due; but in nine years afterwards C. discovers the whole to be a gross imposition in A., and that he received all the money. On a bill brought, A. was decreed to repay C. the whole money, with interest and costs. Booth v. Warrington (Earl), 4 Bro. P. C. 163.

By Agents, Stewards, and Brokers.]—Interest and costs decreed against a steward upon fraud, wilful concealment, &c., and in such cases, generally, there is no limitation of time. Hardwicke (Earl) v. Vernon, 14 Ves. 504; 9 R. R. 329.

Where two agents conspire to defraud their principal, the estates of both the agents will be liable in equity to the estate of the principal, in respect of the fraud so committed. Walsham v. Stainton, 12 W. R. 63.

In such a case an agent is considered as a trustee for his principal, and lapse of time is no bar. Ib.

A steward and agent, being employed to sell an estate, purchased part of it himself at an undervalue, and secretly, in the name of another person. All actions and matters of difference between the parties were afterwards submitted to arbitration; an award was made, and mutual releases executed. The court, forty-seven years after the purchase, and twenty-eight years after the award, set aside the purchase, holding, first, that the principal having been kept ignorant of the fraud, was not bound by the lapse of time; and secondly, that he was not bound by the award and release, on the ground that the deception had been continued, and that the purchase and the fraudulent circumstances relating to it had not been brought under the consideration of the arbitrator. Trevelyan v. Charter, 4 L. J., Ch. 209. Affirmed nom. Charter v. Trevelyan, 11 Cl. & F. 714; 8 Jur. 1015.

Reversionary leases, at undervalue, obtained by agent from principal, the relation of creditor and debtor also subsisting, after an acquiescence of twenty-seven years, not set aside; the fiduciary character having, during that period, ceased to exist, and the transactions being recognised on oath by the principal as fair. Medlicott v. O'Donell, 1 Ball & B. 156.

Where it was alleged that the agent of the former owner of estates devised to the plaintiff, had within a few days after the decease obtained a conveyance of part of the property in discharge of a settled balance, alleged to be due to him, and obtained the deed, under an assertion that he had a secret by which the plaintiff's title might be impeached, but the latter had, under legal advice, acquiesced and confirmed the transaction, and after a lapse of above fifteen years sought to open the accounts on the ground of fraud; the house affirmed the judgment below, dismissing the bill. De Montmorency v. Devereux, West, 64; 7 Cl. & F. 188; 2 Dr. & Wal. 410; 4 Jur. 403.

Where a broker sold to his employer, as being the property of a third person, shares held in trust for him, the broker, the transaction was held void on grounds of public policy, and set aside without entering into the question of fairness of price, at the expiration of twelve years, the fraud not appearing to have been discovered more than a year. Gillett v. Peppercorne, 3 Beav. 78.

3. Payment on Account.

See also post, B, VI.

a. What amounts to.

Of Interest.]—A payment made within six years, of interest which has become due upon a note more than six years ago, is sufficient, where the note remains in the hands of the payee. Bealey v. Greenslade, 2 Tyr. 121 ; 2 C. & J. 61 ; 1 L. J., Ex. 1.

To constitute a payment of interest sufficient to take a debt out of the statute, it is not essential that money should actually pass between the debtor and creditor. Maber v. Maber, 36 L. J., Ex. 70 ; L. R. 2 Ex. 153 ; 16 L. T. 26.

After a debt due to a father from his son had been barred by the statute, the father, his son and his son's wife had an interview, at which the interest due was calculated. The son then put his hand into his pocket, as if to get out the money to pay it. The father stopped him, and, writing a receipt for the interest, gave it to his son's wife, saying that he would make her a present of the money. No money actually passed between the parties :—Held, that this transaction was a sufficient payment to take the debt out of the statute. Ib.

Payment of interest upon a note payable on demand is sufficient to take the case out of the statute, although there is no independent evidence that any demand of payment of the note has been made. Bradfield v. Tupper, 7 Ex. 27 ; 21 L. J., Ex. 6.

Payment of Rent by Debtor for Creditor may be Evidence of Payment of Interest on Debt.]—See Worthington v. Grimsditch, col. 133.

Pleading to Allegation of Payment of Interest.]—See Hollis v. Palmer, col. 145.

Where no Promise to pay Debt can be implied.]—Part payment of a debt will not take the case out of the statute, unless the payment is made under circumstances which warrant a jury in inferring a promise to pay the residue ; therefore, where a party, on being applied to for interest, paid a sovereign, and said he owed the money, but would not pay it :—Held, that it was a question for the jury to say, whether he intended to refuse payment or merely spoke in jest. Wainman v. Kynman, 1 Ex. 118 ; 16 L. J., Ex. 232.

In an action on a note, dated 7th December, 1845, for payment of 500*l.* and interest, on demand, to C., the plaintiff's testator, and on a similar note for 500*l.*, dated 20th January, 1846, at the trial it appeared from the defendant's answer to a bill of discovery, that in 1835, and in 1842, C. lent to the defendant two sums of 500*l.*, upon the security of his notes, payable on demand, with interest. The interest was duly paid, and memoranda thereon indorsed by C. on the backs of the notes. At length, the backs of the notes being covered with these memoranda, it was arranged between C. and the defendant that new notes should be substituted, and accordingly the defendant gave C. the notes on which the action was brought. In February, 1846, C. told the defendant that he intended to give him the 1,000*l.* secured by the notes, and he wished to give the defendant a release and a discharge for the same and interest due thereon, and he directed the defendant to write out a receipt for 1,000*l.* and interest, for him, C. to sign, as a release and a discharge ; and thereupon the defendant purchased a 10*s.* receipt stamp, and wrote thereon the receipt as follows : "Hull, 16 February, 1846. Received of R. D. (the defendant) 1,080*l.*, being the interest and principal on the notes, dated December, 1845, and January, 1846, and in full of all demands," which C. signed and delivered to the defendant. C. subsequently died, having previously bequeathed the notes to his executors, with directions as to the investment of the proceeds :—Held, that the payment of interest in 1846 alleged in the receipt was not, under the circumstances, a part payment or an acknowledgment of the debt, so as to take the case out of the statute. Foster v. Dawber, 6 Ex. 839 ; 20 L. J., Ex. 385.

Upon a plaint brought in the county court to recover two years' interest due upon a promissory note, against the representatives of the deceased maker of the note, they pleaded the Statute of Limitations, in answer to which plea an acknowledgment within six years was given in evidence, and judgment was given for the plaintiff, and the defendants thereupon paid into court the amount of the judgment :—Held, in an action brought to recover the principal and further interest thereon two years after such payment into court and more than six years after the acknowledgment proved in such plaint, that such payment did not necessarily imply a promise to pay the principal, and therefore was no evidence of an acknowledgment to pay the debt within six years, so as to take the case out of the Statute of Limitations, 21 Jac. 1, c. 16, s. 3. Morgan v. Rowlands, 41 L. J., Q. B. 187 ; L. R. 7 Q. B. 493 ; 26 L. T. 855 ; 20 W. R. 726.

Part payment of a debt does not take it out of the operation of the 21 Jac. 1, c. 16, unless it is made under such circumstances that a promise to pay the remainder may be reasonably inferred from it. Ib.

A payment made under an order of the Landed Estates Court, in presence of a debtor, on account of the creditor's demand is an acknowledgment by part payment. Cronin v. Dennehy, Ir. R. 3 C. L. 289.

Payment by Trustee under Composition Deed.]—See Linley v. Bonsor, col. 131.

Words accompanying Payment.]—See Evans v. Davies, col. 142.

By Bill, Dates from Delivery.]—When a debtor draws a bill of exchange, to be applied in part payment of the debt, and the bill is paid, when due, by the drawee to the creditor, it operates as a part payment, to defeat the statute, only from the time of the delivery of the bill by the debtor, not from the time of its payment. Irving v. Veitch, 3 M. & W. 90 ; Mur. & H. 313 ;

7 L. J., Ex. 25. See Gowan v. Forster, 3 B. & Ad. 507.

Immaterial that Bill afterwards dishonoured.]—Giving a bill of exchange in payment on account of a debt, under circumstances which raise an implication of a promise to pay the balance, is a payment within the proviso of 9 Geo. 4, c. 14, s. 1, and therefore takes the debt out of the statute, notwithstanding the bill is afterwards dishonoured. Turney v. Dodwell, 3 El. & Bl. 136; 2 C. L. R. 666; 23 L. J., Q. B. 137; 18 Jur. 187.

Indorsements on Notes.]—When an indorsement on a note of payment of interest made by the authority of a deceased holder appears to have been made after the statute had run, it is not evidence to exclude the operation of the statute. Briggs v. Wilson, 5 De G. M. & G. 12; 2 Eq. R. 153. And see 9 Geo. 4, c. 14, s. 3.

Appropriation, when some of the Debts are Statute-barred.]—A bill of exchange for 375*l.* given generally towards payment of a running account of over 1,000*l.*, some items of which had been due longer than six years, takes the whole account out of the statute. Curlewis v. Mornington, 5 W. R. 491.

For many years F. & Co. had been employed as commission agents by E. & Co. to effect sales for them. The course of business was as follows: E. & Co. sent goods to the firm, who forwarded them to the purchasers, received the purchase-money, and accounted to E. & Co. for the same after deducting commission. On August 29, 1894, E. & Co. sent the firm a statement of account shewing a balance due to E. & Co. of 494*l.* 6*s.* 4*d.* This was arrived at by debiting F. & Co., first, with a series of items which, on the face of the account, had become due within six years from the date when the account was sent; and secondly, with certain items included in a "consignment account." All the items under the heading "Consignment account" were in August, 1894, statute-barred with the exception of two. F. & Co. sent a cheque in September, 1894, for 300*l.* "on account," and stated that they would "thoroughly examine statements next week, and close up the affair altogether if possible." The 300*l.* so paid was by E. & Co. placed to the credit of the consignment account. Nothing further was done down to the death of one of the partners in F. & Co., against whose estate E. & Co. sought to prove for the balance due to them. The Statute of Limitations was relied on:—Held, that the existence of a fiduciary relation between the parties did not prevent the defence of the statute being set up. Burdick v. Garrick (39 L. J., Ch. 369; L. R. 5 Ch. 233) and Soar v. Ashwell, ([1893] 2 Q. B. 390) distinguished. Friend, In re, Friend v. Friend, 66 L. J., Ch. 737; [1897] 2 Ch. 421; 77 L. T. 50; 46 W. R. 139.

Held further, that the appropriation by E. & Co. of the 300*l.* to the consignment account did not operate to take the case out of the statute, but that the payment was an acknowledgment by F. & Co. that there was pending between them and E. & Co. an account relating to the several items mentioned in the statement, including the consignment account, from which a promise to pay the balance of the account when ascertained ought to be inferred, and that consequently E. & Co. were entitled to prove in respect of the items in the consignment account. Mills v. Fowkes (5 Bing. (N.C.) 455; 8 L. J., C. P. 276), and Nash v. Hodgson (6 De G. M. & G. 474; 25 L. J., Ch. 186) distinguished. Ib.

Where a debtor owes his creditor some debts from a period longer than six years, and others from a period within six years, and pays a sum without appropriating it to any particular debt, such payment is not a payment on account, to take out of the statute the debts due longer than six years. Mills v. Fowkes, 7 Scott, 444; 5 Bing. (N.C.) 455; 2 Arn. 62; 8 L. J., C. P. 276; 3 Jur. 406.

But the creditor may, at any time, apply such payment to the debts due longer than six years. Ib.

And may manifest his election to make such application by bringing an action within a reasonable time after such payment. Ib.

A. owed B. three sums on three several promissory notes, dated respectively in 1839, 1840, 1841. In 1846 B. applied for interest, and A. paid 5*l.* on account of interest generally, and a few days afterwards B., without the knowledge or concurrence of A., made a memorandum on the note of 1841, that the payment had been made on account of interest thereon. At the time of this payment two of the notes were barred by the statute:—Held, that the payment of the interest generally could not be referred exclusively to the two notes that were barred, but must be referred, either to the three notes, or to the one not barred: and, in either view the effect of the payment was to take the note of 1841 out of the statute. Nash v. Hodgson, 6 De G. M. & G. 474; 25 L. J., Ch. 186; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 946.

Semble, the appropriation by the creditor, without the knowledge or consent of the debtor, will not, per se, furnish sufficient ground for raising against the debtor a new promise to pay. Ib.

Semble, where there is a payment of a smaller sum on account of a large, that payment takes the case out of the statute as to all sums of money not barred by the statute at the time of the payment, but it can have no effect in reviving a debt then barred by the statute if the payment can be attributed to any sum not then barred by the statute. Ib.

In 1877, an action was commenced to administer the estate of A., who owed B. 1,864*l.* for cash advances from time to time made to her by B. from the year 1851, down to the time of her death in 1877. Most of the advances were made before 1871. B. claimed to prove for the entire debt, alleging that a small cash payment made by A. in 1872, and again in 1873, were payments made on account of the general balance of the debt:—Held, on the evidence, that the payments in question were specific repayments made in respect of particular advances, and that the general balance of the debt was statute-barred. Rainforth, In re, Gwynn v. Gwynn, 49 L. J., Ch. 5; 41 L. T. 610—C. A.

Application of Income by Trustee.] — The application by a trustee of the income of trust property received by him, to the partial liquidation of a debt due to him by his cestui que trust, will, if made by the authority of the latter, prevent the residue of the debt from being affected by the Statute of Limitations, in respect of the lapse of time preceding the last application. Stewart v. Connick, Ir. R. 5 C. L. 562.

Evidence of Appropriation of Money in Hands of Solicitor to Payment of Costs.]—See Waugh v. Cope, col. 142.

Several Items.]—Semble, that part payment will not bar the statute, where the debt to which it is applied consists of several items. Brigstocke v. Smith, 3 Tyr. 445; 1 C. & M. 483; 2 L. J., Ex. 187.

Payment of specific Part of Account.] — Between Midsummer, 1845, and Lady-day, 1854, the guardians of the Wycombe Union made payments by way of relief to non-settled paupers of the Eton Union. The only authority for these payments were letters written in 1847, 1849, and 1850, in which the guardians of the Eton Union requested the guardians of the Wycombe Union to make weekly payments to certain paupers. One of these letters stated that "the money would be repaid quarterly," and another stated that "if they would furnish an account at the end of each quarter they would be repaid." In July, 1850, the guardians of the Wycombe Union sent to the guardians of the Eton Union an account, in which they claimed a balance (after giving credit for a payment made in November, 1849), for relief of non-settled paupers of the Eton Union, from Lady-day, 1845, to Lady-day, 1847, and from Lady-day, 1849, to Lady-day, 1850. No previous account had been sent in or claim made in respect thereof:—Held, that the payment not being generally on account, did not take the case out of the statute. Wycombe Union Guardians v. Eton Union Guardians, 1 H. & N. 687.

Payment in respect of one of two Sums secured by one Bond.]—See Ashlin v. Lee, col. 317.

On Account of Unascertained Balance.]—A creditor, who had, more than six years before, supplied ships' stores on seven separate occasions to the debtor, amounting in the aggregate to more than 300*l*., within six years, asked his debtor for money. The debtor answered that he had not looked into his accounts, but supposed the balance due to be between 90*l*. and 100*l*., but he had not cash. Being pressed, he accepted a draft at four months for 60*l*., taking an acknowledgment that he had given the acceptance on account. It was proved by other evidence that the amount unpaid for the ships' stores was 95*l*.: but the different accounts were never balanced or ascertained between the creditor and the debtor:—Held, that evidence of the giving of the acceptance under these circumstances was evidence to go to the jury of a payment on account of all the debts, so as to be evidence of a fresh promise to pay what was due, sufficient to take the whole out of the statute. Walker v. Butler, 6 El. & Bl. 506; 25 L. J., Q. B. 377; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 687.

By Delivery of Goods.]—A delivery of goods by a debtor to his creditor in liquidation of a previous debt, is a sufficient part payment. Hooper v. Stevens, 4 A. & E. 71; 1 H. & W. 480; 5 N. & M. 635; 7 Car. & P. 260; 5 L. J., K. B. 4. S. P., Hart v. Naish or Nash, 2 C. M. & R. 337; 1 Gale, 171; 5 Tyr. 955. See also Collinson v. Margesson, 27 L. J., Ex. 305.

A., having authority to collect the debts of a firm, agreed with B., who was indebted to the firm, to purchase goods from him, and to allow him the amount of the purchase-money in his account with the firm, and drew a cheque including that amount, and delivered the same to the bankers of the firm. The greater part of B.'s debt to the firm was incurred beyond the period of the statute:—Held, that there was sufficient evidence of a part payment to prevent the operation of the statute. Pearce v. Selby, 6 Jur. 896.

By Settlement of Cross Accounts.]—Where A. has an account against B., some of the items of which are more than six years old, and B. has a cross account against A., and they meet and go through both accounts, and a balance is struck in A.'s favour, this amounts to an agreement to set off B.'s claim against the earlier items of A.'s, out of which arises a new consideration for the payment of the balance, and takes the case out of the operation of the statute. Ashby v. James, 11 M. & W. 542; 12 L. J., Ex. 295.

The setting off a sum of money in an account stated and settled is a payment within the 9 Geo. 4, c. 14. Schuley v. Walton, 12 M. & W. 510; 13 L. J., Ex. 122; 8 Jur. 319.

By Maintaining Creditor's Child.]—In January, 1833, A. gave B., then a feme sole, his note for 24*l*. B., after having received part of the amount, died in 1834, leaving her husband, the plaintiff, surviving and one child. The plaintiff did not then take out letters of administration, but arranged with A. that the interest of the note should go towards the maintenance of B.'s child, then under the care of A. In September, 1839, A. and the plaintiff settled their accounts, and A. indorsed on the note a memorandum that all the interest upon the note was paid up to that date, but no money passed. In 1848 the child died. In 1853 the plaintiff took out letters of administration, and brought an action as administrator against A., to recover the amount of the note:—Held (dubitante Parke, B.), that there was a payment sufficient to take the case out of the statute, the maintenance of the child being treated by the parties as a money payment equivalent to the interest. Bodger v. Arch, 10 Ex. 333; 2 C. L. R. 1491; 24 L. J., Ex. 19.

Agreement between Cross Debtors that a Sum is to go to the Credit of One.]—One of two persons who had dealings together, and were mutually indebted to one another, had supplied some bricks on the credit of the other, in 1834, but no account had been delivered or made out on either side. In 1845 they signed, in duplicate, a memorandum, thus expressed: "It is agreed that Mr. R., in his general account, shall give credit to Dr. H. for 17*l*., being for bricks delivered in 1834":—Held, that this was insufficient to exclude the mutual debts from the operation of the statute. Hughes v. Paramore, 7 De G. M. & G. 229; 24 L. J., Ch. 681; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 1101; 3 W. R. 388; 3 Eq. R. 677.

Not a Fraudulent Preference to Revive Statute-Barred Debt.]—A debtor paid a sum of 5*l.* to his creditor within three months of his bankruptcy, with the intention of reviving a debt which was statute-barred, but which had always been treated by both debtor and creditor as valid and subsisting:—Held, that the payment was not void as a fraudulent preference, and operated to revive the debt. Gaze, Ex parte, Lane, In re, 58 L. ### b. By and to Agents, Representatives and Co-Debtors.

By the Mercantile Law Amendment Act, 1856 (19 & 20 Vict. c. 97), s. 14, one co-contractor, co-debtor, &c., shall not lose the benefit of the statute by reason only of a payment by any other co-contractor, &c.

By Agent.]—Payment by an agent of a sum of money on account of the whole debt:—Held, to take the case out of the Statute of Limitations. Forster v. Thompson, 2 Con. & L. 568; 4 Dr. & War. 303; 6 Ir. Eq. R. 168.

By Trustee—Against Instructions.]—To shew a part payment within six years, the creditor proved a payment of a portion of his demand by the trustee under a deed of composition, who was expressly instructed to make the payment as a full satisfaction, instead of which he handed the money over as a part payment, and took a receipt accordingly. This payment so made was expressly repudiated by the debtor:—Held, that this was not a payment within the exception. Linley or Linsell v. Bonsor, 2 Scott, 399; 2 Bing. (N.C.) 241; 1 Hodges, 305; 5 L. J., C. P. 40.

By Receiver.]—A., B. and C. carried on business as co-partners under articles containing a covenant by which the partnership effects were made a security for the repayment of the sum in which the concern might be indebted to any partner; and the other parties covenanted to make up the deficiency, according to their equitable liability. After the death of A. and B. their respective personal representatives filed a bill against C. to take the accounts of the partnership, and a receiver was appointed, who got in the assets, and without the sanction of the court, but with the approbation of the parties, paid them to the executors of A., to whom the partnership was largely indebted, and the suit was not further prosecuted. These payments were insufficient to discharge the debt due to A.'s estate, and the estate of B. remained liable to the estate of A. to a considerable amount in respect of that debt:—Held, that it not being proved that the receiver made the payments with the sanction of the personal representative of B. for the purpose of discharging the liability of C.'s estate, those payments did not take the demand against B.'s estate out of the statute. Whitley v. Lowe, 2 De G. & J. 704; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 815; 6 W. R. 819.

By Parish Officers.]—A parish vestry having agreed to borrow money for building almshouses, the defendants, being two of the parish officers, in 1830 gave to the testator, who advanced the money, a promissory note, signed thus:—

"J. H., "G. R., } Churchwardens. } Or others for the time being."

"J. E., "W. G., } Overseers. }

Interest on this note had been regularly paid by the overseers for the time being up to 1847, and had been by them debited to the parish. An action having been brought upon the note, and the statute pleaded:—Held, that the very form of the note made the existing parish officers the agents of the defendants for the payment of the interest on the note, and therefore that the judge was wrong in withdrawing the form of the note from the consideration of the jury, and stating that the question was, whether the interest had been paid with the authority or knowledge of the defendants. Jones v. Hughes or Evans, 5 Ex. 104; 19 L. J., Ex. 200.

The payment of interest on a note given by churchwardens on the parish account from time to time by the vestry, is a sufficient acknowledgment of the debt, as against the makers: a fortiori, where one of them has audited the parish accounts, in which payments of interest on the note are entered. Crew v. Petit, 3 N. & M. 456. S. C., nom. Rew v. Pettet, 1 A. & E. 196.

To Third Party.]—Accounts between G. and D., drawn up by G., more than six years old, shewed sums due from him for interest and payments made by him of rent for D. The first payment of rent appeared to be without express authority. In subsequent accounts the rent was treated as deductions from the sum due for interest, and as having been paid for D., and were classed with cash payments on account. Afterwards the direct interest account disappeared, but G. stated accounts on one side only, in which he charged the rents as paid for D. In the early periods the interest and rent nearly balanced each other in amount; in later periods, by a lowering of the rent, the interest exceeded. The payments of rent were proved to have been continued down to 1841. In an action by D. for money lent:—Held, that the jury might infer that the payments of rent were made by G., as agent for D., out of the interest due to D., in which case they were payments of interest, and would take the case out of the statute. Worthington v. Grimsditch, 7 Q. B. 479; 15 L. J., Q. B. 52; 10 Jur. 26.

Where money is paid by a debtor on behalf of a creditor, the character of such payments is matter rather of evidence than of law. Ib.

By Third Party.]—The defendant, in order to obtain an advance of money, gave a note to H., a customer of the plaintiffs, who were bankers. H. indorsed the note to the plaintiffs on obtaining the money, with which he was debited by them. The defendant was debited by H. with the amount, and H. had paid interest on the note to the plaintiffs within six years:—Held, that these payments did not take the note out of the statute as against the defendant, H. not being his agent for that purpose. Harding v. Edgecumbe, 28 L. J., Ex. 313.

To Personal Representatives.]—The payment of interest upon a note by the makers to the personal representatives of the payee within six years of the commencement of the action, is a sufficient acknowledgment, although the letters of administration under which the party claimed to whom the payments were made, were not obtained in the diocese in which the note was bonum notabile. Clarke v. Hooper, 4 M. & Scott, 353; 10 Bing. 480; 3 L. J., C. P. 159. See comments on this case in Stamford Banking Co. v. Smith, col. 134.

By Executor, but not in Representative Character.]—In an action by the payee of a note for 300*l.*, against the surviving executors of W. P., the maker, the plaintiff proved that he had been supplied by J. P., the deceased executor, with malt and other articles, and he put in evidence an account between them, signed as follows: "Settled, J. P."; on one side of which the plaintiff was charged with various quantities of malt, and on the other side had credit for payments, there being amongst others the following item: "To one year's interest, 15*l.*":—Held, that this settlement of account was evidence of payment of the 15*l.* by J. P., but not in his representative character. Scholey v. Walton, 12 M. & W. 510; 13 L. J., Ex. 122; 8 Jur. 319.

Semble, per Parke, B., payment by one of several executors, of a debt due from the testator, is not sufficient to take the case out of the statute as against his co-executors, even though made by him in his executive capacity. Ib.

To Executor, whether in Representative Character, Question for Jury.]—Where the action is by an executor, who has also claims due to himself in his own right, it will be for the jury to consider whether the payments were upon account of the debt due to the testator, or to the executor in his own right. Collinson v. Margesson, 27 L. J., Ex. 305.

By Executors who are also Trustees of Real Estate.]—Payment of interest is an acknowledgment of a debt; and upon a general acknowledgment of a debt, where nothing is said to prevent it, a general promise to pay is to be implied; and such an acknowledgment made by a party filling the two characters of beneficial devisee and executor will be attributed to both characters, and not to one only, for the moral obligation does not attach more to one character than to the other. But it is otherwise where the characters held by the party are entirely distinct, as where he is personally liable as debtor, and is answerable also in the character of executor or trustee of another; for he then represents two persons, and the question in such a case is by whom the promise is made, and not what is its extent or effect. Payment of interest of a debt of the testator by his executors, they being also trustees of his real estate not subjected by the will to debts, does not necessarily keep the debt alive as against such real estate, for, although the executors and trustees were the same persons, they filled different characters; and where the payment was made by them in the character of executors only, the real estate was not affected by it. Fordham v. Wallis, 10 Hare, 217; 22 L. J., Ch. 548; 17 Jur. 228; 1 W. R. 118.

Payment of interest on a debt of the testator by his executors keeps alive the debt as against residuary legatees. Ib.

By Tenant for Life.]—Payment by a devisee for life of interest on a simple contract debt of his testator, is a sufficient acknowledgment to keep the right of action alive against all parties interested in remainder. The law in regard to the payment of interest by a tenant for life on a simple contract debt stands on the same footing as that in respect of payment of interest on a specialty debt. Roddam v. Morley (1 De G. & J. 1) discussed and considered. Hollingshead, In re, Hollingshead v. Webster, 57 L. J., Ch. 400; 37 Ch. D. 651; 58 L. T. 758; 36 W. R. 660.

To Cestui que Trust preserves Claim by Trustees.]—A father bequeathed to his two daughters 250*l.* each, to be paid when they arrived at the age of twenty-one, and, till that period, the expenses of board, clothes, and education to be borne and paid by his executors. He appointed executors and also trustees, with all necessary powers to fulfil the will. At a meeting of the trustees and executors for the purpose of settling the testator's affairs, the executors paid over to the trustees 500*l.*, to be set apart for the payment of the legacies to the daughters, when they attained their majority. This sum was afterwards lent by the trustees to the defendant on a note, which described them as "trustees acting under the will of the late Mr. W. B.":—Held, that a payment of principal and interest to one of the legatees within six years was sufficient to take the case out of the statute, and that the trustees had a right to maintain an action on the note. Megginson v. Harper, 2 C. & M. 322; 4 Tyr. 94; 3 L. J., Ex. 50.

To Original Holder of Note after he has assigned.]—Part payment on account of a debt will not prevent the operation of the Statute of Limitations, unless made to the creditor or his agent. Stamford Banking Co. v. Smith, 61 L. J., Q. B. 405; [1892] 1 Q. B. 765; 66 L. T. 306; 40 W. R. 355; 56 J. P. 229—C. A.

The payee of a promissory note made by the defendant indorsed the note and pledged it with the plaintiffs. The defendant, having no notice of the indorsement, paid off the amount due on the note by several instalments to the pledgor. On one such instalment being paid the pledgor informed the plaintiffs thereof, who made an entry in their books that the note was pro tanto discharged:—Held, in an action on the note, first, that the instalment of which the plaintiffs had notice was not made to the pledgor as agent for the plaintiffs, and, therefore, was not a part payment sufficient to prevent the operation of the Statute of Limitations; secondly (by Lord Herschell), that, if the plaintiffs could adopt the pledgor as their agent for the purpose of that instalment, they could not, without previous notice to the defendant, repudiate his agency with respect to the other instalments, but must treat the note as wholly discharged. Ib.

To Husband for Wife.]—A feme sole being a payee of a note payable with interest, married, and her husband survived her:—Held, that the note did not become the property of the husband, but passed to her administrator, though the husband had received the interest during her life; for that he did not thereby reduce the chose in action into possession; and that the payment of such interest in his wife's lifetime, to the husband, within six years before action, must be considered as made to him in the character of an agent to the wife, and was an answer to a plea of the statute. Hart v. Stephens, 6 Q. B. 937; 14 L. J., Q. B. 148; 9 Jur. 225.

By Wife—Without Privity of Husband.]—A declaration against husband and wife, upon a joint and several note made by the wife, before coverture, and A., alleged a promise by the wife, dum sola. The plaintiffs proved a payment of interest within six years, made by the wife after marriage, with money sent by A., but without the privity or subsequent ratification of the husband:—Held, that such payment raised no promise, either by the husband or the wife, so as to take the case out of the statute; inasmuch as, the wife being incapable of making any promise in law, expressed or implied, payment by her or the other joint maker of the note could create no promise on her part; and, as such payment was not made by the husband, or for any consideration affecting him, or with his sanction, it raised no implied promise on his part. Neve v. Holland, 18 Q. B. 262; 21 L. J., Q. B. 289; 16 Jur. 933.

By Co-Debtors.]—Payment on account of a debt by one joint contractor will bind the other, although he may have no notice of such payment. Manderston v. Robertson, 7 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 251; 4 M. & Ry. 440.

The statute 19 & 20 Vict. c. 97, s. 14, does not apply to a payment made before the act. Jackson v. Woolley, 8 El. & Bl. 778; 27 L. J., Q. B. 448; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 656; 6 W. R. 686—Ex. Ch. Contra, Thompson v. Waithman, col. 137.

When a payment by one co-debtor is made with the mere knowledge and consent of the other, the latter does not lose the benefit of the statute. S. C., 27 L. J., Q. B. 181; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 409; 6 W. R. 223.

To a plea of the statute on a note, the plaintiff replied that the note was made by the defendant jointly with P., and that within six years before action P. paid the plaintiff interest on the note:—Held, that, assuming the payment to have been made before the 19 & 20 Vict. c. 97, the replication was bad on general demurrer. Ridd v. Moggridge, 2 H. & N. 567.

Under 9 Geo. 4, c. 14, a payment of interest within six years by one of several joint contractors took the debt out of the statute as against all. Wyatt v. Hodson, 8 Bing. 209; 1 M. & Scott, 442; 1 L. J., C. P. 93. S. P., Chippendale v. Thurston, 4 Car. & P. 98; M. & M. 411. Pease v. Hirst, 10 B. & C. 122; 5 M. & Ry. 88; 8 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 94.

—— By Principal Debtor — Principal and Surety—Several Liability.]—Where a principal and surety are severally liable for a debt, a payment by the principal does not prevent the Statute of Limitations from running in favour of the surety. The law in this respect was the same before the passing of the Mercantile Law Amendment Act, 1856. Wolmershausen, In re, Wolmershausen v. Wolmershausen, 62 L. T. 541; 38 W. R. 537.

—— Joint and Several Liability.]—In 1853 H. as principal and the defendant as a surety, gave a joint and several note to the plaintiff, payable on demand. In 1861 H. made an assignment for the benefit of his creditors, and the defendant signed and gave the following letter to the plaintiff: "I consent to your receiving the dividend under H.'s assignment, and agree that your so doing shall not prejudice your claim upon me for the same debt." The plaintiff accordingly received a dividend on the note, and afterwards brought an action on it against the defendant for the balance:—Held, that the payment of the dividend, coupled with the letter, did not amount to more than a payment only by one co-debtor under 19 & 20 Vict. c. 97, s. 14, and that therefore the other co-debtor was entitled to the benefit of the statute by virtue of that section. Cockrill v. Sparke, 1 H. & C. 699; 32 L. J., Ex. 118; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 307; 7 L. T. 752; 11 W. R. 428.

A payment of interest by A. on the joint and several note of A. and B. was evidence of a promise by B., and, before 19 & 20 Vict. c. 97, s. 14, took the note out of the statute, though B. was a mere surety, and the payment was made without his knowledge. Burleigh v. Stott, 2 M. & Ry. 93; 8 B. & C. 36; 6 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 232.

—— Payment of Interest by Mortgagor keeps alive Remedy against Surety.]—See Frisby, In re, Allison v. Frisby, col. 292.

—— By one Partner.]—One of two partners must be presumed, in the absence of proof to the contrary, to have authority to make a payment on account of a debt due by the firm, so as to take the debt out of the operation of the Statute of Limitations as against the other. A., one of the partners in a firm, gave instructions to G., their solicitor, to put in force and realise a bill of sale held by the firm as security from a customer and to place the proceeds when received "to the account of the firm," who were then indebted to G. for his bill of costs. G. now sued A. and B., the partners, for the balance of his account. B. pleaded the Statute of Limitations:—Held, that as every partner must be presumed, in the absence of evidence to the contrary, to have the authority of his co-partner to apply the partnership assets in discharge of partnership debts, and that as there was no such evidence in this case, there was a part payment sufficient to take the case out of the operation of the Statute of Limitations. Goodwin v. Parton, 41 L. T. 91.

A. and B., partners, gave a promissory note in the name of the firm. A. died, leaving B. his sole executor, and no proceedings were taken against his estate for more than six years; but B., who continued the business, made payments of interest, and then became bankrupt:—Held, that the payments were made in his character of surviving partner, and not as executor of A., and that, having regard to the 19 & 20 Vict. c. 97, s. 14, the debt was barred as against the estate of A. Thompson v. Waithman, 3 Drew. 628; 26 L. J., Ch. 134; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 1080; 5 W. R. 30.

A payment made by one partner after the dissolution of partnership on account of a partnership debt, and after six years had elapsed without any acknowledgment of the debt, was sufficient to take the case out of the operation of the statute, as against the other partner, though the jury found that the payment was fraudulently made, against his consent, and in concert with the creditor to revive the debt. Goddard v. Ingram, 3 Q. B. 839; 3 G. & D. 46; 12 L. J., Q. B. 9; 6 Jur. 1060.

The Mercantile Law Amendment Act, 19 & 20 Vict. c. 97, s. 14, applies to a case of dissolution of partnership where agency has not been expressly or impliedly created, between the persons who were formerly partners. Watson v. Woodman, 45 L. J., Ch. 57; L. R. 20 Eq. 721; 24 W. R. 47.

W. T., a member of a firm, was jointly and severally liable in a sum of money deposited with the firm by the trustees of a will. In 1883 W. T. retired from the firm, and a deed of dissolution was executed by which it was agreed that W. T.'s retirement should not be made known for a year, and then that it should be optional whether it should be gazetted; that the continuing partners should take and collect all the assets and should pay all the debts and liabilities, and should indemnify W. T. against them, and should pay him a certain sum by instalments; and that so long as any money remained due to him he should have power on giving notice to collect the debts due to the firm and to re-enter on the premises and carry on the business himself. W. T.'s retirement was never gazetted, and the business was carried on in the old name of the firm. Down to 1891 interest was regularly paid to the testator's estate on the loan by cheques drawn in the name of the firm:—Held, in a suit by the beneficiaries under the will, that, as against W. T., the debt was not barred by the Statute of Limitations, notwithstanding s. 14 of the Mercantile Law Amendment Act; for that, considering the terms of the deed of dissolution and the fact that the retirement of W. T. was kept secret, the payment of interest, after his retirement, by the continuing partners, must be taken to have been made by them on his behalf and as his agents. Watson v. Woodman (supra) distinguished. Tucker, In re, Tucker v. Tucker, 63 L. J., Ch. 737; [1894] 3 Ch. 429; 12 R. 141; 71 L. T. 453—C. A.

B. deposited 110*l.* with Messrs. H. B. L., C. F., E. L. and C. S. F., bankers, upon a deposit note, payable twenty days after sight. In June, 1833, H. B. L. died, having devised his real and personal estate to trustees, one of whom was his son, upon trust to raise money to pay his debts, and subject thereto upon trust for his son, whom he appointed sole executor. The son was admitted a partner in the bank. In 1835 E. L. died, and in 1843 C. F. died. C. S. F. and the son continued the business, but became bankrupts in 1847. B., from the death of H. B. L., received interest at the bank upon his deposit note until the bankruptcy, when he proved his debt against the bankrupts' estate; and on a bill filed to make the real and personal estate of H. B. L. liable to the payment of the 110*l.*:—Held, that the interest was not paid by the continuing partners, as agents of H. B. L.; that no agency could be implied; that the interest was paid on account of the firm; that all claim against the real and personal estate was barred by the statute in six years; that B. had accepted the surviving partners as his debtors, and the devise made by H. B. L. for payment of debts was satisfied. Brown v. Gordon, 16 Beav. 302; 22 L. J., Ch. 65; 1 W. R. 2.

—— Payment of Interest by one Partner on Client's Money misapplied by him will not preserve Right of Action of Client against Firm.]—See Sims v. Brutton, col. 57.

—— Before 19 & 20 Vict. c. 97, s. 14—By Joint Makers of Bills and Notes and their Executors.]—A payment by one of two joint makers of a promissory note of any interest due on the note prevents the other joint maker from availing himself of the Statute of Limitations. Woodward, Ex parte, Turner, In re (Case 1), 3 Mont. & Ayr. 609; 3 Deac. 290.

Where a debt, due jointly from several persons, has been barred by the statute, subsequent payment of interest by or on account of one debtor will not revive it against the others. Woodward, Ex parte, Turner, In re (Case 3), 3 Mont. & Ayr. 609, 615; 3 Deac. 294.

A. and B. made a joint promissory note, ten years after the date of which B. executes an assignment of his property, in trust for his creditors, under which a dividend is paid to the holder of the note. A. becomes bankrupt:—Held, that the payment of the dividend under B.'s assignment, being after the Statute of Limitations had already run, did not revive the debt as against A., so as to enable the holder to prove on the note under the fiat against A. Ib.

Payment of interest by one of the makers of a joint and several note, though made more than six years after it became due, was sufficient as against the other maker. Channell v. Ditchburn, 5 M. & W. 494; 9 L. J., Ex. 1; 3 Jur. 1107.

One of two makers of a joint and several note having become a bankrupt, the payee received a dividend under the commission on account of the note:—Held, that this would prevent the other maker from availing himself of the statute for the remainder of the money due on the note: the dividend having been received within six years before the action brought. Jackson v. Fairbank, 2 H. Bl. 340.

But where one of two joint drawers of a bill of exchange became bankrupt, and under his commission the indorsees proved a debt (beyond the amount of the bill) for goods sold, and exhibited the bill as a security they then held for their debt, and afterwards received a dividend:—Held, in an action by the indorsees of the bill against the solvent partner, that the statute was a good defence, although the dividend had been paid by the assignees of the bankrupt partner within six years. Brandram v. Wharton, 1 B. & Ald. 463; 19 R. R. 354, 357.

A. having applied to B. for a loan of 300*l.* on mortgage, B., doubting the sufficiency of the security, refused to advance it without having, in addition, a joint and several note for 50*l.* from A. and C., payable on demand. The note and mortgage were accordingly given, the latter containing a covenant by A. to pay the 300*l.*, and interest at 5*l.* per cent. Several half-yearly payments of 7*l.* 10*s.* each for interest having been made by A.:—Held, in an action against C. upon the note, that such payments by A. kept all the securities alive, and prevented the operation of the statute as to the note. Dowling v. Ford, 11 M. & W. 329; 12 L. J., Ex. 342.

A. and B. made a joint and several note, and, after the lapse of six years, A. died, leaving B. one of his executors, who ten years after his death paid interest on the note, but not in his character of executor, but personally as a maker of the note. In an action on the note by the executors of the payee, against the executors of A.:—Held, that the payment of interest by B. (who suffered judgment by default) within six years from the commencement of the action, was not sufficient so as to make A.'s executors liable. Atkins v. Tredgold, 3 D. & R. 200; 2 B. & C. 23; 1 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 228; 26 R. R. 254.

After the death of one maker of a joint and several note, signed by two, a payment upon it by the executor of the deceased party did not take the debt out of the statute as against the survivor. Slater v. Lawson, 1 B. & Ad. 396; 9 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 4.

c. After Action.

Part payment after action will not take a debt out of the statute. Bateman v. Pinder, 2 G. & D. 790; 3 Q. B. 574; 11 L. J., Q. B. 281.

Paying money into court for goods sold and delivered does not deprive a defendant of the benefit of the statute as to the residue of the demand. Long v. Greville, 4 D. & R. 632; 3 B. & C. 10; 2 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 205.

And payment of the principal into court, the claim for which is barred by the statute, will not take the claim of interest out of the statute. Collyer v. Willock, 12 Moore, 557; 4 Bing. 313; 5 L. J. (O.S.) C. P. 181. See Lechmere v. Fletcher, 1 C. & M. 623; 3 Tyr. 450. And see Morgan v. Rowlands, col. 126.

d. Proof of.

By 9 Geo. 4, c. 14, s. 3, no indorsement of a payment on a note, bill, or writing, by the party to whom payment is made, is to be deemed proof of such payment, so as to take the case out of the statute.

Indorsement on Notes.]—Indorsements on a promissory note, admitting the receipt of interest, are presumed to have been written at the time they bear date. Smith v. Battens, 1 M. & Rob. 341.

Where an indorsement on a promissory note of payment of interest made by the authority of a deceased holder appears to have been made after the Statute of Limitations had run, it is not evidence to exclude the operation of the statute. Briggs v. Wilson, 5 De G. M. & G. 12.

In a case unaffected by Lord Tenterden's Act, the words, "interest on this note paid up to the 13th day of May, 1852," indorsed upon a promissory note in the handwriting of a person who was in the habit of transacting business for both the maker and payee of the note, were held sufficient to take the note out of the operation of the statute. S. C., 17 Beav. 330.

See Rutherford, In re, Brown v. Rutherford, col. 5.

—— By Payee before Indorsement to Holder.]—See Gale v. Capern, col. 146.

Memorandum by Agent.]—A witness, who said he settled all kinds of accounts for the defendant, admitted that an account containing a memorandum of a payment on the part of the defendant was in his own handwriting, but said he could not recollect the fact of payment:—Held, nevertheless, that there was sufficient evidence to go to a jury, as to the fact of payment, to take the case out of the statute. Trentham v. Deverill, 4 Scott, 128; 3 Bing. (N.C.) 397.

—— By Executor.]—In an action by the executor of a payee of a note against the maker, in order to take the case out of the statute, he produced a book in which he had made memoranda by the direction of the testatrix, of payments of interest by the defendant to the testatrix within six years:—Held, admissible, and not excluded by 9 Geo. 4, c. 14, s. 3. Bradley v. James, 13 C. B. 822; 1 C. L. R. 494; 22 L. J., C. P. 193; 1 W. R. 388.

Unsigned or Parol Acknowledgment of Payment.]—An acknowledgment of payment, in writing, although unsigned, is sufficient to take a debt out of the statute. Cleave v. Jones, 6 Ex. 573; 20 L. J., Ex. 238; 15 Jur. 515—Ex. Ch.

To a note for 350*l.*, with interest, the debtor pleaded the statute. At the trial the only evidence given by the creditor was the following unsigned entry in a book of the debtor's, and in her handwriting: "1843. Cleave's Int. on 350*l.*—17*l.* 10*s.*:—Held, sufficient evidence of payment of interest to the creditor to take the case out of the statute. Ib.

Part payment of principal or payment of interest on account of a debt is not affected by 9 Geo. 4, c. 14, s. 3, and therefore a parol acknowledgment of payment within six years before action will take the case out of the statute. Ib.

In an action by payee against maker of a note, to rebut a plea of the statute, the plaintiff proved the fact of a payment on account of the note within six years, and he further proved a parol admission by the party paying that he had made this payment:—Held, that this admission was rightly received to corroborate the direct proof of the fact of payment, as 9 Geo. 4, c. 14, s. 3, merely excludes the acknowledgment "by words only." Bevan or Beavan v. Gething or Gethin, 3 Q. B. 740; 3 G. & D. 59; 12 L. J., Q. B. 37; 6 Jur. 971.

Part payment, proved only by the defendant's verbal or unsigned admission, will not take the case out of the statute. Bayley v. Ashton, 12 Ad. & E. 493; 4 P. & D. 214; 9 L. J., Q. B. 376. Willis v. Newham, 3 Y. & J. 518. Maghee v. O'Neil, 10 L. J., Ex. 326; 7 M. & W. 531. Eastwood v. Seville, 11 L. J., Ex. 383; 9 M. & W. 615. But see now Cleave v. Jones, supra.

Verbal Admissions of Payment by deceased Debtor.]—Evidence of verbal admissions, in 1850, by A., since deceased, that he owed a debt of 2,300*l.* to B.'s estate, the interest of which he was discharging by paying two annuities under B.'s will, together with a statement in an affidavit by B.'s executor in 1850, which was inserted in a draft affidavit from A.'s dictation, to the effect that B.'s executor had received in August, 1850, from A., a half-year's interest on 2,300*l.*, and had paid the annuities the same half-year, is sufficient to take the debt of 2,300*l.* out of the statute. Edwards v. James, 1 Kay & J. 534; 3 W. R. 566.

Whether Payments are in respect of General Balance.]—Where there are two debts, one of which is barred by the statute, and there is a part payment not specially appropriated by the debtor, it is a question for the jury whether the payment was made generally on account of whatever might be due from the debtor at the time, or on a particular account. Walker v. Butler, 6 El. & Bl. 506; 25 L. J., Q. B. 377; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 687. See Burn v. Boulton, infra.

In 1877 an action was commenced to administer the estate of A., who owed B. 1,864*l.* for cash advances from time to time made to her by B. from the year 1851 down to the time of her death in 1877. Most of the advances were made before 1871. B. claimed to prove for the entire debt, alleging that a small cash payment made by A. in 1872, and again in 1873, were payments made on account of the general balance of the debt:—Held, on the evidence, that the payments in question were specific repayments made in respect of particular advances, and that the general balance of the debt was statute-barred. Rainforth, In re, Gwynn v. Gwynn, 49 L. J., Ch. 5; 41 L. T. 610.

Evidence that Payments are in respect of Debt sued for.]—The plaintiff, an attorney, had done professional business of various kinds for the defendant in 1827 and several subsequent years. In July, 1832, the defendant having been a witness on a lunacy inquiry, in which the plaintiff was concerned as solicitor, the plaintiff wrote to him to ask what were his expenses on that occasion. The defendant, in reply, requested the plaintiff to allow what was usual, and place the same to his (the defendant's) account. In March, 1833, the plaintiff wrote to the defendant, informing him that the sums allowed were 2*l.* 2*s.* and 10*s.* 6*d.*, inclosing receipts for those sums for the defendant's signature, and concluding: "I will give you credit for the sums in my account against you, agreeably to your note of the 21st of July last." The defendant returned the receipts signed by him, and the 2*l.* 2*s.* and 10*s.* 6*d.* were paid to the plaintiff on the production of those receipts. In 1831 the plaintiff delivered to the defendant a bill of costs, amounting to 289*l.*, the first item being in 1827, and the two last in 1830 and 1831. These two were charges for 3*l.* and 5*l.* cash lent; the rest of the bill was for professional business. In an action on this bill, commenced in Jan. 1839:—Held, that the letters given in evidence did not sufficiently shew that the 2*l.* 2*s.* and 10*s.* 6*d.* were paid in the discharge of the debt for which the action was brought, so as to take the case out of the statute as to any part of the demand. Waugh v. Cope, 6 M. & W. 824; 10 L. J., Ex. 145. See Waller v. Lacy, 1 Scott (N.R.) 186; 1 Man. & G. 54; 8 D. P. C. 562; 9 L. J., C. P. 217; 4 Jur. 435.

Where there are two clear and undisputed debts, the case is not taken out of the statute, as to either debt, by evidence of a part payment within six years, not specifically appropriated to the one debt or the other. Burn v. Boulton, 2 C. B. 476; 15 L. J., C. P. 97.

Where a specific sum of money is due, as upon a note, the mere fact of a payment of a smaller sum by the debtor to the creditor, is some evidence of a part payment to take the case out of the statute. Ib.

In an action on a note bearing interest, proof that the defendant being sent to by the plaintiff for money, paid 1*l.*, and said, "This puts us straight for last year's interest, all but 18*s.*; some day next week I will bring that up," is sufficient answer to a plea of the statute, no evidence being given of any other debt being due. Evans v. Davies, 4 A. & E. 840; 2 H. & W. 15; 6 L. J., K. B. 268.

In an action for money lent, at the trial the plaintiff proved the transmission of the money to the defendant, and the payment by him of a half-yearly sum for interest up to a certain time, and produced an answer to a bill in chancery, in which the defendant admitted having paid the same half-yearly sum within six years, but asserted that it was paid by way of annuity and not of interest:—Held, that the evidence for the plaintiff was sufficient to go to the jury; that the construction of the admission in the answer was for the court; that the whole of it should have been left to the jury; and that they might believe the fact of the payments having been made half-yearly, but reject the residue, and infer from the other evidence that the payments were really made in respect of interest. Baildon v. Walton, 1 Ex. 617; 17 L. J., Ex. 357—Ex. Ch.

Words used at the time of making a payment qualify it, but it is for the jury to judge of the truth of a statement accompanying the admission of a previous payment. Ib.

The mere fact of the payment of a sum by a debtor to his creditor, is not enough to take a case out of the statute without some evidence to satisfy a jury, first that it was a payment of a debt, and next that it was not the discharge of a balance due, but a payment intended to be applied to the part discharge of the particular debt. Tippetts v. Heane, 1 C. M. & R. 252; 4 Tyr. 772; 3 L. J., Ex. 281.

The appropriation of a payment to a particular debt may be proved by declarations of the debtor, not contemporaneous with the payment. The defendant, being the maker of several promissory notes, was applied to on behalf of the holder for payment of interest. Two or three times he made excuses for his wife not having called and paid the interest. On several occasions the wife called and paid money:—Held, to be evidence for the jury of payment of interest on the notes, so as to take them out of the statute. Waters v. Tompkins, 2 C. M. & R. 723; 1 Tyr. & G. 137; 5 L. J., Ex. 61.

A letter not in itself sufficient to bar the statute may be left, with other evidence, to the jury, upon the question whether there have been payments or deliveries of goods, in part satisfaction of the debt, within the six years. It will be a question for the jury, whether the payments or deliveries of goods were made and received on account of the particular debt sued for. Collinson v. Margesson, 27 L. J., Ex. 305.

4. AGREEMENTS TO WAIVE THE STATUTE.

Consideration for.]—Semble, there may be an agreement, that in consideration of an inquiry into the merits of a disputed claim, no advantage shall be taken of the statute, in respect of the time employed in the inquiry, and an action may be brought for a breach of such agreement. East India Co. v. Paul, 7 Moore, P. C. 85; 14 Jur. 253.

A parol agreement was entered into between the executors of L. and T., that various old accounts between their testators should be settled without reference to the time that they had been running, and that a balance should be struck. The accounts were accordingly settled, and the executors of L. were allowed the value of a promissory note, which, but for the agreement, would have been barred by the statute. The executors of T. afterwards discovered a note from L. to T., which, but for the same reason, would have been barred by the statute:—Held, that the agreement was one for valuable consideration on both sides to waive the benefit of the statute, and ought to be enforced. Lade v. Trill, 11 L. J., Ch. 102; 6 Jur. 272.

In Consideration of Solicitors giving up Lien.]—In May, 1849, an order was made to wind up a company, and in the ensuing October the solicitors who had acted for the company carried in a claim against them for costs. In November, 1850, the solicitors, on the application of the official manager, delivered to him the company's books and papers, on which they had a lien for their costs, upon the official manager at the same time undertaking in writing to pay them the amount of their bill out of the first funds which might come into his hands. That undertaking received the sanction of the master. In 1859 the official manager recovered a sum of money, and the solicitors subsequently thereto sent in to him a larger bill of costs against the company:—Held, that having regard to the undertaking of the official manager, of November, 1850, the solicitors' claim was not barred by the Statute of Limitations; and an order was made to tax their bill of costs, without prejudice to the question whether they were entitled to have a call made to pay the same when taxed. Gloucester, Aberystwith and Central Wales Ry., In re, 29 L. J., Ch. 383; 2 Giff. 47.

Failure of Consideration for.]—Where accounts are referred to an arbitrator, with a special agreement as to the mode in which they are to be taken, and afterwards, upon the failure of the arbitration, the same accounts are referred to the master, he will be directed to take them in the ordinary way, and not according to the special agreement. Therefore, where, under such circumstances, it was one of the terms of the agreement that no advantage should be taken of the Statute of Limitations:— Held, that the master was not to be ruled by that stipulation. Cheslyn v. Dalby, 2 Y. & Coll. 170.

When Conditional.]—A., being indebted to B. on two overdue bills of exchange, gave a written undertaking as follows: "In consideration of your not proceeding on the bills, I hereby debar myself of the plea of the Statute of Limitations in case of my being sued for the recovery of the amounts of the bills, and I promise to pay them whenever my circumstances enable me to do so, and I may be called upon for that purpose":—Held, that the statute began to run as soon as A. became of ability to pay, although B. had had no notice or knowledge of such ability, and had made no demand of payment. Waters v. Thaner (Earl), 2 G. & D. 166; 2 Q. B. 757; 11 L. J., Q. B. 87; 6 Jur. 708.

VIII. PLEADINGS AND PROCEDURE.

See also post, B, XII., col. 331

Declaration when original Promise Barred.]—The plaintiff may declare on the original promise, although he relies on a subsequent promise, to take the case out of the statute. Leaper v. Tatton, 16 East, 420. S. P., Irving v. Veitch, 3 M. & W. 90; 7 L. J., Ex. 25.

A new promise infra sex annos need not be declared on specially, although made thirteen years after the accrual of the original cause of action. Upton v. Else, 12 Moore, 303; 5 L. J. (o.s.) C. P. 108.

But a promise to pay a debt, barred by the statute, if conditional, must be declared on as conditional, notwithstanding it was given within six years from the time of the contraction of the debt. Haydon v. Williams, 7 Bing. 163; 4 M. & P. 811; 9 L. J. (o.s.) C. P. 16.

Plea of the Statute.]—In trover by an administrator, "not guilty of the premises within six years," is a bad plea, not being equivalent to an allegation that the cause of action did not accrue within six years. Pratt v. Swaine, 2 M. & Ry. 350; 8 B. & C. 285; 6 L. J. (o.s.) K. B. 353.

To a declaration in an action founded on tort, a plea of not guilty of the supposed grievances in the declaration mentioned, within six years before the exhibiting the plaintiff's bill, was bad on special demurrer. Dyster v. Battye, 3 B. & Ald. 448.

So a plea that "the supposed debt, if any such there be," did not accrue within six years was bad on special demurrer, for not confessing the debt. Margetts v. Bays, 4 A. & E. 489 ; 6 N. & M. 228 ; 5 L. J., K. B. 105.

A plea that a debt accrued more than six years ago, without stating that it did not accrue within the six years, does not amount to an informal plea of the statute. Bush v. Martin, 2 H. & C. 311 ; 33 L. J., Ex. 17 ; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 347 ; 9 L. T. 510 ; 12 W. R. 205.

In an action for money due on a promissory note, payable with interest, the declaration stated, that the defendant had not paid the amount of the note and interest, "except interest on the note from its date up to a certain day within six years next before the commencement of the suit." The defendant pleaded the statute in the usual form :—Held, that the plea was good, because the interest was accessory to the principal ; and the allegation of the payment of the interest was merely a statement of evidence, which might or might not take the case out of the statute. Hollis v. Palmer, 3 Scott, 265 ; 2 Bing. (N.C.) 713 ; 2 Hodges, 55 ; 5 L. J., C. P. 264.

The Statute of Limitations must, under the new procedure, be pleaded, and cannot be raised by demurrer. Wakelee v. Davis, 25 W. R. 60.

A defence under the Statute of Limitations may in all cases be raised by demurrer. Noyes v. Crawley, 48 L. J., Ch. 112 ; 10 Ch. D. 31 ; 39 L. T. 266 ; 27 W. R. 109. But see, per Cairns, L.C., in Dawkins v. Penrhyn (Lord), 4 App. Cas. 51, and preceding case.

In an action for partnership accounts brought more than six years after the termination of the partnership, the defence of the statute may be raised by demurrer. Ib.

Where, on the face of the bill, it appeared that more than six years had elapsed since the cause of action, the defendant might demur. Hoare v. Peck, 6 Sim. 51 ; 2 L. J., Ch. 123.

Bill by annuitant under a will for an account and arrears against two administrators with the will annexed ; one pleaded the Statute of Limitations to so much as sought satisfaction for the arrears, or so much as was stated to have accrued due previous to six years before the bill ; he also, by answer, set up an agreement to relinquish the annuity ; plea overruled, without prejudice to insisting on the same matter by answer. Higgins v. Crawford, 2 Ves. J. 570.

Plea of Statute of Limitations to a bill for the discovery of evidence of debt good. Burdett v. Twysden, 2 Jur. 805.

To Action for Specific Performance, bad.]—See Talmarsh v. Muggleston, col. 151.

To Bill of Revivor.]—See Perry v. Jenkins, col. 50.

Statute must be Specially Pleaded.] — See R. S. C., 1883, Ord. XIX. r. 15.

Plea of the Statute by some joint Debtors, and not by others.]—Parties, who being joint and several debtors, had not availed themselves of the statute, and have been held liable to debts which the statute would have barred, cannot insist upon contribution from other joint and several debtors who have protected themselves by setting up the statute, from their liability in respect of the same debts. Semble. Fordham v. Wallis, 10 Hare, 231 ; 22 L. J., Ch. 548 ; 17 Jur. 228 ; 1 W. R. 118.

But, whatever the right to such contribution may be, it does not entitle the creditor to insist upon its application as against the debtors who have so protected themselves. Ib.

Non-continuance of Writ need not be pleaded.]—See Pratt v. Hawkins, col. 29.

Executors and Administrators not bound to plead the Statute.]—See Garratt, In re ; Castleton v. Fanshaw ; and Norton v. Frecker, col. 50 ; and Adams v. Waller, col. 81 ; Hunter v. Baxter, Frear, In re, col. 82.

Reply of Statute to Set-Off.]—The statute must be replied specially to a plea of set-off, and cannot be taken advantage of under a general replication of nil debet. Chappel v. Durston, 1 C. & J. 1.

A plea of set-off stated, that the plaintiff made his promissory note payable to C., which was duly indorsed and delivered to the defendant at C.'s death, by C.'s administrator, and was unpaid. Replication, that the supposed cause of set-off on the note did not accrue to the defendant within six years :—Held, that this replication admitted not only the making of the note, but the indorsement of it to the defendant by C.'s administrator, and that the defendant might, therefore, avail himself of memoranda of the payment of interest, written on the note by C. before 9 Geo. 4, c. 14, to bar the statute. Gale v. Capern or Capron, 1 A. & E. 102 ; 3 N. & M. 863 ; 3 L. J., K. B. 140.

A plaintiff, under a replication of the statute, to a plea of set-off, could not, on the trial, reduce the amount of the set-off by shewing payment of part, before 15 & 16 Vict. c. 76, s. 75 ; the payment of part ought to have been replied. Moore v. Wood, 2 M. & Rob. 407.

Reply of Fraud.]—If a plaintiff intends to rely on fraud committed by the defendant as an answer to a plea of the statute, it must be replied specially, and cannot be taken advantage of under the replication, that the latter did promise within six years. Clark v. Hougham, 3 D. & R. 322 ; 2 B. & C. 149 ; 1 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 249.

Reply alleging Concealed Fraud.]—See Gibbs v. Guild ; Hunter v. Gibbons ; and Barber v. Houston, col. 121.

Reply that Cause of Action did accrue within six years.]—The 2 Will. 4, c. 39, having put all actions on the same footing and made the issuing of the writ of summons the commencement of the suit, the plea of the statute ought to be in the same form ; and, if the plaintiff replied that the cause did accrue within the limited time, he must have shewn by proper record all the formalities required by s. 10 to have been complied with, just as he must have done before the statute where there was a plea that the cause of action did not accrue within six years before the commencement of the suit. Higgs v. Mortimer 1 Ex. 711 ; 5 D. & L. 757 ; 12 Jur. 249.

—— Onus of Proof.]—In an action for goods sold and delivered, the general issue and the statute were pleaded. The replication traversed the latter plea. The plaintiff's evidence consisted of such an admission by the defendant as would have been evidence to go to a jury, on the general issue, that a debt was owing from him to the plaintiff, but he did not prove when the debt was contracted. No evidence was given for the defendant in support of his plea:—Held, that it was incumbent on the plaintiff to support the affirmative terms of his replication, by shewing that the debt was contracted within six years, or that the acknowledgment or promise was made in some writing signed by the defendant, so as to take the case out of the statute, pursuant to 9 Geo. 4, c. 14, and a nonsuit was entered accordingly. Wilby v. Henman, 4 Tyr. 957; 2 C. & M. 658; 4 L. J., Ex. 262.

Reply that Defendant beyond seas at time of promise.]—A replication to a plea of the statute to a declaration, containing several counts on promises, averred that, before and at the time of the making of the several promises, the defendant was in parts beyond the sea, and afterwards returned, which was his first return after making the several promises:—Held, that the word "several" might be taken distributively, and considered to mean that it was the defendant's first return after "each and every" of the promises. Plummer v. Woodburne, 7 D. & R. 25; 4 B. & C. 625; 4 L. J. (o.s.) K. B. 6.

It is unnecessary, in a replication, under 4 Anne, c. 16, s. 19, to allege that the defendant has returned from beyond the seas, or that the action was brought within six years after his return from beyond the seas since the cause of action accrued. Forbes v. Smith, 11 Ex. 161; 24 L. J., Ex. 299; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 503; 3 W. R. 476.

Reply of Coverture—Rejoinder.]—In an action by payee against the maker of a note, he pleaded the statute. A replication, that when the cause of action accrued the plaintiff was the wife of B., and that she continued to be so until B. died, and the plaintiff became discovert, and that she sued within six years after his death, is good. Scarpellini v. Atcheson, 7 Q. B. 864; 14 L. J., Q. B. 333; 9 Jur. 827.

A rejoinder that the plaintiff was a feme covert, and the wife of B. until the time of his death; that the note was payable to her order; and that, before it was due B. authorised her to indorse it in blank in her own name, and deliver it to F., which she did for value; that, when the note became due, and more than six years before action brought, the note was in the hands of another indorsee who presented it for payment; and that afterwards, and before action brought, the note came to the possession of the plaintiff by delivery from the last-mentioned indorsee, who was then entitled to sue thereon, is bad, for either the matter alleged was a departure after pleading the statute, which plea admitted an original right of action, or if the rejoinder was confined to the matter stated in the replication, it was no answer for want of a denial that the action was brought within six years after the husband's death. Ib.

Objection that Solicitor not entitled to set up Statute against his Client's Demand can only be raised by Reply in the Action.]—See Triston, In re, col. 58.

Acknowledgment must be pleaded in Reply.]—See Kempe v. Gibbon, col. 300.

Discovery to disprove Plea of Statute.]—Statute of Limitations may be pleaded as to a debt, but not to discovery as to when debt was due. Mackworth v. Clifton, 2 Atk. 51. S. P., Downing v. Kirby. Rep. t. Finch, 14.

Object of a bill being to obtain discovery from defendant to be used at law, in order to disprove plea of defendant there, that he has made no promise within six years; this discovery the defendant is bound to give; but he has a right to protect himself in equity by the Statute of Limitations from discovery as to the original constitution of the debt, and whether it has since been paid; to such last-mentioned matters he should plead statute, and answer fully the rest of the bill. Cork v. Wilcock, 5 Madd. 331.

B. ACTIONS RELATING TO LAND AND ACTIONS ON SPECIALTIES AND FOR LEGACIES.

By the Real Property Limitation Act, 1874 (37 & 38 Vict. c. 57), s. 1, the period of limitation for the recovery of any land or rent is twelve years. By s. 8, the period of limitation for bringing an action to recover a mortgage debt, judgment debt, legacy, or to enforce a charge on land, is twelve years.

By 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 42, s. 3, the period of limitation for bringing an action of debt for rent on an indenture of demise, or of covenant or debt on any bond, specialty, or recognizance, is twenty years.

By 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, s. 27, the right of courts of equity to refuse relief on the ground of acquiescence, in cases not within the act, is preserved.

I. CONSTRUCTION OF THE STATUTES AND SUBJECT-MATTERS TO WHICH THEY APPLY.

See also ante, A, I. (col. 4).

By 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, s. 1, "Land" means manors and all corporeal hereditaments and tithes; "Rent" means heriots, and all services for which distress lies, and annuities charged on land; "Person through whom another claims" means the person by, through, or under, or by the act of whom, the claimant is entitled, as heir, issue in tail, &c., &c.; "Person" includes any body or class of persons. By s. 24, a suit to recover land or rent in equity is to be brought within the same time as at law. By s. 34, when the time limited has expired, the title of the party out of possession to the land is extinguished.

Title of Person out of Possession not transferred to Person in Possession.]—The effect of s. 34 of the Real Property Limitation Act (3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27) is merely to extinguish the title of the prior rightful owner, and not to transfer that title to the person in possession. Tichborne v. Weir, 4 R. 26; 67 L. T. 735.—C. A.

The plaintiff granted a lease of certain premises, the lease containing the usual covenant by the lessee and his assigns to repair. The defendant took possession during the term without any assignment from the lessee, and remained in possession for more than twenty years, paying the rent to the plaintiff. In an action at the expiration of the term for breach of the covenant to repair:—Held, that the defendant was not liable on the covenants in the lease. Ib.

Statute confers Title by Possession.]—The distinction between the old statutes of limitations and the 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, is that the former acts only barred the remedy, whereas under the latter when the remedy is barred, the right and title of the real owner are extinguished, and are in effect transferred to the person whose possession is a bar. Incorporated Society for Protestant Schools v. Richards, Sau. & Sc. 559. And see 1 Dr. & War. 258; 1 Con. & L. 58; 4 Ir. Eq. R. 177.

The Statute of Limitations (3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27) transfers the estate, at the expiration of the statutable period, from the rightful owner to the person whose possession has barred his right. Scott v. Nixon, 2 Con. & L. 185; 3 Dr. & War. 388; 6 Ir. Eq. R. 8.

General policy of statutes of prescription. The old English statutes of limitation barred the remedy only, not the right; but the modern ones cut off the right as well as the remedy. Dundee Harbour Trustees v. Dougall, 1 Macq. H. L. 317.

Title barred by Statute not restored by Entry.]—See Bryan v. Cowdal, col. 270.

Possession not Adverse at the passing of the Act—3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, s. 15.]—The party in possession of an estate (which on failure of certain limitations thereof had been devised in 1773 to a charity) in 1820 entered into a correspondence with the claimants on behalf of the charity, which contained references to, and an implied recognition of, their rights, but no direct acknowledgment thereof:—Held, that neither his possession nor that of the person of whom he was the representative, and who had been in possession of the estate, under a conveyance by a tenant for life, was an adverse possession within the 15th section of the 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, at the time of the passing of the act, and as the bill was filed within five years (in 1837), the act must be considered as not to have operated. Incorporated Society v. Richards, 1 Dr. & War. 258; 1 Con. & L. 58; 4 Ir. Eq. R. 177. And see S. C., Sau. & Sc. 559.

The owner of one moiety of an estate, whose wife was seised in fee of the other, remained in possession of the entirety from her death in 1815:—Held, that the case fell within the 15th section of the 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27; and that, notwithstanding the possession might not be adverse, the heir of the wife was barred after the five years from the passing of the act. The 19th section of that act, which removes disabilities by reason of residence in Ireland, applies to a residence there before it passed, where the contest has arisen since. Hasell, Ex parte, 3 Y. & Coll. 617; 3 Jur. 1101.

Semble, the five years given by the 15th section cannot be extended on account of the infancy of the claimant. Scott v. Nixon, 2 Con. & L. 185; 3 Dr. & War. 338; 6 Ir. Eq. R. 8.

Statute not retrospective.]—The statute 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, is not retrospective. Peyton v. M'Dermott, 1 Dr. & Wal. 198.

Retrospective Operation of Statute.]—See Doe d. Angell v. Angell, col. 152; Doe d. Holt v. Horrocks, and Culley v. Doe d. Taylerson, col. 166; Goodall v. Skerratt, col. 170; Wrixon v. Vize, col. 206; and Batchelor v. Middleton, col. 290.

Turnpike Tolls.]—Turnpike tolls are not within the Statute of Limitations of the 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, and, consequently, more than six years' arrears of interest may be recovered on a mortgage of turnpike tolls, notwithstanding the 42nd section of that act. Mellish v. Brooks, 3 Beav. 22; 9 L. J., Ch. 362; 4 Jur. 739.

Action to have Dower assigned.]—A widow's right to sue in equity for dower is barred when she has not, for upwards of thirty years, taken any proceedings, either at law or in equity, to have it assigned to her. Marshall v. Smith, 34 L. J., Ch. 189; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 1174; 11 L. T. 443; 13 W. R. 198.

Suit for Admittance to Copyhold Tenement, a Suit to recover Land within the Statute.]—See Walters v. Webb, col. 303.

"Rent."]—The statute does not apply to rent reserved on a demise under seal. Grant v. Ellis, 9 M. & W. 113; 11 L. J., Ex. 228.

Applicable in Equity.]—The 24th section of 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, only bars equitable rights, so far as they would have been barred if they had been legal rights. Archbold v. Scully, 9 H. L. Cas. 360; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 1169; 5 L. T. 160.

Length of time, which will not bar an ejectment, shall not bar a bill in equity. Cook v. Arnham, 3 P. W. 287.

Statute of Limitations founded on the soundest principles, and courts of equity are bound to adopt it where the legal and equitable titles correspond, differing only in the court where it is to be enforced. Medlicott v. O'Donel, 1 Ball & B. 166.

Many of the provisions of the 3 & 4 Will 4, c. 42, will be adopted by courts of equity, though made with reference to proceedings at law. Hyde v. Price, 8 Sim. 578; C. P. C. 193. S. C., nom. Hart v. Cradock, 6 L. J., Ch. 358; 1 Jur. 735.

The true meaning of the Statute of Limitations, as applied to titles to land is, that the party should have twenty years, during which it should be open to him to proceed to assert his title. Bond v. Hopkins, 1 Sch. & Lef. 413.

Though the Statute of Limitations does not apply in terms to proceedings in equity, yet such proceedings are affected by analogy to the statute: so that, in general, if a party be guilty of such laches in pursuing his equitable title as would bar him at law he shall be barred in equity. But equity will remove the legal bar proceeding from lapse of time, as it would any other legal advantage, if sought to be used unconscientiously. Ib. See Horenden v. Annesley; Foley v. Hill; Knox v. Gye; and Hodle v. Healey, cols. 75, 76.

Specific Performance.]—The Statute of Limitations cannot be pleaded to a suit for specific performance. Talmash v. Mugleston, 4 L. J. (O.S.) Ch. 200.

If there has been such a lapse of time, that the court, proceeding upon a rule adopted by analogy to the Statute of Limitations, would refuse to enforce specific performance: these circumstances, if not disclosed in the bill so as to enable the defendant to demur, ought to be stated in the plea; and the court for the purpose of applying its own rule, will advert to the statute, though not pleaded. Ib.

Contract for future Purchase.]—Semble, that the statute would not apply to the case of a contract to repurchase an estate in twenty-five years, or at any time during the life of another. Alderson v. White, 2 De G. & J. 97; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 125; 6 W. R. 242.

Outstanding Terms.]—The Statute of Limitations may be pleaded in bar to a bill to prevent the setting up outstanding terms. Jermy v. Best, 1 Sim. 373.

Statute bars Poor of Parish, or Attorney-General suing for them.]—The 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, s. 1, extends the word person to a class of persons as well as to individuals. The poor of a parish are a class of persons within the meaning of that section. Magdalen College, Oxford v. Att.-Gen., 6 H. L. Cas. 189; 26 L. J., Ch. 620; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 675. Varying S. C., nom. Att.-Gen. v. Magdalen College, Oxford, 18 Beav. 223; 23 L. J., Ch. 844; 18 Jur. 363.

Where the attorney-general, having no independent rights of his own, stands only in the same situation as those who are entitled to the benefit of a charity, if they are barred by lapse of time, he is equally barred. Ib.

Charitable Trusts.]—See Commissioners of Charitable Donations v. Wybrants, col. 200.

Statute not applicable to Land in Jamaica.]—By will, in 1810, B. demised to trustees his estate in Jamaica to hold to the use that H. should, out of the rents and profits, receive for life an annuity payable quarterly for her separate use, with powers of distress and entry and perception of the rents and profits, and after her decease to the use that the trustees should pay the annuity unto her children, as she should appoint, for their lives. B. gave other annuities out of the rents and profits of the estate, and gave the estate to the use of his son for life, with remainders over. The last payment on account of H.'s annuity was in 1842. H. died in 1853. She made an appointment, and arrears were due to her and her appointees. The estate was for some years a waste, and no rents and profits were received till 1870, and when received they were paid into court:—Held, that the Statute of Limitations, 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, did not apply to Jamaica, and that the legal personal representative of H. was entitled to be paid the arrears due to her. Pitt v. Ducre (Lord), 45 L. J., Ch. 796; 3 Ch. D. 295; 24 W. R. 943.

Possessory Law of Jamaica.]—Effect of the Statute of Limitations, on possessory law of Jamaica (beyond the Statutes of Limitation in this country), barring not merely the legal remedy, but any suit, claim, or demand; converting seven years' possession into a positive, absolute title. No exception in favour of absentees; not being within the exception expressed, as there was no such exception out of the Statutes of Limitation in this country; until expressly given by statute 4 Anne, c. 16, s. 19. The exception in the law of Jamaica relating to trustees, means actual not constructive trusts. The exception as to tenants for life not applicable, where they could convey the fee under a power of sale. Beckford v. Wade, 17 Ves. 87; 11 R. R. 20.

Right to dig for Stone in Isle of Man not lost by Non-user.]—Non-user for twenty-one years does not deprive the tenants or farmers of the Isle of Man of the right to dig for and raise limestone and other stones in the quarry of a tenant, provided the stones, &c., are for the use of the party obtaining them, or to be employed by him for the improvement of his own or neighbour's estate. By the supplemental Act of Settlement (6th June, 1704), a discretionary power is vested in the governor to allow the exercise of this right. Christian v. Gibson, 3 Moore, P. C. 351.

II. APPLICATION OF THE STATUTES TO PARTICULAR PERSONS.

1. Landlord and Tenant.

a. Generally.

By 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, s. 35, the receipt of rent is to be deemed to be the receipt of profits. By s. 9, where a yearly rent amounting to 20s. is reserved by a lease in writing, statute runs against landlord from time of first payment of rent to any person wrongfully claiming.

Section retrospective.]—A., in 1776, demised lands for sixty-one years. Upon his death, in 1786, the defendant's father, and subsequently the defendant, received the rent under the lease until its expiration in 1837. An ejectment was brought in 1837, after the expiration of the lease, by the plaintiff claiming under the will:—Held, that the 9th section was retrospective, and that the action would be barred by lapse of time under that section, but was saved by s. 15. Doe d. Angell v. Angell, 9 Q. B. 328; 15 L. J., Q. B. 193; 10 Jur. 705.

Rent reserved but not paid.]—Semble, that the provisions of the 9th section are applicable to the case when rent is reserved, and no rent paid, but not to a case when no rent is reserved. Jones, Ex parte, 4 Y. & C. 466.

"Person Wrongfully Claiming"—Who is.]—A person claiming without any real title, to be entitled to land is a person wrongfully claiming within the meaning of 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, s. 9, and that section applies, although the claim may be put forward under a mistake, and without any improper intention to deprive others of their property. Williams v. Pott, 40 L. J., Ch. 775; L. R. 12 Eq. 149.

Services in Lieu of Rent.]—In ejectment for two cottages by churchwardens and overseers, it appeared that the defendant had within twenty years swept the church and tolled the church bell:—Held, that the sweeping of the church and tolling of the church bell were services for which a distress might be made, and that the action was, therefore, brought within the time limited by 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, s. 8. Doe d. Edney v. Benham, 7 Q. B. 976; 14 L. J., Q. B. 342; 9 Jur. 662.

Where the overseers of a township claimed lands which they had allowed a poor inhabitant to occupy rent free, he keeping up a grindstone upon the land for the convenience of the parish, the enjoyment of this privilege, by the parishioners, for upwards of twenty years, whilst the lands were occupied by persons paying no rent, does not defeat the title of such persons under 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27. Doe d. Robinson v. Hinde, 2 M. & Rob. 441.

Payment must be of Rent as such.]—Where a person makes a payment expressly or impliedly on account of something else than the rent of land of which he is tenant, such a payment is not a payment of rent within the 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, s. 8; and under such circumstances a defence founded on that statute is a complete bar. Att.-Gen. v. Stephens, 6 De G. M. & G. 111; 25 L. J., Ch. 888; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 51; 4 W. R. 191.

Statute does not run against Right of Landlord during Tenancy.]—So long as the relation of landlord and tenant subsists, the right of the landlord to rent is not barred by nonpayment, except that under the 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, s. 42, the amount to be recovered is limited to six years. Archbold v. Scully, 9 H. L. Cas. 360; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 1169; 5 L. T. 160.

Rent of Mine paid in Specie.]—Where the rents of mines are reserved by means of payment of produce in specie, the profits will be considered as accruing to the lessor at the time of receiving such produce, and not at the time of the sale of it; and, therefore, the statute will run from the time of such receipt, and not from the time of such sale. Denys v. Shuckburgh, 4 Y. & C. 42.

Occupation after Attornment to Claimant, not Occupation of Claimant.]—E. being in occupation of land attorned to L., who claimed the fee, and had entered in the name of taking possession. The land was copyhold. After the attornment, L. was not admitted, nor did he receive rent, nor occupy, nor in any way interfere with the land, the fee in which was several times sold, with proper formalities, in the copyhold court within the twenty years following:—Held, that L. was absolutely barred from bringing ejectment at the end of twenty years, though E. continued in occupation till within twenty years of the ejectment being brought. Doe d. Linsey v. Edwards, 5 A. & E. 95; 6 N. & M. 633; 5 L. J., K. B. 238.

Possession under Agreement for a Lease—When Time begins to run against Owner—Implied Trust.]—Where a person is in possession of land under an agreement by which, on the performance of certain conditions, the owner has undertaken to grant him a lease, his legal position is that of a tenant at will; but though no lease be in fact granted, yet inasmuch as ejectment proceedings on the part of the owner could be successfully met by a claim on the part of the occupier for specific performance of the agreement, the owner has no effective right to recover possession until the end of the term for which the lease was agreed to be granted. The Statute of Limitations, therefore, does not begin to run against the owner so as to bar his right to recover possession until after the term has expired. Warren v. Murray, 64 L. J., Q. B. 42; [1894] 2 Q. B. 648; 9 R. 793; 71 L. T. 458; 43 W. R. 3—C. A.

Per Kay, L.J.: The proviso in s. 7 of the Real Property Limitation Act, 1833, applies to implied as well as express trusts, and an intended lessee under an agreement such as above described is a cestui que trust, so as to be deprived of the benefit of the earlier part of the section. Ib.

Possession under Informal Demise by Overseers.]—In 1824, B. was let into possession of a cottage under an agreement purporting to be a demise by the churchwardens and overseers of the poor of a parish, at the rent of 1*s.* 6*d.* per week, B. to quit on one month's notice being given. This agreement was signed only by one of the overseers. The churchwardens did not sign, nor was there any evidence to shew that they had assented to the agreement. B. never paid any rent or made any acknowledgment. B. afterwards sold the premises to the defendant:—Held, in an ejectment, brought after twenty years, by the churchwardens and overseers for the time being, against the defendant, that as the agreement did not pass an interest it did not amount to a lease in writing within the 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, s. 8, and that consequently the claim of the churchwardens and overseers was barred by twenty years' adverse possession. Doe d. Lansdell v. Gower, 17 Q. B. 589; 21 L. J., Q. B. 57; 16 Jur. 100.

Encroachment by Tenant.]—In 1829, W. leased land to the defendant for twenty-one years. The defendant applied to W. for leave to take in a piece of ground adjoining, but W. declined to give such leave, stating that other persons, to whom he had sold adjoining houses, had a right of way over it. The defendant notwithstanding, inclosed and occupied it for twenty years, without payment of rent or acknowledgment of title:—Held, that the piece of ground could not be considered as having been occupied by the defendant as part of the demised premises in respect of which rent was paid, and therefore an action by W. was barred by 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, ss. 2, 3. Doe d. Badeley v. Massey, 17 Q. B. 373; 20 L. J., Q. B. 434; 15 Jur. 1031.

The lessee of premises for a term of ninety-nine years, dependent on four lives, inclosed, with the assent of the lessor given by word of mouth, a piece of adjoining waste which belonged to the lessor as lord of the manor, on the understanding that the piece so inclosed should be treated as if comprised in the lease. Upon the determination of the lease, which was more than twenty-one years from the date of the enclosure, the reversioners brought an ejectment to recover the land so inclosed from the tenant:—Held, that the assent of the landlord to the inclosure of the additional piece of land did not create such a tenancy of the land so as to bring the case within 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, s. 7, or prevent such inclosure from being an encroachment within the ordinary rule of law that an encroachment made by a tenant must be taken to be made for the benefit of the landlord, and treated as part of the demised premises; and that consequently the Statute of Limitations did not begin to run till the determination of the lease, and the reversioners were entitled to recover the land. Whitmore v. Humphries, 41 L. J., C. P. 43; L. R. 7 C. P. 1; 25 L. T. 496; 20 W. R. 79.

One who occupies as his own land belonging to another, and before the expiration of twenty years becomes tenant to the latter of land adjacent to the plot so occupied, does not thereby change the character of his possession, but can, whilst he remains tenant, acquire, as against his landlord, a prescriptive title to the land first occupied by him. Dixon v. Baty, L. R. 1 Ex. 259; 12 Jur. (N.S.) 1024; 14 W. R. 836.

b. Lessees for Lives.

Sub-Lease for other Lives—Sub-Lessee holding over after Expiration of Sub-Lease—Statute does not run against Reversioner in Fee until Expiration of Head Lease.]—C., the owner in fee and predecessor in title of the plaintiffs, in 1805 granted a freehold lease of land for three lives. The lessees in 1807 sub-demised part of the land for a term determinable on the dropping of the last of the three lives, which occurred in 1874. The lessees in 1832 surrendered their lease, and on the next day took a new lease for lives, the last of which dropped in 1891. This lease was by common law demise, and bore an indorsement of livery of seisin. The defendant, claiming through the sub-lessees, had been, since 1874, when the sub-lease expired, in actual possession of the lands comprised therein without title. In an action to recover possession:—Held, that the lease of 1832, being a valid lease by virtue of 4 Geo. 2, c. 28, s. 6, operated to pass an estate to the lessees; and therefore the plaintiffs' reversionary estate did not become an estate in possession within the meaning of the Real Property Limitation Act, 1874, until 1891, when the last life in the lease dropped; and therefore that the plaintiffs' right to recover was not barred under that act. The expression "interesse termini" is never used with regard to a freehold lease, to which it has no application. Ecclesiastical Commissioners v. Rowe (5 App. Cas. 736) distinguished. Ecclesiastical Commissioners v. Treemer, 62 L. J., Ch. 119; [1893] 1 Ch. 166; 3 R. 136; 68 L. T. 11; 41 W. R. 166.

Possession of Person claiming under Lease for lives, after Grant of Second Lease.]—Where a lease for years, determinable on lives, was granted in 1732, and in 1784 the same lessor granted a similar lease of the same premises to another lessee, who always afterwards paid rent; and another person who was in possession at the granting of the second lease claimed to be entitled to the estate, on the ground that one of the lives in the first lease was in existence, and continued to hold it until his death in 1811:—Held, that he had no adverse possession to give him the freehold. Rex v. Axbridge, 4 N. & M. 477; 2 A. & E. 520; 1 H. & W. 74; 4 L. J., M. C. 61.

Heir of Lessee for Lives also Heir to Reversioner—Adverse Possession during Lease—Right of Entry on Determination of Lease barred.]—See Doe d. Hall v. Moulsdale, col. 179.

c. Lessees for Years.

Possession under void Lease of Charity Lands.]—An eleemosynary corporation is within the meaning and operation of 13 Eliz. c. 10. A lease of land belonging to such a corporation, not in conformity with the provisions of the 3rd section of that statute, is therefore absolutely void. The governors of Magdalen Hospital (created a corporation, for certain charitable purposes, by the 9 Geo. 3, c. 31) made, in 1783, a lease of certain land of the hospital for ninety-nine years, at the rent of "one peppercorn (if lawfully demanded)." The only covenants, on the part of the lessee, were to indemnify the governors from all taxes, &c., during the term, and to surrender the premises at its end, and on the part of the governors, for quiet enjoyment. No act had been done until now to avoid the lease, or to interfere with the persons holding the land. In July, 1876, the governors brought an action in chancery to recover possession of the land thus leased:—Held, that the lease was absolutely void within the provisions of the statute 13 Eliz. c. 10. That consequently the right of the governors to re-enter on the land existed from the moment of the execution of the lease, and that right not having been sought to be enforced till now, was barred by the Statute of Limitations (3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27), s. 2. Magdalen Hospital v. Knotts, 4 App. Cas. 324; 48 L. J., Ch. 579; 40 L. T. 466; 27 W. R. 602. Reversing 46 L. J., Ch. 149; 5 Ch. D. 175; 31 L. T. 189; 25 W. R. 181.

Per Lord Selborne: If any rent, however small, had been reserved, and received, it would have created the legal relation of a tenancy from year to year, and the Statute of Limitations could not have run. Ib.

By a lease to six persons described as trustees, a building used as a dissenting chapel, though not so described, and reserving to the lessors a right of access to their pews therein, was demised for ninety-nine years, with a covenant for renewal, at the yearly rent of 1*s.* The lease was not enrolled. New trustees of the chapel had been appointed under the provisions of 13 & 14 Vict. c. 28. Shortly before the expiration of the term the trustees served the reversioner with a notice for renewal. At that time no rent had been paid for above twenty years, but some of the arrears were then paid to and accepted by the reversioner. The reversioner refused to renew the lease. Five years afterwards he brought an action against the trustees to recover possession of the building:—Held, that the plaintiff's right of action was not extinguished under s. 34 of the Statute of Limitations (3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27). Bunting v. Sargent, 49 L. J., Ch.

Semble, if the lease had contained a power for the trustees to sell the chapel and apply the money to other purposes, it would still have been a grant for charitable purposes within the meaning of the Mortmain Act. Ib.

When Estate in Reversion becomes in Possession—Surrender by Operation of Law.]—Sects. 3 and 5 of the Statute of Limitations (3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27) enact that the right to bring an action to recover any land shall be shewed to have first accrued with respect to estates or interests in reversion, "at the time when such estate or interest became an estate or interest in possession." During the continuance of a lease for years the reversioner in fee granted a new lease of the premises for years to his tenant:—Held, that, although the first lease became surrendered by operation of law on the granting of the second, the reversioner's estate did not thereby become an "estate in possession" within the meaning of ss. 3 and 5, and therefore that time did not begin to run against him under the act. Corpus Christi College, Oxford v. Rogers, 49 L. J., Ex. 4; 44 J. P. 216—C. A. Distinguished in Ecclesiastical Commissioners v. Rowe, infra.

—— Renewal of Lease during Encroachment.]—An allotment under an Inclosure Act (described as 137 A.), was made in respect of premises held by a person under lease from a dean, the property leased being that of the dean in right of his deanery. By the 29th section of 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, a dean could recover possession of such land within the term of sixty years from the time when the right of action first accrued. By the 3 & 4 Vict. c. 113, deanery lands, after the death of any dean then in possession, passed to the Ecclesiastical Commissioners; and the 57th section of that statute declared that "the Ecclesiastical Commissioners shall for the purpose of enforcing payment of all profits and emoluments to be paid to them, and of obtaining possession of all lands, tithes, or other hereditaments vested in or accruing to them as aforesaid, and of recovering the rents and profits thereof, have and enjoy all rights, powers, and remedies at law and in equity which belonged, or belong, or would belong, or have belonged to the holder of the deanery, &c., in respect of which such profits and emoluments, &c., respectively are, by or under the provisions of this act, to be paid or accrue and to be vested in the said commissioners." Renewals of the original leases had been made, but the allotment 137 A. was never referred to in them. It had been in 1821 purchased from the representatives of the original allottee, the title of the dean to it had never been asserted, and it was, in that way, held adversely to him. The dean died in 1854, and the commissioners then came into possession, under the statute, of the property of the deanery. In 1877, the commissioners brought an action to recover the allotment:—Held, first, that the right of action to recover the land accrued at the surrender of the lease current when the allotment was made. Ecclesiastical Commissioners v. Rowe, 49 L. J., Q. B. 771; 5 App. Cas. 736; 43 L. T. 353; 29 W. R. 159; 45 J. P. 36—H. L. (E.)

Held, secondly (dissentiente Lord Blackburn), that under the words of the 57th section the commissioners had the same time within which to enforce their claim to the property that the dean would have had under the 29th section of 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27. There was a legal continuity between the rights, powers, and remedies of the dean, and those of the commissioners. His right of action was transferred to them by statute, and was not barred by the mere fact of the transfer. Ib.

Per Lord Blackburn: There are no words in the 57th section of 3 & 4 Vict. c. 113, which, as to time, render the 29th section of the 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, applicable to the commissioners. Ib.

Sale of Premises in Fee by Lessee in Possession without paying Rent.]—Where a party interested in a long term, having been in possession above twenty years without having paid any rent, sold the premises in fee:—Held, that the reversioner was barred. Jones, Ex parte, St. Philip's Bridge Co., In re, 4 Y. & Coll. 466.

Semble, that the provisions of the 9th section of statute 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, are applicable to the case where rent is reserved and no rent paid, but not to a case where no rent is reserved. Ib.

Payment of Rent by Sub-Lessee to Head Landlord.]—From 1782 to 1839, persons claiming under a sub-lease paid their rent directly to the head landlord. The persons claiming under the head lease of 1782 neither received nor paid any rent, nor was their title acknowledged by the head landlord, save that in 1833 they were served by him with an ejectment for nonpayment of rent. Quære, was their title barred by the Statute of Limitations. Drew v. Norbury (Lord), 3 Jo. & Lat. 267; 9 Ir. Eq. R. 171, 524.

Payment of Rent by Tenant to Third Person, whether Adverse to Reversioner.]—When the plaintiff in ejectment purchased the reversion subject to a lease for years, at the rent of 4*l.*, and to an annuity of 4*l.*, and the tenant in possession under the lease paid the sum of 4*l.* yearly for upwards of twenty years to the annuitant, until his death, in 1830; and, subsequently, to his widow:—Held, that it was for the jury to consider in what character the tenant made such annual payment, and if as agent for his landlord, the possession was not adverse; and the right of the person entitled to the reversion was not barred by 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27. Doe d. Newman v. Godsill, 5 Jur. 170.

Receipt of Rent by Stranger to Lease.]—See Doe d. Angell v. Angell, col. 152.

Lessee paying no Rent.]—When a lessor permits his lessee, during the continuance of the lease, to pay no rent either to himself or any other person for twenty years, the lessor is not then barred by 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, s. 2, from recovering the premises in ejectment. The case falls within the latter branch of s. 3, which, in the case of an estate or an interest in reversion, provides that the right of action shall be deemed to have first accrued when it became an estate or interest in possession. The lessor, therefore, may recover in ejectment at any time within twenty years after the lease has expired. Doe d. Davy v. Oxenden, 7 M. & W. 131; 1 H. & W. 4; 10 L. J., Ex. 6; 4 Jur. 1016.

Nonpayment of rent reserved on a lease, though for upwards of twenty years, shall not bar the lessor from recovering possession at the expiration of the term. Sanders v. Annesley (Lord), 2 Sch. & Lef. 106.

—— Statute only runs during Lease if Rent paid to one wrongfully claiming the Reversion.]—Where property is under lease, adverse possession runs against the reversioner from the expiration of the lease, or from the time when the tenant pays rent to one claiming wrongfully to be entitled in immediate reversion. Chadwick v. Broadwood, 3 Beav. 308, 530; 10 L. J., Ch. 242; 5 Jur. 359. And see Scott v. Broadwood, 2 Coll. 447; 15 L. J., Ch. 257; 10 Jur. 214.

A bill of discovery in aid of an ejectment, filed in 1840, stated that, in 1776, A. B. being seised in fee, granted leases of the property, which expired in 1825, and that the plaintiff, as heir of A. B., was now entitled to the property, for the recovery of which he was about to bring an action of ejectment. The defendant pleaded the Statute of Limitations (3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27), and averred that the plaintiff had not been in possession or received rents for more than twenty years before the bill was filed, that the defendant had entered into possession, as purchaser in fee simple, in 1819, and had ever since remained in peaceable possession as tenant in fee:—Held, that this plea could not, in law, be sustained, for, there being no allegation that the rent had been paid to any one wrongfully claiming to be entitled in reversion immediate expectant on the determination of the lease, the plaintiff's right did not accrue until the expiration of the lease in 1825, or within twenty years from the filing of the bill. Ib.

Sub-Lease for whole Term—Right to Rent from Sub-Lessee not lost by Nonpayment for twenty years, though no Reversion.]—S., a lessee of premises for 125 years from the 25th of March, 1782, by a lease, dated the 21st of July, 1787, and which contained clauses of distress and re-entry, demised the same to H. for 120 years from the 25th of March last past. Twenty-two years' arrears of rent accrued due to the representatives of the lessor in the last-mentioned lease:—Held, that although S. had no reversion expectant on the determination of the lease of the 21st of July, 1787, yet that the rent reserved by the lease was a conventional rent, and that therefore, the right of the representatives of S. to the rent during the residue of the term was not barred by the 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, s. 2. Turner, In re, 11 Ir. Ch. R. 304.

Payment to Person wrongfully claiming to be entitled.]—The reversion upon a lease was severed by a conveyance to the plaintiff, in 1872, of a small part of the land out of which the rent issued. The rent was never legally apportioned; no rent was ever paid to the plaintiff in respect of his part of the reversion; but the whole rent continued to be paid, as before, by the defendant, the lessee, to H., the owner of the other part of the reversion, until August, 1875, when H. conveyed his part of the reversion to the defendant. The lease expired at Michaelmas, 1891:—Held, that the payment of the whole rent to H. was not a payment to "some person wrongfully claiming to be entitled to" plaintiff's part of the land within the meaning of s. 9 of the act of 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27; and that, therefore, time had not begun to run against the plaintiff. Laybourn v. Gridley, 61 L. J., Ch. 352; 40 W. R. 474.

A person claiming, without any real title, to be entitled to land is a person wrongfully claiming within the meaning of 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, s. 9; and that section applies, although the claim may be put forward under a mistake, and without any improper intention to deprive others of their property. Williams v. Pott, 40 L. J., Ch. 775; L. R. 12 Eq. 149.

By a marriage settlement of 1802 freehold property was conveyed to trustees to the use of T. H. for life, remainder, subject to a jointure to C. H., the intended wife of T. H., for the use of the children of the marriage as T. H. should appoint, and in default of appointment equally, and a power to lease for any term whatever was given to T. H. and C. H. In 1805, a lease for sixty-one years was made by T. H. and C. H., reserving the rent to them, their heirs or assigns. T. H. died in 1815, and the rent, which exceeded the jointure, was received by C. H. from that time until her death in 1854; and afterwards by one of the children of the marriage, who obtained a fee-farm grant to himself, and sold the property to the defendant in 1860:—Held, that the receipt of the rent by C. H. was not a wrongful receipt of it within the 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, s. 9, and that time did not begin to run against the children until her death in 1854. Shaw v. Keighron, Ir. R. 3 Eq. 574.

Covenant to Repair—Premises Burnt—Continuing Breach.]—In 1832, an equitable tenant for life made a lease containing a covenant to keep the demised premises in repair, and, upon the determination of the lease by the death of the lessor, the lessee and his devisee continued in possession, and paid rent to the remainderman, without any fresh express agreement. In 1855, the remainderman assigned the reversion to a purchaser, who, in the following year, demised the premises to the remainderman for a term still unexpired. The premises were burnt in 1859, and no change of tenancy had taken place up to the death of the devisee in 1871:—Held, first, that the assets of the devisee were liable, under the covenant, to the expense of rebuilding the premises, and that the Statute of Limitations did not apply. Morrough v. Alleyne, Ir. R. 7 Eq. 487.

Held, secondly, that the title of the remainderman being merely equitable, could not be relied on as a bar to his claim. Ib.

d. Yearly Tenants.

By 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, s. 8, in the case of verbal yearly or other tenancies, time runs against the landlord at the end of the first year or other period, or from the last receipt of rent after that time.

Section Retrospective.]—The 8th section has a retrospective effect, and applies to a tenancy from year to year, created previously to the passing of the act. Doe d. Jukes v. Sumner, 14 M. & W. 39; 14 L. J., Ex. 337; 9 Jur. 413.

Premises Unoccupied.]—The statute is a good defence to an action by a landlord for rent against one who had once been his tenant from year to year, but who had not within the last six years occupied the premises, paid rent, or done any act from which a tenancy could be inferred, although the tenancy had not been determined by a notice to quit. Leigh v. Thornton, 1 B. & Ald. 625; 19 R. R. 407. And see Hughes v. Thomas, 13 East, 474.

Time runs from last Payment.]—A. let land to B. by parol from year to year, reserving rent payable in March and November. The last payment of rent was in 1846; rent again became due in November, but was not paid. A. died in December of the same year, and B. retained possession. In ejectment by A.'s heir:—Held, that the time under 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, ran from the last payment of rent, and not from the death of A., as the case fell within s. 8, and not within s. 3. Baines v. Lumley, 16 W. R. 574.

—— Parol Evidence to Prove.]—In ejectment by a landlord to recover land held under a tenancy from year to year, a statement made by the tenant in 1835 (since deceased), when speaking to an agent of the landlord about the property, "I have no property in W. but what I hold of Lord S., for which I pay 100*l.* a year," is evidence of payment of rent for the land at that time, under 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, s. 8, so as to prevent an adverse right running against the landlord from the period of the determination of the first year of such tenancy. Doe d. Spencer (Earl) v. Beckett, 4 Q. B. 601; 12 L. J., Q. B. 236; 7 Jur. 532.

Nonpayment of Rent by.]—See Hawkshee v. Hawkshee, col. 257.

e. Tenants at Will.

By 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, s. 7, time runs in favour of a tenant at will at the expiration of a year or from any earlier determination of the tenancy.

Sect. 7 not Retrospective.]—Under 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, s. 7, no title accrues to a party who is tenant at will, and holds without interruption for twenty years after the expiration of the first year, but who has quitted possession before the act passed. Doe d. Thompson v. Thompson, 2 N. & P. 656; 6 A. & E. 721; W. W. & D. 236; 6 L. J., K. B. 167.

Sect. 7 is not retrospective, and applies only to tenancies at will, created after the passing of the act, or, at most, to such tenancies at will as existed when it passed. Doe d. Evans v. Page, 5 Q. B. 767; D. & M. 601; 13 L. J., Q. B. 153; 8 Jur. 999.

A tenancy at will, commencing in 1824, and determined in 1831, is no bar, under ss. 2 and 7, to an ejectment commenced in 1847. Doe d. Birmingham Canal Co. v. Bold, 11 Q. B. 127; 13 Jur. 871.

Determination of Tenancy.]—A. in 1817 let B. into possession of a farm as tenant at will, and in 1827 A. entered upon the land without B.'s consent, and cut and carried away stone therefrom:—Held, that this entry amounted to a determination of the estate at will. Turner v. Doe d. Bennett, 9 M. & W. 643; 11 L. J., Ex. 453—Ex. Ch.

It is only on the determination of a tenancy at will that there is such a vested right of entry as is contemplated by 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, s. 2. Ib.

The granting a lease to a third person by the lessor of a tenant at will, though it determines the tenancy at will as against the lessor, does not give him such a right of entry as is contemplated by 3 and 4 Will. 4, c. 27, s. 2. Hogan v. Hand, 14 Moore, P. C. 310; 4 L. T. 465; 9 W. R. 673.

Tenancy at Will determined by Death of Landlord—Heir beyond Seas had Thirty Years to Enter.]—Ib. post, col. 246.

Determination of Tenancy by Entry—New Tenancy.]—See Locke v. Matthews, col. 271.

Possession by Husband in Right of Wife.]—D. permitted the defendant and his wife, the daughter of D., to be in the occupation of premises without paying rent for more than thirty years, and they were so in the occupation in 1833. D. died in 1837, having devised the premises to the defendant's wife for life, and after her death to the plaintiff. By his will an annuity was given to the defendant's wife, which the defendant received regularly. The ejectment was brought upon the death of the wife in 1844:—Held, first, that, assuming that the defendant was tenant at will to D., the right of D. was barred by s. 7, and not saved by s. 15 of 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27. Doe d. Dayman v. Moore, 9 Q. B. 555; 15 L. J., Q. B. 324; 10 Jur. 815.

Held, secondly, that defendant was not precluded from insisting on the statute, either by the receipt of the annuity under the will, or by the estate for life which the testator professed to give to his wife. Ib.

Occupation by Stepfather of Heir—Occasional Residence of, and Mortgage executed by, Heir.]—On the death of the owner in fee of a dwelling-house intestate, his widow and son, a minor, resided in it till her marriage with the defendant in 1798, after which the defendant held and occupied the premises in his own name. C., the son, continued to reside there till 1805, when he left the premises, but between that year and 1841 he resided there occasionally, two or three weeks at a time, with the defendant and his wife. In 1842, the defendant having applied to the plaintiff for an advance of money upon a mortgage of the premises, in an interview with the solicitor of the plaintiff, produced the title-deeds, and, upon its being stated that C. was heir-at-law, and was the proper party to grant a mortgage, he said that C. would execute the mortgage, and on a subsequent day he brought C., who executed the mortgage deed in his presence, whereupon he received the mortgage-money. In ejectment:—Held, that the defendant was tenant at will to C.; that he had not acquired an estate by virtue of 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27; and that the plaintiff, claiming through C., was entitled to recover. Doe d. Groves v. Groves, 10 Q. B. 486; 16 L. J., Q. B. 297; 11 Jur. 558.

Occupation by—Letting Land with Knowledge of Owner.]—A tenant at will without interruption for more than twenty years, during which period he has let and transferred portions of the land, with the knowledge, and without the interference of the owner in fee, acquires an indefeasible title against the owner, whose right of entry after that period is barred by 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, ss. 2, 7, 34. Day v. Day, 40 L. J., P. C. 35; L. R. 3 P. C. 751; 24 L. T. 856; 19 W. R. 1017.

In May, 1842, a father let his son into possession of land. The son continued to occupy the land as tenant at will until 1864. In 1852 the son, with the knowledge of his father, let portions of the land on weekly and yearly tenancies, and received rent for the same:—Held, that the right of entry accrued at the end of the first year from the creation of the tenancy, and that the right of entry in the father was barred by the uninterrupted occupation by the son for twenty years. Ib.

Son let into Possession as—Continuous Occupation by Son, as Tenant at Will or on Sufferance, and by Son's Widow.]—See Doe d. Goody v. Carter, col. 257.

Occupation by Consent of Lessees—Power to Sublet expressly Prohibited.]—In the year 1850 an act (13 Vict. c. v.) was passed to enable commissioners (appointed by 6 Geo. 4, c. cxxix.) for managing the affairs of Brighton to purchase the Pavilion estate. By s. 19 of the act the commissioners were expressly prohibited from letting or selling any part of the property to be so acquired by them without the consent of the vestry. In 1854 the town of Brighton was incorporated, and in 1855 the powers and property of the commissioners under the act of 6 Geo. 4 were transferred to the corporation. Down to the year 1853 the guardians of the poor of Brighton had had the use of offices in the town hall. On the 7th of March in that year they removed (by arrangement with the commissioners) to buildings which formed part of the Pavilion estate, in the adaptation of which to their purposes they expended a considerable sum of money; and they continued in the exclusive occupation of their new offices, without payment of rent or any acknowledgment of title in the commissioners or the corporation, down to the 19th November, 1879, when an action was brought by the latter to recover possession:—Held, that, inasmuch as the guardians had had the exclusive possession of the offices for more than twelve years (assuming their relation to the corporation to have been that of tenants at will), the claim of the corporation was barred by the Statute of Limitations, notwithstanding the prohibition against letting or selling without the consent of the vestry, contained in the local act. Brighton Corporation v. Brighton Union, 49 L. J., C. P. 648; 5 C. P. D. 368; 44 J. P. 683.

2. JOINT TENANTS AND TENANTS IN COMMON.

By 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, s. 12, possession by one joint tenant or tenant in common of more than his share shall not be deemed to have been the possession of the person entitled.

Partition.]—A partition by parol and separate possession cannot be questioned after being acted on for more than twenty years. Paine v. Ryder, 24 Beav. 151.

Coparceners—Possession by Agreement unexecuted.]—Three females being coparceners in tail, two of them suffered recoveries of their shares, but the third did not. They all married, and their husbands entered into an agreement for a partition by deed of the lands held in coparcenary, but for nothing more. No such deed appeared to have been executed, but the lands had been held according to the agreement from its date. An action being brought by the heir in tail of the parcener who did not suffer a recovery, within twenty years after her death, and before 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, to recover her share, which had been held by the husband of one of the other coparceners:—Held, that the possession was under the agreement, and not adverse. Doe d. Millett v. Millett, 11 Q. B. 1036; 17 L. J., Q. B. 202; 12 Jur. 649.

Held, also, that nothing could be presumed beyond what was contemplated by the agreement, which provided for a deed, and not for a recovery. Ib.

—— Disability of One.]—If an estate descends to parceners, one of whom is under a disability, which continues more than twenty years, and the other does not enter within twenty years, the disability of the one does not preserve the title of the other after the twenty years elapsed. Roe d. Langdon v. Rowlston, 2 Taunt. 441; 11 R. R. 640.

Entry by one Coparcener on the Entirety operative only as to his Moiety.]—See Doe d. Daniel v. Woodroffe, col. 172.

Joint Tenants—"More than undivided Share."]—3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, s. 12, applies not only to the case where one of several joint tenants has been in possession of the entirety of the whole of the lands held jointly, but also to the case where such tenant has been in possession of the entirety of any portion of such lands; and the words "or more than his or their undivided share or shares of such land," apply as well to the case where one of several joint tenants has been in possession of more than his undivided share in any portion of the lands held jointly, as to the case where he has been in possession of more than his undivided share in the whole of such lands. Murphy v. Murphy, 15 Ir. C. L. R. 205.

—— Creation of Joint Tenancy by Wrongful Possession.]—A testator devised a copyhold in 1796 to W. for life, with remainder to her children as tenants in common, without words of limitation. W., who had three children, let the property to her two sons, L. and B., and after the death of L. to his son R. and B., who occupied the estate together till the death of W. in 1841. On W.'s death the property—subject, as to one third, to B.'s life estate—belonged in moieties to R. and X., as the co-heirs of the testator. R. and B. continued to occupy the whole property as owners, and farmed it at their equal expense, till the death of B., in 1862, after which it was similarly farmed by B.'s son and R. till 1869, when B.'s son died. The devisee of B.'s son afterwards filed a bill for a partition:—Held, that R. and B., as regarded that third share, of which their possession became wrongful on the death of W., must be considered as joint tenants; and that as B. had died first, his interest in the estate had determined, and the devisee of B.'s son had no title. Ward v. Ward, L. R. 6 Ch. 789.

Tenants in Common.]—The statute operates to make the possession of tenants in common a separate possession from the time they first became tenants in common, and not merely from the time of the passing of the statute. Doe d. Holt v. Horrocks, 1 Car. & K. 566.

—— One out of Possession.]—Where one tenant in common has been out of possession for twenty years prior to the passing of the 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, he is barred by ss. 2 and 12 from bringing his action, but might maintain it under s. 15, within five years of the passing of the act, if the other tenant in common had not been in possession adversely to him at the time of passing the act. Culley v. Doe d. Taylerson, 3 P. & D. 539; 11 A. & E. 1008; 9 L. J., Q. B. 288.

In ejectment by the heir of T., for two acres of land, it appeared that the father of T., more than fifty years before, had devised four acres (comprising the two in question) to his widow for life, and then to T. and his sister S. in remainder in fee. For more than twenty years T., by arrangement between his mother and S., occupied the two acres, and devised them to his widow for life, and on her death or marriage to his daughter; and then there was a devise in similar terms, on the same event, to his son the heir. The daughter occupied with her husband until her death, and he, without giving any notice as tenant in common, claimed to defend the action:—Held, that although there was no deed of partition, the long occupation inevitably barred the title of S. as tenant in common, under 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, s. 12. Tidball v. James, 29 L. J., Ex. 91.

By 2 & 3 Will. 4, c. 27, actual possession by enjoyment of rents, &c. though not adverse in the old sense, is a bar in itself, and, therefore, four out of five tenants in common being in exclusive enjoyment for more than twenty years, the fifth was barred. Time runs the moment after an acknowledgment of title. Burroughs v. M'Creight, 1 Jo. & Lat. 290; 7 Ir. Eq. R. 49.

T. and J. became entitled in possession to a freehold as tenants in common in 1833. In 1879 persons claiming under J. brought an action for sale or partition. The defendant, who claimed under T., alleged that T. was in receipt of the rents of the entirety from 1833 to 1864, without accounting, and claimed the benefit of the Statute of Limitations. The parties entered into admissions which stated that T. received the rents of the entirety from 1833 till his death in 1877, and that T. paid to the solicitors of J.'s mortgagees a moiety of the rents due in November, 1864, and continued to pay to them a moiety of the rents till his death. The admissions did not state, nor was there any evidence, whether T. did or did not account for a moiety of the rents before 1864:—Held, by the vice-chancellor, that the acknowledgment by T. of J.'s title, though after twenty years' adverse possession, excluded the operation of the Statute of Limitations, and that the plaintiffs were entitled to judgment. But held, by the Court of Appeal, that where a tenant in common has gained by the statute an adverse title to another share of the property, no payment of rent or acknowledgment by him can restore the title which has been extinguished by the statute:—Held, further, by the Court of Appeal, that the payment of a moiety of the rents to persons claiming under J. from 1864 to 1877 raised a presumption that a similar payment was made previously, and that as the admissions did not negative this inference the defence on the Statute of Limitations could not be supported. Sanders v. Sanders, 51 L. J., Ch. 276; 19 Ch. D. 373; 45 L. T. 637; 30 W. R. 280—C. A. Affirming, on different grounds, 50 L. J., Ch. 367; 44 L. T. 171; 29 W. R. 413.

—— Agreement to pay Occupation Rent.]—Two being tenants in common, one entered into possession in 1827, with the consent of the other, upon an understanding that he should pay an occupation rent when called upon to do so. The tenant in possession died in 1839. The survivor claimed six years' rent:—Held, that the claim must be allowed, and that 4 Anne, c. 16, was not repealed by 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27. Henderson v. Eason, 15 Sim. 303; 15 L. J., Ch. 457; 10 Jur. 821. S. C., on appeal, 2 Ph. 308.

3. Tenants for Life.

See also B, II. 5, post (col. 174).

Waste by.]—A tenant for life having committed waste during the infancy of his eldest son, the first tenant in tail in remainder, who came of age ten years after, and who, although cognisant of the waste, did not institute the suit until nearly thirty years after, and two years after his father's death:—Held, not barred by the lapse of time. Leeds (Duke) v. Amherst (Lord), 14 Sim. 357; 15 L. J., Ch. 351. Affirmed, 2 Ph. 117; 10 Jur. 956.

If a tenant for life has rendered accounts to the remainderman of timber cut by him, within a period of six years before a bill is filed against him for account of such timber and value thereof, Statute of Limitations cannot be pleaded to bill. Hony v. Hony, 1 Sim. & S. 568; 24 R. R. 235. And see Alderman v. Bannister, 4 L. J. (O.S.) Ch. 126.

Real estate was devised to A. for life, with remainder to trustees to preserve contingent remainders, remainder to the first and other sons of A. in tail male, with remainder to B., C. and D., and their first and other sons in a similar way, with remainder to the testator's right heirs, with liberty to any tenant for life for the time being to fell and convert timber for the purpose of repairs. A. enjoyed the estate as tenant for life, the ultimate remainder in fee being invested in him, down to his death in 1859. B. enjoyed the estate in the same way down to his death in 1864. C. then entered into possession. A. and B. had each cut timber and sold it, but had expended money in repairs. In 1869 C. filed a bill to make their estates respectively account for such timber. The court refused an account against A.'s representative: first, because he had expended more than he had received; secondly, because the claim was barred by the Statute of Limitations. An account of what had been received and paid by B. during his life was directed. Birch-Wolfe v. Birch, 39 L. J., Ch. 345; L. R. 9 Eq. 683; 23 L. T. 216; 18 W. R. 594.

A., being equitable tenant for life of lands impeachable for waste, and B. equitable tenant in tail in remainder after certain intervening contingent equitable estates of inheritance which did not take effect, acts of waste were committed by A. in cutting down ornamental and other timber. In an action by B. for an account of the waste: plea, that the alleged acts of waste were committed more than six years before action brought:—Held, on demurrer, a good defence. Simpson v. Simpson, 3 L. R., Ir. 308.

A tenant for life was executrix of a preceding tenant for life, both being impeachable for waste, and both having committed waste by cutting timber:—Held, that the Statute of Limitations began to run against the remaindermen in fee from the time when the timber was cut, and not from the time of the death of the tenant for life. Higginbotham v. Hawkins, 41 L. J., Ch. 828; L. R. 7 Ch. 676; 27 L. T. 328; 20 W. R. 955.

Held, that though an injunction and an account were granted against the existing tenant for life, yet as no injunction could be granted against the preceding tenant for life, no account could be granted against her executrix for waste committed by the preceding tenant for life. Ib.

—— Statute runs from Tortious Act.]—See Seagram v. Knight, col. 17.

Possession under Devise by—Right of Reversioner barred.]—Where a copyhold estate was granted to A. for her own life and the life of B., with a grant of the reversion to C. for other lives, and A. devised the estate to B., who kept possession for more than twenty years:—Held, that C.'s right of possession attached on the death of A., and as no claim had been made within twenty years, an ejectment for the premises was barred by the statute. Doe d. Foster v. Scott, 7 D. & R. 190; 4 B. & C. 706; 4 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 39.

4. Tenants in Tail.

By 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, s. 21, when a tenant in tail is barred by the statute, any person, whose right he might have barred, is also barred.

By s. 22, when a tenant in tail dies before he is barred, any person, whose right he might have barred, will be barred at the time at which he would have been, if he had lived.

By s. 6 of 37 & 38 Vict. c. 57 (replacing s. 23 of above act), when a tenant in tail makes an assurance which does not operate to bar the estates in remainder, such estates shall be barred twelve years after the time when such tenant or his successor in tail would, by executing such an assurance, have barred such estates.

Retrospective Effect—Disabilities.]—The 21st and 22nd sections of 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, are retrospective. Goodall v. Sherratt, 3 Drew. 216; 3 Eq. R. 295; 24 L. J., Ch. 323; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 57; 3 W. R. 152.

If the statute has begun to run against a tenant in tail, it will continue to run against the remainderman, though he may be under disabilities. Ib.

The title of the plaintiff, against which a recovery was set up, accrued in 1837; the plaintiff brought ejectment in 1852, but was forced to abandon it, and to proceed in equity. He filed his bill in 1855:—Held, that he was not barred of his title to relief by lapse of time; and in particular that the 23rd section of the 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, did not apply. Penny v. Allen, 7 De G. M. & G. 409.

Barring of Issue.]—Sect. 23 applies only to assurances by the tenant in tail which are effectual to bar the issue in tail. Ib. S.P., Morgan v. Morgan, col. 171.

In ejectment, the plaintiff proved that A. being seised in fee of the land in question, devised it to the father of the plaintiff in tail general, and died in 1799; the plaintiff's father received the rents and profits from 1799 to 1807, at which time he was succeeded by a person of whom the defendant obtained possession:—Held, that under 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, s. 21, since the tenant in tail was barred, the issue in tail was also barred. Austin v. Llewellyn, 9 Ex. 276; 2 C. L. R. 409; 23 L. J., Ex. 11.

An estate tail having been discontinued by a feoffment made by the tenant in tail more than twenty years before his death:—Held, that the issue in tail might bring his writ of formedon at any time within twenty years next after such death, the period of limitation prescribed by 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, not running against him during the life of the tenant in tail. Cannon v. Rimington, 12 C. B. 1; 21 L. J., C. P. 137. Affirmed, 12 C. B. 18; 22 L. J., C. P. 153; 1 W. R. 291—Ex. Ch.

—— Conveyance by Deed not Inrolled.]—A tenant in tail in 1847 conveyed his lands by deed not inrolled, and possession was enjoyed for more than twenty years under that deed:—Held, that his issue in tail was not barred by 3 & 4 Will 4, c. 27, s. 23, and that he was entitled to have the property delivered up to him with an account of rents from the filing of the bill. Morgan v. Morgan, 39 L. J., Ch. 493; L. R. 10 Eq. 99; 22 L. T. 595; 18 W. R. 744.

—— Infant.]—The plaintiff's mother was tenant in tail by descent of certain property which was entailed by the will of a testator who died in January, 1811, and she became entitled to the possession of the property on the death of R. W., which took place in November, 1871, at which time the plaintiff's mother was under no disability either of coverture or infancy. She married in 1875, and died in 1882, without ever having acquired possession of the property. Upon her death the plaintiff became entitled to possession as her issue in tail, and in 1889 he commenced an action to enforce his right to such possession. The point of law raised by the pleadings in the action was set down for hearing before the trial, the question being whether the plaintiff not having claimed, or taken possession until after the expiration of twelve years from November, 1871, and who was an infant on his mother's death, and also at the date of the action, was entitled to the benefit of his infancy to prevent the Statute of Limitations from running:—Held, that as the plaintiff claimed through his mother as a tenant in tail, the right to possession first accrued to her; that, as there had been no possession by either of them for twelve years, the statute applied; and that, therefore, the plaintiff was not now entitled to claim the property. Murray v. Watkins, 62 L. T. 796.

—— Before Statute.]—The twenty years within which a formedon in the descender must have been brought under 21 Jac. 1, c. 16, s. 1, began to run when the title descended to the first heir in tail; and there was no distinction between the heir of a tenant in fee taking by descent and the heir of a tenant in tail. Tolson v. Kaye, 3 Br. & B. 217; 6 Moore, 542; 23 R. R. 615. S. C., 6 Man. & G. 536; 7 Scott (N.R.) 222.

A tenant in tail died, leaving issue in tail, a granddaughter, a feme covert; the granddaughter died covert, leaving issue in tail two sons, infants: the elder attained the age of twenty-one and died, the younger attained his age of twenty-one, and fourteen years after sued out a writ of formedon in the descender:—Held, that he was barred by 21 Jac. 1, c. 16, s. 1. Cotterell v. Dutton, 4 Taunt. 826; 14 R. R. 675.

An heir in tail brought ejectment against a defendant who had been in receipt of the rent thirty years, during the life of the ancestor in tail, and seven years after his death. The ancestor had had seisin:—Held, that such possession by the defendant was no bar to the action, and that the lessor of the plaintiff was not bound to rebut the presumption arising from such possession, by shewing that the ancestor had not conveyed by fine and recovery. Doe d. Smith v. Pike, 3 B. & Ad. 738; 1 N. & M. 385; 1 L. J., K. B. 105.

Grant in Fee by—Covenant to stand Seised—Creation of Base Fee—Right of Entry of Issue in Tail—Entry of one Coparcener.]—An estate being limited to the use of A. and his wife, and the heirs of their bodies, with remainder to A. in fee, and A. having died, leaving his widow and G., an only son, and L. and H. only daughters, the widow, in 1735, by a deed-poll, in consideration of an annuity granted to her by G., and of natural affection, granted, surrendered and yielded up the estate to him in fee; and he afterwards, during her life, suffered a recovery. She died in 1767. G. died without issue in 1779, having devised the estate to trustees, to secure an annuity to B., only son of his sister L. (then dead), and subject thereto to W., eldest son of B., for his life, with remainder to B.'s second son. In 1790 W., on his father's death, entered into possession of the whole estate, claiming under the will of G., and subsequently did various acts in the character of devisee for life. In 1814 he suffered a recovery of one moiety of the estate, and in 1816 conveyed the entirety to mortgagees in fee. In 1818 M., the descendant of H., the other coparcener, suffered a recovery of the other moiety, which, it was declared, should enure (subject to the trusts of a term) to the use of W.'s mortgagees:—Held, first, that the deed-poll of 1735 operated as a covenant to stand seised, and created a base fee, determinable by the entry of the issue in tail; secondly, that the base fee did not, on the widow's death, become merged in the reversion in fee in G., as the estate tail subsisted as an intermediate estate; thirdly, that although G., being estopped by the recovery suffered by him, was not remitted to the estate tail, no right of entry accrued to anyone until his death, and therefore the period of twenty years, for the operation of the Statute of Limitations against the issue in tail, was to be calculated from his death, and not from the death of his mother, and consequently W.'s entry (in 1790) was not barred by lapse of time; fourthly, that although W. entered under the will, and manifested an intention to take the estate under it for his life only, that was immaterial, and he was remitted as to his moiety to the original estate tail which was barred by the recovery in 1814; and fifthly, that the entry and remitter of W. did not operate to remit his coparcener M. to the other moiety of the estate. Doe d. Daniel v. Woodroffe, 2 H. L. Cas. 811; 13 Jur. 1013.

—— When Time runs against Remainders over.]—When a tenant for life with remainder (in the events which happen) to himself in tail executes an assurance which, for want of the protector's consent, creates only a base fee, time does not run under the Statute of Limitations (3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27), s. 23, to make such assurance effectual against the reversions, so long as any estates coming between his estate for life and estate in tail are in existence. Mills v. Capel, 44 L. J., Ch. 674; L. R. 20 Eq. 692; 33 L. T. 158.

Lands limited in equity to T., F. and F.'s wife E. successively for life, with remainder to the first and other sons of F. and E. successively in tail male, with remainder to F. in tail general, with remainders over, were in 1835, without the consent of T., the protector of the settlement, by deed inrolled, reciting, contrary to the fact, the seisin in fee-simple of F., conveyed by F., E. joining to transfer or bar her dower, to a purchaser in fee-simple; and the purchaser then entered into possession. T. died in 1848, F. died without issue in 1859, and E. died in 1873:—Held, that until 1873 the possession of the purchaser was a possession by virtue of the subsisting life estates, and not of the estate tail in remainder of F., and, consequently, was not a possession the continuance of which for the period of twenty years would, under s. 23, bar the remainders over. Ib.

Special Clause in Settlement preserving Right of Entry of Heirs in Tail.]—By a private act of 2 & 3 P. & M., lands were limited to N. and others successively in tail male, with limitations over, and an ultimate limitation to the Crown; and it was provided that "no feoffment, discontinuance, fine, or recovery, with voucher or otherwise, or any other act or acts thereafter to be made, done, suffered, or acknowledged of the premises, or any part or parcel thereof," by N., or the other persons named, "or by any of them, or by any of their heirs male of their several bodies, should bind or conclude, or put from entry," the Crown, or any of the heirs in tail. A lease for three lives was made in 1781, by the heir in tail male of N., then in possession, of part of the lands so settled; the lease expired in 1832, and since that time the land had been held by the defendant, and those through whom he claimed, without payment of rent or acknowledgment of the title of the tenants in tail for the time being. In an action by the present heir in tail male of N. to recover the land:—Held (by Channell and Cleasby, BB., Bramwell, B., dissentiente), that he was not barred by 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27. Abergavenny (Earl) v. Brace, 41 L. J., Ex. 120; L. R. 7 Ex. 145; 26 L. T. 514; 20 W. R. 462.

Semble, that the section of 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, which bars issue in tail is s. 2, and not s. 21. Ib.

Non-compliance by, with Condition—Right of Entry of Remainderman.]—An estate was settled on a tenant for life and remainderman in tail, with a name and arms clause, providing that in case any person should fail to comply with it for twelve calendar months after becoming entitled in possession the estate should go over as if he were dead. C. entered into possession as tenant in tail, and did not comply with the condition; he remained in possession for more than twenty years after he had forfeited the estate:—Held, that he did not acquire a title by adverse possession, but that under 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, s. 4, the right of the remaindermen to enter commenced on his death. Astley v. Essex (Earl), 43 L. J., Ch. 817; L. R. 18 Eq. 290; 30 L. T. 485; 22 W. R. 620.

At the death of the tenant for life the next remainderman was in India, and was ignorant of the clause until after the twelve months expired:—Held, that his ignorance did not prevent the forfeiture operating as to his interest. Ib.

The 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, s. 4, extends to forfeitures which operate to accelerate an estate under a conditional limitation, as well as to forfeitures of which the heir-at-law only can take advantage. Ib.

5. Remaindermen.

See also B, II. 3, ante (col. 167).

By 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, s. 3, the right to recover any land or rent, as regards interests in reversion or remainder or other future estates, shall be deemed to have first accrued at the time they became interests in possession; and, by s. 4, the right shall still be deemed to have then first accrued, notwithstanding that an earlier right accrued by reason of a forfeiture. By 37 & 38 Vict. c. 57, s. 2, if the person last entitled to the preceding particular estate is not in possession when such estate determines, the person then becoming entitled to the future interest must recover the land or rent within six years, or within twelve years from the time when it first might have been recovered by the person whose estate has determined, whichever be the longer period. If the right of the owner of the particular estate is barred by the statute, any person, claiming under an instrument executed after time began to run against such owner, shall be barred. By 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, s. 20, when the right of any person to an estate in possession is barred, the right of the same person to future estates in the same land or rent shall also be barred, unless in the meantime such land or rent shall have been recovered by some person entitled in succession to the estate in possession.

Particular Estate in Land—Estate in Remainder expectant thereon—Conveyance of Particular Estate—"Person last Entitled."]—Where a person entitled to a particular estate, in respect of which land is held or the profits thereof or rent received, and upon which a future estate is expectant, conveys away his estate, he is not, when the particular estate determines, "the person last entitled to the particular estate upon which the future estate was expectant," and consequently the proviso in s. 2 of the Real Property Limitation Act, 1874, does not apply to limit the time within which the person who on the determination of the particular estate becomes entitled to an estate in possession may make an entry or distress or bring an action to recover such land or rent. Pedder v. Hunt, 56 L. J., Q. B. 212; 18 Q. B. D. 565; 56 L. T. 687; 35 W. R. 371—C. A.

A testator devised certain land to his sons successively for life, beginning with the youngest, and after their death "to be for ever enjoyed by the oldest surviving heir of his oldest surviving son for their life or lives for ever." The eldest surviving son being in possession executed, more than six years before his death, a conveyance in fee to the defendant. He left one son, who more than six but within twelve years after his father's death brought this action to recover possession of the land, claiming as devisee under the will of the testator:—Held, that the claim was not barred, as the plaintiff's father, having conveyed away his life estate, was not "the person last entitled to the particular estate" on which the plaintiff's estate in remainder was expectant within the meaning of the proviso in s. 2 of the Real Property Limitation Act, 1874. Ib.

Tenant for Life, with General Power to appoint to Uses—Estate of Tenant for Life barred—Right of Appointees.]—The estate of a tenant for life in land became barred by the Statutes of Limitations. He had a general power of appointing to uses expectant on the estate of a subsequent tenant for life, who died without having recovered the land. Thereupon the appointees under the power claimed to recover:—Held, that the power of appointing to uses was not a "right in remainder" so as to cause the appointees' estate to be barred by s. 20 of the act of 1833, which provides, in effect, that where the right to an estate in possession is barred, the right of the same person to any other estate in the land is also barred:—Held, also, that the claimants were not within the meaning of the term "appointee," as used in s. 1 of the act of 1833, so as to make them persons claiming through the donee of the power, and consequently barred under s. 1 of the act of 1874, by reason of his right having become barred thereunder, but that they were entitled, under s. 2 of the act of 1874, to recover the land within the period therein specified. Devon's (Earl) Settled Estates, In re, 65 L. J., Ch. 810; [1896] 2 Ch. 562; 75 L. T. 178; 45 W. R. 25.

Life Estate carved out of Estate Tail.]—In 1788 estates were settled by a marriage settlement, to the use of the wife for life, with remainders to her issue in tail, with remainder to the settlor (whose heiress-at-law she was) in fee. In 1818, by deeds to which the husband and wife, and their only son, were parties, and by a recovery suffered in pursuance thereof, the estates were limited to the use of the husband for life, remainder to the son for life, remainder to his issue in tail, and remainder to his sister for life, with other remainders over. The husband died in 1819, the wife in 1822, and the son in 1828:—Held, that, inasmuch as the estate of the sister was carved out of the estate of the son, she had the same period for bringing an ejectment in respect of any estates comprised in the above deeds as he would have had if he had continued alive, viz. twenty years from 1822, when his remainder came into possession. Doe d. Curzon v. Edmonds, 6 M. & W. 295.

Evidence that Tenant for Life alive within Twenty Years.]—Ejectment brought by a remainderman more than twenty but less than twenty-seven years since the tenant for life was last heard of, cannot be supported without other evidence from which the jury may infer that the tenant for life was alive within twenty years. Slade v. Nepean, 2 N. & M. 219.

Onus Probandi—No Presumption against Remainderman from Fifty Years' Possession during prior Particular Estates.]—See Cole v. Heydon, 1 L. T. 439.

Surrender of Life Estate—Claim by Son of Life Tenant.]—A., being tenant for life of a copyhold estate, and B., his daughter, being tenant in tail in remainder, joined in a recovery in 1778, and A. surrendered to the use of himself for life, remainder to the use of B. for life, remainder to the right heirs of the survivor. A. and B. shortly afterwards surrendered the fee to a bonâ fide purchaser, the contingent remainder to A. being void:—Held, that as the surrender passed B.'s life estate, the claim to the fee by B.'s son did not accrue till her death. Doe d. Hinton v. Role, 3 N. & P. 648; 8 A. & E. 650.

Possession under Void Appointment.]—A. was tenant for life with a power of appointment, by will attested by three witnesses; he appointed the land to B. for life, and after her death to C. in fee. B. was one of the witnesses to the will, and the appointment to her was therefore void. On the death of the testator, the husband of B. entered, and held the land till his death, which was three years after the death of B.:—Held, that the statute did not begin to run against C. till the death of B. Doe d. Allen v. Blakeway, 5 Car. & P. 563. And see Faussett v. Carpenter, 5 Bligh (N.S.) 75.

Future Estate—Grant to Husband and Wife for joint Lives, Remainder to Husband's Heirs.]—Copyhold land was surrendered, in 1798, to a husband and wife for their joint lives, with remainder to the heirs of the husband. In 1805 the husband absconded and went abroad, and was never afterwards heard of. In 1807 a commission of bankruptcy issued against him, and the usual assignment of his estate was made by the commissioners to his assignee. The wife occupied the estate until her death in 1841, whereupon the assignee was admitted:—Held, that an ejectment by the assignee brought after her death was in time, for that the husband's reversion in fee was a future estate within 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, s. 3. Doe d. Johnson v. Liversedge, 11 M. & W. 517; 13 L. J., Ex. 61.

When Statute does not run against, till Death of Tenant for Life.]—When children claim as remaindermen under articles, time does not commence to run against their right under the articles, in favour of a purchaser, until the death of the tenant for life. Thompson v. Simpson, 1 Dr. & War. 459.

Semble, unless a man is a mere trustee on express trust, time will run from the conveyance, but where a party is entitled in remainder he cannot be bound before the period when his right to possession accrues. Ib.

When a legacy, charged upon the residuary real estate was bequeathed to trustees, for B. for life, and after his death for his children, and there was not, during his life, from 1806 to 1863, any payment made on account of the legacy, or any trustee capable of giving a discharge for it: —Held, that the Statute of Limitations did not begin to run against the children until the death of B. Carroll v. Hargrave, Ir. R. 5 Eq. 123.

—— Trusts of unpaid Purchase-money recited in contemporaneous Deed.]— Purchase-money proved to have been left in the hands of the purchaser as an indemnity in the year 1796, but for which a receipt was indorsed on the conveyance, the evidence being in the recitals of a deed contemporaneous with the purchase, and executed in order to enable the purchase to be completed, and these recitals stating trusts of the fund under which the plaintiffs were entitled in remainder after two life estates, the last of which expired in 1845:—Held, that as the plaintiffs' title in possession did not accrue till 1845, they were entitled, on a bill filed in 1852, to have the trust fund made good out of the assets (real estate) of the purchaser who had died in 1811. Hawkins v. Gardiner, 2 Sm. & G. 441.

See also Prior v. Horniblow, col. 237.

Payment by, of Arrears of Interest on Charges —Claim of Executor to be recouped out of Fund in Court.]—A remainderman paid with his own money, after he came into possession, interest which had accrued, during the preceding estate for life, upon charges affecting the inheritance: —Held, first, that his executors were entitled in 1870 (as against the personal representative of the tenant for life), to be recouped out of a fund in court, the produce of rents of the life estate brought in, in 1815, by a receiver appointed in an incumbrancer's suit instituted against the tenant for life. Howlin v. Sheppard, Ir. R. 6 Eq. 38. Affirmed Ir. R. 6 Eq. 497.

Held, secondly, that the fund having remained in court, during the whole period from 1815 to 1870, in usum jus habentium, the claim of H.'s executor was not barred. Ib.

A. neglected to renew, and the lease expired in 1798. His eldest son attained twenty-one in 1800. In 1830 A. died. In 1831 the eldest son filed his bill, praying to be compensated for the loss of the lease, out of A.'s assets:—Held, that he was entitled to the relief, notwithstanding the lapse of time. Bennett v. Colley, 5 Sim. 181. ### 6. Reversioners.

By 37 & 38 Vict. c. 57, s. 2, a right to recover any land or rent, in respect of an interest in reversion, shall be deemed to have accrued when it becomes an interest in possession by the determination of the particular estate, notwithstanding any possession by the reversioner previously to the creation of the particular estate.

Determination of Particular Estate—No New Right of Entry.]—In 1784 premises were leased to H. J., for three lives. He, by will, devised all his estates and interest in the premises to his wife, A., her heirs and assigns. She, in 1793, conveyed the estates so devised to her son, J., and the heirs of his body, with a proviso, that if he should have no child living at his death, the limitation thereby made should cease, and the estate should revert to A., her heirs and assigns. In 1811, J. purchased the reversion in fee in the premises expectant on the lease for lives, which was conveyed to him, and at the same time an old satisfied term of 5,000 years affecting the premises was assigned to a trustee for him to attend the inheritance. J. died in 1812, without issue, leaving his nephew, L., his heir-at-law and the heir-at-law of A. The lease for lives determined in 1835. For upwards of twenty years from the death of J. the premises were held adversely to L.:—Held, that his right of entry was barred thereby, and that he had not a new right of entry on the determination of the leases for lives in 1835. Doe d. Hall v. Moulsdale, 16 M. & W. 689; 16 L. J., Ex. 169.

That branch of the 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, which relates to estates in reversion expectant on the determination of a particular estate, applies only where another person than the reversioner is entitled to the particular estate. Ib.

A., upon his marriage, in 1815, being entitled under a will to a contingent interest, by way of a shifting use to an estate, conveyed it by lease and release to the use of himself for life, remainder among the issue of the marriage in the usual course of strict settlement, with the ultimate reversion to himself and his heirs; in 1816 the event upon which he became entitled to the possession occurred, but he did not take possession thereupon; in 1827, upon his second marriage, he by deed reciting that under the settlement of 1815 he had a reversion in fee, expectant upon the failure of issue male of the former marriage, covenanted to settle the reversion upon the issue of the second marriage; A. died in 1835, and the issue male of the first marriage in 1840. In 1841 the issue of the second marriage filed their bill against the person from whom the estate should have shifted in 1816, praying that they might be declared entitled to the estate:—Held, that they stood in the place of A., and that the bar of the Statute of Limitations commenced to run against them from 1816; a person not being able after the statute has commenced to run to create new rights by executing settlements of the estate which he claims. Stackpoole v. Stackpoole, 2 Con. & L. 489; 4 Dr. & War. 320; 6 Ir. Eq. R. 18.

7. Trustee and Cestui que Trust.

See also ante, A, IV. 3 (col. 40).

By 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, s. 25, when any land or rent is vested in a trustee upon any express trust, the statute only begins to run against the cestui que trust upon a conveyance of such land or rent to a purchaser for valuable consideration.

By the Judicature Act, 1873, s. 25, sub-s. 2, no claim of a cestui que trust against his trustee for any property held on an express trust, or in respect of any breach of such trust, shall be held to be barred by any statute of limitations.

By 37 & 38 Vict. c. 57, s. 10, no sum of money or legacy charged upon or payable out of any land or rent and secured by an express trust, and no arrears of such rent or interest on such sum of money or legacy, shall be recoverable, except within the time when they would be if there was no such trust.

By the Trustee Act, 1888 (51 & 52 Vict. c. 59), s. 8, in any proceeding against a trustee, except where the claim is founded upon a fraud to which the trustee was privy, or is to recover trust property or its proceeds still retained by the trustee, or converted to his use, he shall enjoy all rights conferred by any statute of limitations as if he had not been a trustee, and, if no such statute applies, he may plead the lapse of time to any proceeding to recover money or property as if the action had been one of debt for money had and received.

When Statute not Applicable as between.]—Statute of Limitations does not run against a trust. Hollis's Case, 2 Vent. 345.

Statute of Limitations cannot be pleaded to breach of trust. Milnes v. Cowley, 4 Price, 103.

Statute of Limitations cannot be pleaded where estate in law is in trustees. Lawley v. Lawley, 9 Mod. 33.

The object of the statute was to settle the rights of persons adversely litigating with each other, not to deal with cases of trustee and cestui que trust, where there is but one single interest, viz. that of the person beneficially entitled. Garrard v. Tuck, 8 C. B. 231; 18 L. J., C. P. 338.

A cestui que trust who enters into possession of land becomes at law tenant at will to the trustee. Ib.

The 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, s. 3, does not apply to a cestui que trust holding possession of land under the trustee. Ib.

In cases of express trust, the statute is no bar to a demand of a cestui que trust, though the other cestuis que trustent have for more than twenty years received from the trustee the whole of the rents to the exclusion of the claimant. Knight v. Bowyer, 3 De G. & J. 421; 27 L. J., Ch. 520; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 569; 6 W. R. 565.

When Cestui que Trust Tenant-at-Will to Trustee—When Possession of, Adverse to Trustee.]—The doctrine that a cestui que trust who is in possession of the estate by the consent or acquiescence of the trustee, must be regarded as his tenant-at-will, only applies where the cestui que trust is the actual occupant; where he is merely allowed to receive the rents or otherwise deal with the estate in the hands of occupying tenants, he is merely the agent of the trustees. Melling v. Leak, 16 C. B. 652; 3 C. L. R. 1017; 24 L. J., C. P. 187; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 759; 3 W. R. 595.

The management of an estate was intrusted by the trustees in fee to the cestui que trust for life as beneficial owner, and the latter, having never been in actual occupation, let C. into possession, who occupied during the life of the cestui que trust for more than twenty years, without paying rent or acknowledging title:—Held, that a tenancy at will had not been created between the cestui que trust and C., and that C. had therefore acquired a good title by adverse possession under the 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27. Ib.

In 1767, the residue of a satisfied term of 500 years (created in 1766) was assigned to a trustee for H. to attend the inheritance. In 1844 the administrator of the trustee brought ejectment on behalf of persons who claimed the beneficial interest through H., the defendants also claiming it under title derived through H. The owner of the legal interest in the term had never been in possession. No demand of possession had been made before action brought:—Held, that the action was not maintainable, for, if a tenancy at will existed as between the trustee and cestui que trust, it had not been determined by demand of possession; and if no tenancy existed such as to render necessary a demand of possession, then the action might have been brought twenty years before, and was consequently barred by 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, ss. 2 and 3. Doe d. Jacobs v. Phillips, 10 Q. B. 130; 16 L. J., Q. B. 269; 11 Jur. 692.

Possession of the cestui que trust was not adverse to the title of the trustee. Smith d. Dennison v. King, 16 East, 283.

—— Occupation under Agreement for Lease.]—S., being seised in fee of land abutting on the convex side of an arc formed by the course of the Thames, entered into an agreement of the 23rd of June, 1769, whereby he covenanted with A. to grant leases to him, for ninety-nine years from 1768, of messuages, which A. covenanted to erect on the land. A., and persons having interest in neighbouring property, contemplated making an embankment along the chord of the aforesaid arc, so as to gain from the river the land inside the curve. They therefore obtained an act, which, after reciting that the promoters had "very valuable freehold and leasehold interest in houses, wharfs and grounds next adjoining the river," empowered them to make the embankment in front of their respective houses, and enacted that the soil of the river so to be inclosed in front of such respective houses should vest, and the same was thereby vested in the owner or owners, proprietor or proprietors of such adjoining houses, according to his or their respective estates, trusts or interests. Having erected houses according to the agreement, A. duly received leases. The embankment was contemporaneously made, and A. also built on the ground reclaimed. The leases, which expired in 1867, did not include that land; but A. and his representatives retained possession of it until the present day, without any demise to or acknowledgment by them. The plaintiffs, who derived their title from S., brought ejectment for the reclaimed land:—Held, that they were entitled to recover, for that the embankment act vested the fee-simple in S., subject to the interests created by the agreement, and A., having had a right in equity to demand leases for ninety-nine years from 1768, the occupation of the reclaimed land, although at law merely a tenancy at will, had been that of cestui que trusts in possession, and, therefore, the title of the plaintiffs was not barred by the Statute of Limitations. Drummond v. Sant, 41 L. J., Q. B. 21; L. R. 6 Q. B. 763; 25 L. T. 419; 20 W. R. 18.

A Person in Possession under an Agreement for a Lease is a Cestui que Trust of, and therefore not to be deemed to be a Tenant-at-Will to the Owner.]—See Warren v. Murray, col. 154.

The proviso in s. 7 of the 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, applies to actual direct trusts, and is not limited to express trusts. Drummond v. Sant, supra. And see Garrard v. Tuck, col. 180.

Possession of Trustee, that of real Cestui que Trust.]—The possession of trustees cannot be adverse to their true cestuis que trustent, and the fact that for upwards of twenty years they have treated the land as belonging to one cestui que trust, whereas in fact it belonged to another cestui que trust, does not operate as a bar under the Statute of Limitations. Lister v. Pickford, 34 L. J., Ch. 582; 11 Jur. (N.S.) 649; 12 L. T. 587; 13 W. R. 827. See Cholmondeley v. Clinton, col. 258.

Covenant to convey to Trustee for Infant—No Conveyance executed—Possession of Trustee not adverse to Covenantor's Devisee till Death of Infant.]—See Doe d. Colclough v. Hulse, col. 263.

Possession of Estate by Person entitled to share in Proceeds of Sale, adverse to Trustees for Sale.]—A testatrix, by her will, devised real estate to trustees, their heirs and assigns, in trust for her daughter for life, and after her death to sell and divide the proceeds between four persons, A., B., C. and D., share and share alike. On the death of the testatrix the tenant for life entered and occupied until her own death in 1857. On her death C. and D. entered and remained in possession until the death of the latter in 1874. C. remained in possession until his death in 1880. The trustees never in any way acted, so far as the real estate was concerned, and the property was enjoyed by C. and D., and after the death of D. by C. without interruption and acknowledgment:—Held, that the legal estate in fee of the trustees was extinguished by the expiration of twenty years from the death of the tenant for life, and with it the trusts by which it was affected; and that it would be wrong to ascribe the possession of C. and D., which was unlawful for all the purposes of the will, to the supposed lawful title which they each had in respect of one-fourth share of the proceeds of sale. Bolling v. Hobday, 31 W. R. 9.

Possession of Cestui que Trust under invalid Devise not adverse to Trustee, though adverse to Heir-at-Law.]—Cestuis que trustent, under an invalid devise, who remain in possession without acknowledgment of title for more than twenty years, and thus bar the right of the heir-at-law, do not thereby acquire the legal estate in the devised lands, which vests in the trustees, and subject to the trusts of the devise. Kernaghan v. M'Nally, 12 Ir. Ch. R. 89.

Possession of Cestui que Trust Possession of Trustee, not ceasing on Death of Cestui que Trust in Possession but enuring as Seisin of the next entitled.]—See Parker v. Carter, col. 251.

Trustee of Estate not barred by Possession of Assignee of Tenant for Life.]—See Fausset v. Carpenter, col. 168.

"Express Trust"—On Face of Will.]—The testator devised a house and all other his real estate to his executors upon trust, the declaration of trust being as to the house only. He died seised of two other houses, and his executors took possession of them, and received the rents for more than twelve years from the death of the testator. His heir-at-law afterwards brought an action against the executors, alleging that the two houses vested in them in trust for him, and claimed execution of the trust:—Held, on the authority of Salter v. Cavanagh (1 Dr. & Wal. 668), that there was on the face of the will an express trust for the heir-at-law within s. 25 of the Statute of Limitations (3 & 4 Wm. 4, c. 27), and that his right was not barred. Patrick v. Simpson, 59 L. J., Q. B. 7; 24 Q. B. D. 128; 61 L. T. 686.

A party having been expressly named a trustee in a will under which a question rested as to whether he was not partially beneficially interested, it was held that his representatives were trustees within the 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, s. 25, and that though a constructive trust would be barred by this statute, and might have been barred previously to it by length of time, yet that that only applied to cases where the trust did not arise on the face of the instrument, but was to be made out by evidence. Salter v. Cavanagh, 1 Dr. & Wal. 668.

In 1824 an estate was conveyed to A. in fee by way of mortgage, the conveyance being upon trust to sell. A. by his will, executed in February, 1826, devised his real estates to trustees for sale, and to hold the proceeds as part of his personal estate; he then devised to the same trustees all estates vested in him by way of mortgage or in trust for any persons, on payment to them of the mortgage moneys to convey the mortgaged hereditaments to the persons entitled to the equity of redemption in the same, and directed that the mortgage moneys when so paid to them should be held upon the same trusts as declared concerning his personal estate. Subsequently to the date of his will, A. purchased the equity of redemption in the estate, and entered into possession, but no conveyance was ever made to him. A. died in October, 1826, leaving Y. and C. his co-heirs-at-law. In 1827 the trustees of A.'s will entered into possession of the estate and administered and dealt with the net rents and profits in accordance with the trusts of the will for more than forty years. In 1869 the representatives of Y. set up a claim to three-fourths of the estate on the grounds, first, that A. having died intestate as to the estate, one moiety descended on Y. as one of his heirs-at-law; secondly, that C. having by deed released all her right and interest in the estate to the trustees of the will, such release operated in favour of (in the events which happened) A.'s two residuary legatees, of whom Y. was one, and, consequently that a moiety of the other moiety of the estate also belonged to them:—Held, that although A. died intestate as to the estate, and a moiety thereof descended on Y. as one of his co-heirs, yet that the claim of Y.'s representatives was barred by the Statute of Limitations, there being no trust, express or implied, on the face of the will in favour of the testator's heirs. Yardley v. Holland, L. R. 20 Eq. 428; 33 L. T. 301.

A father devised estates to his son, R. P., and the heirs of his body lawfully begotten, "but upon special trust and confidence in my son that in case he shall have no issue of his own body lawfully begotten, he, my said son, will not do or suffer any act in law or otherwise to obstruct or prevent the several following devises and trusts and limitations of my estates from taking effect, but, on the contrary, that he will do or cause to be done every act in his power to establish and confirm the same"; and there were certain limitations over in the event of his death without issue. The father died in 1782, and the son shortly afterwards suffered a common recovery, and he died without issue in 1808, having devised one-fourth of the estates to G. H. D. P., who died in 1840, and devised the said one-fourth moiety to the defendant. D., who was entitled to the estates upon the death of G. H. D. P. under the limitations contained in the will, died in 1852, leaving a son who died in 1864, leaving the plaintiff, his eldest son and heir-at-law. In 1877, the plaintiff commenced an action claiming a declaration that he was entitled to one-fourth part of the testator's estates and to mesne profits, and he alleged in his statement of claim that his father remained until his death in ignorance of the provisions of the testator's will; and that he himself did not discover his rights thereunder until 1875; and that the common recovery suffered by R. P. was invalid:—Held, that the common recovery suffered by the tenant in tail defeated the limitations over; that the words of the devise did not create an express trust within 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, s. 25; and that the plaintiff's claim was barred by 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, s. 34. Dawkins v. Penrhyn (Lord) 48 L. J., Ch. 304; 4 App. Cas. 51; 39 L. T. 583; 27 W. R. 173. H. L. (E.)

—— For Payment of Debts.]—A trust in a will for the payment of debts out of real estate does not prevent the operation of the Statute of Limitations, if the testator in fact leaves no real estate to support the trust. Smith, Ex parte, Hepburn, In re, 54 L. J., Q. B. 422; 14 Q. B. D. 394.

A testator charged all his real estate with payment of his debts, if his personal estate was insufficient to pay them, and directed his executors to raise sufficient for their payment by mortgage or otherwise:—Held, that this did not create an express trust within the exception contained in the 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, s. 25. Dickenson v. Teasdale, 1 De G. J. & S. 52; 1 N. R. 141; 32 L. J., Ch. 37; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 237; 7 L. T. 655.

A testator charged his real estates with his debts, and he devised his C. plantation in trust to pay his debts. He died in 1834, and the produce of C. being in court:—Held, in 1859, that the creditors were not barred as to the fund in court, a trust having been created in their favour, but that they were barred as to the other real estates, they having a mere charge thereon. Jacquet v. Jacquet, 27 Beav. 332.

A trust for payment of debts has been held to revive such as have been barred by the statute, though judges have murmured at it; yet it is now established in equity; and where real estate has been affected by such stale debts it is a plain case, but not where it depends on an account to be taken. Lacon v. Briggs, 3 Atk. 107.

Time does not run against a creditor after the death of the testator, in case of a trust or charge for the payment of debts. Hargreaves v. Michell, 6 Madd. 326; 23 R. R. 231.

Devise in trust for payment of debts, does not revive a debt upon which the Statute of Limitations had taken effect by the expiration of the time before the testator's death. Burke v. Jones, 2 Ves. & B. 275; 13 R. R. 83.

J. S. being indebted by simple contract, which was barred by the Statute of Limitations, made will and devised lands in trust to pay debts. Quære, whether devise revives the debt, and whether to bill by creditor for benefit of trust a plea of statute is allowable. Stafford v. Blakeway, 6 Bro. P. C. 630.

Where lands are devised to pay debts, debts barred by statute are revived. Sed quære. Anon., 1 Salk. 154.

Where real estates are devised in trust to pay debts in aid of the personal estate, the Statute of Limitations does not run in equity after the death of the testator. Hughes v. Wynne, Turn. & R. 307.

Where lands were devised in trust for payment of debts, the Statute of Limitations runs not after death of testator against debts not barred thereby at his death. Fergus v. Gore, 1 Sch. & Lef. 107.

A devise of lands to A. for life, subject to debts, &c. and a bequest of testator's personal property to A., the better to enable her to pay debts, &c. does not prevent a judgment from being barred by the 40th section of the 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, or create a trust within the 25th section. Dundas v. Blake, 11 Ir. Eq. R. 138.

The distinction between charges on lands and trusts for debts considered, and the several cases on their effect in reference to the Statute of Limitations reviewed. Ib.

F. was indebted to C. in 800*l.*, to secure which, in 1814, he granted to C. an annuity or rent of 100*l.*, to be issued out of the lands of Dovegrove (held by F. under a lease from C.), habendum until thereby the 800*l.* and interest was paid, and F. covenanted to pay the annuity. In 1815 C. assigned the sum of 798*l.* (being the money then due on foot of the 800*l.*) and the annuity to H., and covenanted that the annuity should be regularly paid; and being entitled to a sum of 2,000*l.* charged on lands of which he was himself tenant for life, he, as a further security, assigned 800*l.*, part of the 2,000*l.*, to a trustee upon trust, in case the annuity should be unpaid for forty-one days, then from time to time to call in and receive such parts of the 2,000*l.* as should be sufficient to satisfy the arrears, and apply the same in payment thereof, and after payment thereof in trust for C. In 1816 the annuity was unpaid for more than forty-one days, but payments were made on foot of it up to October, 1821. In 1820 C. evicted the lands of Dovegrove for non-payment of rent, and died in 1824. Under a decree, to take an account of incumbrances affecting the land charged with the 2,000*l.*, made in a suit instituted in 1839, the master reported that the principal money which in October, 1821, was due on foot of the 798*l.* and to secure which the 800*l.* had been assigned, was still due, and that the residue of the 2,000*l.* after payment of that sum, was due to the personal representative of C. Upon an exception taken by the personal representative of C.:—Held, that the demand of H. was not barred by the 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, s. 40. The trust created by the deed of 1815 is a continuing trust not to be executed once for all, and a present right to receive the 800*l.*, within the meaning of the 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, s. 40, did not accrue upon the nonpayment of the annuity for forty-one days. A person entitled to a sum of money charged upon land assigned it to trustees in trust to secure the payment of a debt, and after payment thereof, in trust for himself. He cannot as against his creditor, insist that the trust is barred by the Statute of Limitations. Heenan v. Berry, 2 Jo. & Lat. 303.

Where a trust is created by will for the payment of debts, the right of a judgment creditor to the benefit of that trust is not affected by the 40th section of the 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27. Dillon v. Cruise, 3 Ir. Eq. R. 70.

A. being seised in fee-simple of four denominations of land, over which B. had an equitable charge in respect of an advance made by him on a contract with A. for the purchase of the land, which was subsequently broken off, did, on the occasion of his marriage, convey two of the denominations to the uses of the settlement, and the other two upon trust that the trustees should as soon as they should be required in writing by A., raise, by sale or mortgage thereof, sufficient to pay off the incumbrances affecting the lands, as set out in a schedule annexed thereto, with interest thereon. B.'s incumbrance was in the schedule, but he was no party to the deed:—Held, that he was not a cestui que trust under this deed, so as to be entitled to file a bill to carry the trusts into execution; and that therefore the case was not within the 25th section of 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27 (even supposing that to extend to the provisions of the 42nd), and that B. was entitled only to six years' interest. Evans v. Bagwell, 2 Con. & L. 612; 4 Dr. & War. 398.

Quære, whether the 25th section creates an exception out of the 42nd section of the 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27. Ib.

The existence of a trust by a devise of real estate for the payment of debts prevents the application of the Statute of Limitations as against such debts; and the statute 5 Geo. 2, c. 7, s. 4, does not so convert real estate situated in the American plantations into personal estate, as to take it out of the operation of that principle. Tulloch v. Simpson, 9 L. J., Ch. 145.

A direction in a will, for the payment of any specified debts, takes them out of the Statute of Limitations. Williamson v. Naylor, 3 Y. & Coll. 208.

Where a testator revives debts barred by the Statute of Limitations, he may appropriate a specific fund for their payment, and if the fund is not sufficient, the creditors must take ratably. Ib.

Testator by his will declared, that one-fifth of the residue of his personal estate should be divided amongst certain of his creditors named in a schedule to his will. The schedule contained the names of the creditors, and the debts due to them:—Held, that the direction so given for payment of these debts prevented the operation of the Statute of Limitations. Ib.

Testator having first directed his debts to be paid out of his real and personal estate, afterwards by a separate clause provided that if his personal estate should fall short of paying his debts, then his executor should enter into possession of the real estate, and apply the rents in payment of the debts. The personal estate was sufficient:—Held, nevertheless, that such a trust had been created for payment of the debts out of the realty as to prevent the Statute of Limitations from running against the debts, and that the real estate remained liable to pay a simple contract debt left unpaid after distribution of the residuary personal estate. Crallan v. Oulton, 3 Beav. 1; 9 L. J., Ch. 319.

A debtor conveyed his life interest in certain property in trust for creditors, parties to the deed, and the creditors, in consideration thereof, granted to the debtor licence to reside and attend to his affairs in any place he might think proper, without suit or molestation, in his person, or his goods, chattels and effects, by any such creditors; and that in case of any suit or molestation by any of such creditors, contrary to the true intent and meaning of such licence, the debtor should be wholly released and acquitted of the debt, and the deed might be pleaded in bar:—Held, that this amounted only to a licence by the creditor to the debtor to live unmolested, and did not operate as a release of the debt or a discharge of the debtor's estate; and that neither a suit by creditors against the trustees and the debtor to enforce the trusts of the deed, nor an administration suit by the creditor against the estate of the debtor after his decease, for payment of so much of the debt as the trust property was insufficient to pay, was barred by the trust-deed, or amounted to an acquittance of the debt:—Held, also, that the existence of the trust-deed, and the covenants and licence therein contained, prevented the operation of the Statute of Limitations during the life of the debtor in respect of the debts for the payment of which the trust was created. O'Brien v. Osborne, 10 Hare, 92; 15 Jur. 960.

A promissory note, dated 4th of October, 1842, was payable at "six months' notice." An action was brought on it in October, 1848, and the indorsement on the writ stated that on payment within four days, proceedings would be stayed. The action was abandoned, and a formal notice to pay in six months was given in January, 1850. The testator died in December, 1850, having devised his real and personal estate to his executors, in trust to sell, and in the first place to pay his debts. A creditors' suit was instituted by the payee in 1855, to which the executors pleaded the Statute of Limitations. The court held, that the trusts for payment of the debts prevented the operation of the statute, both as to the real and personal estate, and that neither the action nor the indorsement on the writ of summons was sufficient notice to pay, according to the tenor of the note. Moore v. Petchell, 22 Beav. 172.

—— Action to recover Legacy.]—A testatrix by her will bequeathed an annuity to J. for his life. She also bequeathed some pecuniary legacies, payable after the decease of the survivor of herself, her mother, and J., one of them being to the plaintiff. And she devised and bequeathed all her real and personal estate to trustees upon trust for sale and conversion, and out of the proceeds to pay her debts, and funeral and testamentary expenses, and the expenses of conversion, and to invest the residue, and out of the income, in the first place, to pay the annuity to J., and in subordination to the aforesaid trust to pay and apply during the life of the mother the residue of the income (not exceeding 800*l.*), at the discretion of the trustees, for the benefit of the mother, and, after her death, if J. should survive her, the trustees were, out of the income to pay the annuity given to him, so long as the same should continue payable, and, "subject to the several trusts, provisions and directions hereinbefore contained, and to the payment of the several legacies hereby bequeathed," the testatrix directed that her trustees should stand possessed of the estate in trust for the defendant absolutely. The testatrix died in June, 1860. She had no real estate. In December, 1860, the mother died. J. died in January, 1866. Owing to the default of the solicitor of the executors and trustees of the will, who had placed in his hands a sum sufficient to pay the plaintiff's legacy, the legacy was not paid to the plaintiff. The plaintiff, in 1891, issued an originating summons against the defendant, who was the surviving trustee and executor and the residuary legatee of the testatrix, claiming administration of her estate:—Held, that no express trust was declared of the legacies, and that, consequently, the plaintiff's right was barred by the act 37 & 38 Vict. c. 57, s. 8. Barker, In re, Buxton v. Campbell, 62 L. J., Ch. 76; [1892] 2 Ch. 491; 66 L. T. 848.

A devisee of lands charged with payment of legacies, devised his estate at H. to S., in trust, to sell, and in the meantime to let the estate, and apply the rents and net proceeds towards payment of his debts, and the legacies charged thereon by his testator's will:—Held, an express trust for the payment of the legacies; and on a bill being filed by the legatees against the representatives of the trustee, held, that the claim was not barred by s. 40 of the 3 & 4 Will. 4. c. 27. Watson v. Saul, 1 Giff. 188; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 404; 7 W. R. 197.

The provisions of that section do not apply to cases of express trust. Ib.

—— Executor assenting to Legacy.]—An executor who has, under the terms of the will, active duties as a trustee to perform in respect to the raising and investment of a legacy bequeathed upon trust for a minor, by assenting to it becomes an express trustee, so as to save the bar of the 3 & 4 Will. 4. c. 27, s. 40. O'Reilly v. Walsh, Ir. R. 6 Eq. 555.

Where an executor separated from the testator's property a sum bequeathed to him on trust, to which he for some time applied the interest, and afterwards applied the fund to his own use:—Held, that he was liable as a trustee, and that the suit against him was not to be deemed a suit for a legacy, nor the right affected by the Statute of Limitations (3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, s. 40). Phillipo v. Munnings, 2 Myl. & C. 309.

R., by his will, directed his executors to invest 1,500*l.*, and to pay the interest to his wife for her life, and after her decease to divide the principal equally among his five children. In a suit by the representatives of R.'s children, for their respective shares of the 1,500*l.*, upwards of thirty years after their right accrued, praying that the executor who proved the will might be declared to have been a trustee of the 1,500*l.* for R.'s children:—Held, on demurrer, that this is a suit not for a legacy, but for the execution of a trust, and the Statute of Limitations did not apply. Daly v. Kirwan, 1 Ir. Eq. R. 156.

—— Legacy charged on Land, although a Trust, within the Statute.]—See Knox v. Kelly, col. 280.

—— Devise for Sale.]—Under a devise of land upon trust for sale, the proceeds to be considered as part of the personal estate, the trustees allowed part of the land to remain unsold for fifty years:—Held, that the trust was an express trust within 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27 (the Statute of Limitations), s. 25, and a decree for the execution of the trust of the unsold land was made at the suit of a residuary legatee. Mutlow v. Bigg, L. R. 18 Eq. 246; 22 W. R. 469. See S. C., in C. A., 45 L. J., Ch. 282; 1 Ch. D. 385; 34 L. T. 273; 24 W. R. 401.

Gift of a leasehold house to executors, with direction to sell it, and out of the proceeds to pay 50*l.* to A.:—Held, that there being a trust for sale, the gift to A. is not barred by the Statute of Limitations. Low v. Nash, 1 W. R. 63. See Pawsey v Barnes, col. 281.

—— Devise for Repair of Road.]—Devise to a corporation upon trust, "from time to time yearly for ever," to lay out the yearly rents and profits in the repairs of a road, "at their discretion." Upon an information against the corporation, at the relation of the trustees of the road, under a turnpike act, an account was directed from the time of passing the act. No analogy in case of trust to the Statute of Limitations. Att.-Gen. v. Brewers Co., 1 Mer. 495.

—— Devise to secure Annuity.]—A husband left landed estate to his wife for life, he then left all his property, real and personal, not "otherwise specifically devised," to trustees upon trust, to pay to his wife an annuity "out of the profits and issues of my trade and business to be hereafter carried on by my three sons in trust for the benefit of my wife and children, as likewise out of all profits arising from all and every part of my estate and property whatsoever." After the widow's death the landed estate was to go to the eldest son, "only on condition of well and truly paying, or causing to be paid, the several legacies herein directed, and discharging with fidelity the different trusts herein committed to him," and the three sons were made residuary legatees "on paying and discharging the different legacies and trusts in this my will":—Held, that the will did not impose upon the landed estate an express trust for the payment of the annuity within the meaning of s. 25 of 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27. Cunningham v. Foot, 3 App. Cas. 974; 38 L. T. 889; 26 W. R. 858. H. L. (Ir.)

An express trust within s. 25 of 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, must arise upon the words of the instrument itself, not upon any inference of law. Ib.

[See also, as to Trusts under Wills, B, II. 11., post (col. 232).]

—— Demise to secure Annuity.]—B., in consideration of a sum of money, by indenture granted an annuity for lives, and by the same instrument demised the lands out of which the annuity issued to a trustee for a term of years upon trusts for the better securing the annuity:—Held, that the creation of the term operated to create the relation of trustee and cestui que trust between the trustee of the term and the owner of the lands, and to avoid the bar of the 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, so long as the term had not determined by effluxion of time. Bermingham's Estate, In re, Ir. R. 4 Eq. 187. Affirmed, Ir. R. 5 Eq. 147—Ch. App.

—— Grant of Reversion to secure Annuity.]—An owner of a reversionary interest in real estates, for the purpose of better securing an annuity, granted the estates to trustees, upon trust to permit him to hold and enjoy the same until default should be made in payment of the annuity; and in case of default, upon trust to sell the estates, and, after payment of the costs attending the sale, to pay the arrears of the annuity, and invest the residue to meet the growing payments of the annuity; and, subject thereto, in trust for the grantor, his executors, administrators and assigns absolutely:—Held, that an express trust was created for the benefit of the annuitant within the 25th section of the 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, and that he was entitled to recover the whole of the arrears of the annuity. Lewis v. Duncombe, 29 Beav. 175; 30 L. J., Ch. 732; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 695; 3 L. T. 867; 9 W. R. 446.

—— In Favour of Mortgagor.]—A mortgagor of real estate made by way of a conveyance to a trustee, upon trust to sell at discretion and out of the proceeds of sale to pay the mortgage debt, and to pay the surplus moneys to the mortgagor, does not constitute an express trust in favour of the mortgagor within 3 & 4 Will. 4. c. 27, s. 25. Locking v. Parker, 42 L. J., Ch. 257; L. R. 8 Ch. 30; 27 L. T. 635; 21 W. R. 113. S. P., Sands to Thompson, In re, 52 L. J., Ch. 406; 22 Ch. D. 614; 48 L. T. 210; 31 W. R. 397.

—— Trust in Marriage Settlement for raising Sum for Issue.]—By settlement of 1786, lands were conveyed to trustees, upon trust to raise 500*l.* for the issue of the marriage, and subject thereto for the husband and his heirs. In 1792 the husband and the trustees joined in demising the lands to B., in consideration of a sum of money paid to the husband, and a bond for 500*l.* given by B. to the trustees; and it was declared that B. should not be liable to be sued for the 500*l.* until the trust vested in the trustees, relative to the 500*l.*, should be executed or spent, pursuant to the settlement of 1786, without effecting or in any way charging or incumbering the lands in the hands of B., his heirs or assigns, or until the husband or his heirs should otherwise discharge and exonerate the lands from the said sum of 500*l.* There was issue of the marriage one child only, a daughter, who married J. S., and died, and J. S. became entitled to the 500*l.* The trustees entered judgment on the bond against B., and in 1812 assigned it to J. S. No part of the principal or interest of the 500*l.* had been paid, or acknowledgment given, since 1812 :—Held, that the demand of J. S. to the 500*l.* was not barred by the Statute of Limitations; that the assignment of the judgment in 1812 to J. S. being a transaction to which the trustee and himself alone were parties merely substituted him in the place of the trustee, and did not discharge the estate from the original trust or vary the rights of the parties to the 500*l.*; and that the trust created by the settlement of 1786, for raising the 500*l.*, was an express trust, and within the 25th section of the 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27. Blair v. Nugent, 3 Jo. & Lat. 659; 9 Ir. Eq. R 400.

Under a marriage settlement, a term was vested in trustees for raising 10,000*l.* for the younger children of the marriage, and, subject thereto, the estates were limited to the first and other sons in tail male. Much more than six years after the 10,000*l.* ought to have been raised and paid, the younger children filed a bill to have that sum raised:—Held, that the relation of trustee and cestui que trust existed between the parties; and, therefore, the Statute of Limitations, which enacts that money to be raised out of land shall not be recoverable but within twenty years next after a right to receive the same shall have accrued to some person capable of giving a receipt for the same, did not apply. Young v. Waterpark (Lord), 13 Sim. 204; 6 Jur. 656. Affirmed, 15 L. J., Ch. 63; 10 Jur. 1.

Where, in a resettlement of a family estate in 1829, and in a subsequent family arrangement of 1851, two previously created terms for 1,000 and 500 years were treated and acknowledged as subsisting, but between the two dates no interest had been paid upon them:—Held, that the Statute of Limitations did not operate, and the sums secured by them were ordered to be raised. Lawton v. Ford, L. R. 2 Eq. 97; 14 L. T. 320; 14 W. R. 575.

—— Conveyance by Trustee to Assignee in Bankruptcy.]—A cestui que trust of real estate under a will was discharged in 1825, under the Insolvent Debtors' Act, but omitted the estate from his schedule. In 1831 he became bankrupt, and his assignee in bankruptcy took a conveyance of the estate from the trustee, in trust for the creditors under the bankruptcy:—Held, that it thereby became vested in him upon an express trust, viz. that declared by the will, the benefit of which belonged to the creditors under the insolvency, and that on a bill being filed by the assignee in insolvency in 1853, the statute afforded no defence to the recovery of the estate or the mesne profits. Sturgis v. Morse, 3 De G. & J. 1.

—— In respect of Rents.]—A testator having devised lands to R. and W., as trustees of his will, with power to grant leases of such duration as they should think advisable, directed that W. should receive the rent to be reserved, upon certain trusts. On the death of W., his heir-at-law, H. entered into possession of the whole of the lands:—Held, in a suit for an account by one of the cestuis que trustent of the rent, that H. was an express trustee of the rent within s. 25 of the Statute of Limitations (3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27), and that the plaintiff was entitled to rely upon the section, although there was an absence of evidence that W. was the surviving trustee of the will. Smith v. Smith, Ir. R. 10 Eq. 273.

—— Conveyance for Value within s. 25.]—To prove a conveyance for value within s. 25, the defendant, who was the eldest son of H., offered in evidence, as proof of a lost deed, a memorial in the registry of deeds office of a deed, to which H., A., M. and G. were parties, whereby H. conveyed the lands to M. and G. upon certain trusts, which were not, however, disclosed by the memorial. It was also proved that in the same year in which the deed bore date a marriage was solemnised between H. and A.; and that H., until his death in 1862, and thenceforward the defendant, had been continuously in possession and in receipt of the rent for their own use and benefit:—Held, that it might be inferred that the lost deed was a settlement executed on the marriage of H. and A., under which H. took a life estate, and the defendant an estate in remainder, and that under it the defendant was a purchaser for value. Ib.

Held, also, that the statute began to run in the defendant's favour from the time of the execution of the deed. Ib.

—— Heir-at-Law of Trustee—Pleading.]—A cestui que trust under a will brought an action against the administratrix and the heir-at-law of the sole trustee, who had died intestate, to make his estate liable for the loss which had accrued to the trust estate owing to a breach of trust committed by him. The Statute of Limitations was not pleaded, and at the trial an account was directed on the footing of the liability of the heir; he raised the defence of the statute on the further consideration:—Held, that the statute should have been pleaded, and that the heir-at-law could not set up the statute in answer to a claim arising out of a breach of trust committed by the person whose estate had descended to him. Brittlebank v. Goodwin (L. R. 5 Eq. 545) applied. Burge, In re, Gillard v. Lawrenson, 57 L. T. 364; 52 J. P. 20.

—— Charge on Land.]—An express trust of a charge upon land is as much saved from the operation of the 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, as an express trust of the land itself. Burrowes v. Gore, 6 H. L. Cas. 907; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 1245; 6 W. R. 699. See also Att.-Gen. v. Davis, 18 W. R. 1132.

—— Trustees of Pension Fund.]—A fund was established at Bombay by the covenanted civil servants of the East India Company serving in that presidency, for granting pensions and annuities to members, their widows and children. By the original articles certain persons were appointed managers, and they were declared to be "the trustees of the fund," and the property was vested in them:—Held, that they were not mere trustees for the association, but trustees properly so called, and that the members of the fund were the beneficiaries, so that the defence of the Statute of Limitations could not be set up against a claimant on the fund, merely on account of lapse of time. Edwards v. Warden, 45 L. J., Ch. 713; 1 App. Cas. 281; 35 L. T. 174—H. L. (E.) Reversing 22 W. R. 669.

—— Debt from Solicitor to Client.]—After a dissolution of partnership, by which the continuing partner covenanted to pay the debts and to pay the retiring partner a sum equal to half the next half-year's profits:—Held, that non-payment of a debt by the continuing partner during the half-year could not be set up against the retiring partner as an answer to the Statute of Limitations. Watson v. Woodman, 45 L. J., Ch. 57; L. R. 20 Eq. 721; 24 W. R. 47.

Held, also, that though the debt was from solicitors to a client in respect of moneys received, there was no express trust to exclude the operation of the statutes. Ib.

—— Where Laches, Lapse of Time material.]—A. devised his real estate to B. charged with the payment of 10,000*l.* each to K. and his nephew C. K. had no nephew C., but had a grand-nephew called C., who was unknown to A. A. died in 1831, and in 1832 C. claimed the legacy from B., who refused to pay it on the ground that C. was not the legatee intended. C. did not again claim. B.'s heir (on whom the estate descended) by his will created an express trust "for the payment of all charges or claims then existing" on the estate, and died before 1851. In 1869 the personal representative of C. (although previously for years in possession of the previous correspondence about the legacy) claimed the 10,000*l.* from the person then in possession of the lands charged, subject to the last-mentioned trusts:—Held, that the claim was barred by lapse of time and C.'s knowledge or means of knowledge of his rights, notwithstanding the express trust. Carey v. Cuthbert, Ir. R. 7 Eq. 542; 22 W. R. 249. Affirmed in H. L., Ir. R. 9 Eq. 330.

The doctrine that where there is an express trust lapse of time is not material does not apply where there has been gross laches on the part of the cestui que trust. Bright v. Legerton, 2 De G. F. & J. 606; 8 W. R. 678.

The Statute of Limitations does not apply to an express trust for a legacy, yet where the beneficiary or his representative has allowed a very long time to elapse without attempting to enforce the trust, equity will, when enforcing it, apply as to interest on the legacy, the principle of the statute. Thompson v. Eastwood, 2 App. Cas. 215.

A will, in 1807, began thus: "I appoint my after-named executor, Charles E., my youngest brother, to be trustee for the following legacies." Several were then named, and the will went on, "considering that money will be more essential to my dear brother, Samuel E., than a distant possession of land, I bequeath to Samuel E. during his natural life the interest of 3,000*l.*, and after his death to his eldest son, James E., by his last wife, Margaret J., or M., or E., till he attains twenty-one, and then to obtain the principal. I order that my youngest brother Charles E. shall be liable to all my lawful debts of every description, and pay them as soon as he can, and also pay my legacies when regularly due, and all expenses; and to enable him to do all this, I bequeath unconditionally to him all my estates and landed property, with all emoluments belonging to them, in the county of Armagh. I also bequeath to him, the said Charles, all my estates, &c., with all their emoluments, in the county of Louth, or elsewhere":—Held, that the will constituted an express trust, so as to prevent the statute applying to it. Ib.

But, there having been no proceedings taken until 1872 with the direct purpose of enforcing payment of the legacy (though other proceedings connected with the will had been going on), and the estates having passed into the hands of the representatives of the original trustee, the interest on the legacy was directed to be calculated only from six years before filing the bill. Ib.

Though the rule as to limitation by time does not apply in the case of express trusts, yet, as to them, in equity the general rule is that stale demands are not to be encouraged. M'Donnel v. White, 11 H. L. Cas. 271.

—— Cestui que Trust's Representatives suing Trustee's—Delay in proceeding with Action.]—See Dickinson v. Holland, col. 32. See also as to lapse of time affecting express trusts, under WAIVER AND ACQUIESCENCE.

—— Not expressed by any Deed.]—Express trusts within s. 25 are not confined to trusts expressed by deed, but cover a case where property wholly belonging to one party is put in the hands of another for the owner's benefit. Banner v. Berridge, 50 L. J., Ch. 630; 18 Ch. D. 254; 44 L. T. 680; 29 W. R. 844; 4 Asp., M. C. 420.

Semble, 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, s. 25, is by the effect of the Judicature Act applicable to personal property as well as to land. Ib.

—— Possessory Law of Jamaica—Actual, not constructive, Trusts.]—See Beckford v. Wade, col. 152.

—— Trustee de son tort.]—With respect to the operation of the Statute of Limitations upon cases of trusts in equity, the distinction is, if the trust be constituted by act of the parties, the possession of the trustee is the possession of the cestui que trust, and no length of such possession will bar. If a party is to be constituted a trustee by the decree of a court of equity, founded on fraud or the like, his possession is adverse, and the Statute of Limitations will run from the time that the circumstances of the fraud were discovered. Hovenden v. Annesley, 2 Sch. & Lef. 633; 9 R. R. 119.

Where a trust is created by the act of parties, no time is a bar to relief; but where there is no trust, except such as is created by a decree of the court, on setting aside the transaction, time runs from the discovery of circumstances which constitute the right of relief. Clanricarde (Marquis) v. Henning, 30 Beav. 175; 30 L. J., Ch. 865; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 1113; 5 L. T. 168; 9 W. R. 912.

A trustee de son tort is an express trustee, and the lapse of more than twenty years does not bar a cestui que trust of a fund which has been misapplied of his remedy against such a trustee. Life Association of Scotland v. Siddall, Cooper v. Greene, 3 De G. F. & J. 58; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 785; 4 L. T. 311; 9 W. R. 541.

A trustee of real estate devised his real estate to T., subject to the payment of a legacy, so that the trust estate did not pay. T. however acted as trustee:—Held, that she might be deemed a trustee upon express trust, and that the Statute of Limitations was therefore no defence to a claim against her estate in respect of a breach of trust. Ib.

T. improperly allowed part of the trust fund to be received by B., the tenant for life. S., one of the reversioners, borrowed money from C., and mortgaged to him her share in the trust funds. B. at the same time gave C. a bond and a mortgage of other property for the same debt, B. being a surety for S. in this transaction. The defendant having been paid out of B.'s estate:—Held, that T.'s representative could not claim to have this payment set off against the claim of S. in respect of the misapplied part of the trust fund. Ib.

In 1840 a father left a legacy to his daughter to be paid ten years after his death. In 1847 the executor assigned to her husband certain leaseholds, which formed part of her father's estate, in consideration of the amount of the legacy, the assignee having notice of the trusts of the will. In 1870 the persons entitled to the residuary estate filed a bill against the executor and the assignee of the leaseholds, alleging that the leaseholds had been sold at an under-value, and that the assignee was a party to the breach of trust thus committed, and praying for administration of the trusts of the will, and that the assignment might be set aside:—Held, that the bill was not multifarious. Pyrah v. Woodcock, 24 L. T. 407; 19 W. R. 463.

Held, also, that the assignee was not an express trustee, so as to bring the case within s. 25 of the 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, the Statute of Limitations. Ib.

Implied Trust.]—By a will, dated in 1761, a trust was created in favour of a certain class of the testator's relations, nearly all of whom were paid their proportions. The surviving executor and trustee of the testator had the remainder of the funds standing in his name at his death, and by his will he recognised the existence of the trust, and directed that it should devolve upon his nephew. Administration de bonis non was granted in 1822 to the surviving executor's estate, and subsequently to another person in 1826, when the remaining trust fund was mixed up with such administrator's personal estate, and applied in the purchase of real estate. A bill was filed by a person claiming part of the legacy under the original testator's will, charging a breach of trust by the surviving executor, and that his real and personal estate was liable to make good the amount:—Held, that the real estate could not be charged with the legacy; that there was an implied trust created by the will, but the right of the claimants having accrued more than twenty years since, their claim was barred by the Statute of Limitations. Henderson v. Atkins, 28 L. J., Ch. 913.

A rule that trusts are not within the Statute of Limitations applies only as between trustee and cestui que trust, and will not hold where a claim is made after a great length of time against a trustee by implication of law, more especially where such implication is to be raised upon a doubtful equity. Townsend v. Townsend, 1 Cox 28; 1 Bro. C. C. 551.

Semble, the Statute of Limitations is no bar to a proof against the estate of a trustee by implication. Gowers, Ex parte, Seaber, In re, 3 Mont. & Ayr. 172; 2 Deac. 207; 6 L. J., Bk. 49.

A court of equity will not, after a great lapse of time (as of more than twenty years), and where no actual fraud is proved, enter into inquiries for the purpose of raising an implied trust against a defendant, although the same lapse of time would be no bar to a claim founded upon an express trust. Portlock v. Gardner, 1 Hare, 594; 11 L. J., Ch. 313; 6 Jur. 795.

A trust implied from mandatory words in a will:—Held, to be barred by adverse possession. Kingston v. Lorton, 2 Hog. 166.

A. devises K. Lodge and other real estates to trustees in aid of his personal estate; and after said trusts are fulfilled, to convey to B. in fee; and by a codicil recommended B., if he chose to keep the house and demesne at M——, that he should within twelve months make over K. Lodge to the plaintiff. A. died in 1797. The trustees did not sell any part of the real estate, nor was it necessary to resort to it. B. entered on the real estate, and resided at M——, and died seised in 1799, having devised K. Lodge to the defendant, who entered and continued seised from thence to the filing of the bill in 1828. On a bill filed in 1828:—Held, that the words of the codicil were mandatory, but that as they only raised an implied trust, the plaintiff was barred by adverse possession since 1799. Ib.

Persons in wrongful Possession—Purchasers not barred, where Trustee is.]—A renewable leasehold for lives was vested in A. in trust for B., for life, with remainders in the events that happened to C. and his heirs. Afterwards, on the marriage of B., a settlement was made (on the construction of which it was doubtful whether the leasehold passed) on B. for life, remainder to the sons of that marriage in tail, under which D. would be entitled. The lease being still subsisting in A., B. took a renewal in his own name, without noticing the trust; and, after the death of B., D. entered and took a renewal in his own name, and the property continued to be enjoyed by him and those claiming under him for a time much beyond the period of limitation, and more than twenty years before the commencement of a suit by those claiming under C. D., on his marriage, assigned the leasehold to the trustees of his marriage settlement, and it was enjoyed accordingly until the filing of the bill. The transactions relating to the deed, on the construction of which the doubts arose, took place sixty-two years before the filing of the bill, which was not filed till after all the persons who could have explained those transactions were dead. There was much ground for believing that the parties had intended the deed to include the leasehold:—Held, firstly, that assuming the possession of D., and those claiming under him, to have been originally wrongful, he and they were not express trustees within the 25th section of the Statute of Limitations, and might set up the statute as a bar. Secondly, that even if there had been an express trust, those claiming under the settlement, by D. could, as purchasers, set up the statute. Petre v. Petre, 1 Drew. 371.

Separate Use of Married Woman.]—A father, on the marriage of his son, conveys an equity of redemption on trust for the separate use of son's wife. He afterwards purchases the outstanding mortgage, brings an ejectment, and goes into possession as mortgagee. Son, having separated from his wife, enters, after the death of his father, as his heir-at-law, and twenty years elapse:—Held, he cannot set up the Statute of Limitations against his wife's separate estate. Booth v. Purser, 1 Ir. Eq. R. 43.

In 1832 M., by will, appointed his daughter and her husband, the defendant, his residuary legatees, and named them respectively his executrix and executor. In 1837, by a codicil, M. bequeathed to her 2,000*l.* for her sole use and benefit. M. died in 1841. The defendant paid all M.'s debts and legacies, except this legacy of 2,000*l.* The legatee died in 1866, indebted to the plaintiff for money lent upon the credit of her separate estate. The plaintiff obtained administration to her, and instituted this suit in 1867, praying a declaration that this will and codicil created a valid trust (binding the defendant) of this legacy for the sole and separate use of the legatee, and to compel payment of the whole 2,000*l.*, or at least of so much as should be necessary to discharge the liabilities affecting her separate estate:—Held, that a trust had been created for the separate use of the legatee, and that the plaintiff's right to enforce it was not barred by the 40th section of the Statute of Limitations. Hartford v. Power, Ir. R. 2 Eq. 204; 16 W. R. 822.

By the Trustee Act, 1888, s. 8, the statute shall run against a married woman entitled in possession for her separate use, whether with or without a restraint upon anticipation.

Trusts attaching to Fee acquired under Statute.]—A., being the owner in fee of estate K. and other estates in Ireland, subject to a mortgage in fee, by a deed of February, 1807, which upon the face of it was for valuable consideration, purported to convey these estates to trustees in fee, upon trust for himself, for life, remainder to his eldest son, B. (then unmarried), for life, remainder to B.'s first and other sons in tail male, &c. In June, 1807, A. and B., by deed, which on the face of it did not appear to be for value, purported to convey estate K. to trustees in fee, upon trust for A. for life, remainder to W., a younger son of A. for life, remainder to W.'s first and other sons in tail male, thereby, in effect, treating the previous deed as cancelled. A. died in 1808, when W. entered into possession of estate K., and either he or the appellant J., his eldest son, had remained in possession ever since. In 1811 the mortgage was paid off by B., and the legal fee in estate K. was conveyed to him. In 1815 W. married, upon which occasion estate K. was made the subject of settlement. In 1837 B. died, leaving the respondent, J. B., his eldest son, his heir-at-law and in tail. In 1844 J. B. claimed estate K. under the deed of February, 1807, and brought his ejectment against J., but failed, the judge who tried the case being of opinion, and so directing the jury, that the plaintiff was barred by the Statute of Limitations and the twenty years' possession of the defendant. J. B. then brought his suit in equity to obtain possession of estate K., and that the reconveyance of the legal fee in 1811 might be declared to have been obtained by B. as a trustee for the parties claiming under the deed of February, 1807:—Held (agreeing with the court below that the deed of February, 1807, should be treated as a deed for value, and that of June, 1807, as not for value), that the fee acquired under the Statute of Limitations did not create any bar in this case, for that the possession of W. and his son was to be treated exactly in the same way as if he had obtained the legal fee by conveyance, in which case the trusts of the deed of February, 1807, would have attached. Scott v. Scott, 18 Jur. 755.

Fund given by Deed and Will to pay Bond when called on—No Trust created.]—A bond was executed in favour of the Bank of England by B. in 1813. In 1823, B. made a voluntary settlement of his property, giving certain funds to trustees in trust to pay thereout the principal and interest due on the bond when and as B. should be required to pay the same. B. died in 1828, and the trust funds subsequently became the property of E. E., by her will made in 1869, gave certain funds to trustees in trust to pay the principal and interest due on the bond when, and if, the trustees of the deed of 1823 should be called on to pay the same, and subject thereto as therein mentioned. The bank was unaware of being entitled till 1870, and no claim was made by them under the bond:—Held, that no trust for the bank was created by the deed or will, and that the only person who could call on the trustees to pay was B.; the claim, therefore, was barred by the Statute of Limitations. Henriques v. Bensusan, 20 W. R 350.

Marriage Settlement—Sum secured by Bond—Action by Trustees.]—By a marriage settlement, personal estate belonging to the lady was vested in trustees for the husband for life, remainder to the wife for life, remainder to the children of the marriage, with remainders over. Part of the settled fund was a bond to secure a sum of money lent by the lady to her intended husband, conditioned for repayment by him, with 5*l.* per cent. interest, in six months, if he should be called upon to do so. There were no children of the marriage. Neither principal nor interest was ever paid by the husband, or by the wife, who was his executrix:—Held, that after more than twenty years from the date of the bond, the representative of the trustees was entitled to enforce payment of the sum secured by the bond.

—— Recital that Sum agreed to be settled had been paid to Trustee—Covenant to pay future Sum—Settlor constituting himself Trustee.]—By a post-nuptial settlement dated in 1814, made in pursuance of an ante-nuptial agreement, after reciting that the husband had agreed to settle 1,000*l.* in manner thereinafter mentioned, and to enter into the covenants thereinafter contained, and reciting that this sum had been paid to G., it was witnessed that G. covenanted with the settlor that he would hold that sum upon trust, with the approbation of the settlor, to invest it, in the joint names of the settlor and himself, either in the public funds or in government or real securities, and would hold the trust funds and securities upon trust for the settlor and his wife during their respective lives, and after their death upon trust for the benefit of their children; and the settlor covenanted that he would at the expiration of twelve months pay to G. another sum of 1,000*l.*, to be held by him upon the same trusts as the first sum. G. died in 1821, and the settlor having survived his wife, died in 1868. Neither of the sums was really paid to G., or invested in the joint names of G. and the settlor:—Held, first, that the settlor had constituted himself a trustee of the first sum, and that his estate was liable for his breach of trust in not seeing that it was invested, notwithstanding the Statute of Limitations. Stone v. Stone, 39 L. J., Ch. 196; L. R. 5 Ch. 74; 22 L. T. 182; 18 W. R. 225.

Held, secondly, that as to the second sum, the settlor was in a position of a simple covenantor, and that the remedy of the claimants for his breach of the covenant was barred by the statute. Ib.

By a marriage settlement, dated in 1828, A. covenanted to transfer a sum of stock belonging to him to trustees, upon trust to pay the dividends to himself for life, and then upon trusts for the benefit of the intended wife and the issue of the marriage. The stock was not transferred:—Held, that A. was not a trustee of it within the exception of the Statute of Limitations, but that it was a debt from him, and that, notwithstanding his life interest, time began to run against this debt from the execution of the settlement. Spickernell v. Hotham, 1 Kay, 669; 2 W. R. 638.

Money due from Receiver.]—A sum of money due from a receiver, whether the amount had been ascertained or not:—Held, so long as the recognizance exists, to be a debt of record. Seagram v. Tuck, 50 L. J., Ch. 572; 18 Ch. D. 296; 44 L. T. 800; 29 W. R. 784.

The receiver is a trustee of such money for the persons entitled thereto, and cannot, as against them, avail himself of the Statute of Limitations, although his final accounts have been passed, and the recognizances vacated. Ib.

Charities.]—Charities are trusts, and are, as such, within the operation of s. 25 of 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27. Magdalen College, Oxford v. Att.-Gen., 6 H. L. Cas. 189; 26 L. J., Ch. 620; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 675.

Where the attorney-general, having no independent rights of his own, stands only in the same situation as those who are entitled to the benefit of a charity, if they are barred by lapse of time, he is equally barred. Ib.

Testator devised lands to trustees, and their heirs upon trust to grant and convey the same to the use of J. W. for life, subject nevertheless to and charged with four annuities, to commence upon the death of X., three of which were to be paid to three different charitable institutions, two of them being corporate bodies, and the fourth to the poor of a parish, and after the death of J. W., subject to the annuities, to the use of his first and other sons in tail; and he directed said several annuities to be paid (not saying by whom) on the days therein mentioned, and expressly charged his estate with the same. X. died more than twenty years before the filing of the bill to establish the charitable devises, and no payment or other satisfaction was ever made on behalf of the annuities. No conveyance had been executed by the trustees, but J. W. had, since the death of the testator, been in possession of the estates, and he and his eldest son suffered a recovery and resettled them:—Held, that the right to recover the annuities was not barred by the 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, the trust for the charities being an express one, within the meaning of the 25th section of that act. Charities are, equally with other trusts, within the operation of the 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27. Commissioners of Charitable Donations v. Wybrants, 2 Jo. & Lat. 182; 7 Ir. Eq. R. 580.

An express trust to support a curate for a chapel out of the profits of certain premises is not barred by the statute as against the heir-at-law of one taking the premises with notice of the trust. Att.-Gen. v. Davis, 18 W. R. 1132.

Grant subject to Charge, not a Trust.]—Granting an estate to a man to hold, "subject to" a charge, does not make the grantee a trustee, so as to prevent the bar of the Statute of Limitations. Hughes v. Kelly, 2 Con. & L. 223; 3 Dr. & War. 482; 5 Ir. Eq. R. 286.

Where, in execution of power, cestui que trust appoints trustees to convey to use of A., and charges estate with annuities: it is a conveyance of the legal estate to A. and not a trust, so that length of time will run against annuities if not demanded. Weston v. Bowes, 9 Mod. 309.

Failure of Consideration for Surrender of Copyhold—Surrenderee a Trustee.]—In consideration of a marriage intended to be had betwixt two copyholders, the man surrenders his copyhold to the use of himself and his intended wife, and the survivor of them; and the woman, in like manner, surrenders her copyhold to the like use. The man dies before any marriage had; the woman enters and enjoys for thirty years: declared a trust, and the re-surrender and account of profits decreed. Hamond v. Hicks, 1 Vern. 432.

Company taking Land under Statutory Powers—Neglect to pay Purchase-money into Court—Trustee for true Owner.]—A canal company, under the powers of their acts, took possession of common lands in 1812, under a contract with A., whose title was then doubtful, but did not pay the purchase-money into court as they were bound to do in such case; by an award made in 1837 under an inclosure act, A. was first ascertained to be the true owner, when he commenced proceedings for the purchase-money:—Held, that he was not barred by the lapse of time, the company standing in the character of trustees for the true owners when ascertained.

Cator v. Croydon Canal Co., 4 Y. & Coll. 405; 13 L. J., Ch. 89; 8 Jur. 277.

Where a trustee admits that the trust-money has not been paid, but that it has remained for a length of time in his hands, quære, whether any length of time will operate as a bar to the lawful claimant in a court of equity. Ib.

Whether Trust of Purchase-money for Vendor is only Constructive.]—Quære, whether from the relation existing between the vendor and purchaser of land, constituting the purchaser a trustee of the purchase-money for the vendor, there arises any other than a constructive trust, as to which the relief in equity by analogy to the Statute of Limitations will be barred by long acquiescence. Toft v. Stephenson, 7 Hare, 1. See S. C. on appeal, 1 De G. M. & G. 28; 21 L. J., Ch. 129; 15 Jur. 1187.

Person holding under Agreement to Purchase—No express Trust.]—See Doe d. Stanway v. Rock, col. 228.

Borrowing Trust-money as such.]—In 1825 A. borrowed from the executors in trust of a will a fund which was thereby bequeathed to them, in trust for himself for life, and then for other persons, and gave to them a promissory note for the repayment of this sum to them as "executors in trust," with lawful interest:—Held, that A. borrowed the fund and promised to repay it as trust-money, and therefore that lapse of time was no bar to the claim against him for repayment. Spickernell v. Hotham, 1 Kay, 669; 2 W. R. 638.

Loan by Trustees to Husband on his Bond under Power in Settlement—Trust-money.]—A husband, under a power in his marriage settlement, had 1,000*l.* advanced to him by the trustees, secured by his bond, payable at his death. He died intestate, and all his debts being paid but the bond, a reversionary sum of 1,600*l.* fell into the estate. The representative of the intestate's father and the intestate's widow were the only parties entitled to his estate, and the trustees of the settlement, having given notice to such representative of the bond debt and the 1,600*l.* assets, which, in another suit, were ordered to be paid to the widow, he (the father's representative) filed a bill against the widow, claiming the 1,600*l.*, as against the trustees, on the ground that they were barred by the Statute of Limitations, not having proved under a decree in the suit in which it was dealt with, and the bond having fallen due twenty-seven years previously:—Held, that the 1,000*l.* was trust money, and the statute was no bar; that the widow could retain the 1,600*l.* against creditors and next of kin, and the plaintiff must pay the costs. Coxwell v. Franklinsky, 11 L. T. 153; 12 W. R. 1072.

Bill by a cestui que trust under a marriage settlement stated, that in and prior to 1827 trustees of a marriage settlement, under a power, lent to the husband, on his bond, moneys held in trust for the wife for life, and after her decease, for her appointees; the death of the wife in 1861; an appointment to the plaintiff; that there were no trustees of the settlement; that no payment, either of principal or interest, had ever been made by the husband, and prayed an account of principal and interest and payment. Demurrer, on the ground that the debt was barred by the Statute of Limitations, overruled with costs. Jenner v. Ackerman, 10 Jur. (N.S.) 465; 10 L. T. 328.

Bonds vested in Trustees of Marriage Settlement—Trusts for benefit of Children—Right of Children to sue on Bonds, though Obligees barred.]—In 1806 bonds for payment of money were given by B., with warrants of attorney to confess judgment. The conditions were, to pay the principal upon the death of B., with interest on the first bond from the day of its date, and on the latter from the day of the death of the obligor. The obligees were T., a son of the obligor, and C., in whom the bonds were vested as trustees of the marriage settlement of G., upon trusts for the benefit of the children of the marriage. In 1807 the real estates of B. were settled upon T., one of the obligees, subject to a term of 300 years for raising 5,000*l.*, which was to be applied in satisfying a debt, and the remainder was to go towards payment of "judgment and specialty debts then owing by B." The obligor died in 1816, leaving his son T. his executor, who survived his co-trustee C., and died in 1836. On the death of B., T. came into possession of the estates. On a bill filed by the children of G. against B. and his children, who were entitled to the estates subject to the term, and also against the owners of the term, praying for an account, and payment of the amount due on the bonds, and that the same might be decreed to be well charged on the lands included in the term:—Held, that the bonds did not come within the description of "judgment and specialty debts now due and owing," and therefore were not a charge upon the estate subject to the term, but that the children of G. were entitled to be paid out of the general assets of the obligor, of which the money to be raised by the term formed part. Burrowes v. Gore, 6 H. L. Cas. 907; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 1245; 6 W. R. 699.

Held, also, that the Statute of Limitations was no bar to the right of the cestuis que trustent, the children of G., to sue upon the bonds, although the obligees were barred, inasmuch as B. was their trustee, and his was the hand to pay and the hand to receive. Ib.

T. being the trustee of the bonds and the personal representative of B., the right of the cestui que trust did not accrue until the death of G. in 1846, and therefore the statute did not apply. Ib.

Misapplication of Trust Fund by Tenant for Life—Claim against Tenant for Life's Estate by Executor of Remainderman.]—By a marriage settlement made in 1821, stock belonging to the wife was assigned to B. and another, upon trust for the separate use of the wife for life, with remainder for the husband for life, with remainder, in default of children of the marriage, for B. The trustees neglected to have the stock transferred to them, and it remained in the name of the wife, and in 1822 the husband sold it, and possessed himself of the proceeds. B. died in 1829, the husband in 1858, and the wife in 1864. There were no children. In 1866 B.'s executors claimed the trust fund from the husband's estate:—Held, that their claim was not barred by the Statute of Limitations, or by acquiescence, or by the fact that B. was one of the trustees whose negligence rendered the misapplication of the trust fund possible. Butler

v. Carter, L. R. 5 Eq. 276; 18 L. T. 11; 16 W. R. 388.

Claim for Breach of Trust against Representatives of deceased Trustee.]—A trustee can never be heard to set up the defence of the Statute of Limitations to a claim by his cestui que trust in respect of a breach of trust, and after his death those who take his assets as volunteers must answer to the extent of the assets they take, just as he would, if living, have been bound to answer. Brittlebank v. Goodwin, 37 L. J., Ch. 377; L. R. 5 Eq. 545; 16 W. R. 696.

The liability in such cases does not depend on any new assumpsit, but originates from, and depends entirely on, the liability of the testator or intestate; it is a liability simply as representing the testator or intestate in respect of his property. Ib.

Covenant by Husband to settle after-acquired Property—Sum paid by Administrator of an Intestate, with Notice of Covenant, to Husband—Action by Trustee of Settlement.]—In his marriage settlement, a husband covenanted that any after-acquired property, exceeding 200*l.*, should be settled in the same manner as certain sums therein mentioned. The husband, as next of kin, became, in 1848, entitled to a sum exceeding the above amount, and he induced the administrator, who had notice of the trust, to pay the whole to him, the wife consenting and signing a memorandum at the time. The husband died in January, 1862, and in December following the surviving trustee of the settlement, in conjunction with the widow, filed a bill for a declaration that the estate of the administrator (he having died in 1853) was, in the hands of his representative, liable to make good the sum paid to the husband; and the court held that the widow was entitled to have raised out of the real estate of the administrator (his personal estate having been fully administered) a sum sufficient to provide her an annuity equal to the interest of the misapplied fund; and that the right of the trustee of the settlement to sue was not barred by the Statute of Limitations. Cresswell v. Dewell, 10 Jur. (N.S.) 354; 10 L. T. 22; 12 W. R. 123; 3 N. R. 148.

8. Principal and Agent.

See also ante, A, IV. 12 (col. 64).

Receipt of Rents by Agent—Possession of Agent Possession of Principal.]—During the life of D., owner in fee of land which was let to tenants from year to year and week to week, the property was managed by the defendant as her agent, the defendant receiving the rents and paying them into a separate ear-marked account at his own bank. D. having died intestate in 1867, the defendant continued to receive the rents and pay them into the bank exactly as before, not informing the tenants of D.'s death, but stating to several persons that he was acting as agent and receiver for the true heir whoever he might be. The defendant thus acted till 1880, when, more than twelve years having elapsed after D.'s death, he claimed the property on his own account. The assignee of D.'s heir having in 1881 brought an action against the defendant to recover possession of the land and for an account of the rents and profits:—Held, that as to the land the acts of the defendant in receiving the rents as agent for the heir could not dispossess the heir so as to put him to his action under ss. 2 & 3 or s. 8 of 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27; that the defendant's acts as such agent though unauthorised might be ratified by the true owner, and were ratified by the plaintiff bringing his action within a reasonable time after the heir was ascertained; that as to the accumulated rents and profits the defendant had made himself a trustee; that the action was not barred by the Statute of Limitations; and that the plaintiff was entitled to judgment for the recovery of possession of the land and to an account of the rents and profits since D.'s death. Lyell v. Kennedy, 59 L. J., Q. B. 268; 14 App. Cas. 437; 62 L. T. 77; 38 W. R. 353—H. L. (E.)

The possession of an agent is the possession of the principal; and the principal may acquire a possessory title to real estate by receiving the rents for twenty years through an agent, although that agent is the person really entitled to the estate. Williams v. Pott, 40 L. J., Ch. 775; L. R. 12 Eq. 149.

So long as an agent is in receipt of the rent of land, the Statute of Limitations (3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27), s. 3, will not run against his employer; and if a person commences to receive rents as the agent for another, and afterwards continues to receive such rents, without paying them over, he must be presumed to receive as agent till the contrary is shewn. Smith v. Bennett, 30 L. Money received by Agent in Fiduciary Capacity—Solicitor and Client.]—In 1868, upon the death of the mortgagor, the mortgaged property was sold by A., the mortgagee, under the power of sale contained in the mortgage deed. The balance of the proceeds after payment of the mortgage debt was retained by B., who in effecting the mortgages, had acted as solicitor for both parties, and conducted the sale on behalf of A. The power of sale in the mortgage deed contained the usual provision that the surplus proceeds should be paid to the mortgagor, his heirs, or assigns. The mortgagor had died unmarried and intestate, and being illegitimate left no next of kin. Administration had not been taken out to him. A. died in 1877, having left all his property to his widow C., whom he appointed his executrix. C. died in 1878, having appointed B. and R. her executors. Upon the death of B. in 1881, R., as being through C. the legal personal representative of A., claimed as against B.'s estate the balance of the proceeds of the sale in 1868 of the mortgaged property:—Held, that B., having received this balance in a fiduciary character as agent for A., and with full knowledge that A. was an express trustee of the balance for the mortgagor, and, in the circumstances, liable to a claim by the crown, had brought himself within the principle of Burdick v. Garrick (L. R. 5 Ch. 233), and, accordingly, that the Statute of Limitations could not be set up as a bar to the claim. Bell, In re, Lake v. Bell, 56 L. J., Ch. 307; 34 Ch. D. 462; 55 L. T. 757; 35 W. R. 212.

P., who was a solicitor, had acted as agent for the late husband of M. in several matters of business, including investments of money. P. collected the personal estate, and received large sums on foot of it. He acted not only as solicitor, but as general agent for M., and furnished her with accounts of his receipts and disbursements. While acting as agent for M. in 1871, P. invested 1,500*l.* on a mortgage to H., upon security which proved to be worthless. There was no evidence that P. was authorised to lend on this or on any special security. P. acted as solicitor both for M. and H. in the matter of the loan. The interest was paid for some years on the 1,500*l.*, but afterwards H. ceased to pay any interest. Proceedings were undertaken, and expenses incurred by M. in endeavouring to realise the security, which proved fruitless. Upon P.'s death M. claimed as a creditor in an administration action the sum of 1,500*l.*, arrears of interest, and the costs of the proceedings taken by her to realise her security:—Held, that there was a fiduciary relation between the parties, which precluded the personal representative of P. from relying on the Statute of Limitations, and that M. was entitled to reject the investment and to insist on the disallowance of the 1,500*l.* credit in P.'s account. Power v. Power, 13 L. R., Ir. 281.

9. Mortgagor and Mortgagee.

See also post, B, V. (col. 273), and B, XI. (col. 322).

By 37 & 38 Vict. c. 57, s. 7 (amending 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, s. 28), a mortgagor shall not bring an action to redeem after twelve years from the mortgagee's obtaining possession or signing a written acknowledgment of the mortgagor's title. By s. 8 (amending 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, s. 40*), no action shall be brought to recover any sum secured by a mortgage, but within twelve years after the right to receive the same has accrued or after a part-payment of principal or interest or an acknowledgment. By s.* 9 (amending 7 Will. 4 & 1 Vict. c. 28*), a mortgagee or person claiming under any mortgage may recover the land within twelve years from the last payment of any part of the principal and interest, though more than twelve years have elapsed since the right of action accrued.*

Possession not Adverse to Mortgagee at Passing of Act—Foreclosure Action—When Time runs against—Equity of Redemption in Settlement.]—A mortgage was executed in 1802, and in 1812, the mortgagor, upon his marriage, settled the equity of redemption upon himself for life, remainder to trustees for a term of years to secure a jointure for his wife, and portions for his younger children, remainder to his first and other sons in tail. That settlement was never registered; and the mortgagee shortly after its execution filed a bill of foreclosure against the mortgagor alone, and obtained a decree of sequestration against him. The mortgagee's representative revived the suit, and in September, 1830, got a receiver appointed, who received the rents of part of the mortgaged lands. The mortgagor died in February, 1833, and a bill of revivor was filed against his eldest son, as heir, who allowed a decree on sequestration to pass against him, an account to be taken under that decree, and a final decree to be obtained without opposition. A conditional order for an attachment was obtained against him for not bringing in the title-deeds, and he filed an affidavit stating the settlement. The mortgagee's representative filed a supplemental bill against the widow and younger children in May, 1838, to carry the decree into execution:—Held, that the possession was not adverse to the mortgagee when the 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, passed; that the 15th section of that act, taken in connection with the subsequent act, 7 Will. 4 & 1 Vict. c. 28, s. 1, gave to the mortgagee the right to file a bill of foreclosure, within five years from the passing of the first act. Wrixon v. Vize, 5 Ir. Eq. R. 173; 3 Dr. & War. 104; 2 Con. & L. 138.

A bill of foreclosure is not a suit for the recovery of money charged on land, within the 40th section of the act 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27; but is within the 24th section. Ib.

The 24th section of that act applies as well to mortgagees of the legal estate, as to those of the equitable estate. Ib.

A bill of foreclosure is not a suit in equity for the recovery of the money charged upon land, although it may lead to that, but it is in effect a suit to obtain the equity of redemption, which is, in the view of equity, an actual estate. Quære, therefore, as to Dearman v. Wyche (9 Sim. 570). Ib.

The right to file a bill of foreclosure whether the mortgage be legal or equitable falls within the 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, s. 24, and the 7 Will. 4 & 1 Vict. c. 28, and the time is governed by the legal right of the party to bring an action, or, if he have not the legal estate, by the right which he would have had if his estate had been a legal instead of an equitable one. Ib.

Semble, an adjudication of a court of equity would save the right from being barred by the statute, and the court would restrain the party from setting up the statute at law. Ib.

Where an equity of redemption is put in settlement, though the tenant for life is the party bound to pay the interest upon the mortgage, yet the mere laches of the mortgagee to demand such interest from the tenant for life will not prejudice his claim against those in remainder. Ib.

D. mortgaged land in fee to J., subject to a proviso of cessor, upon payment of the money secured, upon a day more than twenty years before the passing of the 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27. Within twenty years before the passing of the statute, D. acknowledged that the mortgage money was unpaid. On ejectment by the heir of J., within five years after the passing of the statute, the jury found that the mortgage money was unpaid:—Held, that the ejectment was not barred by s. 2, D.'s possession not being adverse at the time of passing the statute; and, therefore, the heir of J. had, by s. 15, five years from that time to bring the action, though no proof was given that he had been in possession, or received rent or interest. Doe d. Jones v. Williams, 6 N. & M. 816; 5 A. & E. 291; 2 H. & W. 213; 5 L. J., K. B. 231.

It was doubted whether ss. 2 & 3 of 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, comprehended the case of a mortgagee so as to render it necessary for him to bring an ejectment within twenty years from the day of default made in the payment of the mortgage-money. Ib. See now Littledale's Act (7 Will. 4 & 1 Vict. c. 28), amended by Real Property Limitation Act, 1874, s. 9.

Before the Statute.]—Where A. mortgaged his premises in fee to B., with a proviso for redemption on payment of the mortgage money on a given day; but A. continued in possession until his death, after which C., his son and heir, and his widow, continued in possession until the death of the latter, when C. conveyed the premises in fee to D., who levied a fine with proclamations, and entered into possession; on an ejectment being brought by E., the heir-at-law of B., the original mortgagee, and a special verdict finding as a fact the nonpayment of the mortgage debt on the given day, without finding either an adverse possession by A. or his heir, or that interest had been paid upon the mortgage-money by the mortgagor:—Held, that though there had been a lapse of thirty-seven years since default in payment of the principal, the 21 Jac. 1, c. 16, was no bar to the ejectment, and, consequently, that the mortgagee was not precluded thereby. Hall v. Doe d. Surtees, 1 D. & R. 340; 5 B. & Ald. 687; 24 R. R. 529.

Retrospective Operation of Statute—Acknowledgment by Mortgagee in Transfer without Privity of Mortgagor.]—In 1816, a mortgagee, under a mortgage created some years before, entered into possession of the mortgaged premises; and in 1827 he executed a transfer of his mortgage to another. The transferee thereupon entered into possession, and in 1828 executed a transfer of his mortgage to a second transferee, who then entered into possession. The mortgagor was not a party to either transfer, and had not, from the time the original mortgagee entered into possession, received any acknowledgment in writing of his equity of redemption. In 1833, 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, was passed. In 1845, the representative of the mortgagor filed a bill for redemption against the representatives of the second transferee:—Held, that the statute operated retrospectively, by taking from the mortgagor the benefit of the acknowledgment which had already been made of the mortgage title in the transfers of 1827 and 1828; and that the suit (as to that estate) was therefore barred. Batchelor v. Middleton, 6 Hare, 75.

When Mortgagor barred in Isle of Man, prior to Statute.]—Held, that before the passing of the 3 Will. 4, c. 27, which applies to the Isle of Man, the equity of redemption of lands there was, under the Act of Tynwald, of 1703, called the Act of Settlement, barred by the lapse of twenty-one years from the date of the mortgage, though the mortgagor had remained in possession and paid interest of the mortgage debt. Christian v. Goldie, 2 Moore, P. C. 226.

Person claiming under a Mortgage, who is.]—In 1821, N., being seised in fee of land, leased it to W. In 1822, W. mortgaged it for a term of years. In 1834, the mortgage was paid off, and the mortgagee and the owner of the equity of redemption conveyed all their interest to the person under whom the plaintiff claimed:—Held, that the plaintiff was a person claiming under a mortgage within 7 Will. 4 & 1 Vict. c. 28, and therefore might bring ejectment within twenty years after the mortgage was paid off, though after the expiration of twenty years from the payment of rent to the mortgagor, or acknowledgment of title in him by the tenant in possession. Doe d. Baddeley v. Massey, 17 Q. B. 373; 20 L. J., Q. B. 434; 15 Jur. 1031. Questioned in Thornton v. France, infra. Cf. judgment in Heath v. Pugh, 6 Q. B. D. 345.

An owner in fee of land, prior to mortgaging it for a term of years put A. into possession. A. occupied for twenty-five years without payment of rent or a written acknowledgment of the mortgagor's title. A. then conveyed in fee to the plaintiff, and after attorning to him as his tenant gave up possession for a sum of money to B., the representative of the mortgagor, and to C., the executor of the mortgagee (whose mortgage had been kept alive by payment of interest). B. and C. afterwards joined in a conveyance of the premises to the defendants:—Held, in ejectment, that the defendants were persons claiming under a mortgage within 7 Will. 4 & 1 Vict. c. 28, and consequently that the 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, did not operate to bar their title. Ford v. Ager, 2 H. & C. 279; 32 L. J., Ex. 269; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 804; 8 L. T. 546; 11 W. R. 1073.

An undivided moiety of real property was in 1875 conveyed to a purchaser, who never entered into possession or into receipt of the rents and profits thereof. In 1886 the purchaser mortgaged his estate in the property to a mortgagee, and in 1890 sold the equity of redemption to the plaintiff, who subsequently paid off the mortgage:—Held, in an action for partition of the property against the owners of the other moiety who had been by themselves and their predecessors in title in separate possession of the property continuously, since 1875, for sixty years, that, as the equitable title of the plaintiff had been barred by s. 24 of the Real Property Limitation Act, 1833, before he paid off the mortgage, he was not a person claiming under a mortgage of land within the meaning of the Real Property Limitation Act, 1837. Thornton v. France, 66 L. J., Q. B. 705; [1897] 2 Q. B. 143; 77 L. T. 38; 46 W. R. 56—C. A.

The Real Property Limitation Act, 1837, does not confer a new right of entry on a mortgagee when at the time of making the mortgage some person is in possession of the mortgaged property holding adversely to the mortgagor, and the Statute of Limitations has already begun to run in his favour against the mortgagor. Ib.

Mortgagor's Right to Redeem, and to surplus Proceeds on Sale, barred, notwithstanding Trust in Mortgage.]—A mortgage of real estate made by way of a conveyance to a trustee, upon trust to sell at discretion and out of the proceeds of sale to pay the mortgage debt, and to pay the surplus moneys to the mortgagor, does not constitute an express trust in favour of the mortgagor within 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, s. 25. Locking v. Parker, 42 L. J., Ch. 257; L. R. 8 Ch. 30; 27 L. T. 635; 21 W. R. 113.

Under such a mortgage the only right of the mortgagor is to redeem, and he cannot file a bill for a sale. The only right of the mortgagee is to have the property sold, and he is not entitled to foreclose. Ib.

The mortgagor's right to redeem under such a mortgage is barred by twenty years' possession by the mortgagee without any acknowledgment of the mortgagor's title. Ib.

Where twenty years have elapsed from entry by a mortgagee, and there has been no subsequent acknowledgment, the mortgagor's right of redemption becomes extinct, under the Statute of Limitations (3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, ss. 28, 34); and if in such a case the mortgage deed contained a power of sale with a trust of surplus proceeds for the mortgagor and his representatives, and that power of sale has not been exercised within the twenty years from entry by the mortgagee, the trust of surplus proceeds becomes equally extinct, and cannot be enforced with respect to surplus proceeds resulting from a subsequent sale. Chapman v. Corpe, 41 L. T. 22; 27 W. R. 781.

Mortgagee in Possession Twenty Years—Good Title to Sell—Mortgagor no Right to Surplus.]—A security for money lent was made in the form of a conveyance to the lender on trust to sell. He entered into possession and remained in possession for more than twenty years. His devisees in trust agreed to sell the mortgaged estate for a sum exceeding the amount then due for principal, interest and costs, and conveyed it to the purchaser by a deed in which the trust for sale was recited:—Held, that such a security is simply a mortgage; also that a mortgagee who has been in possession for more than twenty years may make a title and convey under his power of sale. Alison, In re, Johnson v. Mounsey, 11 Ch. D. 284; 40 L. T. 234; 27 W. R. 537.

Held, also, that the devisees in trust could only convey as owners in fee, and that the mortgagors had no right to the surplus of the purchase-money. Ib.

Mortgagor's Right to Redeem—Whether preserved as to Whole by Possession of Part.]—Redemption of a mortgage not barred by length of time, unless the mortgagee has had twenty years' uninterrupted adverse possession of the entire of the mortgaged premises; therefore, redemption decreed where mortgagee eighty years in possession of part only of the mortgaged premises, the mortgagor continuing in possession of the remainder. Burke v. Lynch, 2 Ball & B. 426. See next case.

The rule that prevailed prior to the Statute of Limitations (3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27), that no lapse of time barred the right of a mortgagor of lands to redeem the whole, provided he held possession of part (Rakestraw v. Brayer, Select Cas. in Ch. 55; Moseley, 189), has been abolished by s. 28 of the statute. Accordingly, where a mortgagee had been in undisturbed possession of part of the land comprised in the mortgage for upwards of twenty years, the right of the mortgagor to redeem was held to be barred by that section, although he held possession of the remainder of the land. Kinsman v. Rouse, 50 L. J., Ch. 486; 17 Ch. D. 104; 44 L. T. 597; 29 W. R. 627.

See Blake v. Foster, col. 212.

—— Where Mortgagor under Disability.]—Sect. 1 of the Statute of Limitations (3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27), saving the rights of persons under disability, such as absence beyond seas, does not apply as between a mortgagor and mortgagee. Ib.

See St. John v. Turner, and Anon., col. 247.

Under the Real Property Limitation Act, 1874, the twelve years' bar to a redemption suit from the time when the mortgagee took possession, or from the last written acknowledgment, is absolute, and not to be extended by reason of any disability of the mortgagor. Forster v. Patterson, 50 L. J., Ch. 603; 17 Ch. D. 132; 44 L. T. 465; 29 W. R. 463.

Statute runs in favour of Mortgagee in Possession without accounting; but not if he is also Purchaser of Life Estate in Equity of Redemption.]—If the mortgagee enters into possession in his character of mortgagee, or by virtue of his mortgage title alone, he is for the period of twenty years liable to account, and, if payment be tendered to him, liable to become trustee for the mortgagor; but, if the mortgagor permits the mortgagee to hold for twenty years without accounting or admitting his mortgage title, the mortgagor loses his right of redemption, and the title of the mortgagee becomes as absolute in equity as it was previously at law; and, in such a case, the time runs against the mortgagor from the moment the mortgagee takes possession, and continues to run against all those claiming under the mortgagor, whatever may be the disabilities to which they may be subjected. Raffety v. King, 1 Keen, 601; 6 L. J., Ch. 87.

But if the mortgagee enters, not in his character of mortgagee only, but as purchaser of the equity of redemption, he must look to the title of his vendor, and the validity of the conveyance he takes; and if the conveyance be such as gives him only the estate of a tenant for life, he is bound, having united in himself the characters of a mortgagor and mortgagee, to keep down the interest of the mortgage for the benefit of the person or persons entitled in remainder, and time will not run against the remaindermen during the continuance of the estate for life. Ib.

A mortgagee in possession for six years, without acknowledgment of the mortgagor's title, purchased the interest of the tenant for life of the equity of redemption, and continued in possession for twenty years longer:—Held, that such possession was not adverse during the existence of the life estate so purchased, and that the statute 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, s. 28, was not therefore a bar to any suit for redemption by the remainderman or reversioner. Hyde v. Dallaway, 2 Hare, 528.

Baron and feme, seised in fee in right of the feme, mortgage by fine, and afterwards convey the equity of redemption, by lease and release, to the mortgagee; the mortgagee remains in possession as complete owner for more than twenty years, during the life of the husband, tenant by the curtesy, from whom he had his conveyance; the heir of the wife is not barred of his equity of redemption by lapse of time. Corbett v. Barker, 3 Anstr. 755; 4 R. R. 856. Reversing 1 Anstr. 138.

Where a mortgagee is also tenant for life of the mortgaged estate, the Statute of Limitations does not begin to run against the mortgage title until his death; and the same rule applies where the mortgagee is a tenant, in common with others, of the mortgaged estate. Wynne v. Styan, 2 Ph. 303.

Bill to Redeem—Length of Time in Equity.]—Bill to redeem a mortgage forty years old, Lord K. declared he would not relieve mortgages after twenty years, the Statute of Limitations having confined an entry to that time, unless there be circumstances of incapacity. White v. Ewer, 2 Vent. 340.

Bill for a redemption; plea of Statute of Limitations allowed, the mortgagee having been thirty years in possession; for length of time is a kind of equitable bar in analogy to the Statute of Limitations. King, Ch., allowed a demurrer in such a case, but Lord Hardwicke thought it would be carrying it too far, as the case would then be out of court, but it was said in this case that defendant should insist upon length of time by his answer, and not by plea. Aggas v. Pickerell, 3 Atk. 225.

Defendant pleaded forty years' possession, without account or admission of any debt, to a bill setting up an old mortgage, and stating an account settled, and that owing to infancy, coverture, and other disabilities, plaintiffs could not proceed; the plea was allowed. Blewitt v. Thomas, 2 Ves. J. 669.

Adverse possession of an equity of redemption for twenty years is a bar. A mortgagee in possession, keeping no account, and making no acknowledgment, becomes owner of the estate after the lapse of twenty years. Cholmondeley v. Clinton, 2 Jac. & Walk. 191; 22 R. R. 99. Affirmed, 4 Bligh, 1; 22 R. R. 83.

Acts done by a trustee or termor for years cannot have the effect of adverse possession. But the rule does not apply to the case of mortgagor and mortgagee. Ib.

Length of time may bar in equity; twenty years' possession bars an equity of redemption, but no time can cover a fraud. Pickering v. Stamford (Lord), 2 Ves. J. 280; 4 Bro. C. C. 214.

See Alderson v. White, col. 231.

—— Remainderman.]—A remote remainderman of an equity of redemption, filing a bill to redeem immediately after his title vested in possession:—Held, not too late to set aside a title founded on a decree made upwards of twenty years, which was fraudulent and void as against him, and the other persons claiming remainders under the will; and length of time no bar. Blake v. Foster, 2 Ball & B. 387.

The limitation of time to redeem a mortgage is, in equity, in analogy to the Statute of Limitations at law. Ib., 402.

Although it be fraud in taking an account under a decree in a foreclosure cause, not to make the tenant for life keep down the interest on the mortgage, and directing the surplus of the purchase-money to be paid to him, yet a redemption cannot on that ground be decreed to a remainderman; and it was an order of the court for which the purchaser could not be made responsible, and it does not vitiate the purchase, or entitle the remainderman to set aside the sale. When a mortgagor has been permitted to continue in possession of part of the mortgaged premises, he is entitled to a redemption of the entire, although the mortgagee upwards of twenty years in possession of the remainder; but where, by sale of part of the premises, the mortgage has been paid off, and the remainder reconveyed to the mortgagor, he will not, after twenty years, be entitled to redeem the purchase; the mortgagor's title to that part of the premises in his possession not being derived from the mortgage. Ib., 565.

The mortgagor is considered in equity as the owner of the estate, the mortgagee a mere incumbrancer; the limitation of a bill to redeem is borrowed from the statute, and no satisfactory reason can be assigned for rejecting the most important provision in the act, namely, the period from which the adverse possession shall begin to run as against the remainderman. Ib., 575.

If mortgagee enters in lifetime of tenant for life of mortgaged premises, remainderman will be barred of equity of redemption after twenty years from such entry. Harrison v. Hollins, 1 Sim. & S. 471.

N., in 1790, entered into possession of lands as assignee of mortgages thereof, and purchaser from A., B., C. and D., who were tenants for life of one-fourth each. A. died in 1819, and B. in 1836; the next remaindermen of their shares, who were tenants in tail thereof, filed a bill against the devisees of N. to redeem the premises:—Held, that the plaintiffs were within the terms of, and consequently bound by, the 28th section of the 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27:—Held, also, that the provisions of the 28th section are totally independent of those of the 15th section, the latter relating to the title to the lands so affected by the provisions of the preceding section, the former exclusively to mortgagees. Browne v. Cork (Bishop), 1 Dr. & Wal. 700.

Clause restricting Period of Redemption void.]—Any clause introduced into a mortgage deed to limit the period of redemption is, in equity, totally disregarded, as the parties cannot, by any such clause, restrict the equity of redemption, for it would be an oppression on the mortgagor. Goodman v. Grierson, 2 Ball & B. 278; 12 R. R. 82.

Acknowledgment by Mortgagee to Third Person.]—Redemption decreed against the heir of mortgagee and a purchaser with notice, upon acknowledgment of the mortgage within twenty years before the bill, in transaction with other persons, not with the heirs of the mortgagor. Hansard v. Hardy, 18 Ves. 455.

Acknowledgment—By Mortgagee's Devisee in Tail after Time has run.]—A mortgagee in fee in possession for more than twenty years, having devised the estate to his son in tail, with limitations over:—Held, that an acknowledgment by the tenant in tail of the mortgage title restored the right of redemption, so as to bind the remainderman; and that a purchase of the equity of redemption by him, and conveyance of it to him in fee, gave him an absolute right to the estate, to the exclusion of the devisees in remainder under the will of the mortgagee, who had, as mortgagee, been more than twenty years in possession. Pendleton v. Booth, 1 Giff. 35; 29 L. J., Ch. 265; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 840. Affirmed, 1 De G. F. & J. 81; 29 L. J., Ch. 265; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 182; 8 W. R. 101.

—— By one Joint Mortgagee.]—An acknowledgment of the title of a mortgagor given by one only of two joint mortgagees, who, on the face of the mortgage deed, are shewn to advance the money on a joint account as trustees, does not keep alive the right of redemption either as against the whole property or against a moiety of it, but is wholly inoperative. Richardson v. Younge, 40 L. J., Ch. 338; L. R. 6 Ch. 478; 25 L. T. 230; 19 W. R. 612.

See B, VI., post (col. 282).

Bill to Redeem Mortgage—Pleading.]—A bill to redeem a mortgage, made twenty-five years before, stated that the mortgagee entered into possession of the estate shortly after the date and execution of the mortgage deed, and had been in possession ever since:—Held, that the court could not intend, from that statement, that the mortgagee entered within the first five years after the date of the deed. Baker v. Wetton, 14 Sim. 426; 9 Jur. 98.

Possession by Mortgagee after Mortgage Satisfied.]—Time no bar to redemption in case of a mortgage, where no time is fixed for redemption, unless twenty years after principal and interest paid by perception of rents and profits. Fenwick v. Reed, 1 Mer. 114.

Length of possession as a ground for presuming a release of the equity of redemption, depends on the nature of the possession, whether adverse or not. Ib.

Conveyance in Form absolute, but in Substance a Mortgage.] — The plaintiff, in 1842, executed an absolute conveyance of certain property to the defendant in fee, as on a sale. In 1860 he filed a bill to have the transaction treated as a mortgage transaction and to redeem. The court being satisfied by parol evidence that the agreement between the parties had been that the defendant should only hold the estate as a security for the money which he paid, and should receive the rents in lieu of interest:—Held, that the lapse of time was no bar to relief, for that the right to redeem could not be lost in a shorter period than if the transaction had been in form a mortgage. Douglas v. Culverwell, 4 De G. F. & J. 20; 6 L. T. 272; 10 W. R. 327.

Held, also, that the case was not to be treated as one of conditional sale, but that the defendant must account as a mortgagee in possession and with rests, being allowed interest at 5*l.* per cent. on the money he had advanced, and that he had been rightly ordered to pay the costs of the suit. Ib.

Time as a Bar to Redemption.]—See Pickering v. Stamford, col. 311.

Possession of Mortgagor after Mortgage Satisfied, but before Reconveyance.] — When the money due upon a mortgage has been paid to the mortgagee, but no reconveyance has been executed, the mortgagor becomes from the date of such payment a tenant at will to the mortgagee, and the legal estate of the mortgagee is extinguished by thirteen years' adverse possession of the mortgagor. The 25th section of the Statute of Limitations (3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27) relates to express trusts only, and does not apply to the relation between a mortgagee whose mortgage has been satisfied and the mortgagor. Sands to Thompson, 52 L. J., Ch. 406; 22 Ch. D. 614; 48 L. T. 210; 31 W. R. 397.

Mortgagor entitled, during Wife's Life, to Mortgage Interest—Mortgagee barred by Nonpayment of Interest from Wife's Death—Express Trust.]—A., by will made in 1809, devised 470*l.* to her daughter E., the interest whereof was to be paid to B., the husband of E., "until the time hereinafter limited and appointed for the payment of the legacy of 470*l.*; that is to say, in case E. should survive her husband B.," then the legacy and interest were to be for her and her children; but if she should die before B., leaving issue, then the legacy was to be placed out at interest for the benefit of the issue, and paid to them on their attaining their respective ages of twenty-one; and if no issue, then the legacy was to be divided between M. and T. The will contained a clause empowering the executor to advance the 470*l.* to B. on approved security. In 1811 the executor advanced 470*l.* to B. on a mortgage of lands belonging to B.'s father, B. and his father joining in the mortgage. E. died in 1827, leaving issue. B. died subsequently, within twenty years before the presenting the petition for sale of the mortgaged lands. The issue attained their ages of twenty-one within the same period. No interest had ever been paid on the mortgage up to the presenting of the petition, a period of more than forty years:—Held, that B.'s interest in the trust fund determined on the death of his wife in 1827; and that as more than twenty years from that period had elapsed without payment of interest the mortgage was barred by the Statute of Limitations. Scott, In re, 8 Ir. Ch. R. 316.

Held, also, that there was an express trust created in the owner of the lands, within the meaning of the 25th section of the 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27. Ib.

Foreclosure Action.]—A bill of foreclosure, being in fact a suit in equity, for the recovery of money, the plea of the statute 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, s. 40, held good. Dearman v. Wyche, 9 Sim. 570; 9 L. J., Ch. 76.

—— Action for Recovery of Land.]—A foreclosure action is an action for the recovery of land, and is therefore not within s. 40 of 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, but is within ss. 2 and 21, and consequently within the supplementary enactment of 1 Vict. c. 28. Harlock v. Ashberry, 51 L. J., Ch. 394; 19 Ch. D. 539; 46 L. T. 356; 30 W. R. 327—C. A.

Case in which Mortgagee out of Possession not Barred.]—Where a mortgagee who had not been in receipt of the rents and profits of the mortgaged premises for upwards of twenty years, nor received such an acknowledgment as is required by the 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, nor had even known of his rights until informed thereof by a puisne creditor, was brought before the court by that creditor, by an amendment made in 1837 to a supplemental bill filed in 1833, for the purpose of completing title to a purchaser, so as to have distributed among the creditors of the estate certain funds which had been impounded to indemnify the purchaser against an outstanding and apparently unsatisfied charge, of which the mortgage formed a moiety:—Held, that the mortgagee's claim was not barred by the 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27. Murphy v. Sterne, 1 Dr. & Wal. 236.

Foreclosure Action—Presumption of Payment of Interests.]—Lands liable to a jointure of 2,000*l.* per annum, payable to the wife of the testator, were devised by him to A. for life, with remainder to trustees for one thousand years, upon trust to raise money to pay the debts and legacies of the testator, with remainder to B. for life, with remainder to C. for life, with remainder over; the testator died in 1804; the jointress in 1805 advanced 8,500*l.* in payment of his debts, and took a mortgage to secure that sum from the trustees of the one thousand years' term; in 1806 she married B. On that occasion the jointure was settled to her separate use, and the 8,500*l.* was settled on B. for life, and, if he survived the intended wife, upon him absolutely. On the death of the testator, A. entered into possession of the lands, and died in 1807, without leaving issue male. G. F. E., a third devisee for life, then entered into possession of the lands; his wife, the jointress, died in 1828, and he died in 1829. C. then entered into possession, and, being entitled to the personal estate of the jointress, filed a bill in 1843, praying a foreclosure of the mortgage. That bill stated that during the life of the jointress the rents of the lands had been insufficient to pay the jointure. There was not any evidence of any payment of interest upon the mortgage up to the filing of the bill:—Held, that the mortgage debt was not barred by the Statute of Limitations, 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27; held, also, that although upon the death of the jointress in 1828, more than twenty years had elapsed without any payment in respect of the mortgage, yet the court would presume that from that period B., and after his death C., had kept down the interest. Carbery (Lord) v. Preston, 13 Ir. Eq. R. 455.

Man in Possession by Agreement to receive Rents and keep down Interest—Rents only sufficient to pay Interest on First Mortgage.]—When an owner of an estate contracts for valuable consideration with his mortgagees to put a man in possession, and directs him to apply the rents in payment of the interest on the first mortgage, and then the interest on the second, the mortgagor cannot afterwards urge that the Statute of Limitations excludes the second mortgagee, because the rents were no more than sufficient to pay the first, and the second mortgagee had for more than twenty years received nothing. Knight v. Bowyer, 23 Beav. 609; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 968. Affirmed, 27 L. J., Ch. 520; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 569; 6 W. R. 565.

Sale by Mortgagor of some of Mortgaged Lands—Whole Interest paid out of Unsold Lands.]—Where there is a mortgage over several denominations of land, and the mortgagor subsequently sells some of the denominations to a purchaser, for valuable consideration, without the concurrence of the mortgagee, and the interest due under the mortgage is regularly paid out of the remaining denominations, the lands sold are not discharged from the mortgage, although no proceedings have been taken against them within twenty years (3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, and 7 Will. 4 & 1 Vict. c. 28). Muskerry, In re, 9 Ir. Ch. R. 94.

Action for Foreclosure before Time run—Action for Possession after.]—A legal mortgage of freehold land in 1856; no possession by the mortgagee, and no payment of principal or interest to him, nor any acknowledgment of his title. In 1870 a bill by the mortgagee for redemption or foreclosure; in 1874 a decree nisi for redemption or foreclosure; and in 1877 an order absolute for foreclosure. In 1878 an action by the mortgagee to recover possession of the land:—Held, that although brought more than twenty years after the date of the mortgage deed the action was not barred by the Statutes of Limitations (3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, and 1 Vict. c. 28). Pugh v. Heath, 51 L. J., Q. B. 367; 7 App. Cas. 235; 46 L. T. 321; 30 W. R. 553—H. L. (E.) See Thornton v. France, [1897] 2 Q. B. 143; col. 209.

Semble, per Earl Cairns, that the action, being brought by one who had become absolute owner of the land under the foreclosure decree, was an action as to which the right to bring it must be taken to have accrued within s. 2 of 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, at the date of that decree; and that s. 3 of that act in defining when the right shall be deemed to have accrued is not necessarily exhaustive, or otherwise inconsistent with this view. Ib.

Time runs from Execution of Deed.]—By deeds of lease and release of 7th and 8th September, 1819, lands were mortgaged in fee, subject to a proviso, that if the mortgagor should pay the principal and interest on the 25th March then next, the mortgagee, his heirs and assigns, should and would reconvey and reassure the premises to the mortgagor, his heirs and assigns. There was also a covenant that it should be lawful for the mortgagee, his heirs and assigns, from time to time and at all times after default should be made in payment of the principal and interest, peaceably and quietly to enter into, have, hold, occupy, possess and enjoy the premises; and also a covenant by the mortgagor for further assurance in case of such default:—Held, that the mortgagee had the right of possession under this deed from the time of its execution, and not merely from the 25th March, 1820, and, therefore, that an ejectment for the recovery of the premises by the heir-at-law of the mortgagee, within twenty years of the latter but not of the former date (no interest having been paid in the meantime) was too late. Doe d. Roylance v. Lightfoot, 8 M. & W. 553; 11 L. J., Ex. 151; 5 Jur. 966.

Proof of Previous Proceedings in Ejectment.]—In 1836 certain property was mortgaged; in 1847 a portion of it was taken possession of by the mortgagee, who commenced an ejectment to recover possession; in the present action no proof of the service of the proceedings in ejectment in 1847 was given, but it was shewn that a paper was served on the mortgagor:—Held, that the representative of the mortgagee was not entitled to recover, as there was no proof of possession by him or his predecessors in title within twenty years. Thorp v. Facey, 1 H. & R. 678; 35 L. J., C. P. 349; 12 Jur. (N.S.) 741.

Payment of Principal or Interest by Mortgagor or his Agent.]—A payment to come within the 1 Vict. c. 28, must be a payment of principal or interest, and must be made by the mortgagor or some person bound to pay principal or interest on his behalf. Harlock v. Ashberry, supra, col. 215.

So the word "paid" in 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, s. 40, involves by implication the addition of "the person liable to pay." Therefore a payment of rent made by a tenant of the mortgaged property to the mortgagee in consequence of a notice by the mortgagee requiring the rent to be paid to him is not such a payment. Ib.

The principle underlying all the Statutes of Limitations is that a payment to prevent the barring by statute must be an acknowledgment by the person making the payment of his liability, and an admission of the title of the person to whom the payment is made. Ib.

Possession of Mortgagor without Acknowledgment—Payment of Arrears after Time has run.]—When a demise for a term of 1,000 years by way of mortgage is created in land, and no payment of principal or of interest or acknowledgment is made for more than twenty years, and the mortgagor and those claiming under him remain in possession of the premises without interruption, the title of the mortgagee under the mortgage is thenceforth barred. Hemming v. Blanton, 42 L. J., C. P. 158; 21 W. R. 636.

Therefore a payment of arrears of interest and the principal to the mortgagee under a decree in a foreclosure suit, after that time has elapsed, does not revive the title in the mortgagee, and an ejectment does not then lie to recover the possession. Ib.

Mortgagee's Estate vested in Trustees—Non-Receipt of Interest by Tenant for Life—Remainderman barred.]—If interest is not paid on a mortgage for a period exceeding the statutory period to a person who is tenant for life of the estate of the mortgagee, this will not bar the remainderman. But the remainderman is barred by nonpayment of interest for twelve years, if the mortgagee's estate is vested in trustees, with full powers of converting and realising the mortgage debt, and with power of giving receipts, even though the trustees only hold the moneys, when realised, on trust to pay the interest to tenant for life, and afterwards for the remainderman. Barcroft v. Murphy, [1896] 1 Ir. R. 590.

Possession of Mortgagor without Accounting.]—See Blewitt v. Thomas, col. 250.

Mortgage by Husband to Wife's Trustee—Nonpayment of Interest — Mortgage not barred.]—Where a married woman was under a will entitled for life for her separate use to the income of a sum of money which the trustee of the will had lent to the husband on the security of a mortgage, and the husband and wife had lived together in amity for a period of more than twenty years after the date of the mortgage, during which time the husband had never paid any interest on the mortgage debt, or given any written acknowledgment of the mortgage to the mortgagee-trustee for the wife:—Held, that the husband retained the interest as a gift from the wife; that it was the same hand to pay and to receive; that, therefore, no payment over was requisite; and, consequently, that the Statute of Limitations did not run, and the mortgage was still subsisting. Hawes, In re, Burchell, In re, Burchell v. Hawes, 62 L. J., Ch. 463; 3 R. 133; 67 L. T. 756; 41 W. R. 173.

Equity of Redemption Wife's Separate Estate—Legal Estate in Husband—Statute no Bar to Wife's Right to Redeem.]—See Booth v. Purser, col. 197.

Cestui que Trust entitled both to Rents of, and to Interest on Mortgage of, Lands—Mortgage not barred by Nonpayment of Interest.]—S. was, under a will, entitled for her life to the interest on a sum of money which had been invested by the trustees of the will on mortgage of land. The mortgagor had afterwards conveyed the land (subject to the mortgage) to trustees on trust for S. for her life. During her life she received and retained the rents for more than twenty years:—Held, that though no interest had been actually paid, yet as the person who was entitled to the rents was also entitled to the interest, the rights of the trustee of the mortgage were not barred by 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, s. 40, and that the fact of the rents being payable to one set of trustees and the interest being payable to another set of trustees did not alter the case where the cestui que trust was in each case the same. Burrell v. Earl of Egremont, (7 Beav. 205) followed and explained. Topham v. Booth, 56 L. J., Ch. 812; 35 Ch. D. 607; 57 L. T. 170; 35 W. R. 715.

Equitable Mortgagee barred if no Acknowledgment—Prior Legal Mortgage—Mortgagor in Possession.]—Where an equitable mortgagee has for more than the period provided by the Statute of Limitations received no interest on the mortgage debt, no part payment of principal, and no acknowledgment, his charge upon the land is extinguished, although the debt itself is not, and the fact that there is a prior legal mortgage outstanding, the owner of which has never been in possession of the land, inasmuch as the mortgagor himself was in possession during the statutory period, does not prevent time from running, for the equitable mortgagee could have taken proceedings during such period against the land, e.g. he might have brought an action for foreclosure. Kibble v. Fairthorne, 64 L. J., Ch. 184; [1895] 1 Ch. 219; 71 L. T. 755; 43 W. R. 327; 13 R. 75.

Payment of Interest—By Surety binds Mortgagor.]—In ejectment by a mortgagee to recover possession of land mortgaged, it is sufficient to prove part payment of interest by a surety, without giving any evidence that the mortgagor was in default, or that the surety was compelled to pay, or that the payment was made at the request of the mortgagor. Cann v. Taylor, 1 F. & F. 651.

—— By Mortgagor not in Possession binds his Tenant at Will in Possession.] — The 7 Will. 4 & 1 Vict. c. 28, is not confined to cases where a mortgagor has been in possession of the mortgaged premises, but its object was to protect mortgagees generally, and to make mortgages an available security, wherever they are valid in their inception; and the mortgagee having received payment of his interest, cannot be charged with any laches. Doe d. Palmer v. Eyre, 17 Q. B. 366; 20 L. J., Q. B. 431; 15 Jur. 1031.

A., in 1821, became entitled to the possession in fee-simple of premises, of which he had never been in actual possession, but which had been occupied by the defendant, as tenant at will to him, for more than twenty years before action brought. In 1823 A. mortgaged the property to B., who afterwards assigned the mortgage to the plaintiff. A. had paid interest upon this mortgage within twenty years before the action was commenced, but had done so without the knowledge of the defendant:—Held, that 7 Will. 4 & 1 Vict. c. 28, applied, and that the plaintiff, having brought his action within twenty years next after the last payment of interest upon the mortgage, was not barred, although more than twenty years had elapsed since the time at which the right to bring such action had first accrued. Ib.

See Thornton v. France, [1897] 2 Q. B. 143; col. 209.

—— By Person interested in Mortgagor's Residue.]—Freeholds and leaseholds were mortgaged in 1822. The mortgagor devised and bequeathed his residuary estate upon trust to pay his debts, including mortgage debts, and afterwards on trust for H. A beneficial tenant for life under the will of the mortgagor in a moiety of a freehold not comprised in the mortgage, and also interested in the residue under the will of H., paid interest on the mortgage down to her death in 1859:—Held, that such payment prevented the Statutes of Limitations being a bar to the mortgagee's proceeding, either against the property comprised in the mortgage or on the covenant for repayment against the estate of the mortgagor. Pears v. Laing, 40 L. J., Ch. 225; L. R. 12 Eq. 41; 24 L. T. 19; 19 W. R. 653.

—— By Devisee of Mortgaged Lands preserves Right to proceed against Residuary Legatees.] — A testator in 1855 mortgaged certain freeholds of which he was absolute owner, and also his life estate in certain other freeholds, to secure repayment of 3,109*l.* advanced by the mortgagees, who were trustees of a marriage settlement, with interest at 5 per cent. The testator died in 1862, having by his will devised the mortgaged lands to his son A. for life, with remainder to his first and other sons in tail male, and other freeholds to his son B. in like manner, and bequeathed his residuary personal estate to his executors upon trust for his daughters. The mortgagees were aware of the testator's death, but did not require payment of the mortgage debt. The executors paid the testator's debts (other than the mortgage debt), and converted into money and set apart the residuary personal estate for the benefit of the residuary legatees. Part was afterwards paid over to them, and the remainder was invested by the executors, and the income paid to the residuary legatees. Two of the daughters married, and their shares of the residuary were put in settlement. Interest on the mortgage was paid by the devisee of the mortgaged lands down to 1886, when it fell into arrear, and a receiver was appointed. In 1890 an order for sale of the lands was made on the petition of the mortgagees, which proceedings were pending in 1891, when the mortgagees, believing that the lands when sold would not realise sufficient to satisfy their claim for principal and interest, brought an action to administer the real and personal estate of the deceased mortgagor, and claimed the right to follow the assets remaining in the hands of the surviving executor as trustee for the residuary legatees, or which had been paid over by him to them. No interest had been paid to the mortgagees since the mortgagor's death except by the devisee. The defendants pleaded (1) the Statute of Limitations; (2) the Trustee Act, 1888, s. 8; and (3) laches and acquiescence:—Held, (1) that the payment of interest by the devisee kept alive the plaintiff's right to resort to the residuary personal estate or the testator's other real estate in the event of the security of the lands being insufficient, and that therefore the Statute of Limitations did not apply; (2) that the residuary legatees were not persons "claiming through a trustee" within s. 8 of the Trustee Act, 1888; and (3) that there were no special circumstances or action or conduct on the plaintiff's part to disentitle them to follow the assets, and that they were entitled to the relief sought. Ridgway v. Newstead (3 De G. F. & J. 474) and Blake v. Gale (32 Ch. D. 571) distinguished. Leahy v. De Moleyns, [1896] 1 Ir. R. 206—C. A.

—— By Mortgagor's Widow—Effect on Co-Heirs.]—On the death of the mortgagor in 1833, his widow (who was entitled to dower) took possession of the mortgaged estate, with the consent of the co-heirs, and she paid interest on the mortgage. In 1858 the mortgagee instituted a suit to realise his mortgage, in which it did not appear that any interest had been paid by one of the co-heirs during the interval:—Held, that the payment of the interest by the widow prevented the statute running, for either such co-heir was himself barred, or the payment of interest had been made on his behalf. Ames v. Mannering, 26 Beav. 583.

—— By one Joint Mortgagor.]—If estates A., B. and C. are included in one mortgage, and the owner of A. pays the interest, the mortgagee is not barred by 7 Will. 4 & 1 Vict. c. 28, or by 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, s. 40, from his remedy against B. and C. Chinnery v. Evans, 11 H. L. Cas. 115;

4 N. R. 520; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 855; 11 L. T. 68; 13 W. R. 20.

In a mortgage deed of land, dated in 1853, A. and B., the mortgagors, jointly and severally covenanted with C., the mortgagee, for payment of principal and interest. Interest was paid by A. to the time of action brought. Neither principal nor interest was paid by B. In an action on the covenant against A. and B.:—Held, that the payments by A. prevented the Statute of Limitations from running in favour of B. Bailie v. Irwin, [1897] 2 Ir. R. 614.

—— By Mortgagor or his Agent.]—The payment of money to a mortgagee by the person liable to pay, in respect of the interest on the mortgage, continues the mortgage in all its integrity and force with respect to all the estates properly comprised in the mortgage, and which had not been aliened or conveyed away by the mortgagee, or with his assent. Chinnery v. Evans, supra.

A receiver of the rents of a mortgaged estate is the receiver of the mortgagor, and any payment made by such receiver, by order of the court, is a payment in law by the legal agent of the person liable to pay within 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, s. 40. Ib.

The words in s. 40, "by the person by whom the same shall be payable, or his agent," apply equally to the making of a payment and the signing of an acknowledgment. Ib.

The assignment by a mortgagor of outstanding terms to a trustee for the purchaser is not a possession of a prior incumbrancer within the 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, s. 42, so as to entitle the mortgagee to more than six years' arrears of interest. Ib.

But the payment of interest on a mortgage by a mere stranger would not be a payment within 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, ss. 40, 42. Ib.

—— By Assignee for Life of Mortgagor.]—The payment of interest by an assignee for life of an equity of redemption is sufficient payment to keep alive the right of action on the covenants of the mortgagor, under s. 5 of 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 42. Forsyth v. Bristowe (8 Ex. 716) and Roddam v. Morley (1 De G. & J. 1) followed. Dibb v. Walker, 62 L. J., Ch. 536; [1893] 2 Ch. 429; 3 R. 474; 68 L. T. 610; 41 W. R. 427.

Acknowledgment by Mortgagor does not bind Puisne Mortgagee.]—An acknowledgment by a mortgagor of more than six years' arrears of interest being due upon a first mortgage does not preclude a puisne mortgagee from relying on the 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27. Bolding v. Lane, 1 De G. J. & S. 122; 1 N. R. 248; 32 L. J., Ch. 219; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 506; 7 L. T. 812; 11 W. R. 386.

Acknowledgment must be Replied Specially.]—See Kempe v. Gibbon, col. 332.

[See also, as to Acknowledgments by Mortgagors, B, VI., post (col. 282).]

Mortgage of Reversionary Interest—When Time runs against Foreclosure.]—Two brothers, A. and B., were entitled, subject to their mother's life interest, to a fund in equal moieties. In 1858 A. mortgaged his reversionary interest to his father, who died, having appointed B. his executor and residuary legatee. The property having fallen into possession on the death of the mother in 1887, B. wrote to A. that, in accordance with her wish that he should hand over to A. the mortgage deed, he gave himself the satisfaction of fulfilling her desire, and he inclosed the deed accordingly. Afterwards B. insisted on his right under the mortgage:—Held, that the Statute of Limitations was no bar to the claim under the mortgage, as the right to enforce the mortgage arose only when the reversionary interest fell into possession. Hancock, In re, Hancock v. Berrey, 57 L. J., Ch. 793; 59 L. T. 197; 36 W. R. 710.

Time begins to run for the purpose of barring a foreclosure action on an equitable charge on a contingent reversionary interest in land only from the time the interest falls into possession. Hugill v. Wilkinson, 57 L. J., Ch. 1019; 38 Ch. D. 480; 58 L. T. 880; 36 W. R. 633.

Where a mortgage of a reversion contains a proviso for redemption on or before the death of the tenant for life, and separate covenants for the payment of the principal on the death, and for payment of interest in the meantime, the Statute of Limitations begins to run at the death of the tenant for life, at which date the mortgagee's right to foreclose arises. Sutton v. Sutton (22 Ch. D. 511) explained. Turner's Estate, In re, Turner v. Spencer, 13 R. 132; 43 W. R. 153.

—— In Personal Estate—Remedy on Covenant Barred—Remedy against Property.]—In 1870 A., B. and C. mortgaged certain reversionary shares in a fund in court to which B. and C. were entitled under a will, to secure the repayment by A. of 70*l.* The mortgage contained a joint and several covenant by A. and C. for repayment of principal and interest. In 1873 the mortgagee recovered judgment against C. on the covenant. In 1889 the reversionary interest fell into possession. No interest had ever been paid on the mortgage or judgment, nor had any acknowledgment been given:—Held, that although the personal remedy against C. was barred by the Statute of Limitations, the assignment of the property comprised in the mortgage was nevertheless good; and that therefore the mortgagee was entitled to C.'s share of the property under the will. Lake's Trusts, In re, 63 L. T. 416.

—— Interest on, by Way of Damages—More than Six Years' Arrears recoverable.]—See Mellersh v. Brown, col. 226.

—— In Trust Fund—Mortgagee not Barred.]—In 1824 a reversionary interest in funds, vested in trustees, was assigned to secure the payment of a sum in 1825. The reversion fell in in 1860, no notice having been given to the trustee, nor any interest paid or acknowledgment made in the meantime:—Held, that the mortgagee's right against the fund was not barred by the Statute of Limitations or the lapse of time. Lowe, In re, 30 Beav. 95.

Action on Covenant in Mortgage.]—The limitation of twelve years imposed by the Real Property Limitation Act, 1874, s. 8, to actions and suits for the recovery of money charged on land applies to the personal remedy on the covenant in a mortgage deed as well as to the remedy against the land. Sutton v. Sutton, 52 L. J., Ch. 333; 22 Ch. D. 511; 48 L. T. 95; 31 W. R. 369—C. A.

Action on Collateral Bond.]—When a mortgage debt is secured by a collateral bond, the remedy on the bond is, under s. 8 of the Real Property Limitation Act, 1874, barred by the lapse of twelve years since the last payment of interest or acknowledgment of the debt, equally with the remedy against the land comprised in the mortgage. Sutton v. Sutton (22 Ch. D. 511) followed. Fearnside v. Flint, 52 L. J., Ch. 479; 22 Ch. D. 579; 48 L. T. 154; 31 W. R. 318.

In 1867 T. P. mortgaged an estate to L. and A. for 1,000*l.*, and at the same time E. P. and C. P. gave to L. and A. a joint and several bond in the penal sum of 400*l.*, reciting that the 1,000*l.* had been advanced at the request of E. P. and C. P., and that they had agreed to give as a better security for part thereof a bond conditioned for payment of 200*l.* and interest. The bond was conditioned to be void if the mortgagor paid the mortgage money and interest according to his covenant. T. P. paid the interest till December, 1877, after which it fell into arrear, and in 1880 the mortgagees entered into possession. E. P. died in 1883 without having made any payment or given any acknowledgment. L. and A., as creditors under the bond, took out a summons for administration of his estate. E. P.'s representatives disputed the claim on the ground that this was a proceeding to recover money secured on land, and was barred by the lapse of twelve years under the Real Property Limitation Act, 1874:—Held, that this was not a proceeding to recover money secured on land, but to recover damages because another person failed to pay money secured on land, and that it did not come within the scope of the Real Property Limitation Act, 1874, s. 8. Powers, In re, Lindsell v. Phillips, 30 Ch. D. 291; 53 L. T. 647—C. A.

—— Remedy in Equity.]—Where a bond is entered into as a collateral security for money secured by mortgage, and the interest being in arrear, the mortgagee takes possession, and remains in possession upwards of twenty years, without taking interest, otherwise than by receipt of rents and profits. Quære, whether his remedy on the bond is not barred in equity as well as at law by the Statute of Limitations. White v. Hillacre, 3 Y. & Coll. 597; 4 Jur. 102.

Covenant by Mortgagor and Surety to pay Mortgage Debt on Demand — No Right of Action against Surety until Demand.]—Where a mortgage contained joint and several covenants by a surety and the mortgagor to pay the debt "on demand," and "in the meantime from the date" of the deed to pay interest, and a proviso for redemption if the mortgagor should "on demand" pay the debt and interest from the date of the deed:—Held, that the demand was a condition precedent, and that no right of action accrued against the surety until demand made. Brown's Estate, In re, Brown v. Brown, 62 L. J., Ch. 695; [1893] 2 Ch. 300; 3 R. 463; 69 L. T. 12; 41 W. R. 440.

Mortgage of Legacy—Collateral Bond—Payment of Interest by Surety.]—In 1824 S., who was entitled to a legacy charged upon land devised to a tenant for life, mortgaged it to B.; and at the same time S., and the tenant for life as surety, gave a bond to B. as collateral security for the amount. S. died in 1847, and the tenant for life in 1851. In the administration of the testator's estate, B. claimed to be paid the amount (legacy and interest) due to him; and thereupon the widow and legal personal representative presented a petition praying that the legacy might be ordered to be paid to her, on the ground that the Statute of Limitations had barred the right of B. to recover the sum due on the mortgage. The widow alleged that no interest was paid by S. after 1828, but B. that he had received, previous to and in 1846, interest in part from the tenant for life and surety:—Held, upon both branches of the case, the operation of the Statute of Limitations, and the acknowledgment by a co-obligor of a bond, that the mortgagee was entitled to the legacy, and that the petition must be dismissed, but without costs. Seager v. Aston, 26 L. J., Ch. 809; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 481; 5 W. R. 548.

Conveyance to Creditor in Trust to pay Debt—Prior Term in Trustees for Payment of Debts—Administration Suit.]—A testator devised his real estate to trustees for a term of 5,000 years, to raise the deficiency of his personal estate to pay his debts and legacies, which term was to cease on the performance of the trusts. Subject thereto, he devised it to his son in fee. In 1807 the son conveyed his estate to a creditor (A.), in trust, by sale or mortgage, to raise and pay the debt. In 1811 a suit was instituted to administer the testator's real and personal estate, but A. was not made a party until 1841. He took no steps to realise his security, and obtained no payment or acknowledgment. The estate was sold, and the surplus was in court:—Held, in 1857, that A.'s claim was barred by the Statute of Limitations, and that it was not protected either by the prior term or the pending litigation. Humble v. Humble, 24 Beav. 535; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 1289.

Statute does not begin to run against Mortgage Debt so long as Trust to sell and pay Debt subsists.]—See Bennett v. Cooper, col. 281.

Arrears of Interest on Mortgage.]—Under the statute 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, s. 42, and 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 42, s. 3, a mortgagee of land whose mortgage debt and interest are secured also by a bond, or covenant, is entitled, in a foreclosure suit, to charge the mortgaged estate with arrears of interest accruing within twenty years before the institution of the suit. Du Vigier v. Lee, 2 Hare, 326; 12 L. J., Ch. 345; 7 Jur. 299.

Semble, if the debt and interest are secured only by the mortgage, the mortgagee is entitled to no more than six years' arrears of interest. Ib.

A canal company conveyed, under their common seal, the canal works and rates to mortgagee, to hold, &c., until repayment of certain money borrowed, and interest. There was no covenant to repay:—Held, under the modern Statutes of Limitations, that, although the mortgagee could recover the principal within twenty years, yet his remedy for arrears of interest was limited to six years. Hodges v. Croydon Canal Co., 3 Beav. 86.

Under s. 42 of the 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, a mortgagee, irrespective of a covenant to pay or a term to secure the payment, is entitled to six years' arrears of interest. Shaw v. Johnson, 1 Dr. & Sm. 412; 30 L. J., Ch. 646; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 1005; 4 L. T. 460; 9 W. R. 629.

So far as a covenant to pay affects the land, it is limited to six years. Ib.

Where a term is created on an express trust to secure principal and interest, the 22nd section of the 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, does not operate as a bar, and a mortgagee's right is not confined to six years. Ib.

The case is not altered where the term, though in 1819 a dry satisfied term, was in that year clothed with an express trust, and assigned for the benefit of the mortgagee. Ib.

Nor is such a term merged under 8 & 9 Vict. c. 112. Ib.

Where there is an agreement to assign a term on an express trust to secure principal and interest, which can be enforced in equity, although the deed is not executed, the court will consider such assignment as if it had been executed, and make a decree for a general account not limited to six years. Ib.

Where there is a mortgage of land, and a covenant by the mortgagor, for himself and his heirs, to pay the mortgage-money and interest, if there has been no payment for a long period, the land is only charged with six years' arrears of interest under the 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, s. 42, but twenty years' arrears may be recovered by an action on the covenant under the 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 42, s. 3. Elvy v. Norwood, 1 De G. & Sm. 240; 21 L. J., Ch. 716; 16 Jur. 493.

In such a case, in a suit by the heir of the mortgagor to redeem, the mortgagee may tack the personal liability on the covenant as against the heir. Secus, if the suit were by the mortgagor, semble. Ib.

A mortgagee, notwithstanding the interest mortgaged is reversionary, can only recover six years' arrears of interest as against the land mortgaged, although he may recover twenty years' arrears on the covenant to pay. Sinclair v. Jackson, 17 Beav. 405.

The interest on money secured by mortgage of land and by covenant being sixteen years in arrear, the mortgagee filed his bill of foreclosure against the heir of the mortgagor, raising no question of liability on the covenant, or of any right of tacking. A decree was made to take an account of what was due on the mortgage. Under the Statute of Limitations, twenty years' arrears could be recovered on the covenant, but six only as against the land. The master refused to allow the plaintiff to tack his two claims:—Held, on exceptions, that he was right. Ib.

Whether the right to tack in such a case would be different in a suit for foreclosure, from what it is in a suit for redemption, quære. Ib.

When money is secured by an ordinary mortgage by covenant and bond, the mortgagee, in a suit to foreclose, can only recover six years' arrears of interest, but the case is different when there is a trust to secure it. Round v. Bell, 30 Beav. 121; 31 L. J., Ch. 127; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 1183; 5 L. T. 15; 9 W. R. 846.

A mortgagor's estate had been administered in equity. The mortgagee, who also had a covenant and a bond from the mortgagor for securing repayment of the money, did not in that suit rely upon his covenant or bond. The mortgagor and mortgagee died. The mortgage-money, with more than twenty years' arrears of interest, was due and owing. The representatives of the mortgagee filed a bill to foreclose the equity of redemption:—Held, that, as there was no trust created to secure the repayment of the mortgage-money, and as the mortgagee might in the administration suit have recovered as a specialty creditor the amount of the arrears of interest, he was not entitled to claim more than six years' arrears of his interest in the foreclosure suit. Ib.

The assignment by a mortgagor of outstanding terms to a trustee for the purchaser is not a possession of a prior incumbrancer within the 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, s. 42, so as to entitle the mortgagee to more than six years' arrears of interest. Chinnery v. Evans, 11 H. L. Cas. 115; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 855; 11 L. T. 68; 13 W. R. 20.

A mortgagee presented a petition in the Landed Estates Court, for the sale of a minor's estate, which he did not proceed upon. A reference was afterwards made to the master, to inquire what charges affected the minor's estate, and the principal and interest due thereon:—Held, that the mortgagee was entitled to six years' interest from the date of filing his charge under the order, and not from the date of filing his petition in the Landed Estates Court. Fitzmaurice, In re, 15 Ir. Ch. R. 455.

A. and B., reversioners after a life interest in C., mortgaged their property and covenanted that interest in arrear should be capitalised, and bear interest after the same rate; and C. also assigned her life interest as a part of the security:—Held, that the covenant was good and valid; and that the mortgagee was not limited to six years' interest. Clarkson v. Henderson, 49 L. J., Ch. 289; 14 Ch. D. 348; 43 L. T. 29; 28 W. R. 907.

In the case of a mortgage of reversionary personal estate, where there is no covenant for payment of interest after the date stipulated in the deed for the repayment of the capital with interest, the court will allow to the mortgagee in a redemption or foreclosure action interest by way of damages, at the rate fixed by the deed to be paid up to the date stipulated for repayment of the capital, during the whole period, not exceeding twenty years, during which no interest has been paid; and there is no analogy between a mortgage of personal estate and one of real estate to induce the court to limit the amount of arrears of interest recoverable to six years. Mellersh v. Brown, 60 L. J., Ch. 43; 45 Ch. D. 225; 63 L. T. 189; 38 W. R. 732.

Sect. 42 of the Statute of Limitations (3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27) does not affect the right of a mortgagee who has sold under his power of sale to retain out of the proceeds more than six years' arrears of interest. Marshfield, In re, Marshfield v. Hutchings, 56 L. J., Ch. 599; 34 Ch. D. 721; 56 L. T. 694; 35 W. R. 491.

After the sale of an estate by a trustee for a mortgagee, under a power of sale:—Held, in a suit by the mortgagor to recover the surplus money, that the mortgagee could not, under the 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, retain more than six years' arrears of interest out of the purchase-money. Mason v. Broadbent, 33 Beav. 296.

Strangers to Mortgagor working mortgaged Mines by Permission of Mortgagee.]—Where B. and C. were permitted by a mortgagee not in possession of the mortgaged property (coal mines) to enter upon the working of the mines, sell the property and receive the value, in taking an account of the quantity and value of the coal wrought by B. & Co. more than six years before the bill was filed by the permission of the mortgagee, but who were strangers to the mortgagor:—Held, that the Statute of Limitations did not apply. Hood v. Easton, 2 Jur. (N.S.) 729; 4 W. R. 575.

This decision was afterwards questioned on appeal, but no judgment was given. S. C., 2 Jur. (N.S.) 917; 4 W. R. 786.

Possession of Mortgagor's Agent adverse to Mortgagor after his Bankruptcy—Subsequent Acknowledgment immaterial.]—In 1828 the plaintiff mortgaged freehold property to B., and in 1832, being about to reside abroad, he gave a full power of attorney to the defendant, who was a solicitor, to receive the rents and profits of all his property, and to apply them in payment of the incumbrances. In 1841 the plaintiff settled accounts with the defendant, shewing a large balance due to the defendant, which the plaintiff agreed to secure by a mortgage of his real estates when required. In 1845 the plaintiff became bankrupt, but his assignee did not interfere with the mortgaged property, and the defendant continued to receive the rents and profits. In 1849 the defendant took a transfer himself of B.'s mortgage, to which the plaintiff was not a party. In 1865 the defendant wrote a letter to the plaintiff expressing his readiness to settle all accounts. In 1877 the plaintiff's bankruptcy was annulled, and the plaintiff brought an action against the defendant claiming to redeem the mortgage, and claiming an account against him as mortgagee in possession, and, by amendment, as agent and trustee for him. The defendant pleaded the Statute of Limitations:—Held, that on the plaintiff's bankruptcy the defendant ceased to be the agent and attorney of the plaintiff, and did not become the agent of the assignee; and that even if the assignee would have been entitled to call upon the defendant to account, the plaintiff did not, on the annulment of the bankruptcy, succeed to the assignee's right; that the plaintiff's estate as mortgagor having ceased on the bankruptcy, the letter written to him in 1865 could not operate as an acknowledgment either of his title or that of the assignee to the equity of redemption, so as to take the case out of the Statute of Limitations; that as the assignee was barred by the statute the plaintiff was also barred, notwithstanding the annulment of the bankruptcy. The action was therefore dismissed with costs. Markwick v. Hardingham, 15 Ch. D. 339; 43 L. T. 647; 29 W. R. 361—C. A.

Assignment of Annuity to secure particular Debt—Mortgage of Leaseholds to secure general Balance—Payments in Excess of Debt.]—S., being indebted to his bankers in 1826, assigned to them an annuity of 20*l.* a year, payable during three lives and the lives and life of the survivors and survivor, for securing 200*l.*, part of his balance. S., in 1828, mortgaged to them the equity of redemption of a leasehold estate for securing his general balance of 1,500*l.* Interest was paid on the mortgage up to 1832, first, to the bankers (who became bankrupt in 1828), and afterwards to their assignees, who received the annuity until 1847, when the annuity expired; and the money thus received was more than enough to pay the 200*l.* In 1834, the first mortgagee of the leasehold estate entered into possession of the property, and remained in possession. In 1853, S. filed a bill against the mortgagee for redemption:—Held, that the payments of the annuity having exceeded the 200*l.*, must be taken to have been made in reduction of the general balance due on the mortgage, and having been made within twenty years, the same took the case out of the operation of the 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, ss. 40, 42. Staley v. Barrett, 26 L. ### 10. Vendor and Purchaser.

Possession under Agreement to Purchase—Tenancy at Will—Purchaser not a Cestui que Trust within 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, s. 7—Continuance in Possession by Widow.]—If a person who has agreed to purchase real property is let into possession, he is a tenant at will, and such tenancy at will is determined by his death; and if after his death his widow, who is also devisee of his real estate, continues in possession, this is not a continuance of his tenancy at will, so as to prevent the operation of the statute. Doe d. Stanway v. Rock, 4 Man. & G. 30; Car. & M. 549; 6 Jur. 266.

The proviso as to cestuis que trustent contained in s. 7 of 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, applies only to cases of declared and express trusts, and not to a person holding under an agreement to purchase. Ib.

—— Statute does not run against Vendor during.]—A., in 1819, agreed to purchase lands of B. for 670*l.*, and paid a deposit of 10*l.* The agreement did not contain any stipulation that A. should be let into possession, but in fact he was so, at Michaelmas, in 1819. A. continued in possession, and neither paid any more of the purchase-money nor any rent or interest; and in 1822, A. cut down timber, and in 5 Geo. 4, levied a fine with proclamations, and mortgaged the property, and after that died, leaving the property, subject to the mortgage, to his daughters:—Held, that these facts were no bar to B. in ejectment, brought within twenty years after Michaelmas, 1839; as A., coming in under an intended purchase, was, in equity, the owner of the land, with a liability to pay the purchase-money; and his cutting trees was consistent with his holding in that character, and not adversely to the rights of the vendor, to whom at law he was tenant at will. Doe d. Counsell v. Caperton, 9 Car. & P. 112.

G., under whom the defendant claimed, was let into possession twenty-two years before action, by virtue of a contract with P. for the purchase of an allotment accruing to P. under an inclosure act, which provided that a purchaser let into possession of an allotment should have the same rights as the vendor. G. paid interest on a portion of the purchase-money for some years, but never completed the purchase:—Held, that even after a lapse of twenty years his possession was not adverse to P.'s title; held, also, that it did not lie in the mouth of G., or any claiming under him, to raise as an objection to P.'s title, that the commissioners of inclosure had made no formal award. Doe d. Milburne v. Edgar, 2 Scott, 732; 2 Bing. (N.C.) 496; 1 Hodges, 437; 5 L. J., C. P. 147.

Conveyance of Wife's Land by Husband and Wife.]—If husband and wife, being seised in fee in right of the wife, convey to a purchaser by deed without fine, the wife, if she survives, and if not, her heir may, on the husband's death, recover the land, notwithstanding the purchaser may have been in possession for more than forty years. Jumpsen v. Pitchers, 13 Sim. 327. And see 1 Coll. 13; 13 L. J., Ch. 166.

Purchase from Trustee—Time does not run against Remainderman till entitled in Possession.]—In the case of a purchase from a trustee, time will run from the conveyance, unless the party was a mere trustee on express trusts. Thompson v. Simpson, 1 Dr. & War. 459.

In 1770 the lands of X. were by deed conveyed to Y., his heirs and assigns, upon the trusts therein mentioned, that is to say, to the owner thereof G. T. for life, remainder to his son H. T., his heirs and assigns. In 1771, upon the marriage of H. T. with L. N. he covenanted to convey the lands of X., amongst other, within six months after the celebration of the marriage, upon trust that the same should go and be vested in the issue of H. T. by L. N., and that such issue should also be entitled to a further sum of 1,000*l.*, to be charged on all other the real and personal estates of H. T., not therein comprised, but in such shares and proportions as H. T. should by deed or will appoint; and in default thereof, as L. N. in case she survived H. T. should by deed or will appoint, and failing such direction, in equal shares. In 1793 H. T. and L. N. levied fines of the lands of X. in which F. M. was demandant. In 1794 H. T. and the co-heirs of T. levied fines again of those lands in which F. M. was also demandant; in Hilary term, 1794, recoveries were suffered of the same lands, F. M. being tenant to the præcipe, and H. T. and his eldest son and heir-at-law R. T., who had attained his age of twenty-one years, were both vouched. In April, 1794, H. T. and F. M. sold the lands of X. to T. S.; subsequent to this sale, R. T., the eldest son of H. T., died. In 1820 H. T., who survived L. N., died without having executed his power of appointment, leaving M. N. T. his eldest surviving son. In 1837 M. N. T. and the other children of H. T. and L. N. filed their bill, praying an execution of the articles of 1771 as to the lands of X., and seeking to set aside the sale so made to T. S.:—Held, that the plaintiffs were within time, and not bound by any Statute of Limitation, and that the 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, s. 25, did not apply until the time when the party seeking the remedy himself became entitled in possession. Ib.

Conveyance operating as Disseisin of Co-Heir—Executory Trusts under Agreement for Settlement inoperative as against Purchaser.]—By marriage articles the husband agreed to settle out of the lands of K., in favour of A., his daughter by a former marriage, a jointure on his intended wife, the remainder of the lands on the issue male begotten on the wife, and in failure of issue male, on the issue female. And in case A. should survive and the lands of K. should not be made good, that then the lands of K., which were not settled on the former marriage, should be subject to the jointure, and be settled on the eldest son of the marriage, and, in failure of the eldest son on the daughters of the said marriage. There was no male issue of the marriage, but female issue B., C. and D.:—Held, that the lands of K. should be settled on them as tenants in common in tail. No settlement was executed, and the lands descended to A., B., C. and D., subject to the trusts of the articles of 1763, when B., C. and D. went into possession. In 1783 they levied a fine, and conveyed to a purchaser for value, and covenanted that they were seised in fee. There were several subsequent conveyances for value. In 1847 the lands were covenanted to be sold:—Held, in a suit for specific performance against the purchaser, that the legal title of A. and her heirs to one-fourth of the lands was barred by the Statute of Limitations, as a court of law would not notice the executory trust of the articles, and the several conveyances operated as disseisins. Stewart v. Conyngham (Marquis), 1 Ir. Ch. R. 534.

Sale of Mine—Covenants for Title and quiet Enjoyment—Whether Subsisting Lease of Coal a continuing Breach—Subsidence subsequent to Sale caused by prior Workings.]—The defendant, being seised in fee of land and coal beneath it, in 1844 let the coal, by a written agreement, to lessees for a term of twenty-five years, with power to enter and work and carry away the coal across the land, and all other powers fit and necessary for the working and carrying. The lessees entered and worked and carried away coal, and after they had ceased, the defendant, in 1845, conveyed by deed a portion of the land to J., a purchaser, who had previously been through the workings, but was not shewn to have any knowledge of the agreement or its terms. By the deed the defendant covenanted with J., his appointees, heirs and assigns for title, for quiet enjoyment, and against incumbrances. In 1846 J. appointed the portion of land to the plaintiff, a purchaser who afterwards built houses thereon, and who had no knowledge of the workings until the land and houses subsided, in 1865. The subsidence was caused by the workings which had been carried on before the conveyance to J. In 1848 the lessees entered the mine and took fire-clay, which they had no right to take, and also fragments of coal of nominal value, but these acts did not contribute to cause the subsidence. In 1867, the plaintiff, as appointee of J., sued the defendant on the covenants, the declaration alleging as breaches of the covenants for title and quiet enjoyment, that after the plaintiff became seised, the lessees entered and worked, whereby the damage was caused:—Held, that the benefit of the covenants passed to the plaintiff as appointee. Spoor v. Green. 43 L. J., Ex. 57; L. R. 9 Ex. 92; 30 L. T. 393; 22 W. R. 547.

Held, also, that the variance between the declaration and the proof as to the time of working was fatal. Ib.

Held, also, per Bramwell, B., that, assuming the agreement to be a breach of the covenant for title, it was not a continuing breach, and that the action was barred by the Statute of Limitations. Contra, per Kelly, C.B., that the true cause of action was the subsidence, and that the Statute of Limitations was no bar, and that the plaintiff, therefore, would, but for the variance, be entitled to the damages caused by the subsidence; also that, so long as the agreement subsisted, there was a continuing breach which rendered the land of less value; and that the acts of the lessees in 1848 constituted a breach of the covenant for quiet enjoyment; and that the plaintiff was entitled to nominal damages. Ib.

By s. 6, an administrator's title shall be deemed for the purposes of the statute to date from the death.*

Administrator de bonis non—Property by mistake in Possession of Heir.]—The Statute of Limitations is no bar to a claim made by the administrator de bonis non of an intestate, where property has been taken possession of by his heir at law, being also his administrator under a mistake as to its real nature. Reed v. Fenn, 35 L. J., Ch. 464; 14 W. R. 704.

Administration—Trusts of Realty.]—Length of time, how far a bar in equity to an account. Though stale accounts are discouraged, yet an administratrix who is to see to the execution of a trust out of real estate, cannot take advantage of length of time elapsed. It lies on her to shew the trust executed. Pomfret v. Windsor (Lord), 2 Ves. 483.

—— Chattel Interest in Land—Running of Time.]—Under the Statute of Limitations, 1833 (3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27), s. 6, time begins to run as against an administrator claiming a chattel interest in land from the date of the death of the intestate, and not from the date of the grant of administration. Williams, In re, Davies v. Williams, 56 L. J., Ch. 123; 34 Ch. D. 558; 55 L. T. 633; 35 W. R. 182.

—— Retrospective Operation of Statute—"Present Right to Receive."]—The operation of 23 & 24 Vict. c. 38, s. 13, is retrospective, so that the limitation of twenty years "next after a present right to receive the same shall have accrued" thereby imposed (in analogy to 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, s. 40) upon claims to recover a personal estate of "any person dying intestate, possessed by the legal personal representative of such intestate," is not confined to the case of persons dying intestate after the 31st of December, 1860, the time fixed by the section for commencement of the operation of the enactment. Accordingly, a claim by next of kin for general administration of the estate of an intestate who died in 1848 was barred at the end of twenty-one years from that date; and leave to revive an administration suit relating to the same estate in which no proceeding had been taken since the decree in 1855 was refused. But with respect to assets of the intestate not received by the administrator until 1870 (more than twenty years after the death, and within twenty years before the issue of the writ) the claim of the next of kin to administration limited to such assets, was not barred; there being no "present right to receive" on the part of the next of kin until the assets had been actually recovered by the administrator. Johnson, In re, Sly v. Blake, 29 Ch. D. 964; 52 L. T. 682; 33 W. R. 502.

—— Part Payment.]—Part payment by the administrator out of a particular asset which has so fallen in will not revive the right to sue for general administration which was at the time of payment barred by statute. Ib.

Action on Bond by Assignee in Insolvency of Obligee against Administrator of deceased Obligor.]—See Sturgis v. Darell, col. 318.

"Present Right to Receive" Legacy—Lunacy of Executor—Same Hand to Pay and Receive.]—By a will of a testator who died in 1827, of which W. was sole executor, a legacy was bequeathed to E., who died in 1830, having bequeathed her residuary personal estate to W. E.'s will was proved in 1835 by W., who was afterwards found to be a lunatic from the 3rd December, 1840. On the 12th October, 1848, administration with the will annexed of the testator's estate during the lunacy was granted to M. W. died in 1857, and in December, 1858, a bill was filed for the administration of his estate. The legacy had never been paid. The Statute of Limitations, which applies to the recovery of legacies, passed in 1833:—Held, that a present right to receive the legacy, within 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, s. 40, did not accrue to any one until the administration granted to M. in October, 1848; and hence, that the right to sue for the legacy was not barred. Binns v. Nichols, 35 L. J., Ch. 635; L. R. 2 Eq. 256; 14 W. R. 727.

Where the person liable for the payment of a legacy, and the person entitled to receive it, are the same, no question of limitation under the statute can arise. Ib.

Devise subject to Legacies, not a Trust—"Present Right to Receive."]—A devise subject to legacies does not create a trust for payment so as to take the case out of the 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, s. 40. Proud v. Proud, 32 Beav. 234; 32 L. J., Ch. 125; 7 L. T. 553; 11 W. R. 101.

The existence of prior charges upon the property upon which a legacy is charged will not prevent "a present right to receive" from accruing within the act. Ib.

Assent to Gift of Residue by Executor.]—An executor, by assenting to a bequest of residue, does not thereby constitute himself a trustee of the fund so as to prevent the operation of the Statute of Limitations. Rowe, In re, Jacobs v. Hind, 58 L. J., Ch. 703; 61 L. T. 581—C. A.

Assent to Legacy by Executor—Implied Trust.]—The provision of s. 8 of the Real Property Limitation Act, 1874, limiting the time for bringing an action or other proceeding to recover any legacy to a period of twelve years next after the accruer of a present right to receive the same, is not prevented from applying by the circumstance that the executor has assented to the legacy, or that the legacy is coupled with an implied trust. Davis, In re, Evans v. Moore, 61 L. J., Ch. 85; [1891] 3 Ch. 119; 65 L. T. 128; 39 W. R. 627—C. A.

Possession of Farm under Bequest in Will not adverse to Legacies charged on it—Possession of Executor named in, but not proving, Will.]—D. M., who died in 1873, by his will appointed X. and Y. his executors, bequeathed his farm of 140 acres, held from year to year, to his widow, and bequeathed certain legacies charged thereon. Neither executor proved. The widow went into possession, managed the farm, supported her family, and paid off some of the legacies. In May, 1880, the widow (by arrangement with X. and with the landlord's consent) surrendered the farm to the landlord, and was thereupon reinstated as tenant of portion (sixty acres), the remainder being let to X. as tenant from year to year. In 1887 H. M., a legatee, obtained letters of administration (X. and his co-executor being cited but not appearing), and now by writ dated January 29, 1892, brought ejectment on title against the widow and X. X. defended, pleading the Statute of Limitations. On new trial motion:—Held, that the widow having entered under the will to carry out its intentions could not rely upon the statute, and that therefore X. could not rely upon any portion of the widow's possession to assist his title. Per Holmes and Gibson, JJ., that X., being the executor named in, though he did not prove, the will, could not rely upon his own possession as a defence under the statute. Molony v. Molony, [1894] 2 Ir. R. 1.

Right against Realty, when Debt barred against Personalty.] — Semble, that if the remedy of a creditor against the personal estate is barred, while his remedy against the real estate has been kept alive, the real estate can be made liable, although there is no legal personal representative. Boatwright v. Boatwright, 43 L. J., Ch. 12; L. R. 17 Eq. 71; 29 L. T. 603; 22 W. R. 147.

Charitable Legacies—No Trust where no Fund set apart—Admission of Assets.]—A testatrix gave property, consisting partly of realty and partly of personalty, over which she had a power of appointment, and also all her own property, to three gentlemen, whom she also appointed her executors, upon trust to pay the income to her daughter for life, and after her daughter's death upon trust to pay several charitable legacies, and she constituted her executors residuary legatees. On a bill, filed nearly thirty years after her death, to obtain payment of one of the legacies:—Held, that the legacy was barred by the statute, and that there was no trust so as to take it out of the operation of the statute, inasmuch as there had been no fund set apart for the payment of it. Cadbury v. Smith, L. R. 9 Eq. 37; 24 L. T. 52; 18 W. R. 105.

The executors paid the amount of one of the charitable legacies as a gift from themselves, but they obtained a receipt for the amount, releasing them from all liability in respect of the legacy:—Held, notwithstanding the release, that this was not an admission of assets to pay all the legacies. Ib.

After the death of one of the executors, his representatives paid the surviving executor 700*l.* as his share of the residuary estate :—Held, that this did not amount to an admission of assets for payment of the legacies in full, but only to an admission that there would have been so much money applicable towards payment of the legacies if they had not been barred by the statute. Ib.

Lunacy of Executor.]—A legatee, after the lapse of twenty-three years, sent in a claim for his legacy. The surviving executrix had, during part of the time, been a lunatic :—Held, that her lunacy was no bar to the statute running. Boldero v. Halpin, Hawes, Ex parte, 19 W. R. 320.

Claim for unpaid Legacy—Recovery of Principal, but only Six Years' Interest.]—A testator gave a fund to his executrix for her life, subject to the immediate payment thereout of a legacy to be divided amongst the children of P., to whom he also gave the fund after the death of the executrix. He died in 1847. One of P.'s children, of whom there had been five, was last heard of in 1845. The executrix, W., retained one-fifth of the legacy. She became lunatic in 1851, whereupon the fund was carried to an account entitled "The account of W. and the children of P.," and the income of the whole was applied for the benefit of the lunatic. To a petition presented in 1871 by the four surviving children, for payment of the fifth share, which remained unpaid out of the fund, and for the payment of the interest thereon out of another fund belonging absolutely to the lunatic, it was objected that the Statute of Limitations was a bar :—Held, that the statute was no bar to the claim for the principal, but was a bar to the claim for more than six years' interest. Walker, In re, 41 L. J., Ch. 219 ; L. R. 7 Ch. 120 ; 25 L. T. 775 ; 20 W. R. 171.

Interest on Legacies.]—See Dinsdale v. Dudding ; Hughes v. Williams ; Holland v. Clarke ; and Gough v. Bult, col. 329.

Legacies charged on Real Estate.] — Held, under the circumstances of the case, to be payable, notwithstanding the lapse of more than forty years from the testator's death to the filing of the bill, the statute 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, not being applicable. Ravenscroft v. Frisby, 1 Coll. 16 ; 13 L. J., Ch. 153.

Legacy charged on Land, although a Trust, is within the Statute.]—See Knox v. Kelly, col. 280.

Legacies payable out of Personalty.]—The 40th section of the Statute of Limitations (3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27) applies to legacies payable out of personal estate as well as to legacies charged on real estate. Sheppard v. Duke, 9 Sim. 567 ; 8 L. J., Ch. 228 ; 3 Jur. 168.

Charge of Debts on Realty in Executor's Will —Statute-barred Legacy not included.] — An executor who had possessed assets sufficient to pay a legacy died leaving it unpaid, but having by will charged his real estate with payment of his debts. The legacy, as such, was barred by time, the twenty years having elapsed at the filing of the bill :—Held, that it could not be claimed as a debt under the charge. Pigott v. Jefferson, 12 Sim. 26 ; 5 Jur. 196.

Debt kept out of Statute by Devise for Payment of Debts.]—See Rendell v. Carpenter, col. 95.

Devise in Trust to sell and divide the Produce —Whether Claim against Executor's Estate for Share of Produce barred by Statute.]—A testator devised his real estate to trustees, upon trust to sell, and divide the produce amongst certain persons, of whom A. was one. He appointed A. and B. his executors, who proved the will in 1816. A. died in the following year, and administration to his estate was taken out by D. in 1850. B., the other executor, died in 1849, after appointing C. his executor. The administrator of A. filed a claim against the executor of B. for A.'s share of the purchase-money of the original testator's real estate. The court refused to decide, on a claim after so long a time, whether the plaintiff was barred by the statute, but dismissed the same, with costs, without prejudice to a suit by bill. Pawsey v. Barnes, 20 L. J., Ch. 393 ; 15 Jur. 943.

Whether the share was a sum charged on or payable out of land within the 40th section of the statute 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, quære. Ib.

Right in Remainder to Legacy—When Statute runs against.]—When a legacy, charged upon the residuary real estate, was bequeathed to trustees, for B. for life, and after his death for his children, and there was not, during his life, from 1806 to 1863, any payment made on account of the legacy, by any trustee capable of giving a discharge for it :—Held, that the Statute of Limitations did not begin to run against the children until the death of B. Carroll v. Hargrave, Ir. R. 5 Eq. 23.

Legacy charged on Realty if Personalty deficient—No Trust if Personalty sufficient.]—A bill for a legacy stated that the testatrix, who died in 1805, by her last will, made in 1803, directed that as to a sum of 10,000*l.* charged by settlement on real estate (and payable to her, her executors and administrators, after the death of Mrs. O., but the interest thereof to be payable out of the rents and profits during the lifetime of Mrs. O.), her trustees should raise so much thereof as should be sufficient to pay her debts and legacies, after applying whatever money and other personal estate she should die possessed of in discharge thereof :—Held, upon demurrer, that the charge on the real estate for debts, &c., being only contingent upon the event of the personal estate of which the testator died possessed proving insufficient, and there being no allegation that the said personal estate was deficient, it did not appear that the realty was at all liable, nor that there was any trust thereof to prevent the operation of the Statute of Limitations against the plaintiff's demand. Cocking v. Golding, 4 Ir. Eq. R. 169.

Suit against Executor for Account of Money bequeathed on Trust, not a Suit for a Legacy.]—A suit to make an executor account for a sum of money which had been bequeathed to him by his testator upon certain trusts, and which had been saved by the executor from the testator's personal estates, and the interest of which had for a time been applied upon the trusts of the will, is not a suit to recover a legacy, within the meaning of the Statute of Limitations. 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27. Phillipo v. Munnings, 2 Myl. & C. 309.

Bequest of Residue, a Legacy.]—A residue bequeathed by will is clearly within the provisions of the statute 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, s. 40. Prior v. Hornihlow, 2 Y. & Coll. 200.

In 1780 the interest of a sum of money was bequeathed to A. for life, and after her decease the principal to her daughter, B. Between 1784 and 1795, proceedings in chancery, in which A. and B. were parties, were instituted against the executor, and a decree for an account was obtained, which was not acted upon. From that time till 1828, no application was made by B. for her legacy, nor did it appear that A. had of late years received her interest. On the other hand, it was stated by the representatives of the executor, and from circumstances it appeared probable, that the legacy was paid by the executor many years ago to A. and B. jointly, or to one of them with the consent of the other:—Held, nevertheless, that payment of the legacy in the mode suggested could not be presumed, such mode of payment being contrary to the presumed duty of an executor:—Held, also, that A. not dying till 1830, B.'s claim was not barred by Statute of Limitations. Ib.

Semble, that a residue is a legacy within the meaning of the 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, s. 40. Christian v. Devereux, 12 Sim. 264.

Claims by Legatees—Fund set apart to provide Annuity.]—When a fund is set apart to answer an annuity, the Statute of Limitations cannot be set up against the residuary legatee on the death of the annuitant forty years afterwards; but it can as against a pecuniary legatee, whose legacy was payable on the testator's death. Bright v. Larcher, 27 Beav. 130.

A testator who died in 1822, by will, gave to his brother B. a legacy of 100*l.*, to be paid "as soon as conveniently may be after my decease." He then gave an annuity of 50*l.* to H., to be payable out of his real estate, until one of the testator's nephews should attain twenty-one, and on the happening of that event, he directed his real estate to be exonerated from the annuity, and his real and personal estate sold, and the annuity to be paid out of the income of the produce. He declared that after the nephew attained twenty-one, the annuity should be charged only on his personal estate. In 1839 the nephew came of age, and the real estate was sold, and the whole income paid to H. in part of her annuity, until 1856, when she died. In 1858 B., the legatee, filed a bill for payment out of the trust fund, alleging that the personalty was not sufficient, but no personal representative of the testator was made a party. Romilly, M.R., dismissed the bill on the grounds that the legacy was not charged on real estate, and that it was barred by the 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27:—Held, on appeal, that the personal estate was the primary fund, which there was no evidence was sufficient; that there was no personal representative of the testator before the court, and that by lapse of time the bill came too late. S. C., 28 L. J., Ch. 5 Jur. (N.S.) 1233; 7 W. R. 658—L.JJ.

Claim to Share of Residue.]—Parties claiming a portion of the residue held not barred after twenty years' delay, either by statute or by laches, the fund still existing as a trust fund, and all parties having acted under a misconception of rights. Downes v. Bullock, 25 Beav. 54.

Legacy for Life or absolute in Particular Events—Time does not run during Legatee's Life.]—By will, dated in 1829, a testator gave to A. 800*l.* "to enable him to take his father's farm after his decease, if the landlord will consent, or to place him in any other situation which the trustees might think fit"; and if not, then the interest was to be paid to A. for life, with remainder to his son, if he should have any. The testator died the same year. In 1831 A. went to America, where he died intestate and unmarried in 1854. No part of the legacy or interest was ever paid to A., or applied for his benefit. In 1856 A.'s administrator filed a suit for the legacy, with interest since the testator's decease:—Held, that the Statute of Limitations was no bar. Lord v. Lord, 3 Jur. (N.S.) 485.

Bequest of Residue in Trust for Children—Legacy or Trust—Laches.]—In 1783 a testator bequeathed the residue of his estate upon trust for his five children equally at twenty-one, of whom the plaintiff was one. In 1799 the plaintiff attained twenty-one, and in 1800 married. Disputes arose as to the amount of her share. In 1807 one of the trustees, D., wrote to the husband to state that the share of the wife amounted to 1,139*l.*, "which sum I have placed out so as to pay you 5*l.* per cent. interest; the principal you can have at any time by giving notice. I shall be glad to hear from you in respect to this." The husband never answered the letter. In 1829-30 the plaintiff attempted to enter into correspondence with D. (then the surviving trustee), but D. refused to answer her inquiries, stating that he would answer the husband only, whom he considered the proper person. In May, 1844, D. died, leaving the defendant his sole executor. In October, 1844, the husband, ignorant of D.'s decease, addressed him on the subject. The defendant opened the letter, and, as soon as he understood the claim, utterly rejected it. In 1850 the defendant finished distributing his testator's estate. In 1855 the plaintiff's husband died, and thereupon she filed a bill against the defendant, as the executor of the last surviving trustee, claiming the 1,139*l.*, and interest since 1807, as her chose in action, coming to her by survivorship. There was not the slightest evidence that either principal or interest had ever been received:—Held, that such a suit, if a suit for a legacy, was barred by laches, by analogy to the statute; if a bill for enforcing a trust, it ought to be a bill by the husband's representative, as for his fund reduced into possession in 1807, and in such case ought also to be barred by laches. Freeman v. Dowding, 2 Jur. (N.S.) 1014.

Executor constituting himself Trustee for Legatee.]—An executor, in his residuary account, stated that he had retained in trust the amount of A.'s legacy. He afterwards paid over the residue:—Held, that the executor had constituted himself a trustee for A., and that his remedy for recovery was not barred by the Statute of Limitations, or the lapse of time. Tyson v. Jackson, 30 Beav. 384.

Held, also, that the legal personal representative of the testator was not a necessary party to a suit to recover the legacy against the assets of the executor. Ib.

Legatee of Reversionary Interest not barred during Life Interest of Executor.]—When an executor takes, under his testator's will, a life interest in a term, the legatee of a reversionary interest, commencing on the determination of that life interest, may, upon its determination, and on assent having been given, sue to recover the land, even though the executor might himself have been barred by the Statute of Limitations. Quinton v. Frith, Ir. R. 2 Eq. 396.

Residuary Legatee precluded by Certificate in Administration Suit from setting up Statute.]—In an administration suit instituted by a residuary legatee more than twenty years after the testator's death, the chief clerk's certificate found that certain legacies remained unpaid; and, by the order on further consideration, liberty was given to any persons claiming to be entitled to the legacies to apply as to their payment. The legatees, who were not parties to the suit, having applied under the order for payment of their legacies:—Held, that the residuary legatee was precluded by the certificate and order from setting up the Statute of Limitations. Prowse v. Spurgin, 37 L. J., Ch. 251; L. R. 5 Eq. 99; 17 L. T. 590; 16 W. R. 413.

Time a Bar to re-opening Accounts between Executor and Residuary Legatee unless Breach of Trust proved against Executor.]—Where upwards of twenty years had elapsed after an executor had settled the accounts of his testator's estate with the residuary legatee, and had given up all interference in the trust, it was held that the onus was on the residuary legatee to prove that the conduct of the executor was a breach of trust, as it was alleged to be by retainer of the assets in trade; and that the onus was not shifted by an admission that the account was settled on a misunderstanding of the rights of the parties, by which the residuary legatee was prejudiced. Portlock v. Gardner, 1 Hare, 594; 11 L. J., Ch. 313; 6 Jur. 795.

Right of Residuary Legatee to recover Assets, if possessed by Executor within Twenty Years.]—More than twenty years after the death of a testator, the representative of one of his executors, and the residuary legatee under his will, filed a bill against the representative of his co-executor, to recover residuary assets of the testator, alleged to have been possessed by the co-executor. The plaintiffs are barred by the statute 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, s. 40, as to assets possessed by the executor more than twenty years before the filing of the bill; but they are not barred as to assets possessed by him since that time. Adams v. Barry, 2 Coll. 290.

Neglect of Executors to convert Leaseholds—Time does not run against Remaindermen during Estates for Life.]—Where the testatrix directed her whole property to be converted, and the executors allowed the successive tenants for life to receive the rents of leasehold until the determination of the lease, after whose deaths the plaintiffs as remaindermen filed a bill for a general account:—Held, that they were not barred by the lapse of time in not having filed their bill until their interests came into possession, and that the defendants were liable for the value of the lease at the time when it ought to have been converted, viz. one year after the testatrix's death, regard being had to the actual enjoyment had under it, it being no answer that by defect of title in the lessor, the lease was invalid. Mehrtens v. Andrews, 3 Beav. 72.

Distribution of Personalty by Executors without providing for Mortgage Debt.]—See Gale, In re, Blake v. Gale; Hyatt, In re; and Marsden, In re, cols. 51, 52; and Leahy v. De Moleyns, col. 220.

Executor's Right to an Account.]—See Smith v. O'Grady, col. 54.

Customary Tenement—Possession of Purchaser from Devisee—Equitable Title of Devisee's Heir barred.]—A testatrix devised a customary tenement to J. without words limiting the inheritance. Upon her death the dormant surrenderee, in whom the legal estate was, surrendered the fee to J., and J. died more than forty years before the filing of the bill, having surrendered the tenement to a purchaser, who had notice of the will of the testatrix:—Held, that the equitable title of the heir which accrued on the death of J., was barred by length of time. Collard v. Hare, 2 Russ. & M. 675.

Claim under Will barred by Possession under Compromise.]—A. devised lands to M., with a recommendation that these and other lands should be settled in such manner as to continue in the male line of the family, and in their name and blood to go to the several branches in succession according to seniority, and in the usual course of limitation in family settlements. A. died in 1776, leaving M. his heir-at-law. M. treated the lands as his own property, never made a settlement, and died in 1816, intestate, and without issue, leaving H. and C. his co-heiresses-at-law, and also the co-heiresses of A. At the death of M., X. was the person who, if a settlement had been made giving successive life estates to the brothers and nephews of A. in esse at the time of his death, with remainders in tail to their issue male, would have been entitled to the first estate in possession as tenant for life, with remainder to his first and other sons in tail. H. and C. disputed X.'s claim, but a compromise was made, which was carried out by a deed of 1820. By this deed, which recited that X. was the only surviving male descendant entitled under the trusts of A.'s will, and that he would be entitled (if at all) to an estate for life, with remainder to his first and other sons in tail male, leaving the reversion in H. and C., who conveyed the lands to X. for life, remainder to his first and other sons in tail male; remainder to X. in fee; and X. granted annuities to H. and C., and undertook to indemnify them against certain debts. X. died without issue male, in 1834, having devised the lands to the respondents. The petitioner claimed to be entitled, under the limitations in the will of A.:—Held, that the claim was barred by the Statute of Limitations. Malone v. O'Connor, 9 Ir. Ch. R. 459.

Possession of Younger Sons, of Property acquired subsequently to Will, adverse to Heir.]—A testator, after appointing certain settled estates to his eldest son, gave all his other real and personal estate, charged with his debts, to his executors, in trust, for his six younger sons absolutely. After the date of his will, a freehold estate was conveyed to him, and he died in 1791, without having republished his will, leaving his eldest son of full age. After the death of the testator, the younger sons entered into receipt of the rents of the subsequently acquired property, and continued in such receipt, without any adverse claim having been made, until 1819, when the eldest son died, leaving an infant heir. From 1819 no claim was made on behalf of the infant, and the younger sons continued in the uninterrupted receipt of the rents. In 1839 the subsequently acquired property was sold under a decree in a suit instituted by a judgment creditor of the testator, to which the infant heir of the eldest son was a party. The heir of the eldest son died after the lands were sold, and after attaining majority, and no bill of revivor was filed against the next heir. The purchaser objected to the title, on the ground that the title of the testator's heir was not shewn to be extinguished, and that there was no person to convey the legal estate:—Held, that a good title was made out under the recent Statute of Limitations (3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27). Scott v. Nixon, 6 Ir. Eq. R. 8; 3 Dr. & War. 388; 2 Con. & L. 185.

Held, also, that it was no objection to the title that the facts constituting adverse possession were proved by affidavits, and in the absence of the heir. Ib.

The circumstance that the property was in lease when the adverse possession commenced, and that an arrear of rent was allowed to accumulate for several years, does not prevent the statute from running. Ib.

Heir barred as to Realty disposed of by Testator's Trustees before Heir ascertained.]—A testator died in 1821, having devised and bequeathed his real and personal estate to trustees upon certain trusts. In 1826 a bill was filed for the execution of the trust as to the personal estate. In 1847 a supplemental bill was filed, raising questions on the will, as to the real estate, in which the heir, who was then unknown, was interested; and in 1849 another supplemental bill was filed to bring the heir, who was then ascertained, before the court:—Held, that the heir was barred, by lapse of time, from claiming the real estate adversely to the trustees; but that he was not barred from claiming part of the real estate as being, in the events that had happened, undisposed of and held by the trustees, in trust for him. Simmons v. Rudall, 1 Sim. 12. PERSONS CLAIMING UNDER LANDS CLAUSES AND OTHER ACTS.

Possessory Title sufficient.]—A person shewing title by adverse possession for twenty-six years after the expiration of a term for 192 years to land taken under the provisions of the Lands Clauses Act, 1845, will, in the absence of any claim by, or evidence of the existence of, the reversioner, be deemed to be the owner of the land, and entitled to the purchase-money under the Lands Clauses Act, 1845, s. 79. Metropolitan Street Improvement Act, 1877, In re, Chamberlain, Ex parte, 49 L. J., Ch. 354; 14 Ch. D. 323; 42 L. T. 358; 28 W. R. 565.

Purchase-Money of Land compulsorily taken in Court—Petition for Payment out—Running of Statute—Fraud and Misrepresentation.]—In 1814 W. died intestate seised of a freehold estate. On his death his widow entered into possession, and continued to receive the rents until 1829. W.'s heir-at-law died in 1822. In 1829 the property was taken under an act of parliament, and the purchase-money was paid into court. Upon a petition in 1829, by the widow and J., the heir of the heir-at-law of W., the rents were ordered to be paid to the widow for her life, and then to J. for his life. The widow died in 1834, and J. died in 1863. Upon a petition by those claiming under the will of J. for payment of the money out of court, a claim was made by the devisees of the heir-at-law of W., who alleged fraud and misrepresentation by the petitioners in 1829:—Held, that their claim was barred by lapse of time, and that they could not set up the case of fraud upon the petition; but leave was given them to file a bill, the order upon the petition not to be drawn up for ten days. Breach, Ex parte, 10 Jur. 13. PERSONS UNDER DISABILITIES.

See also ante, A, IV. 9 (col. 60), A, IV. 10 (col. 62), and A, IV. 13 (col. 65).

By the Real Property Limitation Act, 1874, ss. 3, 5, 9 (replacing or amending ss. 16, 17, 18, of 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27), any infant, person under coverture, or of unsound mind, or person claiming through them, may recover any land or rent within six years from the ceasing of the disability, or from the death of the person under disability, but, at all events, within thirty years from the right accruing. By s. 4, no time is to be allowed by reason of the plaintiff's absence beyond seas. By 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, s. 18, no further time is to be allowed through another person's disability on death of one under disability.

Statute Retrospective.]—Sect. 16 of 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, is so far retrospective as to extend to a case where the first person under disability died before the passing of the act. Devine v. Holloway, 14 Moore, P. C. 290; 4 L. T. 190; 9 W. R. 642.

Sect. 16 is applicable to cases of residence in Ireland before the passing of the statute, if the controversy has not arisen till after the passing of it. Hasell, Ex parte, 3 Y. & C. 617; 3 Jur. 1101.

Infancy.]—See Scott v. Nixon, col. 150.

—— Before the Statute.]—Before 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, s. 16, when the ancestor died, leaving a son and a daughter infants; and on the death of the ancestor a stranger entered, and the son soon after went to sea, and was supposed to have died abroad within age:—Held, that the daughter was not entitled to twenty years to make her entry after the death of her brother, but only to ten years; more than twenty years having, in the whole, elapsed since the death of the person last seised. Doe d. George v. Jesson, 6 East, 80; 2 Smith, 236; 8 R. R. 408.

—— Sale of Real Estate of which Infants Part Owners—Purchaser with Notice of Infants' Interest—Infants not Barred.]—Real estate was held in undivided shares by several persons as tenants in common in fee, and all of such tenants in common, except the holders of one share, were sui juris, and owners of the legal and equitable estates and interests in their respective shares in their own right. The remaining share was vested in trustees upon trusts to apply the income or such part thereof as they should think expedient for the benefit of two infants during minority, and for them absolutely upon their attaining twenty-one. In 1868 the property was by a deed, to which all the owners who were sui juris were parties, as were also nominally the infants, conveyed to a purchaser for value, with notice of the infants' interest; and the deed contained a declaration that N. (who was a party thereto for that purpose) should stand possessed of a sum representing the infants' share of the purchase-money upon trusts for their benefit during their infancy, and if within one month after coming of age they should execute the deed, or otherwise convey their interest to the purchaser, then in trust for them absolutely, but if not, then in trust for the purchaser absolutely. The infants came of age in 1884 and 1885 respectively, but did not execute the deed or otherwise convey their interest as aforesaid. The purchaser and his assigns having been in possession since the date of the deed, an action was brought in 1889 by a person claiming under one of the infants to recover her share from assigns of the purchaser. The defendants contended that, at the time of the conveyance of 1868, the infants had no estate, the share in dispute being vested in trustees, with discretionary powers for their benefit merely; that those trustees were barred by lapse of time, under the Real Property Limitation Act, 1874, and that consequently the infants (and those claiming under them) were also barred, and could not recover the share:—Held, that the purchaser under the deed of 1868 having entered into possession with full notice and knowledge of the infant's rights, the claim was not barred by the statute. Semble, that he would also be treated as not being in adverse possession at all, but merely in right of the infants, and not, therefore, as in a position to set up the statute against them or their assigns. Young v. Harris, 65 L. T. 45.

—— Entry of Father upon Infant Son's Real Estate—As Guardian, not as Trespasser.]—In 1832 an infant became entitled to real estate in fee, and his father entered into possession. In 1836 he attained his majority. In 1852 the father died, having continued in possession of the property down to the time of his death. In 1854 he filed a bill against the devisees of his father for an account of the rents and profits:—Held, that the entry of his father in 1832 must be taken to have been as his guardian and not as a trespasser; and the statute, therefore, could not be set up successfully. Thomas v. Thomas, 2 Kay & J. 79; 25 L. J., Ch. 159; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 1160; 4 W. R. 135.

—— Time runs against Infant Devisee from Full Age and Testator's Death, not from Discovery of Will.]—A testator (whose will was not discovered for fifteen years after his death) died in 1847, leaving his devisee an infant, who attained full age in 1852:—Held, in an ejectment brought in 1869 by the devisee against the grantees of the heir-at-law, that by the lapse of twenty years from the death of the testator, and of ten years from the time of the devisee's attaining full age, his right was barred by the statute. Lambert v. Browne, Ir. R. 5 C. L. 218.

—— Neglect to enter when of Age.]—An infant who neglects to enter six years after he comes of age, is as much barred by the Statute of Limitations from bringing a bill for an account of profits, as he is from an action of account at common law. Lockey v. Lockey, Pre. Ch. 518.

—— Infant claiming through Mother as Tenant in Tail barred, if no Possession by either for Twelve Years.]—See Murray v. Watkins, col. 171.

—— Marriage during Infancy—Ten Years from Removal of Second Disability.]—When the person to whom the right to make an entry or to bring an action for the recovery of land accrues is under a disability, and before the removal of that disability the same person falls under another disability, the 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, s. 16, preserves his right to bring an action until ten years after the removal of the latter disability. Borrows v. Ellison, 40 L. J., Ex. 131; L. R. 6 Ex. 128; 24 L. T. 365; 19 W. R. 850.

In 1833 the plaintiff became entitled to land, which the defendant then entered into possession of, and continued to occupy until action brought. At the time when the plaintiff's title accrued she was an infant; she married under age, and continued under coverture until the time of bringing her action in 1870. In an action by herself and her husband in her right to recover the land:—Held, that the action was maintainable notwithstanding that more than twenty years had elapsed since the title accrued, and more than ten years since the removal of the disability of infancy. Ib. See also Pelley v. Bascombe, col. 272.

Coverture—Adverse Possession for Forty Years during.]—Land was devised in 1774 by a man to his wife in fee, and after having married again, she lived on the property with her second husband for nine or ten years, and then went to reside elsewhere, and they were never afterwards in possession, but under what circumstances they left was never explained. The wife died in 1828, before the husband, who survived until 1832:—Held, that the heir of the wife was barred by the adverse possession of above forty years; though the wife was always under the disability of coverture, and her husband had a tenancy by the curtesy during his life, and it was admitted that no fine had been levied. Doe d. Corby v. Branston, 4 N. & M. 664; 3 A. & E. 63; 1 H. & W. 162; 4 L. J., K. B. 166.

Absence and Parties Abroad.]—The 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, was adopted in New South Wales by a colonial act. In 1796 H. purchased lands in New South Wales, and afterwards left that colony, putting two servants, T. and R., in possession as tenants at will, who continued in possession until 1847, when other parties obtained possession under a title from T. and R. H. continued absent from the colony, and died in 1833. H.'s heir-at-law was then in America, and was residing there in 1857, when he brought an ejectment in the colony to recover possession of the lands:—Held, first, that T. and R. were tenants at will, and that such tenancy at will ended at H.'s death in 1833. Hogan v. Hand, 14 Moo. P. C. 310; 4 L. T. 565; 9 W. R. 673.

Held, secondly, that H.'s heir-at-law being beyond the seas when the right of entry accrued upon H.'s death, he was entitled to the benefit of s. 16 of the 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, which, in the case of a person beyond seas at the time when his title accrued, saved his right for ten years after the twenty years given by the 2nd section, and that his action having been brought within thirty years, he was not barred. Ib.

N. died in 1830, in New South Wales, seised of real estate in that colony. E., his heir-at-law, lived in Ireland, and died there in 1837. J., the heir of E., and also of N., likewise lived in Ireland, and in 1856 went to New South Wales and brought an ejectment there to recover the land of which N. died seised. The 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, had been adopted in the colony:—Held, that the 1 Jac. I. c. 16 (which had been introduced into the colony by 9 Geo. 4, c. 83, s. 24), was repealed by 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, and that J.'s right of action was barred by ss. 2 and 16. Devine v. Holloway, 14 Moo. P. C. 290; 4 L. T. 190; 9 W. R. 642.

A bill filed in 1850, to set aside for fraud a limitation under a deed of 1818, by which the reversion in lands was limited to the defendant for life, stated that the defendant went to America in 1822, to avoid service of subpœna, and there concealed herself, which prevented the grantor from taking proceedings to set aside the deed, and that the grantor devised the said lands to the use of the plaintiff for life, "with remainder as therein," and also devised the residue of his estate to the plaintiff absolutely:—Held, on demurrer, that lapse of time was not a bar to the plaintiff; and that she might, as devisee, maintain a suit to set aside the deed without making the heir-at-law of the grantor a party. Johnston v. Howison, 13 Ir. Eq. R. 463.

—— Possessory Law of Jamaica—No Exception in favour of Absentees.]—See Beckford v. Wade, col. 152.

Lunacy.]—A legatee, after the lapse of twenty-three years, sent in a claim for his legacy. The surviving executrix had, during part of the time, been a lunatic:—Held, that her lunacy was no bar to the statute running. Boldero v. Halpin, Hawes, Ex parte, 19 W. R. 320.

Disability after Statute has commenced to run.]—The time which is incurred in the lifetime of the ancestor, shall run against the infant. Franco v. Alvares, 3 Atk. 346.

Estate tail, to A., remainder in tail to B., remainder to C. A. dies, then B. dies within twenty years, and C. becomes entitled in possession, being at the time under disability:—Held, that the statute 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, ss. 21 and 22, commenced running against C. from the death of A., and that having commenced to run, C. was not saved from its operation under the 16th section, by being under disability when her right accrued in possession. Goodall v. Skerratt, 3 Drew. 216; 24 L. J., Ch. 323; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 57; 2 Eq. R. 295; 2 W. R. 152.

Though infancy may be an answer to the objection of the time in not coming to redeem a mortgage, yet where the time begins upon the ancestor, it shall run on against his infant heir, as in the case of a fine at common law. St. John v. Turner, 2 Vern. 418.

See also Nevarre v. Rutton, col. 250.

As between Mortgagor and Mortgagee.]—Sect. 16 of 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, shewing the rights of persons under disability, such as absence beyond seas, does not apply as between mortgagor and mortgagee. Kingman v. Rouse, 50 L. J., Ch. 486; 17 Ch. D. 104; 44 L. T. 597; 29 W. R. 627.

Coverture is no excuse for not redeeming a mortgage, for if a woman become afterwards discovert, the Statute of Limitations will run from that time. Anon., 2 Atk. 333.

Tenancy by curtesy is no excuse, for it is of no consequence to a mortgagee who has the equity of redemption; if such tenants do not make use of their right, they shall be barred. Ib.

14. Crown.

See also ante, A, IV. 1 (col. 39), and A, VI. 8 (col. 85).

By 9 Geo. 3, c. 16, and 24 & 25 Vict. c. 62, the right of the crown is barred after sixty years.

The rights of the crown are not barred by any Statute of Limitations, unless it is expressly named therein, and this rule extends to cases where the right of the crown is merely nominal. Reg. v. Bayly, 1 Dr. & War. 213; 4 Ir. Eq. R. 142.

The 8 Geo. 1, c. 4 (Statute of Limitations), does not extend to crown bonds or recognizances, although the crown is but a trustee in them for a subject. A demurrer taken to a plea of payment founded on that statute, put in to a scire facias on a receiver's recognizance, was therefore allowed. Ib.

Adverse Possession.]—Where an entire manor or other district has been in charge to the crown within sixty years, acts done in different parts of it by different persons, such as the erection and occupation of lime-kilns for burning limestone found within the district, and of cottages for the purpose of such occupation, and the sale of the lime so produced, do not amount to such an adverse possession as to displace the title of the crown to the district, although they may have been continued for above sixty years. Doe d. King William IV. v. Roberts, 13 M. & W. 520; 14 L. J., Ex. 274.

—— Land in British Honduras.]—Held, in an information of intrusion relating to land in British Honduras, that the defendants having shewn sixty years' adverse possession therefrom before 1817, by themselves and their predecessors in title, without disturbance or effectual claim by the crown, such information must be dismissed. Att.-Gen. for British Honduras v. Bristowe, 50 L. J., P. C. 15; 6 App. Cas. 143; 44 L. T. 1—P. C.

Although British Honduras was formally declared to be a British colony, and formally annexed to British dominions by a proclamation of her majesty, dated the 12th May, 1862, yet grants of land having been made therein by the crown as early as 1817:—Held, that the territorial sovereignty of the crown must be deemed to have been acquired in or before that year. Ib.

—— Onus probandi.]—The title of the crown to lands, of which it has been out of possession for twenty years, may be tried in an information of intrusion itself, and need not be first found by inquest of office, the only effect of the 21 Jac. 1, c. 14, being to throw the onus of proving title in the first instance, in such case, upon the crown. Att.-Gen. v. Parsons, 2 M. & W. 23; 1 Tyr. & G. 980; 5 D. P. C. 165; 6 L. J., Ex. 9.

Purchase of Crown Lands.]—A conveyance of a manor by the commissioners of woods and forests on the part of the crown does not entitle the purchaser to maintain ejectment against the possessor of land inclosed from the waste of the manor, more than twenty years before the conveyance, without leave of the crown. Doe d. Watt v. Morris, 2 Scott, 276; 2 Bing. (N.C.) 189; 1 Hodges, 215; 4 L. J., C. P. 285.

Returns of Revenue.]—Returns of any particular subject-matter by auditors in their accounts of the crown revenue are sufficient proofs of its having been kept in charge to protect the claim of the crown from the operation of the 9 Geo. 3, c. 16, although they have returned "Nihil," and the claim has not been put in suit thereon for more than sixty years. Att.-Gen. v. Eardley (Lord), 8 Price, 39; 1 Daniel, 271; 22 R. R. 697.

So, if the auditors make due returns, to the office of commissioners for auditing the public accounts, of the rents and other profits of lands forming part of the crown revenue, those returns constitute a putting in charge within that statute, so as to save the right of the crown from the operation of that act; although the auditors have for more than sixty years received nothing in respect of such revenue, and though the crown within that time had not instituted any suit or proceeding to recover any part of it. Att.-Gen. v. Maxwell, 8 Price, 76, n.

III. POSSESSION.

1. GENERALLY.

See 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, ss. 3 (Discontinuance of), 10 (Entry), 11 (Continual claim on or near the land), 12 (Joint Tenants). By s. 13, the possession of the heir's brother is adverse to the heir.

Mere Want of Possession not within Statute.]—The 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, s. 3, does not apply to cases of want of actual possession, but to those cases only where the owner has been out of it and another party has been in possession for the prescribed time; for there must be both absence of possession by the person who has the right, and actual possession by another, whether adverse or not, to bring the case within the statute. Smith v. Lloyd, 9 Ex. 562; 2 C. L. R. 1008; 23 L. J., Ex. 194; 2 W. R. 271.

Statute ceases to run immediately adverse Possession is discontinued, though rightful Possession not resumed.]—See Trustees and Agency Co. v. Short, col. 268.

Dispossession and Resumption of Possession.]—See Randall v. Stevens, and Doe d. Baker v. Coombes, col. 271.

Dispossession after Statute has run.]—The plaintiff proved twenty years' possession; the defendant ten years' following the twenty:—Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to recover, as his earlier possession must prevail. Doe d. Harding v. Cooke, 7 Bing. 345; 5 M. & P. 181.

Presumption of Seisin in Fee from Possession.]—If no other title appears, a clear possession of twenty years is strong presumptive evidence of a fee. Doe d. Barswell v. Barnard, Cowp. 595.

But possession of land for any term less than twenty years by a feoffee, is not presumptive evidence of livery of seisin. Doe d. Wilkins v. Cleveland, 9 B. & C. 864; 4 M. & Ry. 666; 8 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 74.

Proof of possession of land, and pernancy of the rents and profits, is primâ facie evidence of a seisin in fee. But proof of forty years' subsequent possession by a daughter, while a son and heir lived near and knew the fact, is much stronger evidence that the first possessor had only a particular estate. Jayne v. Price, 5 Taunt. 326; 1 Marsh. 68; 15 R. R. 518.

Possession for Statutory Period transfers Title.]—See Incorporated Society for Protestant Schools v. Richards, and Scott v. Nixon, col. 149.

—— Bar at Law and Equity to an Account.]—After an ejectment, and twenty years' possession, the Statute of Limitations will bar an account both at law and in equity; for the jus possessionis is gone by the statute, and if once the statute begins to attach, incapacity will not avoid it. Nevarre v. Rutton, 1 Vin. Abr. 185, pl. 7; 2 Eq. Cas. Abr. 9, pl. 6.

Actual or Legal Possession.]—There is no difference between actual possession and legal possession in respect to limitation. Magennis v. Fallon, 2 Moll. 579.

Forty Years' Possession—Disabilities.]—Defendant pleaded forty years' possession without account or admission of any debt; to a bill setting up an old mortgage, and stating an account settled, and that owing to infancy, coverture and other disabilities plaintiffs could not proceed: the plea was allowed. Blewitt v. Thomas, 2 Ves. J. 669.

Possession of Receiver.]—The possession of a receiver in a suit is primâ facie the possession of the parties who obtained his appointment; but the solicitors of the parties who had obtained the appointment of a receiver having written a letter to the solicitor of an outside incumbrancer stating that the balances of the rents would be paid to him:—Held, that the possession of the receiver thereby became the possession of the outside incumbrancer also, for the purpose of preventing the Statute of Limitations (3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27), s. 34, from running against him. Penney v. Todd, 26 W. R. 502.

Possession of Agent.]—The possession of an agent is the possession of the principal; and the principal may acquire a possessory title to real estate by receiving the rents for twenty years through an agent, although that agent is the person really entitled to the estate. Williams v. Pott, 40 L. J., Ch. 775; L. R. 12 Eq. 149.

Possession of Cestui que Trust.]—The possession of the cestui que trust under the trusts of a settlement is the possession of the trustee and gives the trustee a seisin of the estate, which is not interrupted by the death of the cestui que trust, but immediately enures for the benefit of the person next entitled to the equitable interest; and notwithstanding the adverse possession of another party soon afterwards commenced, the court cannot presume such adverse possession to have commenced so instantaneously on the death of the first cestui que trust as wholly to exclude the equitable seisin of the parties next entitled to the beneficial interest. Parker v. Carter, 4 Hare, 400.

Possession as Guests.]—The owner of a house allowed his sisters to reside therein, and contributed to their support. He paid the rent and taxes and executed all necessary repairs:—Held, that the occupation was in the character of guests and not of tenants at will, and that the Statute of Limitations did not run as against the owner. Peakin v. Peakin, [1895] 2 Ir. R. 359.

Possession by Father as Bailiff for Infant.]—A father, in 1848, entered into possession of certain lands of gavelkind tenure as guardian of, and bailiff for, his infant child (the plaintiff), and continued in occupation of the same until his death in 1886, at which time his child had attained the age of forty. There had been nothing to change the character of his possession since entry. The defendant, who claimed through the father, remained in possession of the property until the commencement of this action in 1893:—Held, that the Statute of Limitations did not begin to run until the father's death in 1886, and that the action having been brought within twelve years from that date, the plaintiff's claim to the lands was not barred thereby. Thomas v. Thomas (2 K. & J. 79) explained and followed. Tinker v. Rodwell, 8 R. 1; 69 L. T. 591.

A father was entitled in fee to an undivided moiety of gavelkind land, the other moiety of which belonged to his wife in fee. She died in May, 1870, leaving two sons, Samuel and John. John was then an infant. He attained twenty-one in 1877, and died in May, 1884. On the mother's death the moiety descended to her two sons in equal shares, as her co-heirs by the custom of gavelkind, but the father was by that custom entitled to a moiety of the rents of her moiety so long as he remained a widower. On the mother's death he entered into the receipt of the whole of the rents of her moiety, and continued in possession, without accounting to his sons or acknowledging their title in writing, for more than twelve years. On the death of John in 1884, his interest descended to his brother Samuel as heir of the mother. In February, 1884, the father had married a second wife, and in November, 1884, he died:—Held, that, as to that one-eighth of the property to which John became entitled in possession on the death of his mother, the father must be taken to have entered into receipt of the rents as bailiff for his infant son, and that, consequently, the title of John was not barred by s. 12 of the act 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, and that his brother Samuel was entitled to that one-eighth. But held, that, as to Samuel's own one-eighth, the same presumption did not arise, and that, there being no evidence that the father had received the rents as agent for Samuel, or had before the expiration of the statutory period acknowledged his title in writing, or accounted to him for the rents, the title of Samuel to that one-eighth was barred by the statute. Consequently, Samuel was entitled to three-eighths of the whole property and the remaining five-eighths passed under the father's will. Hobbs, In re, Hobbs v. Wade, 57 L. J., Ch. 184; 36 Ch. Possession under void Appointment.]—See Doe d. Allen v. Blakeway, col. 176.

Glebe Land—Purchase of adjoining Land by Rector—Promiscuous Occupation by successive Rectors.]—In 1846, H. W., the rector of the parish of C., purchased under the provisions of an inclosure act, a number of plots of waste land adjoining the glebe, removed the old boundaries, and occupied the ancient glebe and the new inclosures indiscriminately. H. W. died in 1850, and was succeeded by P. as rector. P. died in 1855, and was succeeded by B. Both P. and B. occupied the whole land, as H. W. had done previously. In 1862, B. built and laid out a school, cottage, and garden on one of the plots of land so purchased by H. W., and the school was placed under the management of a committee. On 12th Nov., 1883, the defendant, who was the grandson and had succeeded to the real estate of H. W., granted a lease of the school, cottage, and garden to B. and the churchwardens and their successors for ninety-nine years at five shillings a year, with a proviso for increase on a certain event. On 14th Nov., 1883, B. resigned the benefice, and was succeeded by the plaintiff, who had no notice of the lease till he had been in possession for three months. In April, 1886, the defendant distrained for two years' rent:—Held, that B. had not as rector acquired a title to the school, cottage, and garden by the Statute of Limitations, and consequently there was no want of title in the defendant. Gibson v. Wise, 35 W. R. 409.

Semble, that the lease of 12th Nov., 1883, was a valid lease under 31 & 32 Vict. c. 44, s. 1. Ib.

Gravel Pit filled up by Tenant of adjoining Owner—Title of Surveyors of Highways extinguished.]—A gravel pit and a road to it were allotted by commissioners under an inclosure act to the surveyors of highways of a hamlet for the repair of its roads and ways. From 1837 to 1863 the surveyors ceased to take gravel from the pit or to use the road, and took no steps to assert their right to the pit or road, but got gravel for the repair of the highways from another pit two miles off, which they purchased from time to time from the plaintiff's father and from the plaintiff. The land allotted for the road and gravel pit was entirely surrounded by old inclosures belonging and land allotted to the plaintiff's predecessors in title. In 1837 the tenant of the greater part of the land in which the pit was situated filled up part of the pit, and from that time cultivated the surface as arable land, together with the adjacent parts of the field. In 1839 another tenant ploughed up the remaining portion of the pit, which abutted upon land in his occupation, and also the allotted road, which passed through other land in his occupation; and both continued to be cultivated by the plaintiff's tenants as arable land from that time till 1863. In 1844 the tenant of the plaintiff, who was in occupation of the surface of the greater part of the pit, was elected one of the surveyors of the highways, and held that office for one year:—Held, first, that actual possession of the gravel pit and road was taken by the tenants of the adjoining lands in 1837 and 1839, and therefore the title of the surveyors of highways to the gravel pit and road had, by the operation of 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, ss. 2, 3, 34, become extinguished. Smith v. Stocks, 10 B. & S. 701; 38 L. J., Q. B. 306; 20 L. T. 740; 17 W. R. 1135.

Held, secondly, that the circumstance of the tenant occupying part of the pit being elected surveyor of highways after possession had been taken of it, did not interrupt the running of the period of limitation, as the character of his possession as tenant under the plaintiff was not altered during his year of office. Ib.

Possession of Ditch belonging to another by making it part of Garden.]—See Marshall v. Taylor, col. 268.

Possession of Surface by Lessee of Minerals, Possession of Minerals.]—Action for breaking and entering the plaintiff's closes, and digging minerals therein. A plea justified the trespasses by the defendant as assignee of a lease of the minerals for ninety-nine years granted by the owner in 1821. Replication, that the right to make an entry did not first accrue within twenty-one years. It appeared that from 1816 B. was in possession of the close under a lease, in which there was no reservation of the mines. In 1821 the owner granted a separate lease of the minerals to B. and P. for ninety-nine years, under whom the defendant claimed. In 1847 the mines were first worked:—Held, that B. was in possession of the mines before 1821, by reason of his being in possession of the surface as lessee under a lease, without reservation of the mines; and that such possession enured for the benefit of himself and P. on the granting of the lease of 1821, so as to make himself and P. possessed of the mines from 1821 under that lease, and not to leave the effect of that lease to be the granting of a mere interesse termini. Keyse v. Powell, 2 El. & Bl. 132; 22 L. J., Q. B. 305; 17 Jur. 1052.

Held, also, that although the plea confessed the possession to be in the plaintiff at the time of the trespass in 1847, yet that the defendant was not confined to rely upon the right of entry which accrued to him in 1821, but might rely on a supposed dispossession within twenty-one years before 1847, and his right of immediate entry thereupon. Ib.

Possession of Land or Easement—Highway—Tunnel under.]—By a local act power was given to road trustees, in whom the soil of the road was vested, to consent in writing to excavation or undermining of the road: this was repealed as from 1 November, 1871. By deed dated 12 July, 1871, the then road trustees, for valuable consideration, granted to defendants' predecessor in title a licence to construct a tunnel under the road. The tunnel was completed about July, 1872, and had ever since remained in the uninterrupted and exclusive possession of the defendants or their predecessor in title. No substantial alteration had been made in it for more than twelve years before the issue of the writ in August, 1891. Plaintiff, who was owner of the land on both sides of the road where the tunnel passed under, claimed to be entitled to the soil under the road at that place, and claimed an injunction restraining trespass by the defendants on his land. Semble, the plaintiff had not such a title to the soil under the road as to enable him to maintain the action:—Held, that whether this were so or not, the use of the tunnel by the defendants was not a mere easement, but as against the plaintiff amounted to exclusive possession and occupation, which having continued for more than twelve years, the action was barred by the Statute of Limitations. Bevan v. London Portland Cement Co., 3 R. 47; 67 L. T. 615.

Working into adjacent Mine.]—The plaintiffs were seised in fee of lands to which their predecessors derived title, under a conveyance in the reign of Elizabeth, wherein the grantor reserved to himself and his heirs male a rent charge of 7*s.* 8*d.*, and which contained a proviso that the grantee and his heirs should not dig or get any coal upon the lands for sale, but only such as should be burned or employed thereon. The defendant, claiming title under a demise from a descendant of the grantor, had for more than twenty years worked from mines of his own under adjacent lands into, and had taken coals from, the mines under the plaintiffs' lands:—Held, first, that the proviso in the original conveyance was a covenant, and not a repugnant condition, and that it did not affect the amount of damages which the plaintiffs were entitled to claim, as, under it, the grantee was still entitled to get all the coal for his own use, though not to sell it. Ashton v. Stock, 6 Ch. D. 719; 25 W. R. 862.

Held, secondly, that the defendant had not acquired any title to the mine by possession under the Statute of Limitations, and that the plaintiffs were entitled to an injunction with an account for six years. Ib.

Possession of the surface by the lord of the manor is no answer to a plea of the statute in an action of ejectment by him for the mines beneath the surface, the defendants having been in possession of the mines for more than twenty years. Rich d. Cullen v. Johnson, Stra. 1142.

2. CONSECUTIVE.

Whether Possession must be by same Person, or by Persons claiming through him.]—Semble, that the effect of s. 34 of 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, is to give title by possession for twenty years, but that such twenty years' possession must be either by the same person, or several persons claiming one from another. Doe d. Carter v. Barnard, 13 Q. B. 945; 18 L. J., Q. B. 306.

—— By successive Trespassers.]—Though under the Statute of Limitations (3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, s. 34) the right is extinguished at the end of twenty years, still adverse possession by a succession of independent trespassers, for a period exceeding twenty years, confers no right on any one of them who has not himself had twenty years' uninterrupted possession, except as furnishing a defence to a trespasser in possession against an action by the rightful owner. Dixon v. Gayfere, 17 Beav. 421; 23 L. J., Ch. 60.

After both the trustee and cestui que trust had been out of possession more than twenty years, an ejectment was brought by A. B., the heir of the trespasser, in the name of the trustee, and he obtained judgment. The trustee, disclaiming all personal interest, then instituted a suit, seeking to have the rights declared as between the rightful owner and the heir of the trespasser, and the court, by its receiver, took possession. A. B. afterwards instituted a suit against the trustee and the rightful owner, to recover the property:—Held, that, the court being in possession, the Statute of Limitations did not apply, so as to prevent the court's declaring who was entitled. Ib.

A. wrongfully entered, and died intestate; his widow entered:—Held, that the possession of the widow was not a continuance of that of her husband, it not being shewn that she was entitled to dower, and such a right not entitling her to enter into the whole estate. Ib.

A suit, dismissed as against the principal defendant, and which, though pleading as against the others, has yet been practically abandoned, does not prevent the operation of the Statute of Limitations. Ib.

—— By Wife in Succession to Husband.]—In ejectment, it appeared that the plaintiff's husband had been in possession as a tenant at will for eighteen years, ending in 1834, when he died, leaving a son (not a party to the action), and that she became possessed and remained in possession for thirteen years:—Held, that the plaintiff could not rely on the husband's possession except as prima facie evidence of a seisin in fee, on which supposition it was also evidence of title in his heir, which defeated the title of the plaintiff, and that she could not insist on her own possession for thirteen years, as it was not derived from the husband's possession, although the possession by herself and her husband for more than twenty years consecutively would have entitled her to a verdict if she had been defendant in an ejectment brought by the real owner. Doe d. Carter v. Barnard, 13 Q. B. 945; 18 L. J., Q. B. 306.

A., purchaser of land, was let into possession before execution of a conveyance. He let in his son as tenant at will; the son occupied and built a cottage on the land; afterwards A. took a conveyance from the vendor, and some time after he mortgaged the land. The son continued to occupy the premises in all respects as at first, till his death, which happened within twenty-one years of his entry. The son's widow continued to occupy till the expiration of twenty-one years from her husband's entry:—Held, that an ejectment afterwards brought against her was barred by 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, ss. 2 and 7; for that the tenancy at will was not determined by the father's taking a conveyance, and that, if it had, in point of law, been so determined by that event, or by the mortgage, a tenancy by sufferance must be deemed to have commenced from such determination, there being no evidence of a new tenancy at will; and the tenancy altogether had continued more than twenty years from the end of the first year. Doe d. Goody v. Carter, 9 Q. B. 863; 18 L. J., Q. B. 305.

—— By Son in succession to Father.]—One, after occupying a house for several years as tenant from year to year, found no one to receive the rent for fifteen years before his death, and devised the house (with power of sale, under such conditions as might be thought expedient), for the benefit of his wife and children. His eldest son occupied the house, paying a rent to the widow, for fifteen years after the death of the father, when the widow died:—Held, that notwithstanding the infirmity of the testator's title, the son could not insist on retaining possession of the house adversely to the devisees beneficially interested under the will; but that the latter were entitled to require that the property should be sold and distributed according to the directions of the testator. Hawksbee v. Hawksbee, 11 Hare, 231.

3. ADVERSE.

Nature of.]—Possession is adverse for the purpose of limitation when an actual possession is found to exist under circumstances which evince its incompatibility with a freehold in the claimant. Des Barres v. Shey, 29 L. T. 592; 22 W. R. 273.

Since 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27.]—By 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, ss. 2, 3, the doctrine of non-adverse possession is done away with, except in cases provided for by s. 15; and an ejectment must be brought within twenty years after the original right of entry of the plaintiff (or of the party under whom he claims) accrued, whatever is the nature of the defendant's possession. Nepean v. Doe d. Knight, 2 M. & W. 894; M. & H. 291; 2 Sm. L. C. 542; 7 L. J., Ex. 335.

After Expiration of Title.]—A wrongful continuation of possession for twenty years after the expiration of a title, under which the tenant lawfully entered, constituted such an adverse possession as created a bar to an entry or to an ejectment. Doe d. Parker v. Gregory, 4 N. & M. 308; 2 A. & E. 14; 4 L. Of Trustees, Mortgagees, and Lessees.]—Adverse possession, as against an equitable estate, may create or defeat a right where the possessor has no duty to discharge for the party against whom possession is pleaded. The effect of adverse possession cannot be suspended during the continuance of long terms of years. Adverse possession of an equity of redemption for twenty years is a bar to any other claim of the equity of redemption, producing the same effect as abatement, intrusion, and disseisin, with respect to legal estate. *S. By Agents.]—An agent cannot gain an adverse title unless he can very distinctly shew that what he has done is in respect of title, and not of his agency. Att.-Gen. v. London Corporation, 2 Macn. & G. 247; 2 H. & Tw. 1; 19 L. J., Ch. 314; 14 Jur. 205.

Agent continuing to receive Rents after Owner's Death not in Possession Adverse to Heir.]—See Lyell v. Kennedy, col. 204.

Receipt of Rent by Person not entitled—Payment under Belief of Agency—Ratification by true Owner.]—The owner in fee of lands, subject to a yearly tenancy vested in the defendant, devised the lands to G. for life, with remainder to the issue of G. as G. should appoint. G. received rent from the defendant until his (G.'s) death in 1872. G., by his will, appointed the lands to W. in fee, and devised other lands, of which he was the absolute owner, to M. upon active trusts. From 1872 to 1879 M. received rent from the defendant, his agents giving receipts for such rent as due to the "representatives" of G. W. died in 1879, having devised the lands to J. The defendant did not pay rent to any person after that date. In an action by M. and J. as co-plaintiffs, brought in the year 1888, for rent, and in which the defendants did not require any question to be left to the jury, the court being of opinion that there was evidence from which the jury might have found that the defendant, to the knowledge of M.'s agents, paid rent to them, under the belief that they were acting for the true owner, and that J., within a reasonable time, adopted and ratified their acts:—Held, that, under those circumstances, the acts of M. and his agents in receiving the rents did not dispossess W. or J. so as to put them to their action under the 2nd, 3rd, and 8th sections of the 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27. Lyell v. Kennedy (14 App. Cas. 437) applied. McAuliffe v. Fitzsimons, 26 L. R., Ir. 29.

"Representative"—Meaning of.]—The word "representative," when used with reference to ownership of land, is capable of distinct meanings, and its signification in each case must be determined as a question of fact. It may mean heir or devisee, executor or legatee deriving under an absolute owner, or, as in the present case, the successor to a person having only a limited estate. Ib.

Possession of Intestate's Brother not Adverse to Infant Daughters.]—A father seised of land made a will, invalid as to real estate, whereby he appointed his brother, to whom he was indebted, executor, and died, leaving two infant daughters. The uncle entered upon the real estate and kept down the interest on a mortgage, and laid out considerable sums on improvements:—Held, that the possession of the uncle could not be treated as having been adverse to his nieces. Pelley v. Bascombe, 34 L. J., Ch. 233; 11 Jur. (N.S.) 52; 13 W. R. 306—L.JJ.

By Widow to Exclusion of Heir.]—L. R. died seised of freehold premises, leaving a widow and a son (by her), R. R., his heir-at-law, twelve years old. The widow entered into receipt of the rents, and two years afterwards married again, and went to reside on the premises, which she occupied with her second husband during his life, and from his death until her own, the whole period of such occupation by her being more than fifty years. During her occupation she frequently said that the premises after her death belonged to R. R., but she left a will devising the property to H., her son by her second husband, and describing it as having descended to her from her mother. After her death, H., then in possession, promised that he would sign an agreement to rent the premises under R. R., but he never did sign it:—Held, that a jury was not bound to find an adverse possession of the widow during the fifty years. Doe d. Roffey v. Harbrow, 3 A. & E. 67, n.; 1 N. & M. 422.

A., forty-five years ago, inclosed a piece of ground from the waste, and built a cottage on part of it; he died twenty-nine years ago; and, after that, his widow and daughter lived on the premises till the death of the former, a month before the trial:—Held, in ejectment by A.'s eldest son, that his claim was barred unless the jury was satisfied that his mother held the premises by his permission, and not adversely. Doe d. Pritchard v. Janney, 8 Car. & P. 99.

A. was possessed of lands for more than twenty years, and died in 1817. His widow had possession from that time till her death in 1838. B. was the eldest son of A. and his wife:—Held, that though B. could not recover in ejectment as the heir of his father, yet that the jury might infer that the property belonged to B.'s mother, and survived to her on the death of his father, and descended to B. as his heir on her death in 1838. Doe d. Bennett v. Long, 9 Car. & P. 773.

When a widow continued to reside in a freehold house of which she was seised for more than twenty years after her husband's death:—Held, that her possession was not adverse, except perhaps against the heir, as her possession might be intended to be in respect of dower. Doe d. Hickman v. Haslewood, 1 N. & P. 352; 6 A. & E. 167; W. W. & D. 116; 6 L. J., K. B. 96; 1 Jur. 1138.

A husband, by will in 1824, devised all his real and personal estate, and also all other his estate and effects of which he might be possessed at the time of his death, to his wife and another trustee, in trust to pay the rents to his wife for life, with remainders over. The testator purchased a freehold estate after the date of his will. On his death his widow (the other trustee having disclaimed) became sole trustee of his will, and entered into possession of the after-acquired property, as well as the devised estate, believing that all the property passed by the will. She continued in possession for more than twenty years, and then, being informed that she had acquired a title by adverse possession, she sold the estate to a purchaser for value:—Held, that the widow had acquired a good title by adverse possession. Paine v. Jones, 43 L. J., Ch. 787; L. R. 18 Eq. 320; 30 L. T. 779; 22 W. R. 807.

Declarations made by a widow in the possession of premises for more than twenty years, that she held them for her life only, and that after her death they would go to the heirs of her husband, are admissible to negative the fact of her having had twenty years' adverse possession. Doe d. Human v. Pettet, 5 B. & Ald. 223.

By Husband to exclusion of Wife's Heir.]—A., thirty years back, died seised of a cottage, leaving a son, B., and a daughter, C. At his death, C., his daughter, then unmarried, took possession of it, and afterwards married D., and after his death, W. After her death W. remained in possession sixteen years:—Held, that the son of B., who was the heir of C. as well as being the heir of A. and B., might recover in ejectment, although W., including the term he had occupied the cottage with his wife, had had more than twenty years' possession of it. Doe d. Tranter v. Wing, 6 Car. & P. 538.

Possession of Father Adverse to Adult Heir of Mother, but not to Infant Co-Heir.]—See Hobbs, In re, col. 252.

Lease in Wife's Name—Possession by permission of Wife no Bar to Husband.]—A lease for years was granted to a married woman living apart from her husband, under the supposition that she was a feme sole. A third party had obtained and held possession for more than twenty years by permission of the lessee:—Held, in ejectment by the husband's representative, that it was not a misdirection to put it as a question, whether the possession had been adverse as against the wife, instead of as against the husband. Doe d. Wilkins v. Wilkins, 5 N. & M. 434; 1 H. & W. 574; 4 A. & E. 86.

Of Daughter as against Son.] — Where a daughter entered into occupation of premises on the death of her mother, to whom they had belonged till then, and held them without interruption for twenty years, but the mother had left a son, who was living during the whole time of the daughter's occupation:—Held (in an ejectment brought before 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, came into operation), that it could not be presumed from this circumstance alone that the sister's occupation was virtually that of the brother. Doe d. Draper v. Lawley, 13 Q. B. 954.

Purchaser from Tenant for Life holding over—Tenant by Sufferance to Heir.]—S. devised his estate to his wife for life, and died seised, leaving his widow and two sons him surviving. After his death the widow and the younger son, by deed, conveyed the estate in fee to H., without the privity of the eldest son and heir-at-law of the testator; H. continued in undisturbed possession of the estate for twenty-two years, and died possessed, bequeathing it to his children; six years after H. entered into possession, the eldest son and heir-at-law of S. devised all his real estate to his wife and to his younger brother, in trust for the life of the wife, and then to his children, and died three years afterwards, without ever disturbing H.'s possession:—Held, that the trustees might maintain ejectment to recover the possession of the estate, notwithstanding the quiet enjoyment of H. for twenty-two years. Doe d. Souter v. Hall, 2 D. & R. 38.

Abandonment of Possession by Owner—Heir barred.]—Land was devised in 1744 by a man to his wife in fee; and, after having married again, she lived on the property with her second husband for nine or ten years, and then went to reside elsewhere, and they were never afterwards in possession, but under what circumstances they left was never explained. The wife died in 1828, before the husband, who survived until 1832:—Held, that the heir of the wife was barred by the adverse possession of strangers for above forty years; though the wife was always under the disability of coverture, and her husband had a tenancy by the courtesy during his life, and it was admitted that no fine had been levied. Doe

d. Corby v. Branston, 4 N. & M. 664; 3 A. & E. 63; 1 H. & W. 162; 4 L. J., K. B. 166.

As against Remainderman's Devisee, only on Expiration of Particular Estate.]—M., seised in fee of an undivided moiety of an estate, by her will made many years before her death, devised the same to her nephew and two nieces as tenants in common. One of her nieces having died in her lifetime, leaving an infant daughter, she, by another will, but which she never executed, devised the estate to her nephew, her surviving niece, and that infant. Upon the death of M., her nephew and surviving niece covenanted to carry her unexecuted will into effect, and to convey one-third of the estate to a trustee, to convey to the infant when she attained twenty-one, or to her issue, if she died before twenty-one leaving any, or otherwise to themselves again; but no conveyance was ever executed in pursuance of the deed. The infant died under age and without issue, but the rents were received by her trustee for her use during her life. In ejectment by the devisee of the nephew brought above twenty years after the death of the nephew, but within twenty years after the death of the infant:—Held, that the adverse possession began only after the latter event, and, therefore, that the action was maintainable. Doe d. Colclough v. Hulso, 5 D. & R. 650; 3 B. & C. 757; 27 R. R. 470.

Of Assignee of Tenant for Life, as against Trustee of Estate, not till Death of Assignor.]—See Fausset v. Carpenter, col. 168.

Possession of Tenant for Life after Forfeiture.]—Where a tenant for life executes a tortious conveyance, committing a forfeiture, under which, however, he takes equally a life estate and continues in possession, the remainderman entitled to claim on the forfeiture may, if he choose, treat the possession of the wrong-doing tenant for life as possession under the first settlement, and not under his own unlawful conveyance. Lewis v. Rees, 3 Kay & J. 132; 26 L. J., Ch. 101; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 12; 5 W. R. 96.

Possession of Tenant in Tail after Forfeiture not Adverse to Remainderman.]—See Astley v. Essex, col. 173.

Possession under Conveyance and Will not Adverse to those claiming through Grantor.]—Where M. D., with whom A. J., a person of unsound mind, and who had come into possession of lands, resided, and continued to do so until her death, obtained a will and conveyance of part of the lands to himself in fee, and for thirteen years prior thereto, and for ten years after, received the rents:—Held, that having founded his title on those instruments, he was to be deemed as claiming under, and not adversely to, those claiming under A. J. Lewis v. Thomas, 3 Hare, 26.

Possession of one Co-owner.]—R. died in 1791, possessed of an equity of redemption in the lands of A., held for a term of years under the see of Down, and left two sons, H. W. K. and T. K. H. W. K. entered into possession of the lands of A. and obtained renewals of the lease thereof in his own name; he also executed mortgages thereof, and applied the rents in discharge of some of his father's debts, and acted as sole owner until his death in 1809. In 1802 he obtained letters of administration to his father, and no claim was set up by T. K. during the life of H. W. K. to the lands:—Held, that such possession was not adverse against T. K., and did not establish a title to the entail lands, as against the representatives of T. K., who were entitled to the moiety thereof. Scott v. Knox, Longf. & T. 381; 4 Ir. Eq. R. 397.

Rent of Intestate's Estate paid by Tenant to younger Son—Acts of Ownership by elder Son.]—In ejectment for lands, it appeared that, in 1788, G. purchased the estate in fee, of which he died seised and intestate in 1790, leaving two sons, J. and E., and in 1812 J. died intestate, leaving a son, J. In 1788 C. was tenant in possession, and so continued until the time of the trial. From the death of the purchaser, C. paid his rent (with the exception hereinafter mentioned) to E., the younger son, until 1817, when he died, leaving two sons, J. G. (who received the rent from 1817 until the time of his death in 1825), and the defendant. The eldest son of the purchaser received in 1804 a half-year's rent from C., and in 1805 sold and cut down timber on the estate. In June, 1813, J. employed an agent to demand of C. the rent in arrear, when he answered that his connection as tenant with J. G. had ceased for several years. In 1820 an action of ejectment was commenced:—Held, that there was no adverse possession to bar the recovery of the lessor of the plaintiff in ejectment. Doe d. Grubb v. Grubb, 10 B. & C. 816; 8 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 321.

Inscription as to Ownership on Wall of House.]—The purchaser of a house in London having taken various objections to the title, the vendor filed a bill for specific performance, and obtained a reference as to title. The objections were overruled; but before the certificate had been signed the purchaser discovered in a long blank wall, which formed one side of the house and fronted on a street, a stone with an inscription, dated in 1776, stating that the wall had been built by and belonged to the East India Company, who had thrown the adjoining ground into the street. It turned out that the wall had been rebuilt in 1831 by the tenant of the house, and the stone set up again; but under what circumstances did not appear. No rent had from that time been paid to the company, nor any acknowledgment of their title given; but their successors in title, on being applied to, claimed the wall as theirs, and the vendor obtained a release from them:—Held, that the vendor had not a good title when the bill was filed, for that there was no ground for holding a title to have been gained by possession adversely to the East India Company. Phillipson v. Gibbon, 40 L. J., Ch. 406; L. R. 6 Ch. 428; 24 L. T. 602; 19 W. R. 661.

Held, that the vendor was to blame, as he might, with reasonable diligence, have informed himself of this defect before selling, and that, therefore, although he had been right on all points which arose before the bill was filed, he ought not to receive costs. Ib.

Obliteration of Boundary — Possession by Cultivation.] — A railway company in 1838 bought part of a field under the powers of their act, and erected a post-and-rail fence on the boundary. They then made a ditch within the fence, and threw up a bank on which they planted a quickset hedge at the distance of 4ft. 6in. from the fence. As the hedge grew up the fence was allowed to fall into decay, and about the year 1846 it was removed. From the year 1854 up to the commencement of this action in 1875, the strip of land between the quickset hedge and the site of the fence was occupied and cultivated with the remainder of the field, partly as an arable field and partly as garden ground, the railway company in no way interfering with it except that their workmen went over it to trim the hedge:—Held, that the circumstances conclusively shewed the strip between the hedge and the line of the post-and-rail fence to be superfluous land within the meaning of the Lands Clauses Consolidation Act, 1845, s. 127, and that it had therefore vested in the owner of the rest of the field, and moreover (notwithstanding Searby v. Tottenham Ry., infra), that the owner of the rest of the field had had such a possession of the strip in question as was sufficient to extinguish the title of the company under the Statute of Limitations. Norton v. L. & N. W. Ry., 13 Ch. D. 268; 41 L. T. 429; 28 W. R. 173; 44 J. P. 22—C. A.

A field adjoining a public road was separated from it only by a hedge and bank. The trustees who, under an act of parliament, constructed the road upwards of fifty years before the commencement of the suit, made the hedge and bank, and also made on the field side of the fence a ditch of three feet in breadth. This ditch had become filled up and obliterated, and had never been re-opened by the trustees; but a ditch about a foot wide had been subsequently made by the occupier of the field, and that also had become obliterated. The owners of the land had always included the hedge in their leases, and the tenants had held and used the strip within the hedge as part of their field for much more than twenty years, and had at their own expense trimmed the hedge on both sides. During the same time the trustees had not interfered in any way with the site of the ditch:—Held, that these circumstances were not sufficient to constitute an adverse possession, and to give the owners of the land a title under the Statute of Limitations to the site of the three-feet ditch. Searby v. Tottenham Ry., L. R. 5 Eq. 409.

Title under Lands Clauses Act as Owner by adverse Possession.]—See Metropolitan Street Improvement Act, In re, Chamberlain, Ex parte, col. 243.

Of Land required for a Railway.]—The mere fact that land of a railway company is required for the purposes of their undertaking, and is not superfluous land, does not prevent an occupier who has exclusive adverse possession for twelve years becoming thereby entitled to the land under the statutes of limitations. Bobbett v. S. E. Ry., 51 L. J., Q. B. 161; 9 Q. B. D. 424; 46 L. T. 31; 46 J. P. 823. Affirmed on evidence, W. N. 1882, 92.

Of Mines—No Knowledge by Owner, of wrongful Working.]—By an inclosure act it was provided that it should be lawful for the lord of the manor for the time being from time to time to come upon the commons and waste lands intended to be inclosed, to search for and raise any coal and ironstone being in or under the commons and waste lands. The commissioners allotted certain plots of land to S. and E., which afterwards vested in the defendant, who in 1845 worked the coal under one of the plots of land, in 1847 under a second, in 1848 under a third, in 1849 under a fourth, and in 1855 under a fifth. The plaintiffs, who claimed the coal under the lord of the manor at the time of the inclosure act, commenced, in 1867, an action for working the coal:—Held, that the action was maintainable, for that the acts of trespass committed more than twenty years before suit could not be relied upon as constituting a possession adverse to the plaintiffs, there being no sufficient evidence that the then owner of the mines was aware that the acts of trespass were being committed. Dartmouth (Earl) v. Spittle, 24 L. T. 67; 19 W. R. 444.

The plaintiffs were seised in fee of lands to which their predecessors derived title under a conveyance in the reign of Elizabeth, wherein the grantor reserved to himself and his heirs male a rent-charge of 7*s.* 8*d.*, and which contained a proviso that the grantee and his heirs should not dig or get any coal upon the lands for sale, but only such as should be burned or employed thereon. The defendant, claiming title under a demise from a descendant of the grantor, had for more than twenty years worked from mines of his own under adjacent lands into, and had taken coals from, the mines under the plaintiffs' lands:—Held, that the defendant had not acquired any title to the mine by possession under the Statute of Limitations, and that the plaintiffs were entitled to an injunction with an account for six years. Ashton v. Stock, 6 Ch. D. 719; 25 W. R. 862.

Non-adverse Possession at passing of 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27.]—By a marriage settlement a husband became entitled to the moiety of an estate in fee, which moiety originally belonged to his wife. During the coverture, the other moiety descended to the wife, as heiress-at-law to her brother. The wife afterwards died in the husband's lifetime without issue; and the husband, from the time of her death, in 1815, till a sale of the estate in 1828, remained in uninterrupted possession of the entire property, without making any acknowledgment of the title of any other person:—Held, that this was a case falling within 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, s. 15, and that, notwithstanding the husband's possession of the moiety which descended to the wife might not be adverse, the heir-at-law of the wife, not having made his claim within five years after the passing of the act, was barred by the statute. Hasell, Ex parte, 3 Y. & C. 617; 3 Jur. 1101.

W. permitted J. to occupy land, of which he was seised in fee, for twenty years previously to J.'s death in 1831; W. died in September, 1833, and the defendant, who was his son and heir-at-law of J., occupied till 1836. On ejectment brought by the devisees of W., it was found by the jury that the possession of J. was not adverse to W.:—Held, that the right of action in the devisees was not barred by 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, ss. 2 & 7, but was saved by s. 15, being brought within five years from the passing of the act. Doe d. Burgess v. Thompson, 1 N. & P. 215; 5 A. & E. 532; 2 H. & W. 451; 6 L. 4. DISCONTINUANCE OF.

What amounts to.]—Acts of user committed upon land which do not interfere, and are consistent with the purpose to which the owner intends to devote it, do not amount to a dispossession of the owner, and are not evidence of discontinuance of possession by him within the meaning of 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, s. 3. Leigh v. Jack, 49 L. J., Ex. 220; 5 Ex. D. 264; 42 L. T. 463; 28 W. R. 452; 44 J. P. 488—C. A.

By original Owner of Ditch.]—Where the boundary between the premises of two adjoining landowners is marked by a hedge and a ditch, semble, the presumption that the latter belongs to the owner of the former applies only to a ditch which is known to be artificial, and not to one which is or may be a natural watercourse. Where on the evidence the ditch was shewn to have at one time belonged to the same party as the hedge:—Held, nevertheless, that evidence that the other party had laid out as part of his garden the land covering the site of the ditch, and had enjoyed it as such for more than twelve years, while the original owner had not, unequivocally as of right, done any act except emptying his sewage into a drain which ran along the old ditch, was sufficient to establish a dispossession of the original owner, and the acquisition by the other party of a title under the Statute of Limitations. Leigh v. Jack (5 Ex. D. 264) distinguished. Marshall v. Taylor, 64 L. J., Ch. 416; [1895] 1 Ch. 641; 12 R. 310; 72 L. T. 670—C. A.

By another taking Possession, though without Owner's Knowledge.]—Under the Statute of Limitations (3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27), the right to land is extinguished, in the absence of fraud, after a discontinuance of possession for the period enacted in the statute, although the owner so discontinuing possession was unaware that adverse possession had been taken. If A. has occupied a cellar under the ground of B. for sixty years, this is, in the absence of fraud, a discontinuance of possession on the part of B. within the meaning of the statute, though B. was ignorant of such occupation. Rains v. Buxton, 49 L. J., Ch. 473; 14 Ch. D. 537; 43 L. T. 88; 28 W. R. 954.

Possession of Surface no Evidence of Property in Minerals.]—See Rich d. Cullen v. Johnson, col. 255.

By Intruder before Title acquired.]—The Statute of Limitations (3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27) does not continue to run against the rightful owner of land after an intruder has relinquished possession without acquiring title under the act. Possession so abandoned leaves the rightful owner in the same position in all respects as he was before the intrusion took place. The act applies not to want of possession by the plaintiff, but to cases where he has been out of, and another in, possession for the prescribed time. Trustees and Agency Co. v. Short, 58 L. J., P. C. 4; 13 App. Cas. 793; 59 L. T. 677; 37 W. R. 433; 53 J. P. 132—P. C.

Railway—Derelict Line—User by Public.]—A railway company constructed under their statutory powers a railway through certain quays, and one of the clauses of their act provided that the line should be so constructed as not to unnecessarily interfere or inconvenience the general traffic on the quays or the roads leading therefrom and thereto. After 1875 the railway company never made any use of this line. There was evidence that the public, including the occupiers of the quays, passed over the line as they wished, and a tenant of the owner of the lands compulsorily taken for the construction of the line was in the habit of carting coal and salt, in which he dealt, over the railway:—Held, that no title had been acquired under the Statute of Limitations by the original owner or the occupiers of the quays. Duffy's Estate, In re, [1897] 1 Ir. R. 307. Affirmed in C. A.

IV. ENTRY.

1. Right of.

Statute does not commence to run against Remainderman till Death of Tenant for Life, notwithstanding Forfeiture.]—An estate was settled on a tenant for life and remainderman in tail, with a name and arms clause that in case any person should fail to comply with it for twelve calendar months after becoming entitled in possession the estate should go over as if he were dead. C. entered into possession as tenant in tail, and did not comply with the condition; he remained in possession for more than twenty years after he had forfeited the estate:—Held, that he did not acquire a title by adverse possession, but that under 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, s. 4, the right of the remaindermen to enter commenced on his death. Astley v. Essex (Earl), 43 L. J., Ch. 817; L. R. 18 Eq. 290; 30 L. T. 485.

At the death of the tenant for life the next remainderman was in India and was ignorant of the clause until after the twelve months expired:—Held, that his ignorance did not prevent the forfeiture operating on his interest. Ib.

The 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, s. 4, extends to forfeitures which operate to accelerate an estate under a conditional limitation as well as to forfeitures, of which the heir-at-law only can take advantage. Ib.

Devise over in either of Two Events—Time runs from Happening of First.]—A father devised lands to his son A.; and, in case his son either married or took up with a Roman Catholic, or in case he died without a lawful heir, then he directed that all he had devised to A. should go to his, the testator's, son B. Both events happened:—A. took up with a Roman Catholic after the testator's death, and died without a lawful heir. A few months after the happening of the second event, but more than twenty years after the happening of the first event, B. brought an ejectment against the devisee of A.:—Held, that 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, s. 20, deprived B. of the benefit of the new right of action which accrued on the happening of the second event; and that as more than twenty years had elapsed from the happening of the first event, when B. was bound to have asserted his title, he could not maintain the ejectment. Clarke v. Clarke, Ir. ### 2. Effect of.

By 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, ss. 10, 11, no mere entry on land, or continual claim on or near it, is to have the effect of possession so as to preserve any right.

Of no Effect, after Statute has run.]—The effect of the 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, ss. 2—4, as to land, is, that after twenty years' possession adverse to a title, it is extinguished, so that it cannot be revived or revested by a re-entry after that period, upon the doctrine of remitter, because such an application of that doctrine requires that the former title should be in existence at the time of the re-entry; and the express provision in the statute, that no person shall be deemed in possession of lands merely by reason of an entry thereon, applies to cases of such re-entry. Brassington v. Llewellyn, 27 L. J., Ex. 297. S. C., at nisi prius, 1 F. & F. 27.

One whose title to real estate is barred by (3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27) the Statute of Limitations, if he subsequently makes an entry, is not thereby remitted to his former title. Bryan v. Cowdal, 21 W. R. 693.

When Entry, without Continuance in Possession, stays the Statute.]—If there is an adverse possession of land, that adverse possession will be interrupted (so as to cause the statute to cease to run as against the true owner) by the true owner entering upon the land, asserting his rights, and entirely removing that which constituted the possession of the tortious possessor. And as a matter of law it is unnecessary for the true owner to go on and shew that he

Inclosure of Waste—Merely Formal Entry by Lord.]—A., more than twenty years ago, without the permission of the lord, inclosed a small portion of the waste of a manor, on which he built himself a hut. In 1835, the encroachment having been presented at the lord's court, the then lord of the manor, accompanied by his steward, went to the premises, A.'s family being there, and, stating that he took possession, directed that a stone should be taken out of the wall of the hut and that a portion of the fence should be removed. All this was done in the absence of A. The lord and his steward then retired, and nothing more was done:—Held, that the acts so done by the lord did not amount to a dispossession of A., and a re-umption of possession by the lord, so as to entitle the latter to maintain ejectment within twenty years from that time. Doe d. Baker v. Combes, 9 C. B. 714; 19 L. J., C. P. 306.

—— Ejectment Proceedings—Actual Entry, What amounts to.]—In 1830 A. inclosed about six acres of waste land, and built a cottage thereon, and was allowed to remain in possession, without any acknowledgment or payment of rent, till 1845, when the steward of the owner of the fee served him with a declaration and notice in ejectment; whereupon A. consented to give up four acres of the land, on his being allowed to continue in possession of the cottage and the other two acres until his death. A. died in 1861:—Held, that that which took place in 1845 amounted to an actual entry, and operated as a determination of the original tenancy at will, and the creation of a new tenancy; and consequently that the period of limitation prescribed by 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, was to be reckoned from that time. Locke v. Matthews, 13 C. B. (N.S.) 753; 32 L. J., C. P. 98; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 874; 7 L. T. 824; 11 W. R. 343.

Ejectment Proceedings, not pursued, of no Effect.]—An ejectment and confession of lease, entry, and ouster, without further proceeding, is not such an actual entry as will be sufficient to avoid a fine or statute of limitation. Sterling v. Penlington, 9 Mod. 248.

Resuming Possession after Entry by Owner.]—Before the passing of 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, A. was let into possession of land as tenant at will to B. He never paid rent after that statute passed, and before twenty-one years B. entered and turned A. out. A. immediately afterwards resumed possession, but no fresh tenancy at will commenced, and he paid no rent:—Held, that B. might enter at any time before the lapse of twenty years from such resumption of possession by A., though after the lapse of twenty-one years from the first letting him into possession, and was not barred by ss. 2, 7 and 10. Randall v. Stevens, 2 El. & Bl. 641; 1 C. L. R. 642; 23 L. J., Q. B. 68; 18 Jur. 128.

Entry presumed to be on behalf of Infants.]—In 1833 A. died intestate as to his real estate, but having appointed by will, never proved, his brother B. his executor, and leaving two infant daughters his heirs in coparcenary. In 1834 one of the daughters, while an infant, died, whereupon her moiety of her father's real estate descended upon her surviving sister, who married during infancy, and was still under the disability of coverture. Upon the death of A., B. entered into possession of the whole of A.'s real estate, and received the rents from that period up to his death in 1858. B. during his possession paid the interest on a mortgage created by A. Considerable sums had also been laid out in improvements by B. Upon B.'s death his widow continued in possession of A.'s real estate, and she paid off and took a transfer to herself of the mortgage. In 1860 a bill was filed by the surviving daughter of A. and her husband against B.'s widow and administratrix and his infant heir for an account of the rents of A.'s real estate from his death in 1833. B.'s infant son, by his answer, claimed the benefit of the Statute of Limitations (3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27) as to the whole of A.'s real estate, but at the bar the right of the female to the moiety of the lands which descended upon her from her father was admitted:—Held, that the entry of B., who was named as the executor in A.'s will, and was the uncle of his infant daughters, could not be considered as that of a stranger, and an account was directed of the rents of A.'s real estate received by B. as bailiff from A.'s death up to his death in 1858, and by B.'s widow, as mortgagee in possession since the death of B.; and an inquiry was also directed as to the sums laid out in improvements by B. Pelley v. Bascombe, 33 L. J., Ch. 100; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 1120; 11 W. R. 706. Affirmed, 34 L. J., Ch. 233; 11 Jur. (N.S.) 52; 13 W. R. 306.

In 1832 the plaintiff, then an infant, became entitled to real estate in fee, and his father entered into possession. In 1836 he attained his majority. In 1852 the father died, having continued in possession of the property down to the time of his death. In 1854 he filed a bill in equity against the devisees of his father, for an account of the rents and profits:—Held, that the entry of the father in 1832 must be taken to have been as guardian of the infant, and not as a trespasser, and the Statute of Limitations, therefore, could not be set up. Thomas v. Thomas, 2 Kay & J. 79; 25 L. J., Ch. 159; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 1160; 4 W. R. 135.

Entry will not be construed as tortious if it can be construed rightful. Ib.

When a father has entered upon the estates of his infant children, the presumption is that he entered as their guardian and bailiff. Ib.

Semble, entry by a stranger might not have this effect. Ib.

If the father retain possession after the children attain twenty-one, such possession will be considered to be continued in the character in which he entered, so that an account will be directed, not from the filing of the bill, but if necessary from the time of entry. Ib.

In an adverse suit, in the nature of an ejectment suit, against a person in no fiduciary relation to the plaintiff, this account is only directed from the time of filing the bill. Ib.

See 37 & 38 Vict. c. 57, s. 8. By s. 10, the limit of time for recovering any money or legacy charged on land is to apply, notwithstanding an express trust.

Rent-Charge or Annuity.]—N., being entitled under his marriage settlement to certain lands, and also to a reversionary interest in government stock by deed, granted to B., for valuable consideration, an annuity for N.'s life charged on the lands and stock, covenanted with B. to pay the annuity, and granted the lands to a trustee to secure it. In 1856 N. became entitled, in possession, to the stock, and the trustees of the settlement transferred it into court, under the Trustee Relief Act, to the credit of the trusts of the settlement. The annuity was paid until 1867. In 1879 N. died; in 1885, on the distribution of the fund, a claim was lodged by B.'s executors for the arrears of the annuity accrued between 1867 and 1879:—Held, that the claim was barred by the Statutes of Limitations (3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, and 37 & 38 Vict. c. 57). Nugent's Trusts, In re, 19 L. R., Ir. 140.

By an indenture executed in 1833, real estate was conveyed to trustees and their heirs upon trust as to one moiety that immediately after the death of M. C. they should out of the moiety and the rents and profits thereof pay unto J. M., and to his heirs and assigns, or permit him or them to receive it, an annuity of 8*l.* half-yearly. M. C. died in 1857. No payment was ever made in respect of the annuity, and the annuitant first made a claim in 1884. The chief clerk had certified that he was entitled to a perpetual annuity. On summons to vary the certificate:—Held, that by s. 1 of the act 37 & 38 Vict. c. 57, no proceedings to recover any "rent" (which, inasmuch as by s. 9 the act must be construed with the 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, meant by the interpretation clause of that act, any annuity charged upon land) could be taken after twelve years from the time when the right first accrued; therefore if there had not been any trust, those twelve years having elapsed, none of the past instalments of the annuity could be recovered, and that the effect of s. 10 of the 37 & 38 Vict. c. 57, was that no payment of the annuity which became due before the application was made was recoverable, the remedy being only the same as if there had not been any trust. Hughes v. Coles, 53 L. J., Ch. 1047; 27 Ch. D. 231; 51 L. T. 226; 33 W. R. 27.

An annuity given by will and charged on all the testator's real and personal estate is within 37 & 38 Vict. c. 57, s. 8, and is barred by nonpayment of the gales for twelve years. Dower v. Dower, 16 L. R., Ir. 264.

A rent-charge is a "rent" within the Real Property Limitation Act, 1833, and the owner thereof is barred from the remedy of distress after the right to recover the rent-charge has become extinguished by nonpayment during the period limited by the statute. And the statute is not prevented from running by the fact that the land subject to the rent-charge is in the possession of a statutory corporation. Jones v. Withers, 74 L. T. 572—C. A.

An action upon a covenant in an indenture granting an annuity or a rent-charge issuing out of land may be brought within the period of twenty years limited by 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 42, s. 3, and is not barred by 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, s. 42, which limits the recovery of arrears of rent within six years. Strachan v. Thomas, 4 P. & D. 229; 12 A. & E. 536; 9 L. J., Q. B. 399; 4 Jur. 1183.

The 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, s. 42, limiting the period within which an action may be brought "to recover any land or rent" does not apply to an action on a covenant to pay a rent charged on land. Manning v. Phelps, 10 Ex. 59; 24 L. J., Ex. 62.

Three annuities, charged upon an estate, were granted in 1814. No payment had been made in respect of them since March, 1815. In January, 1855, a bill was filed for an account of the rents and profits of the estate, and payment of the arrears of the annuities:—Held, that the 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, s. 42, did not operate as a bar. Knight v. Bowyer, 26 L. J., Ch. 769; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 968. Affirmed, 27 L. J., Ch. 520; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 569; 6 W. R. 565—L. JJ.

Arrears of an annuity charged on a reversionary interest in land are recoverable more than six years after the same became payable, the 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, s. 42, having no application so long as the interest is reversionary. Wheeler v. Howell, 3 Kay & J. 198.

But an annuity bequeathed out of personalty is not within the 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, s. 42. Ashwell's Will, In re, 1 Johns. 112.

Account of arrears of an annuity decreed against a purchaser with notice, the length of time not being sufficient to raise a presumption of satisfaction. Wynn v. Williams, 5 Ves. 130.

A. grants an annuity to a trustee for B. for his life, and in the conveyance enters into a personal covenant with B. for payment of same; A. subsequently sells subject to said annuity:—Held, on a bill filed by B. against the purchasers to raise the arrears thereof (A. or his personal representative not being a party to the cause), that though there was an obligation imposed on the purchaser to indemnify A., yet that the court would not thus indirectly enforce this obligation, and thereby in effect evade the operation of the Statute of Limitations, and accordingly the account was limited to a period of six years prior to the filing of the bill. Harrisson v. Duignan, 2 Dr. & War. 295; 1 Con. & L. 376; 4 Ir. Eq. R. 562.

After the sale by the court of lands, upon which an annuity was charged, part of the purchase-money was retained, and the dividends thereof were applied in part payment of the annuity which they were insufficient to discharge in full:—Held, that the annuitant was entitled at any time to resort to the corpus to pay the portion of the annuity remaining unpaid, and that the Statute of Limitations did not apply. Belton's Estate, In re, [1894] 1 Ir. R. 537.

—— Charged on Estate in Jamaica.]—See Pitt v. Dacre, col. 152.

Annuity under a Will.]—An annuitant claiming under a will, who has never received the annuity, is barred from his remedy of distress or action by 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, when more than twenty years have elapsed since the right to the annuity first accrued to him. James v. Salter, 4 Scott, 168; 3 Bing. (N.C.) 544; 5 D. P. C. 496; 3 Hodges, 70; 6 L. J., C. P. 171; 1 Jur. 135.

Trust to Pay Annuities out of Rents, or Proceeds of Sale, of Real Estate.]—A testator, who died in 1795, devised his real estates to trustees, in trust to sell, and out of the interest of the proceeds, and out of the rents of the estates till they should be sold, to pay certain annuities. No payments had been made in respect of any of the annuities for more than twenty years before the bill was filed; but the trustees entered into possession of the estates on the testator's death, and the surviving trustee continued in possession until about eleven years prior to the filing of the bill:—Held, that the plaintiff's right to the annuities was not barred by the Statute of Limitations. Ward v. Arch, 12 Sim. 472.

Possession of the Estate charged taken by Second Annuitant—First Annuitant barred by Length of Time.]—By an indenture dated in April, 1810, an annuity was granted to S. charged upon real estate, and by an indenture dated in April, 1820, the same property was charged by the same parties with an annuity payable to A. This annuity was void for want of a proper memorial, but until the filing of the bill it had been always treated as a valid annuity, and in September, 1821, A., under a proviso in his annuity deed, entered into possession and receipt of the rents and profits of the estate, and remained in undisturbed possession of them till his death in 1829, when his personal representative took possession. In 1835 S. died, and in November, 1839, his personal representative filed a bill to set aside A.'s annuity, and to establish his own. The bill alleged that S. had received payment of his annuity down to October, 1820, and that A. had obtained possession of the premises under misrepresentation. These allegations, however, were not proved against A., nor was it proved that he ever had notice of S.'s title, but the allegation of payment was admitted by the grantors of the annuity, who were co-defendants with A. in the suit. Under these circumstances, and considering that S. had never been in possession of the property:—Held, that the bill must be dismissed with costs as against A. on the ground of length of time. Searle v. Colt, 1 Y. & Coll. C. C. 36.

Quære, whether where an annuitant, who has never been in possession, claims to enforce his security, the twenty years against him should not, under the 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, begin to run from the date of the annuity deed, and not from the date of the last payment. In this case the deed was thirty years old, and no payment was proved at all, nor any alleged for the last fifteen years, and the court dismissed the claim on the joint effect of laches and the statute. Ib.

Time runs against Annuities, where no Trust.]—Where, in execution of a power, cestui que trust appoints trustees to convey to use of A., and charges estate with annuities, it is a conveyance of the legal estate to A., and not a trust, so that length of time will run against annuities, if not demanded. Weston v. Bowes, 9 Mod. 309.

Periodical Sums charged on Land—Tithes.]—The statute and decree of 37 Hen. 8, c. 12, provided that the inhabitants of the city of London for the time being should yearly for ever pay their tithes in respect of their houses after certain rates:—Held, that these payments imposed were "annuities or periodical sums of money charged upon land" within the meaning of the Statute of Limitations (3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, s. 1), and that that statute (as amended by 37 & 38 Vict. c. 57) afforded a defence to the action. Payne v. Esdaile, 58 L. J., Ch. 299; 13 App. Cas. 613; 59 L. T. 568; 37 W. R. 273; 53 J. P. 100—H. L. (E.)

Tithe Rent-Charge — "Composition" — "Rent."]—A tithe rent-charge under the Irish Tithe Commutation Act (1 & 2 Vict. c. 109) is not a "composition" within s. 1 of the Statute of Limitations (3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27), but a "rent" within s. 2 of the statute, and therefore, where a tithe-rent charge was transferred by act of parliament from a spiritual corporation sole to a lay corporation:—Held, that at the time of the transfer the period of limitation against the transferees should be reckoned from the time when the right to enter, distrain or bring an action first accrued to the former spiritual corporation sole through whom they claimed. Irish Land Commission v. Grant, 10 App. Cas. 14; 52 L. T. 228; 33 W. R. 357—H. L. (Ir.) —— Decree for Arrears stays statute.]—A civil bill decree for arrears of tithe rent-charge, obtained within twelve years before action, though unsatisfied, saves the tithe rent-charge from being barred by the Statute of Limitations. Irish Land Commission v. Junkin, 24 L. R., Ir. 40.

Covenant to pay Rent or Royalty—Arrears.]—A lease, dated in 1859, of mines contained a covenant by the lessees to pay a rent or royalty in respect of minerals from other lands carried by, or by the authority of, the lessees over the surface of the mining ground. In 1883 an action on the covenant was brought to recover royalties in respect of minerals so carried since 1866:—Held, that the act 37 & 38 Vict. c. 57, s. 8, did not apply; but that on the ruling in Hunter v. Nockolds (1 Mac. & Gor. 640), the plaintiff was entitled to an account of the royalties become payable since 1866. Darley v. Tennant, 53 L. T. 257.

Copyhold Quit-Rent—Nonpayment.]—A quit-rent payable in respect of a copyhold tenement is liable to be barred under the Statutes of Limitation on nonpayment or non-acknowledgment for twelve years. Howitt v. Harrington (Earl), 62 L. J., Ch. 571; [1893] 2 Ch. 497; 3 R. 568; 68 L. T. 703; 41 W. R. 664.

A defendant in replevin avowed the taking of the goods for arrears of an ancient quit-rent issuing out of a tenement held of him as lord of a manor by fealty and rent. The last payment was made on the 25th of January, 1825, for rent due on the 4th of October, 1824. The distress was made on the 13th of May, 1845:—Held, that by the operation of 2 & 3 Will. 4, c. 27, ss. 2, 3, and 34, the rent was extinguished by the lapse of twenty years from the day on which the last payment was made, and that the limitation need not be pleaded specially, but was available under a plea of non tenuit. De Beauvoir v. Owen, 5 Ex. 166; 19 L. J., Ex. 177—Ex. Ch.

Discontinuance of Receipt of Rent, What is—Former Owner of Land continuing to pay Fee-farm Rent instead of Purchaser.]—To bring a person rightfully entitled to a rent within s. 3 of the Statute of Limitations (3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27), so as to divest him of his rights, there must be a discontinuance of the receipt by him, either by not applying for payment, or omitting to enforce his remedies with knowledge that the payment has not been made. Adnam v. Sandwich (Earl), 46 L. J., Q. B. 612; 2 Q. B. D. 485.

In 1812 lands, subject to a fee-farm rent, were sold by C. to E., and subsequently became vested in the plaintiff. From 1812 to 1872 C. and his successors in title continued regularly to pay the fee-farm rent, notwithstanding that they had ceased to hold any of the lands out of which the rent issued. During this time neither the defendant nor his predecessors had any notice that C. had parted with his interest in the lands by the sale in 1812. In 1872 the successors of C. declined to continue payment of the rent in question, and the defendant in 1874 applied to the plaintiff, the then owner, for the two years' arrears. The plaintiff declined to pay the rent, and denied her liability to do so. Accordingly a distress was levied, whereupon the plaintiff replevied and brought an action, alleging that the receipt of the rent having been discontinued for more than twenty years, the defendant's title to the rent was barred by 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, ss. 2, 3:—Held, that the defendant was entitled to judgment, on the ground that there had been no discontinuance of the receipt of the rent within the meaning of the statute. Also, because, on the above facts, the fair presumption was that the continual payment had been made by C. and his successors under some arrangement entered into at the time of the purchase by E. in 1812, to which the latter was a party, and by which his successors were bound. Ib.

Lands subject to an ancient rent were sold in 1766, and the purchaser indemnified against it by the vendor, who held other lands similarly charged, and whose representatives continued to pay it, no payment being made by the owner of the sold lands since 1766:—Held, that the receipt of the rent was not discontinued as to the sold lands, and the Statute of Limitations did not begin to run. Dublin (Archbishop) v. Trimleston (Lord), 12 Ir. Eq. R. 251.

Plea of Nonpayment of Rent-Charge.]—To a bill filed for payment of a rent-charge, one of the defendants pleaded twenty-six years' possession, without accounting for or paying over to the plaintiff any part of the rents and profits. Plea allowed, but, under the circumstances, ordered to stand over till a co-defendant had answered, pleaded, or demurred. Baldwin v. Peach, 1 Y. & Coll. 453.

Devise in Fee of Lands charged to Tenant for Life of Charge.]—The owner of lands subject to a charge, and who had covenanted to pay the charge, devised the fee simple of the lands to the tenant for life of the charge. The tenant for life entered into possession of the lands and continued in possession for more than twelve years without making any claim upon the personal estate of the testator:—Held, that the claim was barred as against the personal estate. England, In re, Stewart v. England, 65 L. J., Ch. 21; [1895] 2 Ch. 820; 12 R. 539; 73 L. T. 237; 44 W. R. 119—C. A.

Statute does not run while Land charged in Possession of Owner of Charge.]—In 1773 a tenant for life paid off a charge of 25,000*l.* affecting the settled estates. He died in 1837, having in the meantime taken no steps for keeping the charge alive:—Held, that notwithstanding more than twenty years had elapsed, and that there had been no part payment or acknowledgment, the charge still existed in favour of his representatives, and had not been defeated by the Statute of Limitations (3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, s. 40):—Held, also, that the statute cannot be applied to a case where there is no assignable person liable to pay the charge—no person who, by the delay, could be induced to suppose that the charge was abandoned or merged, and where the rent, out of which the interest of the charge ought to be paid, is receivable by and belongs to the same person who is entitled to the interest. Burrell v. Egremont (Earl), 7 Beav. 205; 13 L. J., Ch. 309; 8 Jur. 587.

Nonpayment by Trustees of Income of Sum charged—Remaindermen not barred.]—A charge on lands was vested in 1793 in trustees for husband and wife for life, then to pay the principal to the children, but there was no power to trustees to give discharges. No payment was made after 1826, and the surviving parent died in 1845:—Held, that the charge was not barred by the statute. M'Carthy v. Daunt, 11 Ir. Eq. R. 29.

Charge in Settlement—When Statute begins to run against Remainderman.]—See Carroll v. Hargrave, col. 177.

Arrears of Interest on Charge paid out of Produce of Sale of Estate—Statute does not run against Remainderman's Right to be recouped out of Assets of Tenant for Life till Tenant for Life's Death.]—In 1827 C. became entitled to an estate as tenant for life in possession, with remainder to his first and other sons, in tail male, and remained in possession till November, 1867, when he died intestate and unmarried. C. during the whole of his possession was a lunatic, and the estate was managed by his committee. The rents were brought into court in the lunacy matter, and invested, and the accumulations of them formed the principal part of the assets of C., which had since his death been transferred in an administration suit, in which the vice-chancellor directed that a certain sum should be set apart, in order to meet the demand of the plaintiff. In 1836 a portion of the estates, of which C. was tenant for life, was sold in a cause, to pay paramount incumbrances which affected the whole estate. The incumbrances were paid out of the proceeds of the sale, and the payments included an arrear of interest which had accrued during the possession of C. In that cause the inheritance was represented by the then first remainderman in tail male in esse, who was the eldest brother of the plaintiff, and who died in 1846 without issue male. Upon the death of C., in 1867, the plaintiff succeeded to the estate as tenant in tail male, and in 1869 instituted a suit to be recouped out of the assets of C. the sum which had been paid out of the proceeds of the sold lands on foot of arrears of interest which ought to have been paid by C. out of the rents of his life estate:—Held, that the claim formed a charge or lien on the estate of the tenant for life, and might be enforced as such against his assets, which consisted chiefly of the surplus rents of the life estate; and that such a claim came within the Statute of Limitations (3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, s. 40), and would be barred by the lapse of twenty years after a present right to receive the money had accrued to a person capable of giving a discharge for it; but that a present right to receive the principal did not accrue till the death of C., the tenant for life, and that, therefore, the claim was not barred by that section. Kirwan v. Kennedy, 3 Ir. R. Eq. 472.

Held, also, that the merely lying by, during a tenancy for life, by persons who could not until its termination have received the money, and who, possibly, might not ever have become entitled to the possession of the estate, did not constitute laches, and that there was not any evidence of acquiescence. Ib.

Arrears of Interest in respect of Sums charged on Land.]—See B, XI. post (col. 322).

Right to distrain on any Part of Estate charged kept alive by Payment from Occupier of One Part.]—Where a rent-charge had been received from the occupier of one part of the premises charged down to the present time, and then, for the first time, had been levied by distress on the occupier of another part, which for more than twenty years had been in a separate ownership, and the owner or occupier of which had never paid the rent before:—Held, that the right to distrain for the rent on that portion of the premises charged was not barred by 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27. Woodcock v. Titterton, 12 W. R. 865.

Charge in Son's Will of Father's Debts on Son's Realty.]—A., who had a life interest in certain estates, gave a bond to a creditor, and a warrant of attorney to confess judgment for its amount. No judgment was entered up. A. died within three years of the date of the bond, leaving no assets, real or personal. B., his son, the first tenant in tail of the estates, entered into possession, and expressed, in letters to the creditor, a wish to pay his father's debts, but would not give any security for them. B. made a will, in which, reciting his own wish, and a promise in conformity with it, made by him to his father and mother, he said, "And in case I should not be able to fulfil my intentions during my lifetime, and that I should not have a sufficient fund for that purpose arising from my personal estate, I hereby charge all my just debts, and also all the debts of my late father, A., which remain unpaid at the time of my decease, upon all my real estates wheresoever." He then directed his trustees to stand seised of all his estates, "subject, in manner aforesaid, to the payment of all my just debts, and to the debts of my father." B. survived his father many years. The obligee of the bond filed a charge thereof against the trustees under the son's will:—Held, that the debts of the father which were not barred by the statute at the death of the father were charges on the real estates of the son. O'Connor v. Haslam, 5 H. L. Cas. 170.

Legacy charged on Contingent Remainder in Land—"Present right to receive."]—Where a legacy is charged upon a contingent remainder in land in exoneration of the personal estate, and the charge is to take effect after the death of a tenant for life, the "present right to receive" accrues to the legatee at the death of the tenant for life, and not on the happening of the contingency. Owen, In re, 63 L. J., Ch. 749; [1894] 3 Ch. 220; 8 R. 566; 71 L. T. 181; 43 W. R. 55.

Legacy charged on Real Estate.]—When a legacy, charged upon the residuary real estate, was bequeathed to trustees, for B. for life, and after his death for his children, and there was not during his life, from 1806 to 1863, any payment made on account of the legacy, or any trustee capable of giving a discharge for it:—Held, that the Statute of Limitations did not begin to run against the children until the death of B. Carroll v. Hargrave, Ir. R. 5 Eq. 123.

Where lands were devised, charged with the payment of a legacy, the trust, although an express one, is within the 40th section of the 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, and not within the 25th section of that act. The subject of the two sections is different, the 25th relating to lands and rent, the 40th to money charged upon land. Knox v. Kelly, 6 Ir. Eq. R. 279.

See Ravenscroft v. Frisby; Sheppard v. Duke; Pigott v. Jefferson, col. 235; Proud v. Proud, col. 233; and Cocking v. Golding, col. 236.

Paving Expenses—Charge upon Premises—Action to enforce, When barred.]—By the Local Government Act, 1858, s. 62 (corresponding to s. 257 of the Public Health Act, 1875), it was provided that where a local board incurred expenses for which the owner of the premises in respect of which the same were incurred was liable, such expenses should be a charge upon the premises in respect of which the same were incurred. A local board having completed paving works within the above section in 1875, apportioned the amount among the owners of the premises in respect of which the works were done in 1886, and in 1888 commenced an action against the owners to enforce the charge of the amount of the expenses upon the premises:—Held, that the amount of the expenses became a charge upon the premises at the date of the completion of the works, and that the twelve years prescribed by the Real Property Limitation Act, 1874, commenced to run from that date, and that therefore the action was barred. Hornsey Local Board v. Monarch Investment Building Society, 58 L. J., Q. B. 418; 23 Q. B. D. 149; 37 W. R. 556; 53 J. P. 774. Affirmed, 59 L. J., Q. B. 105; 24 Q. B. D. 1; 61 L. T. 867; 38 W. R. 85—C. A.

Money due on Bond.]—Money due on a bond by an ancestor is not a sum of money payable out of land within s. 40. Roddam v. Morley, 1 De G. & J. 1; 26 L. J., Ch. 438; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 449; 5 W. R. 510.

Claim against Inheritance by Tenant for Life who has Paid Bonds.]—See Morley v. Morley, col. 319.

Equitable Charge.]—Equitable charge on real estates not barred by length of time without demand, though considerable and though at length brought forward under circumstances not favourable, yet not equivalent to or affording presumption of release; account of interest against tenant for life decreed and not limited to six years. Stackhouse v. Barnston, 10 Ves. 453.

In 1816 A. mortgaged an estate to B., and covenanted to pay the mortgage-money; and, in July, 1817, A. and B., as his surety, conveyed the property to C., on trust to sell and pay, first, a debt due from A. to C., which A. and B. also covenanted to pay; and, secondly, to pay B.'s debt. In August following A. executed to B. an equitable charge on other property. In 1834 C. sold the estate, and applied the produce in part payment of his demand. In 1842 a bill was filed by B. against A. to realise the equitable charge:—Held, that until the trust of the deed of July, 1817, was exhausted in 1834, the covenant in the deed of 1816 subsisted wholly unaffected by time; that the debt and the personal remedy to recover it subsisted at the time the bill was filed; and that the equitable charge was therefore then operative. Bennett v. Cooper, 9 Beav. 252; 15 L. J., Ch. 315; 10 Jur. 507.

Right to share in Produce of Sale of Real Estate.]—A testator devised his real estate to trustees upon trust to sell, and divide the produce amongst certain persons, of whom A. was one. He appointed A. and B. his executors, who proved the will in 1816. Whether the share was a sum charged on or payable out of land within the 40th section of the statute 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, quære. Pawsey v. Barnes, 20 L. J., Ch. 393; 15 Jur. 943.

Before 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27.]—The Statute of Limitations did not bar a demand for a rent-charge. Cupit v. Jackson, M'Clel. 495; 13 Price, 721; 28 R. R. 735.

VI. ACKNOWLEDGMENT.

See also ante, A, VII. 1, col. 89, and A, VII. 3, col. 125.

By s. 5 of 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 42, an action on an indenture, specialty, or recognizance, may be brought within twenty years after an acknowledgment by writing or part-payment or part satisfaction. By 19 & 20 Vict. c. 97, s. 14, part payment by one co-debtor is not to bind another. As to acknowledgments of debts secured by mortgage, judgment, or lien, or charged upon land, or of legacies, by writing or part payment, see 37 & 38 Vict. c. 57, s. 8. As to acknowledgments by writing of arrears of rent-charge, and of interest on legacies, &c., see 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, s. 42. As to acknowledgments in writing of the title of the person entitled by the person in possession, see 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, s. 14.

By whom made.]—The acknowledgment provided for by s. 5 of the 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 42, in order to take a specialty debt out of the operation of that statute, need not be made by the person chargeable to the person entitled, or amount to a promise to pay. Moodie v. Bannister, 4 Drew. 433: 28 L. J., Ch. 881; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 402; 7 W. R. 278.

Therefore an admission of a bond debt contained in an answer of the executors of the obligor in a suit to which the obligee was not a party is sufficient to take the bond debt out of the operation of the statute. Ib.

By Tenant for Life.]—Payment by a devisee for life of interest on a specialty of his testator, in which the heirs were bound:—Held, to be an acknowledgment made "by the party liable by virtue of such specialty," within the meaning of the 5th section of the 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 42, and as such, sufficient to keep the right of action alive in its integrity against all parties interested in remainder. Roddam v. Morley, 1 De G. & J. 1; 26 L. J., Ch. 438; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 449; 5 W. R. 510.

A., by his will, in 1826, settled the greater part of his lands on F. for life, with remainders over in strict settlement, and died in 1827, leaving M. his executor, with ample means to pay all debts, and charging the debts, in exoneration of his principal lands, on particular funds. At the time of his decease he was indebted on bond to R. F., the tenant for life, paid the interest on the bond up to his decease in 1847, since which no interest had been paid, or any acknowledgment made of the debt. On a bill in 1855 against the executor and devisees in remainder under the will of J.:—Held, that the payment of interest by the tenant for life was sufficient to take the case out of the statute. Ib.

A bond debt, by which the heir is bound, is not a debt charged upon or payable out of land within s. 40 of the 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, but an action upon it is simply a personal action, and is barred by the 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 42, ss. 3, 4, 5. Ib.

By a settlement of 1813, a sum of 500*l.* was charged on lands, payable on the death of the settlor, who died in 1846. At that time the lands were limited to R. D. for life, with remainder to J. D. in tail. No interest was paid, nor was there any acknowledgment of the charge by any one until the 12th of May, 1873, when R. D., without the consent or knowledge of J. D., paid the person then entitled to the charge the amount thereof, and six years' interest, and took an assignment of the charge to a trustee for himself. On the 19th of May, 1873, R. D. and J. D. joined in disentailing the lands. No notice of the charge, or the recent assignment of it, was taken in the disentailing deed. In an action brought in 1879, to raise the charge by a sale of the lands:—Held, that J. D. was not bound by the payment of interest in 1873, and that the charge was barred by the Statute of Limitations (3 & 4 Will. 4. c. 27), s. 40. Becher v. Delacour, 11 L. R., Ir. 187.

Where tenant for life of a mortgaged estate by deed admitted the payment of interest on the mortgage, this was not a sufficient acknowledgment of the debt as against the remainderman to prevent the Statute of Limitations from operating. Gregson v. Hindley, 10 Jur. 383.

Semble, also, that where a debt has been due for more than twenty years, a general allegation that all interest has been paid is not sufficient to support a proof that interest was paid during the twenty years. Ib.

An acknowledgment, by a tenant for life of a settled estate, of an arrear of interest due on a mortgage affecting the inheritance is binding after the death of the tenant for life on the person entitled in remainder, to save the bar of the 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, s. 42. Fitzmaurice, In re, 15 Ir. Ch. R. 445.

A minor's estate was subject to a mortgage on which more than six years' interest was due. On a reference to the master to inquire what charges affected the minor's estate, and the principal and interest due thereon, it appeared that certain payments had been made for interest generally:—Held, that the payments should be appropriated to the interest which accrued within six years. Ib.

By Personal Representative.]—Under 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, s. 5, where creditors of a testator had a claim against land as against mortgagees of an equitable life estate devised by the will, and interest on the debt had been regularly paid by the testator's legal personal representatives, who also had the legal estate in the land:—Held, that this payment did not operate to prevent the statute from running in favour of the mortgagees. Coope v. Cresswell, 36 L. J., Ch. 114; L. R. 2 Ch. 112; 15 L. T. 427; 15 W. R. 242.

Payment by Administrator not reviving Right to sue for Administration.]—See Johnson, In re, Sly v. Blake, col. 233.

By Trustees.]—Where an estate is devised to a trustee in trust to sell and pay debts, and subject thereto in trust for A., an acknowledgment of a debt in writing, signed by the trustee or his agent, is sufficient to preserve the creditor's right of suit for twenty years after the acknowledgment. St. John (Lord) v. Boughton, 9 Sim. 219; 7 L. J., Ch. 208; 2 Jur. 413.

The testator gave an annuity to A., and charged the same upon all his freehold and leasehold estates. He afterwards devised his freehold estates to trustees (who were also his executors) upon trust, subject to the charge, to and for the use of his grandson and his heirs. The trustees being in possession of the estates paid the annuity to A. during the minority of the grandson, and within twenty years before the filing of the bill by A. against the grandson:—Held, that such payment of the annuity by the trustees prevented the claim of A. to the annuity from being barred by the Statute of Limitations (3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, ss. 2, 3). That the grandson was not a trustee for the annuitant within the 25th section of the statute 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, or otherwise, and that under the 42nd section of the same statute the annuitant was not entitled to recover the arrears of the annuity for more than six years before the filing of the bill. Francis v. Grorer, 5 Hare, 39; 15 L. J., Ch. 99; 10 Jur. 280.

By Agents.]—Payment of interest on an Irish mortgage made by a receiver appointed over the estates mortgaged, is within the terms of the 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, s. 40, payment by an agent of the party liable. Chinnery v. Evans, 11 H. L. Cas. 115; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 855; 11 L. T. 68; 13 W. R. 20.

The words in s. 40, "by the person by whom the same shall be payable, or his agent," apply equally to the making of a payment, and the signing an acknowledgment. Ib.

The payment of interest on a mortgage by a mere stranger would not be a payment within 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, ss. 40, 42. Ib.

A payment of principal or interest of money charged on lands by a person expressly or impliedly authorised to make it is equivalent to payment by the party liable, so as to prevent the operation of the Statute of Limitations; but a payment by a stranger will not. Homan v. Andrews, 1 Ch. Rep. 106.

Parties being seised of the lands A. and B., subject to a term to pay off incumbrances, conveyed A. to a purchaser, and B. to trustees, to indemnify and protect A. from all charges and incumbrances; and W., the owner of B., subject to the trust, subsequently covenanted to pay the interest of one of the charges:—Held, that payments by W. were payments by an agent to save the bar of the statute as against the purchaser of A. Ib.

But, semble, the payment of interest by the owner of B., after the expiration of twenty years, would not revive the right to proceed against A. Ib.

On the death of a mortgagor in 1833, his widow (who was entitled to dower) took possession of the mortgaged estate, with the consent of the co-heirs, and she paid interest on the mortgage. In 1858, the mortgagee instituted a suit to realise his mortgage, in which it did not appear that any interest had been paid by one of the co-heirs during the interval:—Held, that the payment of the interest by the widow prevented the statute running, for either such co-heir was himself barred, or the payment of interest had been made on his behalf. Ames v. Mannering, 26 Beav. 583.

By Devisee of one Moiety of Estate.]—Real estate was devised to two persons in equal moieties, charged, as to each moiety, with the payment of half the testator's debts. There was also a general charge of all his real estate for payment of debts:—Held, that the payment of interest by the devisee of one moiety did not keep the debt alive as against the devisee of the other moiety. Dickenson v. Teesdale, 1 De G. J. & S. 52; 32 L. J., Ch. 37; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 237; 7 L. T. 655.

By Surety.]—Judgment was obtained by V., on a joint bond and warrant of attorney, against A. and B. in 1815, A. being the principal debtor. On the 16th of March, 1820, A. wrote to V.'s agent, "You have enclosed 250*l.* to my credit, on account of V.'s interest." In the account-book kept by V.'s agent (since dead), appeared an entry by the agent, of the 17th of March, 1820, charging himself with a bill for 50*l.*, drawn by A., and 100*l.* in cash from A. In 1822 V.'s attorney applied by letter to B., the surety, calling for payment of the amount of the above debt, and B., on that occasion, wrote to V.'s attorney the receipt of his letter, "applying for payment of his, B.'s, and A.'s joint bond"; and soon after B.'s agent wrote a letter to V.'s attorney, inclosing a proposal of terms upon which the matters should be arranged by A., and said, "this being done, it is hoped the judgment against B. will be satisfied." The bill was filed in 1839 against the tenant for life, under a settlement of 1817, of the estates of B.:—Held, that there was sufficient payment and acknowledgment to take the case out of the Statute of Limitations, 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27. Vincent v. Willington, Longf. & T. 456.

Quære, does that statute repeal the 8 Geo. 1, c. 4 (Irish). Ib.

In 1824, S., who was entitled to a legacy charged upon land devised to a tenant for life, mortgaged it to B.; and at the same time S., and the tenant for life as surety, gave a bond to B. as collateral security for the amount. S. died in 1847, and the tenant for life in 1851. In the administration of the testator's estate, B. claimed to be paid the amount (legacy and interest) due to him; and thereupon the widow and legal personal representative presented a petition praying that the legacy might be ordered to be paid to her, on the ground that the Statute of Limitations had barred the right of B. to recover the sum due on the mortgage. The widow alleged that no interest was paid by S. after 1828, but B. that he had received, previous to and in 1846, interest in part from the tenant for life and surety:—Held, upon both branches of the case, the operation of the Statute of Limitations, and the acknowledgment by a co-obligor of a bond, that the mortgagee was entitled to the legacy, and that the petition must be dismissed, but without costs. Seager v. Aston, 26 L. J., Ch. 809; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 481; 5 W. R. 548.

By Executors to Legatee's Husband.]—H. died in 1811, having bequeathed a legacy to a woman who afterwards married the plaintiff. In December, 1825, the two executors of H. gave the plaintiff a written acknowledgment whereby they separately and jointly acknowledged that they owed the plaintiff 150*l.* for the legacy, and 50*l.* for interest. In 1835 the plaintiff's wife died:—Held, that the written memorandum amounted to an acknowledgment taking the claim to the legacy out of the operation of the statute. Holland v. Clark, 1 Y. & Coll. C. C. 151.

By Purchaser's Solicitor after Time expired.]—In 1811 the vendor contracted to sell lands; the vendee entered, but did not pay his purchase-money. The vendor became bankrupt. In 1834 the solicitor of the purchaser (or of those claiming under him) wrote to the solicitor for the assignees of the vendor, that the purchase-money was lying idle:—Held, sufficient to take the case out of the statute 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, s. 40; and that a bill, in 1844, for specific performance by the assignees against the purchaser was not too late. Toft v. Stephenson, 1 De G. M. & G. 28; 21 L. J., Ch. 129; 15 Jur. 1187. Reversing 1 Hare, 7. And see S. C., 5 De G. M. & G. 735.

By Mortgagor.]—A foreclosure action is an action for the recovery of land, and is therefore not within s. 40 of 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, but is within ss. 2 and 21, and consequently within the supplementary enactment of 1 Vict. c. 28. Harlock v. Ashberry, 51 L. J., Ch. 394; 19 Ch. D. 539; 46 L. T. 356; 30 W. R. 327—C. A.

A payment to come within the 1 Vict. c. 28, must be a payment of principal or interest and must be made by the mortgagor or some person bound to pay principal or interest on his behalf. Ib.

So the word "paid" in 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, s. 40, involves by implication the addition of "by the person liable to pay." Therefore a payment of rent made by a tenant of the mortgaged property to the mortgagee in consequence of a notice by the mortgagee requiring the rent to be paid to him is not such a payment. Ib.

—— In Mortgage Deed.]—A mortgage deed was dated the 27th October, 1827, but was not executed until the 23rd August, 1834, and it contained a covenant by the mortgagor admitting the title to be in the mortgagee, his heirs, and assigns:—Held, that this was a sufficient acknowledgment of title to enable the mortgagee to recover within twenty years of the execution of the deed. Jaynes v. Hughes, 10 Ex. 430; 3 C. L. R. 188; 24 L. J., Ex. 115; 3 W. R. 65.

—— Recital in Deed—Second Mortgagee not bound.]—An acknowledgment by a mortgagor of more than six years' arrears of interest being due upon a first mortgage does not preclude a puisne mortgagee from relying on the Statute of Limitations (3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27). Bolding v. Lane, 1 De G. J. & S. 122; 32 L. J., Ch. 219; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 506; 11 W. R. 386.

Therefore where a mortgagor was, but a second mortgagee was not, a party to a transfer of a first mortgage, the interest on which was, and was in the transfer recited to be, upwards of six years in arrear:—Held, that notwithstanding this recital, the second mortgagee was entitled to redeem the first mortgagee, on payment of principal and six years' arrears only of interest. Ib.

The words in s. 42 of 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, "by whom the same was payable," do not denote merely the persons who are legally bound by contract to pay the interest, but all the persons against whom the payment of such arrears might be enforced. Ib.

—— Recital in Deed—Payment of Interest by Assignee.]—A mortgagor assigned the equity of redemption by a deed, which contained a recital that all the interest had been paid within twenty years of the commencement of the action, and a covenant by the assignee to pay the principal and future interest to the mortgagee, and to indemnify the mortgagor in case of default. The mortgagee was no party to the deed, but continued to receive the interest upon the mortgage from the assignee of the equity of redemption:—Held, that the recital in the deed was evidence of an acknowledgment by part payment of interest within twenty years. Forsyth v. Bristowe, 8 Ex. 716; 22 L. J., Ex. 255; 17 Jur. 675; 1 W. R. 356.

Held, also, that the payment of the interest by the assignee of the equity of redemption was a sufficient acknowledgment to take the case out of the statute as against the mortgagor. Ib.

In an action on a mortgage deed of houses, executed in 1824 by the defendant in favour of the plaintiff's testator, to secure payment of 400*l.* and interest, the plaintiff gave in evidence a deed executed by the defendant within twenty years before action brought, but to which deed the testator was no party. The deed, after reciting that the defendant had executed a mortgage of the houses to the testator, for securing to him 320*l.* and interest, stated that he conveyed that and other property to trustees on trust to sell, and out of the proceeds to pay off all the mortgages and other incumbrances affecting the property, and then to pay the creditors, with an ultimate trust as to the surplus:—Held, that this was not an acknowledgment within s. 5, so as to take the case out of the operation of s. 3. Howcutt v. Bonser, 3 Ex. 491; 18 L. J., Ex. 262.

—— After Assignment of Equity of Redemption—Payment of Interest by Person not shewn to be Agent of Party liable—Entry in Mortgagee's Diary of Receipt of Interest, Admissibility of.]—N., a solicitor, lent money to S., a client, on equitable mortgage, and on the 12th of February, 1866, an account was settled between them as to the amount due. After this there were no entries relating to S. in N.'s ledger. In July, 1878, S. assigned the mortgaged property to his two nephews, subject to all incumbrances. In a diary kept by N., who had since died, was an entry dated the 10th of September, 1878, of the receipt of money from S. for interest. There was nothing else to shew payment of interest after 1866. S., in 1863, mortgaged other property to A., a client of N. N. paid interest on the mortgage and charged S. with it in account till 1866. After this N. went on paying interest to A., who believed that it came from S., but it was not shewn that N. had ever acted as solicitor to S. after 1866, nor was there anything shewing that N. was authorised to make the payments as agent for S.:—Held, that assuming the entry to be admissible in evidence, as to which the court gave no opinion, it proved nothing but a payment on account of interest by a person who when he made it had no interest in the mortgaged property, and was not shewn to be agent of the assignees, and that this could not take the case out of the statute as against the assignees, and that the payments of interest after 1866 did not take the case out of the Statute of Limitations. On appeal:—Held (without pronouncing any opinion on the question arising under the Statute of Limitations, and assuming the entry to be admissible), there was no evidence to connect the entry with the property in question. Newbould v. Smith, 14 App. Cas. 423; 61 L. T. 814—H. L. (E.) See S. C., 55 L. J., Ch. 788; 34 W. R. 690—C. A.

—— Payment by other than Mortgagor or Agent.]—The rule that the only person whose payment on account will prevent foreclosure from being barred is the mortgagor, or his privy in estate, or the agent of either of them, must be qualified so as to include any person who by the terms of the mortgage contract is entitled to make payments. Where H. and W. each mortgaged some property to the obligee of their joint and several bond, to secure the amount of the obligation, the latter as between the debtors being surety only, H. being bound to pay principal and interest, and expressly named as a person entitled to redeem both mortgages, W. never having made any payment at all:—Held, in a suit for foreclosure, that the period of limitation prescribed by s. 30 of c. 84 of the Consolidated Statutes of New Brunswick ran in respect of both mortgages from the date of the last payment of interest by H. Lewin v. Wilson, 55 L. J., P. C. 75; 11 App. Cas. 639; 55 L. T. 410—P. C.

—— Payment by One of Two Mortgagors.]—The Mercantile Law Amendment Act, 1856, s. 14, does not apply to a personal action brought to recover money secured by a mortgage of land. Bailie v. Irwin, [1897] 2 Ir. R. 614.

—— Payment of Interest by Mortgagor keeps alive Remedy against Surety on collateral Bond.]—See Powers, In re, Lindsell v. Phillips, col. 318.

By Mortgagee.]—Acknowledgment of mortgage-title within twenty years of bill filed maintains equity of redemption. Hodle v. Healey, 6 Madd. 181; 1 Ves. & B. 536; 22 R. R. 270. S. P., Rayner v. Oastler, 6 Madd. 274.

A mortgagor mortgaged estate X. by a deed containing a borrowing clause. On a further loan he mortgaged Y. to secure the entire money borrowed:—Held, that a conveyance of X. by the mortgagee's representatives, treating it as a mortgage only, was, under the old law, a sufficient acknowledgment to keep alive the right to redeem Y. Ball v. Riversdale (Lord), Beat. 550.

A mortgagor will be entitled to redemption against a mortgagee, who, after more than twenty years' possession, makes admissions which prove that he has all along considered himself only as mortgagee. Cutler v. Cremer, 1 L. J. (O.S.) Ch. 108 ; 6 Madd. 253.

In 1814 A. mortgaged an estate to B. in fee, and subsequently, but in the same year, granted an annuity out of the estate to C. By a deed of even date with the grant of the annuity, A. conveyed the estate to a trustee to secure payment of the annuity. Only the first two quarterly payments of the annuity were made. In 1839 B. transferred his mortgage to D., who then entered into, and ever since continued, in possession of the estate. In 1856 C.'s representative claimed to be paid his annuity out of the estate, and asked D. for an account of the rents of it. D., in reply, wrote as follows: "I deny . . . the claims of your client. I need only add, that if he were entitled to the account, it would be of no use, as the rents and profits of the estate have never been sufficient to pay the interest on the first charge referred to in your letter." On a bill filed in 1858 by C. against D., for a decree for the redemption of the estate :—Held, that although the deed of even date with the grant of the annuity would prevent A., and any one claiming through him, from setting up the Statute of Limitations, still, as D. claimed under the original mortgagee, and as the letter written by D. was no acknowledgment within s. 28 of the 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, of C.'s right to redeem, the bill must be dismissed. Thompson v. Bowyer, 9 Jur. (N.S.) 863 ; 9 L. T. 12 ; 11 W. R. 975.

A letter from the mortgagee in possession, in answer to a letter from the grandfather of the infant heir of the mortgagor (the purport not known), in which although vaguely he acknowledged the infant granddaughter's title as heiress, and expressing his readiness to settle when she came of age :—Held, a sufficient acknowledgment of the right, to an agent, to save the statute, and that the infant heiress when she came of age, had a right to redeem any time within twenty years from the date of the letter. Trulock v. Roby, 12 Sim. 402.

Redemption decreed against the heir of mortgagee, and a purchaser with notice, upon acknowledgment of mortgage, within twenty years before the bill, in transaction with other persons, not with the heirs of the mortgagor. Hansard v. Hardy, 18 Ves. 455.

Mortgage, though never so old, is redeemable if interest has been paid. Floyer v. Lavington, 1 P. W. 268.

A mortgage after forty years' possession by mortgagee was held to be redeemable upon the foot of a stated account, and an agreement for turning interest into principal. Conway v. Shrimpton, 5 Bro. P. C. 187 ; 1 Bro. P. C. 309 ; 15 Vin. Abr. 468, pl. 6.

If an equitable mortgagee enters into the receipt of the rents of the mortgaged estates, such receipt is, primâ facie, a payment within the meaning of the proviso in the Statute of Limitations. Brocklehurst v. Jessop, 7 Sim. 438.

Length of time pleaded in bar to a redemption of a mortgage, being made in 1713, the mortgagor's solicitor appearing to have settled an account in 1730, in order to pay off the mortgage : —Held, that would save the right of redemption. Anon., 2 Atk. 333.

Quære, whether since the late Statute of Limitations (3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, s. 28), the bar created by twenty years' possession by a mortgagee is defeated by his having kept accounts of the rents received by him. Baker v. Wetton, 14 Sim. 426 ; 9 Jur. 98.

—— Retrospective Operation of Statute.]—In 1816 the mortgagee, under a mortgage created some years before, entered into possession of the mortgaged premises, and in 1827 he executed a transfer of his mortgage to another. The transferee thereupon entered into possession, and in 1828 executed a transfer of his mortgage to a second transferee, who then entered into possession. The mortgagor was not a party to either transfer, and had not, from the time the original mortgagee entered into possession, received any acknowledgment in writing of his equity of redemption. In 1833 the Statute of Limitations (3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, s. 28) was passed, and barred all suits for redemption after twenty years' possession by the mortgagee, and no acknowledgment in the meantime of the right of redemption given to the mortgagor or his agent in writing, signed by the mortgagee. In 1845 the representative of the mortgagor filed his bill for redemption against the representatives of the second transferee :—Held, that the statute operated retrospectively, by taking from the mortgagor the benefit of the acknowledgment which had already been made of the mortgage title in the transfers of 1827 and 1828, and therefore that the suit, as to that estate, was barred. Batchelor v. Middleton, 6 Hare, 75.

—— Recitation in Deed.]—A. mortgaged an estate to B. for 1,000 years ; B. died, having bequeathed the mortgage to his widow ; she also died, and in 1822 her personal representatives entered into and continued in possession of the estate until 1838, when they sold and assigned the mortgage to C., who entered and continued in possession until 1843, when A.'s heir filed a bill to redeem, on the ground that the deed of assignment recited the mortgage and conveyed the terms to C., subject expressly to the equity of redemption of A., or his legal representatives : —Held, that the deed was not such an acknowledgment of the mortgagor's title as to make the estate redeemable. Lucas v. Dennison, 13 Sim. 586 ; 7 Jur. 1122.

Where purchaser of an equity of redemption had the legal estate conveyed to him by a deed, dated the 24th August, 1796, in which it was recited that the purchaser had some time since paid to the mortgagee the money due on his mortgage, and a bill to redeem was filed on the 29th January, 1816 :—Held, that the recital was acknowledgment of the mortgage title within twenty years from the filing of the bill. Price v. Copner, 1 Sim. & S. 347 ; 1 L. J. (O.S.) Ch. 178.

—— By one of two joint Trustee Mortgagees.] —Two joint mortgagees of lands, who appeared on the face of the mortgage to be trustees of a settlement, had been in possession of the property for more than twenty years, but within twenty years before the institution of a redemption suit one of them had acknowledged in writing the mortgagor's title :—Held, that such recognition by one of the joint mortgagees did not operate as an acknowledgment within the statute, and that the equity of redemption was barred. Richardson v. Younge, 40 L. J., Ch. 338 ; L. R. 6 Ch. 478 ; 25 L. T. 230 ; 19 W. R. 312.

—— After Time expired.]—In 1828 the plaintiff mortgaged freehold property to B., and in 1832, being about to reside abroad, he gave a full power of attorney to the defendant, who was a solicitor, to receive the rents and profits of all his property, and to apply them in payment of the incumbrances. In 1841 the plaintiff settled accounts with the defendant, showing a large balance due to the defendant, which the plaintiff agreed to secure by mortgage of his real estates when required. In 1845 the plaintiff became bankrupt, but his assignee did not interfere with the mortgaged property, and the defendant continued to receive the rents and profits. In 1849 the defendant took a transfer himself of B.'s mortgage, to which the plaintiff was not a party. In 1865 the defendant wrote a letter to the plaintiff expressing his readiness to settle all accounts. In 1877 the plaintiff's bankruptcy was annulled, and the plaintiff brought an action against the defendant claiming to redeem the mortgage, and claiming an account against him as mortgagee in possession, and, by amendment, as agent and trustee for him. The defendant pleaded the Statute of Limitations:—Held, that on the plaintiff's bankruptcy the defendant ceased to be the agent and attorney of the plaintiff, and did not become the agent of the assignee; and that even if the assignee would have been entitled to call upon the defendant to account, the plaintiff did not, on the annulment of the bankruptcy, succeed to the assignee's right; that the plaintiff's estate as mortgagor having ceased on the bankruptcy, the letter written to him in 1865 could not operate as an acknowledgment, either of his title or that of the assignee, to the equity of redemption, so as to take the case out of the Statute of Limitations; that as the assignee was barred by the statute, the plaintiff was also barred, notwithstanding the annulment of the bankruptcy. The action was therefore dismissed with costs. Markwick v. Hardingham, 15 Ch. D. 339; 43 L. T. 647; 29 W. R. 361.

Whether an acknowledgment of the title of the mortgagor is effectual to take the case out of the Statute of Limitations, if it is not made till after the time limited by the statute has expired, quære. Ib.

In 1776 B., who was entitled to two-third parts of an estate, mortgaged the same to R., who was entitled to the other third part. In 1782 R. entered into possession, and continued in possession until his death in 1805. By his will R. devised the property to his son R., in tail, with remainders over. In 1812 the persons entitled under B.'s will commenced proceedings for the purpose of redeeming the two-third parts, and in 1814 a compromise was made, and by indentures of lease and release, the two-thirds were conveyed to R., the younger, in fee. R., the younger, died without issue:—Held, that the right of mortgagors to redeem was revived by the acknowledgment, in 1814, of R., the younger, the tenant in tail; and that by the conveyance to him he had acquired the absolute interest in the two-thirds, as against the remaindermen under R.'s will. Pendleton v. Booth, 1 De G. F. & J. 81; 29 L. J., Ch. 265; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 182; 8 W. R. 101.

Whenever, after twenty years' possession by a mortgagee, there is an acknowledgment of the mortgage title, the right of redemption is restored, the effect of which is to alter the character of the property, as assets of the mortgagee, from real estate, which it had acquired after the end of twenty years, and to restore to it the character of personalty. S. C., 1 Giff. 35; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 840.

There is no authority or sound principle for the proposition that an acknowledgment by a tenant in tail of the mortgaged estate does not completely restore the right of redemption. Ib.

After a mortgagee had been more than twenty years in possession of property mortgaged, the mortgagor's solicitor wrote a letter asking when the mortgagee would see him on the mortgagor's claims. The mortgagee wrote back to the solicitor, "I do not see the use of a meeting, unless some party is ready to pay me off." The mortgagor filed a bill to redeem:—Held, affirming a decree at the Rolls, that this was a sufficient acknowledgment in writing of the title of the mortgagor to his solicitor acting as his agent, to bring the case within the 28th section of the Statute of Limitations, 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27. Stansfield v. Hobson, 3 De G. M. & G. 620; 22 L. J., Ch. 657; 1 W. R. 216. And see Trulock v. Roby, 12 Sim. 402; col. 289.

—— Evidence of.]—Bill for the redemption of a mortgage, after twenty years, upon the evidence of a conversation proved by one witness only, dismissed. His honour, however, of opinion that parol evidence was admissible in such cases. Reeks v. Postlethwaite, G. Coop. 161. S. P., Whiting v. White, G. Coop. 1; 2 Cox, 290.

Equity of redemption barred by possession for twenty years, unless circumstances are proved by the mortgagor showing an acknowledgment of his title by the mortgagee within that period, as accounts delivered by the mortgagee; if by parol evidence, it must be clear and unequivocal; accounts kept by the mortgagee's receiver in a distinct book, and delivered to the mortgagor, but without authority, will not have the effect. Barron v. Martin, 19 Ves. 327.

Where three Estates in one Mortgage.]—The payment of money to a mortgagee by the person liable to pay, in respect of the interest on the mortgage, continues the mortgage in all its integrity and force with respect to all the estates properly comprised in the mortgage, and which had not been aliened or conveyed away by the mortgagee, or with his assent. Chinnery v. Evans, 11 H. L. Cas. 115; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 855; 11 L. T. 68; 13 W. R. 20.

Therefore, if estates A., B. and C. are included in one mortgage, and the owner of A. pay the interest, the mortgagee is not barred by 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, s. 40, and 7 Will. 4 & 1 Vict. c. 28, from his remedy against B. and C. Ib.

Mortgagor and Mortgagee—Principal and Surety—Payment of Interest.]—If s. 8 of the Real Property Limitation Act, 1874, applies to an action brought against a surety on a covenant in a mortgage deed for payment of the debt with interest, the payment of interest by the mortgagor prevents the statute from running in favour of the surety. Frisby, In re, Allison v. Frisby, 59 L. J., Ch. 94; 43 Ch. D. 106; 61 L. T. 632; 38 W. R. 65—C. A.

Per Cotton, L.J.:—Sect. 8 is applicable to an action against a surety as well as to one against the mortgagor. Per Bowen, L.J., and Kay, J.:—The section does not apply to a personal action unless brought against the mortgagor or his representatives. Ib.

Mortgage—Receipt of Policy Moneys.]—In 1870 C. being entitled to the reversion in fee of certain lands assigned them by way of mortgage (subject to the existing life estate) to the mortgagee to secure 5,000*l.* Under another mortgage of other property securing this loan, C. took out a policy on his own life for 2,000*l.*, and assigned it to the mortgagee. In 1874, upon C.'s death, the proceeds of this policy were received and applied by the mortgagee in reduction of the mortgage debt:—Held, that the receipt of the policy moneys was a part-payment within the twelve years and therefore that the mortgage debt was kept alive. Conlan's Estate, In re, 29 L. R., Ir. 199.

By Mortgagors and Mortgagees.]—See also B, II. 9, ante, col. 206.

Trust Deed to receive and accumulate Income, and thereout pay Premiums on Life Policies.]—S., being indebted to divers persons, including two judgment creditors, by deed assigned his life-interest in certain property to a trustee, to receive the annual income, and thereout to effect and maintain certain policies on the debtor's life, and to accumulate the residue of the annual income. The deed declared that on S.'s death the money secured by the policies was to be divisible amongst the creditors, all of whom were parties to the deed. The trustee received the income, and paid thereout the premiums on the policies during the life of the debtor. S. died thirty years after the making of the deed; during his life no payment was made in respect of their debts to either of the judgment creditors:—Held, that the payments on account of the premiums were, by the terms of the deed, payments on account of principal and interest in respect of the debts, so as to prevent the operation of the Statute of Limitations, and that the judgment creditors were entitled to be paid their debts out of the amount of the policies. Scott v. Synge, 27 L. R., Ir. 560—C. A.

Bond.]—Action by an administrator of B. on a bond made by A. to B., dated 5th of December, 1812. The condition recited that B. had agreed to advance to A. the produce of the sale of stock in the funds without any other advantage than B. would have been entitled to if the stock had remained in his name; that B. had sold the stock and paid the produce to A., and that it had been agreed that the stock should be replaced and transferred to B., and the condition was, that if A., before the 5th of June following, purchased stock, and transferred it to B., and paid to B., in lieu of dividends, such sums as B. would have been entitled to receive for dividends if the stock had continued in his name, at such times and in such proportions, and in such manner as the dividends would have been payable to B. if the stock had not been sold, then the bond to be void. Breach, first, that A. did not on the 5th of June, or since, purchase the stock and transfer to B. or to his administrator; secondly, that the dividends, if the stock had remained in B.'s name, would have been payable half-yearly, and the first and only one of such dividends before the 5th of June would have been payable on the 5th of January, 1813; that on the 11th of September, 1824, B. died; that if the stock had continued in his name, or his administrator's, the dividends would have been paid half-yearly, and that there was a large sum payable in lieu of such dividends, and due after B.'s death, and that the stock had not been transferred, and A. had failed to pay the sum due in lieu of dividends. Plea, that the causes of action did not accrue within twenty years next before action. Replication, as to the first breach, that while the stock remained untransferred, and the money was due in lieu of the dividends, on the 10th of September, 1824, A. made an acknowledgment to B. that the stock remained untransferred, by A. making satisfaction to B. on account, and that the action was brought within twenty years after such acknowledgment; and as to the other causes of action, that they did accrue within twenty years. Rejoinder, as to the first part of the replication, a traverse of the bringing of the action within twenty years after the acknowledgment, and issue thereon; and as to the second part of the replication, issue was joined. It was proved that B. had, since the advance, agreed to board and lodge with A., that the amount was to be deducted from the interest of the money which A. had borrowed, and that a settlement should be made every six months. B. had boarded and lodged with A. till B.'s death, but no settlement had ever taken place, though frequently demanded by B.:—Held, first, that supposing the issue raised upon the rejoinder cast upon the plaintiff the burthen of proving that the acknowledgment was made within twenty years before action, there was sufficient evidence to entitle the plaintiff to a verdict. Blair v. Ormond, 17 Q. B. 423; 20 L. J., Q. B. 444; 15 Jur. 1054.

Held, secondly, that the bond was not within the 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 42, s. 5, and that the replication, therefore, was no answer to that part of the plea which related to the first breach. Ib.

But held, thirdly, that the part of the condition which stipulated for the payment from time to time of the sums payable in lieu of the dividends, still remained in force, as to so much as had accrued due within twenty years before action, the penalty of the bond not having been insisted upon in respect of sums accruing due earlier. Ib.

Acknowledgment of Title, what is.]—Construction of a document given in evidence as an acknowledgment of title. See Fursdon v. Clogg, 10 M. & W. 572.

Whether a writing amounts to an acknowledgment of title is a question for the court, and not for the jury to decide. Doe d. Curzon v. Edmonds, 6 M. & W. 295.

A party in possession adversely of land, being applied to by the party claiming title to it to pay rent, and offered a lease of it, wrote as follows: "Although, if matters were contested, I am of opinion that I should establish a legal right to the premises; yet, under all circumstances, I have made up my mind to accede to the proposal you made of paying a moderate rent, on an agreement for twenty-one years." The bargain subsequently went off, and no rent was paid nor lease executed:—Held, that this letter was not an acknowledgment of title. Ib.

In 1818, the plaintiff's father and the defendant's grandfather became seised as tenants in common of a meadow. The meadow was then in the possession of the defendant's grandfather, who had previously held it under a lease. The plaintiff's father became possessed in 1826, and so continued till his death, in 1836. In 1837, Newton, who was proved to be a land agent, who received the defendant's rents and managed his property, wrote the following letter to the plaintiff's agent: "Sir, Mr. P. (the defendant) is now in possession of his two-thirds of the meadow, who will, no doubt, accept a lease (three lives) for Ley's (the plaintiff's) one-third, at a fair rack-rent. You must be aware Mr. P. is bound to pay rent for Ley's one-third during the time his father held the meadow, but no doubt he will do so in case you agree for a lease. (Signed) J. Newton. Will you favour me with the terms of a lease for the one-third of the meadow, that I may lay it before Mr. P." No answer was shown to have been given to this letter, but the defendant continued in possession of the land down to 1857, when an ejectment was commenced:—Held, that the letter was not a sufficient acknowledgment of the plaintiff's title. Ley v. Peter, 3 H. & N. 101; 27 L. J., Ex. 239; 6 W. R. 437.

T. M., by his will in 1773, after charging his "unsettled real estate" with his debts and legacies, gave the rest and residue of his said unsettled real estate to his wife Jane M. for life, with remainder to the Incorporated Society for Promoting Protestant Charter Schools in Ireland and their successors for ever. In 1774 T. M. died. In 1801 Jane M., who had paid off the charge and legacies thrown upon the unsettled estate, sold all her interest of what kind soever in that estate to J. N. R. In 1811 Jane M. died. In 1820 and 1821, the Incorporated Society claimed the estates from J. N. R. J. N. R., in a correspondence which he had with the society, whilst he did not admit the right of the society to the estate was free from doubt, always stated that he was ready to account, and had no further claim against the estate than what would appear due on foot of such an account. In 1822 J. N. R. died, and by his will devised T. M.'s estate amongst others as his own upon certain trusts:—Held, that there was in the correspondence which passed between J. N. R. and the society a sufficient acknowledgment in writing to bring the case within the 14th section of the 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27. Incorporated Society for Protestant Schools v. Richards, 1 Dr. & War. 258; 1 Con. & L. 58; 4 Ir. Where mortgagees of the works and tolls of a harbour company agreed, in 1818, that, on the exchequer loan commissioners making an advance of money under the provisions of the acts of parliament regulating them, the tolls of the harbour should be applied, first, in paying interest on the commissioners' advances; secondly, in paying interest on prior mortgages; and thirdly, in reduction of the principal till it was paid off, the tolls being insufficient to keep down the interest on the advances, they sold the subject of their security to a railway company, with notice of the agreement. In 1833, before the sale to the railway company, one of the mortgagees wrote to the treasurer of the harbour company, complaining of nonpayment of interest. The treasurer replied that no interest had been paid since 1821, as the income of the harbour left but a small surplus after payment of expenses, but that he was at all times willing to give information to the mortgagees, or to any other gentleman who had embarked property in the undertaking:—Held, that the agreement and the correspondence took the case out of the Statute of Limitations, both as to principal and interest. Jortin v. S. E. Ry., 6 De G. M. & G. 270; 24 L. J., Ch. 343; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 433; 3 Eq. R. 281; 3 W. R. 190.

Receipt of Rent—Acknowledgment after Title Obtained.]—T. and J. became entitled in possession to a freehold as tenants in common in 1833. In 1879, persons claiming under J. brought an action for sale or partition. The defendant, who claimed under T., alleged that T. was in receipt of the rents of the entirety from 1833 to 1864, without accounting, and claimed the benefit of the Statute of Limitations. The parties entered into admissions, which stated that T. received the rents of the entirety from 1833 till his death in 1877, and that T. paid to the solicitors of J.'s mortgagees a moiety of the rents due in November, 1864, and continued to pay to them a moiety of the rents till his death. The admissions did not state, nor was there any evidence whether T. did or did not account for a moiety of the rents before 1864:—Held, by Malins, V.-C., that the acknowledgment by T. of J.'s title, though after twenty years' adverse possession, excluded the operation of the Statute of Limitations, and that the plaintiffs were entitled to judgment. But held, by the court of appeal, that where a tenant in common has gained by the statute an adverse title to another share of the property, no payment of rent or acknowledgment by him can restore the title which has been extinguished by the statute. Held, further, by the court of appeal, that the payment of a moiety of the rents to persons claiming under J. from 1864 to 1877, raised a presumption that a similar payment was made previously, and that as the admissions did not negative this inference the defence on the Statute of Limitations could not be supported. Sanders v. Sanders, 51 L. Letter from Deceased Debtor to Judgment Creditor.]—A debtor wrote to X. a letter, which was not to be opened till his death, and to be considered as his will, in which he directed X. and other creditors named to be paid as soon as X. could get funds in hand. In a suit to administer the debtor's assets, the Statutes of Limitations were relied on against X., whose demands, by judgment and simple contract, were more than twenty years old at the debtor's death :—Held, they were not barred. Clinton v. Brophy, 10 Ir. Eq. R. 139.

Judgment Barred before 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27.]—Where a judgment was barred by the operation of the 8 Geo. 1, c. 4, before the passing of the 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, it is not resuscitated by an acknowledgment in writing given after the passing of the latter act. Clonecurry (Lord) v. Piers, 3 Jo. & Lat. 573 ; 9 Ir. Eq. R. 407.

Payment of Interest on Statute-barred Judgment.]—In 1792 C. obtained a judgment against B., which was never revived or re-docketed, but interest was paid within twenty years before the proceedings by the creditor. In 1812 B. entered into a recognizance to abide the decree to be pronounced in a cause of Latouche v. O'Brien, but in which, though revived, a decree had not been pronounced. In 1816 B.'s heir granted an annuity for valuable consideration charged on the lands which he inherited. The lands being sold, a fund remained in court, consisting partly of the surplus of the purchase-money, and partly of rents received in the cause, and partly of dividends of stock purchased by the two former sums. An order having been made in May, 1844, to report priorities and distribute these funds amongst the creditors, pursuant to the 102nd general order and report thereon :—Held, that the judgment was to be postponed to the annuity. That payment of interest on the judgment, within twenty years prior to the order, was sufficient to take it out of the Statute of Limitations, though more than twenty years had elapsed between the obtaining of the judgment and the payment. The annuity, by gaining priority over the judgment under Moore's Act, does not carry up the recognizance so as to give it priority over the judgment, no provision being found in that act similar to that in the Registry Act, and the judgment being only effected to the extent of the annuitant's claim against the land. That it was possible there might be a decree in the revived suit of Latouche v. O'Brien, and if so, the recognizance would be a subsisting charge, and would have priority over the annuity as against the surplus produce of the sale, but would not attach upon the rents or dividends. Latouche v. O'Brien, 10 Ir. Eq. R. 113.

Payment of Interest, what amounts to.]—In 1833, trustees of a marriage settlement lent to the husband, at interest, some of the money settled to the separate use of his wife, on the security of a joint bond of the husband and the defendant. No interest was paid, but on the 31st October, 1847, it was arranged between the trustees and the husband and wife that she should give the trustees her receipt for the interest up to that date, which she accordingly did. She afterwards from time to time gave receipts for each half-year's interest up to November, 1860. No money ever passed :—Held, that the transaction amounted to a payment or a satisfaction of the interest, so as to take the case out of the 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 42, s. 5. Amos v. Smith, 1 H. & C. 236 ; 31 L. J., Ex. 423 ; 7 L. T. 66 ; 10 W. R. 759.

S., in 1841, executed a mortgage of leasehold property to J., to secure 300*l.* and interest. S. paid no interest on the mortgage from the date of its execution, but kept down the interest on 300*l.*, a sum of money which J. was liable to pay under a bond which he had entered into for the benefit of S. The court presumed the payment of interest on the bond was made under an arrangement for that purpose, and that J.'s debt was not barred by the Statute of Limitations. Jones v. Rhind, 17 W. R. 1091.

Freeholds and leaseholds were mortgaged in 1822. The mortgagor devised and bequeathed his residuary estate upon trust to pay his debts, including mortgage debts, and afterwards on trust for H. A beneficial tenant for life under the will of the mortgagor in a moiety of a freehold not comprised in the mortgage, and also interested in the residue under the will of H. paid interest on the mortgage down to her death in 1859 :—Held, that such payment prevented the Statute of Limitations being a bar to the mortgagee's proceeding, either against the property comprised in the mortgage or on the covenant for repayment against the estate of the mortgagor. Pears v. Laing, 40 L. J., Ch. 225 ; L. R. 12 Eq. 41 ; 24 L. T. 19 ; 19 W. R. 653.

S., indebted to bankers in 1826, assigned to them an annuity of 20*l.* a year, payable during three lives and the lives and life of the survivors and survivor, for securing 200*l.*, part of his balance. S., in 1828, mortgaged to them the equity of redemption of a leasehold estate for securing his general balance of 1,500*l.* Interest was paid on the mortgage up to 1832, first, to the bankers (who became bankrupt in 1828), and afterwards to their assignees ; and they received the annuity until 1847, when the annuity expired, and the money thus received was more than enough to pay the 200*l.* In 1834 the first mortgagee of the leasehold estate had entered into possession of the property, and remained in possession. In 1853 S. filed a bill against the mortgagee for redemption, and the assignees were made parties :—Held, that the payments of the annuity having exceeded the 200*l.* must be taken to have been made in reduction of the general balance due on the mortgage, and having been made within twenty years, the same took the case out of the operation of the 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, ss. 40, 42. Staley v. Barrett, 26 L. J., Ch. 321 ; 5 W. R. 188—L.JJ.

What Payments Sufficient.]—The principle underlying all the Statutes of Limitations is that a payment to prevent the barring by statute must be an acknowledgment by the person making the payment of his liability, and an admission of the title of the person to whom the payment is made. Harlock v. Ashberry, 51 L. J., Ch. 394 ; 19 Ch. D. 539 ; 46 L. T. 356 ; 30 W. R. 327.

Payment of Interest on Part of Sum secured.]—S., being indebted to P. in 2,300*l.*, by sundry securities affecting his real estate, joins P. in 1775 in assigning all his said securities to L. as security for 1,800*l.* then lent by L. to P. The interest on said 1,800*l.* was regularly paid by S. and his heirs to L., but no interest on the surplus of the 2,300*l.* was paid either to P. or L. since 1775 :—Held, that the payment of the interest on the 1,800*l.* preserved the right to demand the interest on the surplus, notwithstanding the lapse of time, and that under the circumstances no presumption of the surplus having been paid could arise. Loftus v. Swift, 2 Sch. & Lef. 642.

In Answer to a Suit.]—An answer in chancery put in within twenty years, by the person through whom a defendant in ejectment claims, in the course of a chancery suit between him and the plaintiff with reference to the same property, and containing an admission by him of the then plaintiff's title, is a sufficient acknowledgment of the plaintiff's title to prevent the action being barred. Goode v. Job, 1 El. & El. 6; 28 L. J., Q. B. 1; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 145; 7 W. R. 7. See Moodie v. Bannister, 4 Drew. 433; 28 L. J., Ch. 881; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 402; 7 W. R. 278.

In December, 1821, A. and B., creditors of D., deceased, jointly advanced a sum of money to save leaseholds of D. from eviction for nonpayment of rent. As between themselves, the money was advanced in equal moieties. To a bill filed by B. against A. and the devisee, in trust of D., to raise the sum so advanced, the trustees, in April, 1824, put in an answer admitting the payment of the salvage money. In a suit instituted in January, 1844, for a sale of D.'s estate, A. filed a charge on foot of his salvage claim:—Held, that the acknowledgment contained in the answer of April, 1824, was sufficient to take the claim out of the bar of the Statute of Limitations (3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27), s. 40. Blair v. Nugent, 3 Jo. & Lat. 673; 9 Ir. To One of Several Claimants.]—A payment by way of compromise to one of several claimants to a charge on real estates, was held to take the case out of the Statute of Limitations, in favour of other claimants. Young v. Waterpark (Lord), 8 L. J., Ch. 214.

Where two Sums secured by one Bond.]—When two separate sums are secured by one bond, a payment in respect of one sum does not prevent the statute running in respect of the other. Ashlin v. Lee, 44 L. J., Ch. 174; 31 L. T., 721; 23 W. R. 287. Affirmed, 44 L. J., Ch. 376; 32 L. T. 348; 23 W. R. 458.

By an agreement the sum of 1000*l.*, part of the purchase-money of real estate, was secured by a bond. The arrangement was, that the sum of 750*l.* was to be paid to a person named on a given event, and the remaining 250*l.* to another person on another event. The event on which the 250*l.* became payable happened more than twenty years before filing the bill, and it was alleged that that sum had never been paid. The event on which the 750*l.* became payable happened within the twenty years, and the sum of 750*l.* was then paid:—Held, that the payment of the 750*l.* did not prevent the 250*l.* being barred by the statute. Ib.

Return in Insolvent's Schedule.]—A return made by an insolvent in his schedule is a sufficient acknowledgment, within the 42nd section of 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27. Barrett v. Bermingham, Fl. & K. 566; 4 Ir. Eq. R. 537.

In Affidavit in Answer to Petition for Receiver.]—When, in an affidavit by the respondent in a petition for a receiver on a judgment, he denied that the sum claimed by the petitioner was due, but stated, "that the entire sum due on foot of the judgment, &c., is 474*l.* 8*s.*, besides costs, which this deponent is advised he is not liable to":—Held, that he was thereby precluded from insisting on the Statute of Limitations as a bar to the full amount of that sum; this being a sufficient acknowledgment within 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, s. 40. Tristram v. Harte, Longf. & T. 186; 3 Ir. Eq. R. 386.

Must be Pleaded.]—To a plea of the statute upon a mortgage deed, the plaintiff, in order to take the case out of the statute by an acknowledgment in writing under s. 5, must reply such acknowledgment, and that the action was brought within twenty years. Kempe or Kent v. Gibbon or Gibbons, 9 Q. ## VII. COPYHOLD LAND.

Treated as Freehold, effect of.]—Land anciently copyhold was for upwards of 100 years treated as freehold without any claim being made on the part of the lord of the manor; and the only intimation that the land was copyhold was in recitals to that effect and a covenant to surrender contained in deeds of recent date to which the lord was neither party nor privy. Semble, that the lord's right of entry was barred by the Statute of Limitations. Lidiard and Broadley, In re, 58 L. J., Ch. 785; 42 Ch. D. 254; 61 L. T. 322; 37 W. R. 793.

Right of Entry of Lord.]—The lord of the manor is barred by the Statute of Limitations from entering for a forfeiture after twenty years. Whitton v. Peacock, 3 Myl. & K. 325.

The lord of the manor is said to be never out of possession; and that whatever is built on the waste is his, even after sixty years' possession by the tenant. Lloyd v. Bartlett, 6 Vin. 123, pl. 1.

Sed quære, after twenty years' possession, which is a bar to an ejectment. Ib.

The defendant, who shared with others a right of way over a piece of land, the property in which was in the lord of the manor, used a portion of the same, amounting to about three-quarters of the whole, in all respects as if it was properly part of his farm, ploughing it up from time to time and raising produce thereon. Such user was uninterrupted, and was continued for twenty years and more. As to the remaining quarter, which was not in any way fenced off from the above, it remained in its original condition, and was used for the purposes and in the manner that the whole was originally intended to be used:—Held, that a good title, as against the lord of the manor, to the soil and minerals underlying the soil of three-quarters of the strip of land had been thus acquired; but that nothing had been done to disturb the original rights in the soil, and minerals underlying the soil, of the remaining one quarter of the piece of land. Seddon v. Smith, 36 L. T., 168.

The right of a lord of a manor to seize quousque does not accrue until after three proclamations to the tenant to come in and be admitted, or until after the latter has refused; but such refusal must be deliberate, and not a mere failure to be admitted. Consequently, where a tenant came in, but was not admitted through some defect in his title, the right did not accrue to the lord. Until such right accrues, the statute does not run against the lord. Beighton v. Beighton, 64 L. J., Ch. 796; 13 R. 743; 73 L. T. 86; 43 W. R. 685. See also Ecclesiastical Commissioners v. Parr, 63 L. J., Q. B. 784; [1894] 2 Q. B. 420; 9 R. 542; 71 L. T. 65; 42 W. R. 561.

Enclosure of Waste.]—Against a writ of ayel, after forty-five years' possession, a perpetual injunction was granted. Knight v. Adamson, 2 Freem. 106.

A common that has been enclosed for thirty years shall not afterwards be thrown open. Silway v. Compton, 1 Vern. 32.

After fifty years' quiet possession, equity will not interpose in a question of right of common, until after one or more verdicts at law. Anon., Gilb. Eq. Rep. 183.

Twenty years' adverse possession of a waste inclosed is a bar to the entry of a commoner. Hawke v. Bacon, 2 Taunt. 156.

In 1781, a lord of a manor, with the consent of the tenants of the manor, granted to certain persons licence to enclose a piece of the waste, and that they and their heirs should hold the same in trust for the purpose of building a workhouse, rendering to the lord of the manor the yearly rent of 5*s.* for the same for ever. The churchwardens and overseers entered into possession, and built a workhouse, and used it as such until 1836. The yearly rent was paid from 1781 to 1791, and from 1825 to 1836. In 1835, the persons to whom the licence was granted in 1781 being dead, notice was given to the officers of the parish, by the steward of the manor, to nominate other persons for the purpose of admission, to save a forfeiture. Seven persons were accordingly nominated and admitted, the parish paying a fine on their admission. In 1840 the parish officers, in conformity with a resolution of the inhabitants in vestry assembled, surrendered the premises into the hands of the lord of the manor, and the latter took possession, and afterwards conveyed the premises to the defendant. In an action by the churchwardens and overseers to recover the premises:—Held, that the grant of the licence in 1781 did not manifest an intention to convey a freehold estate, and that the admission of fresh trustees in 1840, and the payment of the 5*s.*, were acknowledgments that the freehold was in the lord of the manor, and that the land was held by his permission; and therefore the possession was not adverse at the time of the passing of 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27. Hodgson v. Hooper, 3 El. & El. 149; 29 L. J., Q. B. 222; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 911; 3 L. T. 149; 8 W. R. 637.

Held, also, that the first tenancy being a tenancy at will, the admission in 1835, being inoperative to convey a copyhold estate, operated to create a fresh tenancy at will; and therefore the right of entry of the lord would not be barred until twenty years after. Ib.

In an action of ejectment to recover a portion of the waste of a manor, the plaintiff proved that he was lord of the manor, and that for fifty years prior to his title accruing the manor was vested in tenants for life:—Held, that the possession of the defendant during those fifty years would not bar the plaintiff's claim or raise a presumption of a possession by the defendant prior to the particular estates for life. Cole v. Heydon, 1 L. T. 439.

If a statute for allotting waste lands within a manor directs all disputed claims to be tried by a feigned issue, and limits the time of bringing such action to six months; an action brought against a copyholder within time, if abated by his death, must be revived against the heir, within six months after the plaintiff has notice of the descent, though the heir is not admitted till long after the time. Knight v. Bate, Cowp. 738.

Under an inclosure act in 1774, a lane was set out as a public way over land in a manor. From 1778 to 1892 the lane was let by the vestry of the parish every Easter to persons who paid for the hire of it and depastured it:—Held, that the parish had gained a title to the lane by the statute, subject to the public right of way. Haigh v. West, 62 L. J., Q. B. 532; [1893] 2 Q. B. 19; 4 R. 396; 69 L. T. 165.

—— Encroachment on Waste by Copyhold Tenant.]—A copyhold was surrendered in 1809 to a trustee for the Crown for military purposes. In 1808 the then lord of the manor had granted to M., the governor of an adjoining fort, a licence to inclose part of the waste adjoining the copyhold, and to occupy it at a yearly rent during his life if he so long continued governor, which he ceased to be in 1811. Nothing further was shown as to the title to the land included in the licence, except that at the commencement of this action in 1874 the Crown had been in possession of it as inclosed ground, as well as of the original copyhold, for more than forty years. Since 1811 there had been repeated admittances of trustees for the Crown to the original copyhold, in which it was described by metes and bounds not including the close L. comprised in the licence. In 1874 the lord of the manor, without the consent of the Crown, granted a licence to get coprolites out of close L. at a royalty, and received 222*l.* for royalties. The Crown brought an action for an injunction and damages. Fry, J., held, that close L. had become an accretion to the copyhold tenement, and was of copyhold tenure, but the decree only granted an injunction and an inquiry as to damages, without any declaration of the rights of the parties. The chief clerk having certified that the damages payable to the Crown were 222*l.*, and Fry, J., having approved of his finding, the lord appealed on the ground that the damages were excessive. The tenant who held close L. under the Crown had separately received full compensation for surface damage, and the land had been restored to its original condition:—Held, by the court of appeal, that, assuming the doctrine that encroachments made by a lessee enure to the benefit of the landlord to be applicable to encroachments by a copyholder, the application of that doctrine was excluded by the facts that the inclosure of close L. having been made by licence from the lord was not an encroachment, and that the subsequent admittances did not treat close L. as part of the copyhold tenement. Att.-Gen. v. Tomline, 15 Ch. D. 150; 43 L. T. 486—C. A.

Whether that doctrine does apply to copyholds, quære. Ib.

—— Measure of Damages.]—Whether, if close L. had been copyhold, a finding which gave to the copyholder by way of damages the whole sum received by the lord for the coprolites could have been sustained, quære. Ib.

—— Crown acquiring Freehold.]—Held, that the Crown had under the Statute of Limitations acquired a freehold title to close L., and that as the coprolites, therefore, belonged to the Crown, the damages were not excessive. Ib.

—— Entry by Lord.]—See Doe d. Baker v. Coombes, col. 271.

Suit for Admittance.]—When the lord had seized copyholds quousque, and had held them for nearly forty years:—Held, that a bill by the heir of the former tenant to compel admittance by the lord was a suit to recover land within 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, ss. 2, 3, and that the right of the heir was barred by that statute. Walters v. Webb, 39 L. J., Ch. 677; L. R. 5 Ch. 531; 18 W. R. 587.

On a bill to be admitted to a copyhold, for the purpose of trying the right of it, the court will not interfere where the plaintiff is barred by the Statute of Limitations, or where he does not shew a primâ facie title, with a reasonable prospect of success. Widdowson v. Harrington (Earl), 1 Jac. & Walk. 532.

Heriot Customs.]—To an action for seizing two beasts of the plaintiff the defendant pleaded that they were taken as customary heriots, and the plaintiff replied a discontinuance of taking heriots for more than twenty years, and that the right to heriots then accrued to the lord within the meaning of the Statute of Limitations (3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 42):—Held, that the replication was bad. Zouche v. Dalbiac, 44 L. J., Ex. 109; L. R. 10 Ex. 172; 33 L. T. 221; 23 W. R. 564.

—— Action to recover Court Rolls.]—The lord of a manor granted a lease of a manor to A. B., to hold for three lives, and deposited with A. B. the court rolls. In 1820 the lease expired by the death of the survivor of the lives. In 1822 the grantor, by letter, requested A. B.'s representative to deliver up the court rolls. No notice was taken of this letter, nor was any further application made by the grantor till the year 1844, when he filed a bill against A. B.'s representatives to recover the court rolls and title deeds of the manor. The defendant by his answer relied on the Statute of Limitations:—Held, that the bill was filed too late. Wells (Dean and Chapter) v. Dodington, 2 Coll. 73; 14 L. J., Ch. 304; 9 Jur. 768.

VIII. ECCLESIASTICAL AND CHARITABLE PROPERTY.

By 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, s. 29, any suit to recover land or rent by ecclesiastical or eleemosynary corporations sole must be brought within two incumbencies and either six years, or so many more than six as will make sixty in all, after a third appointment.

By s. 30, an action to enforce a right to present to a benefice must be brought within three adverse incumbencies, or, if that is less than sixty years, within so many more years as will make sixty.

Tithes.]—The 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, s. 2, enacts that no person shall bring an action to recover any land (which by s. 1 includes tithes) but within twenty years next after the right to bring such action has accrued to him or some person through whom he claims:—Held, that this statute does not operate to prevent a tithe-owner from recovering tithes as chattels from an occupier, although none had been set out for twenty years, but that it is confined to cases where there are two parties, each claiming an adverse estate in the tithes. Ely (Dean and Chapter) v. Cash, 15 M. & W. 617; 15 L. J., Ex. 341.

The right to tithes, as against an ecclesiastical corporation aggregate, is barred under 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, s. 2, by nonpayment for twenty years. Ely (Dean and Chapter) v. Bliss, 5 Beav. 574; 11 L. J., Ch. 351.

Lease to Rector containing Grant by him of Tithe—Receipt of Tithe, but not of Rent, by Lessor, after Lease expired.]—S. demised lands to a rector for forty years, at a certain rent; in the lease, the rector, after covenanting for payment of the rent, further granted to S. the tithe of oats of the parish; the lease also contained a proviso for re-entry, in case the rent should be in arrear, or S., his heirs, &c., should be disturbed by the rector or his assigns in the receipt of the tithe, and concluded with a covenant on the part of S. that the rector should quietly enjoy the lands, under the covenants, grants and agreements contained in the lease. After the expiration of the lease, the rector continued to hold the land, but withheld the rent for more than twenty years; the heirs of S. at the same time continuing to take the tithe of oats, and some confusion existing as to the respective rights of the rector and the heirs of S., the latter being portionists of the tithes of the parish:—Held, that the possession of the land by the rector was not adverse, so as to let in the operation of the statute. Roe d. Pellatt v. Ferrars, 2 Bos. & P. 542.

Incumbent of Church.]—An adverse possession for twenty years is no bar to the church, except as against the same incumbent who submits to it. Runcorn v. Doe d. Cooper, 8 D. & R. 450; 5 B. & C. 696; 4 L. J. (o.s.) K. B. 281.

Lease by Dean of Deanery Lands—Allotment in respect of Lands leased—Right of Ecclesiastical Commissioners to recover Allotment, when Barred.]—An allotment under an inclosure act (described as 137 A) was made in respect of premises held by a person under lease from a dean, the property leased being that of the dean in right of his deanery. By the 29th section of 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, a dean could recover possession of such land within the term of sixty years from the time when the right of action first accrued. By the 3 & 4 Vict. c. 113, deanery lands, after the death of any dean then in possession, passed to the ecclesiastical commissioners; and the 57th section of that statute declared that "the ecclesiastical commissioners shall for the purpose of enforcing payment of all profits and emoluments to be paid to them, and of obtaining possession of all lands, tithes, or other hereditaments vested in or accruing to them as aforesaid, and of recovering the rents and profits thereof, have and enjoy all rights, powers, and remedies at law and in equity which belonged, or belong, or would belong, or have belonged to the holder of the deanery, &c., in respect of which such profits and emoluments, &c., respectively are, by or under the provisions of this act, to be paid or accrue to and be vested in the said commissioners." Renewals of the original leases had been made, but the allotment 137 A was never referred to in them. It had been in 1821 purchased from the representatives of the original allottee, the title of the dean to it had never been asserted, and it was, in that way, held adversely to him. The dean died in 1854, and the commissioners then came into possession, under the statute, of the property of the deanery. In 1877 the commissioners brought an action to recover the allotment:—Held (Lord Blackburn, diss.), that under the words of the 57th section the commissioners had the same time within which to enforce their claim to the property that the dean would have had under the 29th section of 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27. There is a legal continuity between the rights, powers, and remedies of the dean, and those of the commissioners. His right of action was transferred to them by statute, and was not barred by the mere fact of the transfer. Ecclesiastical Commissioners v. Rowe, 49 L. J., Q. B. 771; 5 App. Cas. 736; 43 L. T. 353; 29 W. R. 159—H. L. (E.)

Per Lord Blackburn: There are no words in the 57th section of 3 & 4 Vict. c. 113, which, as to time, render the 29th section of the 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, applicable to the commissioners. Ib.

Held, also, that the right of action to recover the land accrued at the surrender of the lease current when the allotment was made. Ib.

IX. CONCEALED FRAUD.

See also ante, A, VII. 2, col. 121.

By 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, s. 26, in cases of concealed fraud, the right to sue for the land or rent is to be deemed not to have accrued till the fraud was, or with reasonable diligence might have been, known; but the section is not to make a suit maintainable against a bonâ fide purchaser for valuable consideration.

Discoverable by reasonable Diligence.]—To prove that a fraud was concealed within the meaning of 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, s. 26, it is not sufficient to show that the party was in such an imbecile or an uncultivated condition of mind that it was scarcely possible, though the alleged fraud was by an open act, that he should have discovered the fraud, if the condition of his mind was not that of actual lunacy; for the court cannot possibly estimate for this purpose the chance which the state of mind and education of a man may afford of his making such discovery, and is, therefore, compelled to assume that every one not actually a lunatic is competent to judge of and to obtain advice concerning his rights, and to assert them if necessary. Manby v. Bewicke, 3 Kay & J. 342.

Where M. D., with whom A. J., a person of unsound mind, and who had come into possession of lands, resided, and continued to do so until her death, obtained a will and conveyance of part of the lands to himself in fee, and for thirteen years prior thereto, and for ten years after, received the rents:—Semble, that the obtaining the execution of such instruments from a party in that state of mind, was a fraud within the 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, s. 26. Lewis v. Thomas, 3 Hare, 26.

A person whose legal title to lands is barred by 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, may, if he has been deprived by a concealed fraud, recover by a suit in equity under s. 26, but he is bound to show with the utmost strictness that he is entitled to the privilege given by that section. Chetham v. Hoare, 39 L. J., Ch. 376; L. R. 9 Eq. 571; 22 L. T. 57.

Therefore, where a plaintiff sued to recover property to which his predecessor, as he alleged, became entitled in 1769, and insisted that a register book containing a certificate of marriage, forming the principal link in his title, had been fraudulently mutilated in order to prevent him or his ancestors from obtaining evidence of the marriage:—Held, that, by reasonable diligence, evidence of the marriage might have been ascertained within twenty years after the alleged fraud had been committed, and that he had not brought his case within that section. Ib.

—— Pleading.]—In a case of concealed fraud within s. 26 of the Statute of Limitations (3 & 4 Will. 4. c. 27), it is not enough to prove a concealed fraud; the plaintiff must show that he or some person through whom he claims has been by such fraud deprived of the land sought to be recovered, and that the fraud could not with reasonable diligence have been known or discovered more than the statutory period before the action was brought. In such an action general averments of fraud are not sufficient; the statement of claim must contain precise and full allegations of facts and circumstances leading to the reasonable inference that the fraud was the cause of the deprivation, and excluding other possible causes. Lawrance v. Norreys (Lord), 59 L. J., Ch. 681; 15 App. Cas. 210; 62 L. T. 706; 38 W. R. 753; 54 J. P. 708—H. L. (E.)

—— Continuous adverse Possession of Land—When Statute commences to run.]—The plaintiff, by his statement of claim in an action for recovery of land brought in 1892, alleged that he was the heir-at-law of J., who died intestate in 1798, and that, on the death of J., his real estate was wrongfully taken possession of by the mother of G. C., in the name of G. C., as the heir-at-law—as the mother falsely alleged—of J.; that G. C. died an infant in 1805, whereupon G. C.'s mother continued to hold possession in the name of a supposititious child, R. C., on the false pretence that such child was a brother of G. C., and as such was heir-at-law of J.; that both R. C., and afterwards the defendant, who claimed as a volunteer under R. C., remained in possession knowing the above facts, and fraudulently concealed the same from the true heir of J.; that the plaintiff and his predecessors had been deprived of the estate by the said concealed fraud, which had not, and could not with reasonable diligence have been discovered until 1879; and that the plaintiff, at the time of such discovery, was an infant, and only attained twenty-one in 1887. The defendant moved to have the action dismissed as frivolous or vexatious; and, in support of his application, adduced evidence to show that the allegation that R. C. was a supposititious child had been publicly made in 1853:—Held, (a) that the allegations in the statement of claim as to the entry in 1798 on behalf of G. C. did not show a case of concealed fraud within s. 26 of 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, but only a wrongful entry under a false claim as heir-at-law; (b) that the statute began to run as against the plaintiff and his predecessors in 1798, and that, as possession adverse to the plaintiff and his predecessors had been held ever since, the operation of the statute was not suspended by what was alleged to have been done in 1805; (c) that the plaintiff or his predecessors knew, or might with reasonable diligence have known, the alleged concealed fraud more than twelve years before action brought; and, accordingly, that the action should be dismissed as frivolous or vexatious. Lawrance v. Norreys (supra) followed; Trustees, Executors, and Agency Co. v. Short (13 App. Cas. 793) distinguished. Willis v. Howe (Earl), 62 L. J., Ch. 690; [1893] 2 Ch. 545; 2 R. 427; 69 L. T. 358; 41 W. R. 433—C. A.

J. died in 1798, having devised freeholds to A., who predeceased him, and directed payment of his debts, but having made no further dispositions. M., the heiress-at-law and one of the next of kin, died in 1799. In 1880 the plaintiff, claiming through M., brought an action against the persons respectively in possession of J.'s real and personal estate, to establish his title to the real and part of the personal estate, alleging that C., through whom the defendant in possession of the real estate claimed, had entered, on the death of M., as heir-at-law of J., knowing himself to be illegitimate, which fact had always been concealed from the plaintiff's predecessors, and had only in the year 1879 become known to the plaintiff, and could not with reasonable diligence have been earlier discovered by the plaintiff or his predecessors; that administration had, in 1798, been granted to persons (now represented by other defendants), who untruly alleged themselves to be the next of kin of J., and who, knowing the personal estate to be impressed with a trust for the true next of kin, had kept separate accounts thereof, and constituted themselves express trustees thereof, and that with such knowledge separate accounts of the same had ever since been kept by those wrongfully in possession thereof. The defendants respectively demurred, relying as to the real estate on 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27:—The court allowed the demurrer as to the real estate, holding that even assuming the concealed fraud, it did not appear that it might not, by "reasonable diligence," have been discovered by the plaintiff's predecessor when C. entered. Jennens, In re, Willis v. Howe (Earl), 50 L. J., Ch. 4; 43 L. T. 375; 29 W. R. 70.

When Time begins to run.]—Where the facts constituting fraud are in the knowledge of the party, and he lies by for twenty-five years, he cannot get relief. Blennerhassett v. Day, 2 Ball & B. 118.

In cases of fraud, time, in order to bar the remedy, will not begin to run till the party acquires a knowledge of the facts constituting the fraud. Ib.

Cause of action within meaning of Statute of Limitations arises when party has a right to apply to a court of equity; as where reversion alleged to have been fraudulently obtained, descends in equity to heir by death of ancestor. It seems that the time of limitation begins to run from the time when the fraud is discovered, either in life of ancestor, or upon descent. Whalley v. Whalley, 3 Bligh, 2.

Length of time, of more than twenty years, bars even in case of fraud, if the party seeking relief has become, within any reasonable period, cognisant of the facts. It is a common mistake to suppose the time only begins to run from the notice of the fraud; for if there is the full period of twenty years, it is immaterial that during much of that time there was no notice. Byrne v. Frere, 2 Moll. 157.

Time does not run till Facts constituting Fraud known.] — See Trevelyan v. Charter, col. 19.

Though Fraud held to give rise to a Trust, Time runs if Fraud was known.] — Where a trust has been created by the acts of the parties themselves, time is no bar to a suit relating to any transaction that has taken place in connection with the trust property; but where a trust has been created otherwise, as, for example, by its having been founded on a decree of the court, on the ground of fraud, time is a bar, from the moment when the fraud is discovered; secus, if the party to be affected by the fraud has not discovered it. Clanricarde (Marquis) v. Henning, 30 Beav. 175; 30 L. J., Ch. 865; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 1113; 5 L. T. 168; 9 W. R. 912.

Illegal Working of adjoining Mine.]—The plaintiffs, the owners of coal mines, discovered in 1872 that the defendant more than six years previously had, when working an adjoining colliery, worked a large quantity of the plaintiff's coal by breaking their boundary. There had been no subsidence of the surface or anything to put the plaintiffs on inquiry, and the defendant, in plans which he kept of the workings in his own mine, had not marked the illegal workings:—Held, that the omission in the plans was not sufficient to constitute a case of concealed fraud so as to entitle the plaintiffs to an account and damages. Dawes v. Bagnall, 23 W. R. 690.

Omission in Bankrupt's Schedule.]—In 1825 a debtor, on his insolvency, omitted from his schedule (which he verified on oath) an estate to which he was entitled. In 1853 his assignee filed a bill in equity against the assignees under a subsequent bankruptcy and others, for the recovery of the property:—Held, that the claim was not barred by the statute, there having been a concealed fraud. Sturgis v. Morse, 24 Beav. 541. Affirmed on appeal, 3 De G. & J. 1.

Sales by Life Tenant.]—Fraudulent sales had been made by a tenant for life; his son died in his lifetime; the tenancy for life continued to exist for above thirty-five years after these fraudulent sales. On the tenant in remainder becoming entitled, he filed a bill to redeem:—Held, that he was not barred by the lapse of time. Bandon (Earl) v. Becher, 3 Cl. & F. 479.

Succession by Illegitimate Son—"Bonâ fide Purchaser"—Knowledge of Purchaser's Agent.]—In a case of concealed fraud a purchaser for value is not entitled to the protection of the proviso at the end of s. 26 of the 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, if his agent who negotiated the purchase had in the course of the transaction actual knowledge of the fraud, or had reason to believe that a fraud had been committed. Vane v. Vane, 42 L. J., Ch. 299; L. R. 8 Ch. 383; 28 L. T. 320; 21 W. R. 252.

By the words a "bonâ fide purchaser" in s. 26 is meant a person who has given full value for the property. Ib.

The section applies where the person who has been kept out of possession by a concealed fraud has had all along a legal right to enter as well as where he has had only an equitable right. Ib.

A plaintiff alleged in his bill that his father married A. in 1797. Three weeks before the marriage his mother A. had borne a son B., but the fact of his having been born before wedlock was carefully concealed, and he was brought up as a legitimate son and heir-apparent to his father's title and estates, to which he eventually succeeded. B. married C. in 1823, before his father's death, and he died in 1842, leaving D. his eldest son and heir. In 1866 the plaintiff, who was the eldest son born after the marriage of his father to A., discovered the fact of B.'s illegitimacy, and also that that fact was known to B., and also to the father of C. upon the negotiation for the marriage of B. and C. He prayed a declaration of his title, and an account of rents and profits against D.:—Held, that the bill sufficiently alleged a concealed fraud, which the plaintiff could not with reasonable diligence have known sooner; that C. must be taken to have had notice of B.'s illegitimacy through the communication thereof to her father upon the negotiation for a settlement on her marriage with B.; and that her son D., claiming through the same marriage settlement, was equally affected with the same notice. Ib.

Bill to set aside Fraudulent Decree and Conveyance—Plea of Statute.]—R. seised in fee of lands, demised the same in 1696 to T., a papist, for lives; T. died in 1727, when W., his eldest son, also a papist, became seised as special occupant; in 1741 he conveyed all his interest to M., in consideration of 500*l.* M. died in 1750, leaving C., respondent's wife, and his heir-at-law, and F., who obtained administration. W. died in 1751, leaving an infant daughter A., and B. his widow, who entered and received the rents. Appellants intermarried in 1770, during the minority of A., who became of age in 1772; and in 1778 appellants filed their bill, charging that W. was almost an idiot, and was imposed upon by K., for whom M. was only a trustee; that no consideration was paid; that the consideration pretended was made up for false accounts by K., who being an attorney, had alarmed W., by telling him that his interest was discoverable under the popery laws, and that therefore he must convey to some protestant to protect it, though K. knew that the original demise in 1696 was prior to the Popery Acts. That in 1741 K. filed a bill in the name of D., as a protestant discoverer against W., praying to be decreed the benefits of the demise in 1696, and of the renewals, on an allegation that X., the father of W., had by his will in 1727 devised his interest to papists. K. proceeded in the cause, prepared the answers of all the defendants, and in 1742 the court decreed in favour of D. the protestant, which decree was drawn up by K., who caused it to be inserted; that depositions were read at the hearing, though by the registrar's minutes it appeared that none were taken in the cause. In 1742 D. assigned the decree to M. in trust for K., who purchased the inheritance of the lands. Appellants, after adducing many evidences of fraud and inadequacy of consideration, prayed that the decree in 1742 might be set aside for fraud, and a renewal of the original lease of 1696. Respondents, by their answers, insisted on the fairness of the transaction, which they explained, and insisted on the Statute of Limitations as to matters of account, and on length of time since the original purchase. Whereupon the court dismissed the bill, and their decree of dismissal was on appeal affirmed by the lords. Mulcahy v. Kennedy, 1 Ridgw. P. C. 331.

No Time-protected Fraud in Equity.]—Length of time may bar in equity; twenty years' possession bars an equity of redemption, but no time can cover a fraud. Pickering v. Stamford (Lord), 2 Ves. J. 280; 4 Bro. C. C. 214.

Under particular circumstances of fraud, imposition, and delay, a court of equity will decree an account of rents and profits of an estate after an adverse possession of fifty years. Stackpoole v. Davoren, 1 Bro. P. C. 9.

X. JUDGMENT AND SPECIALTY DEBTS.

By 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 42, s. 3, *actions of debt for rent upon an indenture of demise, of covenant or debt upon any bond or other specialty, and of debt or scire facias upon any recognizance, are to be brought within twenty years. Judgments.] — A creditor, by judgment of Hilary term, 1813, filed a bill in 1837, against the heir and personal representative of the conusor, for payment of the judgment. The heir, who was also the personal representative of the conusor, by his answer relied on the 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, s. 40. The judgment had not been revived, nor was any payment on account of the principal or interest thereof made, or any acknowledgment in writing of the right of the plaintiff thereto given by the conusor or his real or personal representative, subsequent to the rendition thereof:—Held, that the bill should be dismissed with costs. O'Hara v. Creagh, 3 Ir. Eq. R. 179; 1 Longf. & T. 65.

Case in which a suit, and decrees therein, were held not to save the bar of the statute 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, s. 42. Hutchins v. O'Sullivan, 11 Ir. Eq. R. 443.

—— Not restricted to those constituting Charge on Land.]—By s. 8 of the Real Property Limitation Act, 1874 (37 & 38 Vict. c. 57), "No action or suit or other proceedings shall be brought to recover any sum of money secured by any mortgage, judgment, or lien, or otherwise charged upon or payable out of any land or rent, at law or in equity, or any legacy, but within twelve years next after a present right to receive the same shall have accrued to some person capable of giving a discharge for or release of the same," &c.:—Held, that the expression "judgment" in the section refers to judgments generally, and is not restricted to judgments which operate as charges upon land. Hebblethwaite v. Peever, [1892] 1 Q. B. 124; 40 W. R. 318.

Notwithstanding the act 27 & 28 Vict. c. 112, judgments come within s. 8 of the Real Property Limitation Act, 1874, and in the absence of part payment or acknowledgment in writing, are barred by the lapse of twelve years. Jay v. Johnstone, 62 L. J., Q. B. 128; [1893] 1 Q. B. 189; 4 R. 196; 68 L. T. 129; 41 W. R. 161; 57 J. P. 309—C. A.

—— Before 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27.]—Upon a bill filed by a creditor one day before the statute 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27 came into operation to enforce a judgment of twenty-eight years' standing, the plaintiff, in order to rebut the presumption that the judgment had been satisfied, gave evidence of the insolvency of his debtor during the greater part of that period:—Held, that such evidence would not avail the plaintiff against the unexplained fact of his not having sooner attempted to enforce the judgment, and that, to obtain relief in equity, he was bound, under the circumstances, to show to demonstration that the judgment had not been satisfied. Grenfell v. Girdlestone, 2 Y. & Coll. 662; 7 L. J., Ex. Eq. 42; 1 Jur. 940.

—— Erroneous Decree Reversed — Original Claim not Barred.]—A decree to carry into execution an erroneous decree being reversed, the cause was remitted, with leave to amend the bill, by adding parties and making a better case as to the original claim, notwithstanding the lapse of sixty years from the date of the deed by which the debt was secured, and of forty years from the date of the erroneous decree; as between the plaintiff creditor and the debtor, there is no presumption from lapse of time, in such a case, and upon such state of the pleadings, that the debt has been paid. But other creditors, whose debts ought to have been provided for by the decree, might have a right to raise that question. Hamilton v. Houghton, 2 Bligh, 169; 21 R. R. 65.

—— Puisne Judgment Creditor's Claim preserved by being made Party to Mortgage Cause.]—In a mortgage cause begun prior to the new rules, a supplemental bill, making a puisne judgment creditor a party, was filed within twenty years of the rendition of his judgment. The decree was obtained, and his charge was filed after the twenty years had expired:—Held, that the suit was one the pendency of which prevented the operation of s. 40 of the Statute of Limitations (3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27). Joyce v. Joyce, 10 Ir. Eq. R. 128.

—— Irregular Proceedings commenced to enforce Judgment preserve Right.]—Proceedings up to a custodiam, under which, however, no money was received, irregularly taken by a person equitably entitled to judgment (under an assignment, no memorial of which was ever registered), are sufficient to prevent the bar of the statute 8 Geo. 1, c. 4, set up in a suit afterwards instituted by the same person to recover the judgment. Foster v. M'Mahon, 11 Ir. Eq. R. 287.

—— Time runs against Judgment during Mortgagee's Suit against same Debtor.] — A mortgagee's suit for foreclosure and sale, instituted in 1811, during the lifetime of a debtor, is not such a suit as prevents the Statute of Limitations running against a judgment creditor of that debtor, inasmuch as the judgment creditor could not have instituted such a suit. The doctrines of Sterndale v. Hankinson (1 Sim. 393; 27 R. R. 210), and similar cases, observed on. Bennett v. Bernard (10 Ir. Eq. R. 584) re-argued on the questions respecting the voluntary settlement, and Statute of Limitations, and partly reversed. Bennett v. Bernard, 12 Ir. Eq. R. 229.

—— Statute does not run against Judgment Creditors when there is a Stay of Proceedings.]—See Baylee v. Browne, col. 34.

—— No Limitation in case of Decree to Account.]—Twenty years in analogy to law, may be limitation to bar a claim under a decree for payment of money, but it appears there is no limitation of revivor of decree to account. Onge v. Trueloch, 2 Moll. 31.

—— Decree not Prosecuted — Judgment on Covenant—Charge on Fund in Court.]—In 1804 F. instituted a suit in equity to recover damages for breach of covenant out of the real and personal estate of B., the covenantor, and obtained a decree in 1820, directing a reference or an issue to ascertain the amount of the damages; but instead of prosecuting the decree, F. brought an action on the covenant, and in 1822 obtained judgment therein. Shortly afterwards F. died. In 1841 administration of his effects was obtained, and in the same year his personal representative filed a bill of revivor, but without obtaining an order to revive. He in the same year filed a charge on foot of his demand under an order of reference in 1841, made in another cause instituted in 1796, to carry the trusts of the will of B. into execution; in which cause a sum of money had been impounded to meet, amongst others, the claim of F., the reference being to ascertain what were the charges affecting that fund:—Held, that the case was not within the 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, and that the demand of F.'s administrator was not barred. Bermingham v. Burke, 2 Jo. & Lat. 699; 9 Ir. Eq. R. 86.

—— More than Twelve Years Old—Right to issue Execution.]—Execution cannot be issued on a judgment where for twelve years there has been neither payment on foot thereof nor acknowledgment. Evans v. O'Donnell, 18 L. R. Ir. 170—C. A.

—— As against Personalty.]—The 40th section of the Statute of Limitations, 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, applies to a case in which a judgment is sought to be enforced against the personal estate, as well as to a case in which it is sought to be enforced against the land of the debtor. Watson v. Birch, 15 Sim. 52; 16 L. J., Ch. 188; 11 Jur. 198.

—— Separate Judgments on Joint and Several Bond.]—A payment made within twenty years of interest upon one of separate judgments, obtained upon a joint and several bond, will prevent the recovery upon foot of another of such judgments from being barred by 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 42, s. 3. Kingston (Earl), In re, Ir. R. 3 Eq. 485.

—— No Proceedings taken on Judgment against Estate — Subsequent Purchaser not Bound.]—In a creditor's suit the debts and costs were paid by the sale of one of two devised estates; and the court directed the master to settle the proportion which was to be borne by the other devised estate. The devisee of the first-mentioned devised estate was entitled for life only, and he being an ignorant person and a day labourer, no proceedings were had under this direction for twenty-six years, at the end of which time the other devised estate was sold; the year following the tenant for life died, and his son, who was entitled in remainder, filed a bill to charge the purchaser of the other devised estate with the proportion which it ought to have contributed towards the debts and costs, and a decree was made by the Master of the Rolls accordingly, upon the ground of lis pendens, which was held to amount to equitable notice of the charge: on appeal the decree was reversed by the Lord Chancellor on the ground that there was no lis pendens at the time of the purchase. Kinsman v. Kinsman, 1 Russ. & M. 617; Taml. 399; 9 L. J. (o.s.) Ch. 276.

—— Annuity secured by.]—In 1817 a tenant for life of freehold estates, subject to long outstanding terms, granted a personal annuity to the plaintiff, secured by warrant of attorney, on which judgment was forthwith entered up and docketed. Afterwards, in 1818 and 1819, he created other incumbrances, two of which were by demises of the estate. The plaintiff did not sue out any elegit till 1822, when he did so. The inquisition being duly returned, he commenced an action of ejectment, which he discontinued in consequence of the outstanding terms. In a suit, to which the plaintiff was no party, the priorities of the other incumbrances were determined. The plaintiff, within twenty years from the last payment of the annuity, filed his bill against all the other parties, to have it declared that he was entitled to stand as first incumbrancer; that the decree, &c., might be altered; or that the plaintiff might be at liberty to proceed at law, and that the defendants might be restrained from setting up the terms; one of the defences was, that the plaintiff's annuity was usurious. The court held that the plaintiff was not barred by the proceedings in the suit, and retained the bill for a year, giving the plaintiff leave to bring an action for the recovery of the freehold, and restraining the defendants from setting up the terms; and also (though not specifically asked by the bill) from setting up the Statute of Limitations. The court also refused to interfere with the application of the rents in the meantime, or to grant inquiries as to the validity of the plaintiff's charge, holding that primâ facie credit was to be given to the judgment, and that if the defendants had any equitable case to make against the judgment, they ought to adopt proceedings of their own to establish that case. Smith v. Effingham (Earl), 7 Beav. 357; 8 Jur. 479.

—— Time runs against Creditors from Administration Decree.]—An ordinary administration decree in a legatee's suit operates as a judgment in favour of creditors; so that time under the Statute of Limitations begins to run from the date of the decree. Finch v. Finch, 45 L. J., Ch. 816; 35 L. T. 235.

—— No Adjudication in Bankruptcy on Statute-barred Judgment.]—A judgment creditor is not entitled, after the expiration of twelve years without payment of interest or acknowledgment of his right, to obtain an adjudication in bankruptcy against the debtor, though within the twelve years a suggestion has been entered on the roll under the Common Law Procedure Act, 1852, s. 129. Tynte, Ex parte and In re, 15 Ch. D. 125; 42 L. T. 598; 28 W. R. 767.

—— Revivor of.]—A scire facias on a judgment is not a mere continuation of a former suit, but creates a new right. A judgment was obtained in 1813. It was revived by a scire facias in 1828. A bill was filed in 1838, in the Court of Exchequer in Ireland, against the representatives of the debtor, praying for an account, and that the principal and interest due on the judgment might be satisfied out of the debtor's personal or real estate. Plea of the Statute of Limitations, 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, s. 40:—Held, that the scire facias created new rights, and the plea was no bar to the suit. Farrell v. Gleeson, 11 Cl. & F. 702.

A judgment of revivor in scire facias on a judgment, confers on the conusee a new present right to receive the amount of the original judgment, within the meaning of the 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, s. 40, and the twenty years commence to run from the date of the revivor, and not from the date of the entry of the original judgment. Crofts v. Hewson, 2 Jones, 499.

In 1813 A. obtained a judgment against B. A. died, and in the year 1824 his executors revived the judgment. In 1833 B. died, leaving C. his heir-at-law. In Hilary term, 1836, the judgment was again revived. It did not appear that, for twenty years previous to the last revival, any payment or acknowledgment had been made on foot of the judgment, within the express terms of 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, s. 40:—Held, that the judgment of revivor in 1836 was conclusive, and that the period of limitation should be reckoned, not from the original judgment, but from the last revival. Kealy v. Bodkin, Sau. & Sc. 211. And see Ottiwell v. Farrant, id. 218, n.

Notwithstanding the 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, s. 40, the revival of a judgment by scire facias within twenty years is sufficient to enable a party to proceed, at law or in equity, for recovery of the sum thereby secured, although more than twenty years have elapsed since the rendition of the original judgment. Ryan v. Cambie, 2 Ir. Eq. R. 238.

In 1779 J. F. mortgaged several lands to A., the only prior incumbrance on which was a judgment of Hilary term, 1778, for 800*l.*, which soon after became vested in A. by assignment. In 1796 B. obtained a judgment against J. F. for 1,200*l.*, soon after which J. F. died, having no estate whatever, except these lands, which he devised in trust for payment of his debts. In 1798 A. filed a bill for foreclosure, in which B. was made a co-plaintiff. In 1779 a receiver was appointed. The suit having abated in 1802, was not revived until 1823, when B., being applied to, denied all knowledge of the previous existence of the suit, and having refused to be made a co-plaintiff, he was made a defendant. Upon a decree to account pronounced in 1825, both judgments were proved in the office. In 1826, after the death of the receiver, B. filed a cross bill insisting that A.'s claim on foot of the judgment was barred by the statute of 8 Geo. 1, c. 4:—Held, that the judgment was not barred by the statute. Armitage v. Forbes, Hayes, 222.

—— Not effective against Land sold.]—A revivor against the heir of the conusor of a judgment, and the terre-tenants of one estate of which he had been seised, does not keep the judgment from being barred by the Statute of Limitations as regards the owners of another estate which had been previously sold by the conusor. Martin v. M'Causland (3 Ir. L. R.) is not law. Kirkwood v. Lloyd, 12 Ir. Eq. R. 585; 11 Ir. Eq. R. 561.

A judgment was assigned to a trustee for the benefit of the tenants for life in possession of the lands charged with A., who, in 1817, caused the trustee to declare a trust for the daughter of one of them, with provisoes that no proceedings should be taken on the judgment until the latter attained age or married, and that it should not be called in until the other tenant for life died:—Held, that, up to 1817, the same person being the hand to pay and receive the interest amounted to a payment of it, so as to prevent the Statute of Limitations applying, but that it began to run in 1817. Ib.

The case of Cummins (Executors) v. Finn, deciding that a judgment being held in trust for the person in possession of the lands charged may be replied, as a retainer of the interest, in answer to a plea of the Statute of Limitations at law, cited and approved of. Ib.

A charge to pay interest on a judgment, made on other property by an owner of lands liable to the judgment, is not sufficient to prevent the statute running in favour of the owner of other lands originally charged with it; and, though the payment of interest by the one owner before twenty years elapses would keep it alive against the other, quære, if a payment after the twenty years will set it up again. Ib.

The question, on an objection to title resting on an old incumbrance, is whether it may be binding on the purchaser; and therefore a purchaser was discharged in consequence of judgments more than sixty years old, against a former owner of the estate, which were in force against other lands, though the only matter to keep them out of the Statute of Limitations against the purchaser was doubtful evidence of payment of interest nineteen years before they could have been barred. Ib.

Certain persons, described in the rental as tenants at will, having been in possession of part of the lands sold for several years, the purchaser objected that they had acquired estates by virtue of the Statute of Limitations. Rent had been recently levied from, or paid by, some under coercion of attachment, or distress, and others had admitted, but not in writing, that they were tenants:—Held, that as to the former the payments prevented an operation of the statute; but as to the other, the admissions, not being in writing, could not be relied on as estoppels in answer to the statute. Id. 599.

—— Foreign Judgments.]—See Dupleix v. De Roven, and Reimers v. Druce, col. 89; and Don v. Lippmann, col. 38.

Covenant.]—To an action of covenant six years is not a good plea of limitation. Hartshorne v. Watson, 5 Scott, 506; 4 Bing. (N.C.) 178; 6 D. P. C. 404; 7 L. J., C. P. 138; 2 Jur. 155.

A deed of sale of beds of coal contained a covenant to pay the purchase-money partly in cash and partly in promissory notes. In an action for breach of covenant for not paying the notes when due:—Held, that the nonpayment of the notes was a breach of the covenant, and that, therefore, it was a bad plea, that the causes of action did not accrue within six years before action. Dixon v. Holroyd, 7 El. & Bl. 903; 27 L. J., Q. B. 43; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 213; 5 W. R. 688.

Bond—Breach of Conditions.]—The 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 42, s. 3, constitutes a bar to an action on a writing obligatory in those cases only where every breach of the condition has taken place more than twenty years previously to the commencement of the action. Sanders v. Coward, 3 D. & L. 281; 15 M. & W. 48; 15 L. J., Ex. 97; 10 Jur. 186.

Action, on the obligatory part only, upon two bonds dated in 1828 and 1829. Plea, that the causes of action did not accrue within twenty years. Replication, that the causes of action did accrue within twenty years. The first bond stated that M. and the defendant bound themselves, and each of them, to the plaintiff in 300*l.* The condition (after reciting that M. had agreed with the plaintiff for the sale to him, for 150*l.*, of an annuity of 20*l.* to be paid to the plaintiff during the joint and several lives of the plaintiff and his wife, and his survivor; that M. had requested the defendant to join in and execute the bond, which he had agreed to do, for securing the regular payment of the annuity; and that the 150*l.* had been paid to M.) was for payment of the annuity by M. or the defendant, or either of them, by equal half-yearly payments, during the joint and several lives of the plaintiff and his wife, and of the survivor, and a proportionate part in case of the survivor dying between the days of payment. The second bond and condition were similarly framed for the payment, by and to the same parties, of an annuity of 10*l.* The plaintiff suggested that, in 1851, two-and-a-half years' arrears were due in respect of each annuity, and were still unpaid. At the trial, it appeared that M. had paid the annuities half-yearly down to 1848, but never till after the day of payment fixed by the condition, so that there had been breaches of the condition twenty years before action, and that the arrears suggested were still due:—Held, that a new cause of action arose upon each successive breach of the condition; that, on the record as it stood, the plaintiff was entitled to prove at the trial breaches within twenty years; and that, on such proof, he was entitled to a verdict upon the issue on the Statute of Limitations. Amott v. Holden or Holder, 18 Q. B. 593; 22 L. J., Q. B. 14; 17 Jur. 318.

To a declaration on a bond not setting out any condition, plea, that the debt and cause of action did not accrue within twenty years. At the trial the bond and condition were produced, when it appeared that the bond had been executed more than twenty years, but that the condition was for the payment of the money after the death of a party who was proved to have died within twenty years:—Held, that the plea was disproved. Tuckey v. Hawkins, 4 C. B. 655; 16 L. J., C. P. 201; 11 Jur. 919.

—— Securing Two Sums on different Conditions.]—When two separate sums are secured by one bond, a payment in respect of one sum does not prevent the statute running in respect of the other. Ashlin v. Lee, 44 L. J., Ch. 174; 31 L. T. 721; 23 W. R. 287. Affirmed, 44 L. J., Ch. 376; 32 L. T. 348; 23 W. R. 458.

By an agreement the sum of 1,000*l.*, part of the purchase-money of real estate, was secured by a bond. The arrangement was, that the sum of 750*l.* was to be paid to a person named on a given event, and the remaining 250*l.* to another person on another event. The event on which the 250*l.* became payable happened more than twenty years before filing the bill, and it was alleged that the sum had never been paid. The event on which the 750*l.* became payable happened within the twenty years, and the sum of 750*l.* was then paid:—Held, that the payment of the 750*l.* did not prevent the 250*l.* being barred by the statute. Ib.

—— By Sureties for Payment of Mortgage Debt—Payment of Interest by Mortgagor.]—In 1867 T. P. mortgaged an estate to L. and A. for 1,000*l.*, and at the same time E. P. and C. P. gave to L. and A. a joint and several bond in the penal sum of 400*l.*, reciting that the 1,000*l.* had been advanced at the request of E. P. and C. P., and that they had agreed to give as a better security for part thereof a bond conditioned for payment of 200*l.* and interest. The bond was conditioned to be void if the mortgagor paid the mortgage money and interest according to his covenant. T. P. paid the interest till December, 1877, after which it fell into arrear, and in 1880 the mortgagees entered into possession. E. P. died in 1883, without having made any payment or given any acknowledgment. L. and A., as creditors under the bond, took out a summons for administration of his estate. E. P.'s representatives disputed the claim on the ground that this was a proceeding to recover money secured on land, and was barred by the lapse of twelve years under the Real Property Limitation Act, 1874:—Held, that this was not a proceeding to recover money secured on land, but to recover damages because another person failed to pay money secured on land, and that it did not come within the scope of the Real Property Limitation Act, 1874, s. 8. Held, further, that if the remedy on the bond had been barrable by the lapse of twelve years under that section, the payments of interest by the mortgagor would have prevented the bar. Held, therefore, that L. and A. were entitled to rank as creditors against the estate of E. P., and that if his representatives did not admit assets, an administration order must be made. Sutton v. Sutton (22 Ch. 511); Fearnside v. Flint (22 Ch. D. 579); and Cockrill v. Sparks (1 H. & C. 699), distinguished. Powers, In re, Lindsell v. Phillips, 30 Ch. D. 291; 53 L. T. 647—C. A.

—— Action on.]—In 1831 an obligee of a bond brought an action upon it against the obligor. After notice of trial, the action abated by the death of the obligor in 1835. The obligor left a will, which was not proved. In 1857 administration of the goods and effects of the obligor, with his will annexed, was granted to the defendant. In 1852 the obligee petitioned the Insolvent Debtors Court, and his effects vested in the provisional assignee, who commenced an action on the bond against the defendant in 1859:—Held, that the right of action was not barred by the 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 42, s. 3. Sturgis v. Darell, 4 H. & N. 622; 28 L. J., Ex. 366. Affirmed, 6 H. & N. 120; 29 L. J., Ex. 472; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 1351; 8 W. R. 653; 2 L. T. 808—Ex. Ch.

The same equitable construction which has been given to the 21 Jac. 1, c. 16, should be put on that of the 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 42, as regards actions on specialties. Ib.

—— Executed in India—Action in England.]—Specialty debts in India have no higher legal value nor greater efficacy than simple contract debts; and the same period of limitation, viz., three years, bars the remedy for both, but:—Held, by Lopes, J., that where an action on a bond executed in India is brought in England, the bond cannot be treated as a simple contract; and, therefore, as the English Statutes of Limitations apply, the remedy is not barred until after the lapse of the period of twenty years prescribed by 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 42, s. 3, as the limitation for actions on contracts under seal. Alliance Bank of Simla v. Carey, 49 L. J., C. P. 781; 5 C. P. D. 429; 29 W. R. 306; 44 J. P. 735.

—— Collateral—Mortgage Debt.]—When a mortgage debt is secured by a collateral bond, the remedy on the bond is, under s. 8 of the Real Property Limitation Act, 1874, barred by the lapse of twelve years since the last payment of interest or acknowledgment of the debt, equally with the remedy against the land comprised in the mortgage. Sutton v. Sutton (22 Ch. D. 511) followed. Fearnside v. Flint, 52 L. J., Ch. 479; 22 Ch. D. 579; 48 L. T. 154; 31 W. R. 318.

—— Payment of, by Tenant for Life—Incumbrance on Estate.]—A party, being indebted by bond, devised real estate to his son for life, with remainder, subject to a term for the payment of legacies, to his grandson in tail, and died. Upwards of twenty years after the date of the latest of the bonds, the tenant for life and his assignee for value filed a bill against the tenant in tail and the legatees, alleging that the tenant for life had paid off the bonds, and seeking to stand in the shoes of the obligees as against the inheritance. The tenant in tail pleaded the statute, the other legatees did not:—Held, that the payment of the bonds by the tenant for life did not constitute him an incumbrancer on the estate, and that the bonds themselves being more than twenty years old, the presumption was that they had been satisfied. Morley v. Morley, 5 De G. M. & G. 610; 25 L. J., Ch. 1; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 1097; 4 W. R. 75.

—— For Payment of Money at future Date not a "Specialty Debt now owing."]—In 1886 bonds for payment of money were given by B., with warrants of attorney to confess judgment. The conditions were, to pay the principal upon the death of B. with interest on the first bond from the day of its date, and on the latter from the day of the death of the obligor. The obligees were T., a son of the obligor, and C., in whom the bonds were vested as trustees of the marriage settlement of G., upon trusts for the benefit of the children of the marriage. In 1807 the real estates of B. were settled upon T., one of the obligees, subject to a term of 300 years, for raising 5,000*l.*, which was to be applied in satisfying a debt, and the remainder was to go towards payment of "judgment and specialty debts then owing by B." The obligor died in 1816, leaving his son T. his executor, who survived his co-trustee C., and died in 1836. On the death of T., B. came into possession of the estates. On a bill filed by the children of G. against B. and his children, who were entitled to the estates subject to the term, and also against the owners of the term, praying for an account, and payment of the amount due on the bonds, and that the same might be decreed to be well charged on the lands included in the term:—Held, that the bonds did not come within the description of "judgment and specialty debts now due and owing," and therefore were not a charge upon the estate subject to the term, but that the children of G. were entitled to be paid out of the general assets of the obligor, of which the money to be raised by the term formed part. Burrowes v. Gore, 6 H. L. Cas. 907; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 1245; 6 W. R. 699.

Held, also, that the statute was no bar to the right of the cestuis que trustent, the children of G., to sue upon the bonds, although the obligees were barred, inasmuch as B. was their trustee, and his was the hand to pay and the hand to receive. Ib.

T. being the trustee of the bonds and the personal representative of B., the right of the cestuis que trustent did not accrue until the death of G. in 1846, and therefore the statute did not apply. Ib.

—— Joint and Several—Appointment of Receiver over Estate of one Obligor.]—A tenant for life and remainderman executed a joint and several bond with warrant of attorney for confessing judgment thereon, and several judgments were entered up against them by the obligee of the bond. A receiver over the tenant for life's estate was extended to the judgment against the father, and remained in receipt of the rents up to a period within twenty years of the present proceeding, but no payment was ever made on foot of the said judgment:—Held, that the extension of the receiver to the matter of the judgment did not prevent the Statute of Limitations from running in favour of the remainderman. Greene's Estate, In re, 13 L. —— Before 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 42—Presumption of Payment—Defendant Abroad.]—Payment of money secured by a bond was not to be presumed, although more than twenty years had elapsed since an acknowledgment that any sum was due upon it, if the obligee, ever since that acknowledgment, had resided abroad. Newman v. Newman, 1 Stark. 101.

—— Receipts for Interest indorsed on Bond by Obligee.]—Indorsements on a bond, acknowledging the receipt of interest, or payment of part of the principal, were not evidence against the obligor, to prove that the bond was on foot, without showing that they were on the bond recently after their dates, and at a time when their purport was contrary to the interest of the obligee. Rose v. Bryant, 2 Camp. 321.

The producing a receipt for interest within twenty years, indorsed on a bond by the obligee, was sufficient to take off the presumption of payment, though no proof was given when such receipt was written and signed. Barrington (Lord) v. Searle, 3 Bro. P. C. 593; 2 Stra. 826.

Where in an action on a bond more than twenty years old, to rebut the presumption of payment, the obligee gave evidence of payment of interest by the obligor to A., equal in amount to the interest that would become due on the bond:—Held, that an indorsement on the bond in the handwriting of the obligee, and which appeared to have been made at or about the time when the bond was executed, but which was not proved to have been ever seen by the obligor, stating that the bond was given to the obligor in trust for A., was admissible to connect the payment of interest with the bond. Gleadow v. Atkin, 1 C. & M. 410; 3 Tyr. 289; 2 L. A recognizance to the crown is not within the operation of the 8 Geo. 1, c. 4. Ib.

Debt due from a Receiver.]—A sum of money due from a receiver whether the amount has been ascertained or not, was held, so long as the recognizance exists, to be a debt of record. Seagram v. Tuck, 50 L. J., Ch. 572; 18 Ch. D. 296; 44 L. T. 800; 29 W. R. 784.

Calls.]—The proper limitation to an action by an incorporated company against one of its members for calls under 8 & 9 Vict. c. 16, is twenty years by 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 42, s. 3, and not six years under 21 Jac. 1, c. 16, s. 3. Cork and Bandon Ry. v. Goode, 13 C. B. 827; 22 L. J., C. P. 198; 17 Jur. 555; 1 W. R. 410.

Transfer of Shares.]—By a deed of settlement of a company it was provided, that whenever any shares should be transferred to a new holder, the responsibility of the previous holder in respect of such shares should cease, but that he should not be released from his proportion of losses (if any) sustained by the company up to the period of his ceasing to be such shareholder:—Held, that a transferor of shares was liable in respect of losses that accrued prior to the date of the transfer, though the liability being by way of specialty, a holder who transferred his shares more than twenty years before the date of the winding-up was entitled to the benefit of the statute. Horsey, Ex parte, L. R. 2 Eq. 167; 14 L. T. 47; 14 W. R. 417.

Debenture Stock—Interest—Statutory Right.]—Where debenture stock is issued by a company formed by a special act which incorporates the provisions of Part III. of the Companies Clauses Act, 1863, the right to interest on such stock, being a statutory right, is not barred for twenty years. Cornwall Minerals Ry., In re, 66 L. J., Ch. 561; [1897] 2 Ch. 74; 76 L. T. 832; 46 W. R. 5; 61 J. P. 345, 535.

Penalties under Private Act.]—The 32 Geo. 3, c. lxxiv. s. 8, imposes duties to be paid by the master or owner for every ship or vessel of a certain burthen passing from, to, or by Ramsgate. By s. 16, if any master or owner shall elude or avoid payment of the duties, he shall stand charged to be liable to payment of the same, and the same are to be recovered as penalties imposed by the act. By s. 72, penalties are recoverable by action. A party was sued for duties under this act, which he had not paid:—Held, that the action being on a specialty, the period of limitation was twenty years, under 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 42, s. 3. Shepherd v. Hills, 11 Ex. 55; 25 L. J., Ex. 6.

Action by Borough against County Council to recover Expenses in carrying out Act not an Action for Debt on a Statute.]—See Salford v. Lancashire County Council, col. 40.

Specialty Creditors barred, notwithstanding Bill filed.]—A bill filed not on behalf of all creditors of a testator against his personal representative does not keep alive against him the demand of specialty creditors, and a demand in such a case held barred by lapse of time. Busby v. Seymour, 1 Jo. & Lat. 527; 7 Ir. Eq. R. 433.

Where a judgment creditor had allowed twenty years to elapse without taking steps to recover his debt, and then ascertained that during the twenty years a suit had been instituted for the benefit of the specialty creditors of his debtor, and that under a decree in the suit they had received part-payment of their debts, and that there was money in court available for payment of the remainder:—Held, that he was barred by the Statute of Limitations from proving his debt before the master, and receiving payment ratably with the other creditors. Berrington v. Evans, 1 Y. & Coll. 434.

XI. ARREARS OF RENTS AND INTEREST.

See also ante, B, II. 9 (col. 206), and B. V. (col. 273).

By 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, s. 42, no arrears of rent, or of interest in respect of any sum of money charged upon or payable out of any land or rent, shall be recovered more than six years after the same is due, except where a prior incumbrancer has been in possession. By 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 42, s. 3, actions of debt for rent upon an indenture of demise, of covenant or debt upon any bond or other specialty, and of debt or scire facias upon any recognizance, are to be brought within twenty years. By 37 & 38 Vict. c. 57, s. 10, the limit of time for recovering any arrears of rent or of interest in respect of any money or legacy charged on land is to apply, notwithstanding an express trust.

Construction of 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, s. 42, and c. 42, s. 3.]—The 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, s. 42, has reference only to the land on which a demand is secured, the object being to relieve land from arrears of charges beyond six years: and this object is not affected by the terms of the 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 42, s. 3, which relates to a different subject, namely to personal actions only. Hunter v. Nockolds, 1 Mac. & G. 640; 1 Hall & Tw. 644; 19 L. J., Ch. 177; 14 Jur. 256.

The 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 42, s. 3, is to be treated as an exception out of the 42nd section of 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, and the construction of the two acts, taken together, is, that no more than six years' arrears of rent or interest in respect of any sum charged upon or payable out of land or rent shall be recovered by any distress, action, or suit, other than and except in actions upon covenant or debt upon specialty, in which case the limitation is twenty years. Ib.

The 42nd section of the 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, is not repealed by 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 42. Humfrey v. Gery, 7 C. B. 567.

A. was, from the 2nd of July, 1805, till the 10th of July, 1841 (when he was found a lunatic), and B., his committee, had ever since been, seised as of fee of two-thirds of a fee-farm rent of 20*l.* 5*s.* per annum payable on the 29th of September and 25th of March, created by letters patent of Hen. 8. No payment of this rent, or of any part thereof, had been made since March, 1831, nor had there been any acknowledgment in writing relating thereto:—Held, that the case was governed by 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, s. 42, and consequently that neither the lunatic nor his committee was entitled to recover any arrears of the rent after the expiration of six years from the 29th September, 1831. Ib.

The limitation in actions for arrears of rent under an indenture is governed by 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 42, s. 3. Paget v. Foley, 3 Scott, 120; 2 Bing. (N.C.) 679; 2 Hodges, 32; 5 L. J., C. P. 258.

—— Saving where prior Creditor in Possession.]—The saving in 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, s. 42, that the time during which a prior creditor is in possession shall not count, does not extend to give the claimant arrears of interest or rent, as the case may be, for six years previous to the commencement of such creditor's possession. The operation of it is, that if it continues for more than six years, interest or arrears, as the case may be, may be recovered for all that time. Montgomery v. Southwell, 2 Con. & L. 263; 3 Dr. & War. 171.

Semble, that the six years for which interest or arrears of rent are recoverable by s. 42 of 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, are to be counted back, even in a creditor's suit, from the time of filing the charge of the creditor, not being plaintiff. Ib.

The prior incumbrance referred to in the exception in the statute 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, s. 42, is one which affects the stock or interest upon which the subsequent incumbrance is also a charge. Vincent v. Going, 1 Jo. & Lat. 697; 7 Ir. Eq. R. 463.

Arrears of Rent.]—Account of rent of an estate held of trustees. The Statute of Limitations being insisted on, only ordered for six years before bill filed. Hervey v. Ballard, 4 Bro. C. C. 468.

Neglect to enforce payment of rent deprives a lessor, by the express terms of the Statute of Limitations, from recovering more than six years' arrears of rent; but, as to accruing payments, the legal principle is, that the right is constantly renewed, and therefore the doctrine of laches would not apply. Archbold v. Scully, 9 H. L. Cas. 360; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 1169; 5 L. T. 160.

It is well established that so long as the relation of landlord and tenant subsists as a legal relation, the landlord's right to rent is not barred by nonpayment of rent, for however long a time. Ib.

The 24th section of the 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, only bars equitable rights so far as they would have been barred if they had been legal rights. Ib.

Account of rents directed at the suit of the issue in tail for six years previously to the filing of the bill. Gibbons v. Snape, 1 De G. J. & S. 621.

Administration Action—Account of Rents, directed not limited to Six Years.]—See Obee v. Bishop, col. 83.

Arrears of Rents received by Mortgagee of deceased Tenant for Life—No fiduciary relation to Remaindermen.]—In 1859 a suit for administration was instituted by a tenant for life under a will of leaseholds, who subsequently mortgaged her life interest. The mortgagee obtained, under an order made in 1860, liberty to enter, and did enter, into possession of the rents for the purpose of keeping down the interest on her mortgage, and paying the balance to the tenant for life. In March, 1866, the tenant for life left her home, and was never heard of afterwards. On a petition presented in 1875 by the persons entitled in remainder, it was held that, under the circumstances, the tenant for life must be taken to have died soon after June, 1866. On a petition presented by the same parties for an account of arrears of rent received by the mortgagee:—Held, that the petitioners had been guilty of no laches in not filing their petition till the expiration of seven years after the disappearance of the tenant for life, and that they were, therefore, entitled to an account of rents; but that there was no fiduciary relation between the mortgagee and the petitioners, and, therefore, they were only entitled to arrears for six years before the filing of the petition. Hickman v. Upsall, 46 L. J., Ch. 245; 4 Ch. D. 144; 35 L. T. 919; 25 W. R. 175—C. A.

Rents received in Error by Devisee of other Property, suit by Heir for.]—The widow of a testator, with the acquiescence of his heir, was let into possession of certain freehold houses, under an erroneous supposition that they passed by the will along with other property, in which a life interest was devised to her; and before the error was discovered or her right disputed, she died. On a bill filed by the heir against her personal representative, praying the delivery of the title-deeds, and an account:—Held, that the suit was maintainable for the rents received during her continuance in possession; that as the defence of the Statute of Limitations was not raised upon the pleadings, the account should be taken from the time when the plaintiff's title first accrued; and that the plaintiff was not at liberty to set off the amount of such rents against payments made by the widow in her character of executrix, those payments being, by virtue of a special trust, a primary charge upon the estates, of which, subject to the widow's life interest, the plaintiff was devisee. Monypenny v. Bristow, 2 Russ. & M. 117; 1 L. J., Ch. 88.

Rents received in Error by Tenant pur autre vie after Title determined.]—C. being in possession of property under a settlement for the residue of a term of ninety-nine years, determinable with the life of the settlor, who died in 1830, continued by mistake in possession till her own death in 1835. D., who became entitled on the death of the settlor under a deed of gift from him, discovered the mistake in 1839, by consulting that deed, which had been in his possession the whole time, and then sued the executors of C. for the rents received by her after 1830:—Held, that inasmuch as D. had been guilty of laches in not finding out the mistake earlier by the means which were in his power, he was entitled to an account only for the period allowed by analogy to the Statute of Limitations, which in this case was six years before the filing of the bill and an additional period during which he was abroad. Denys v. Shuckburgh, 4 Y. & Coll. 42; 5 Jur. 21.

Where the rents of mines are reserved by means of payment of produce in specie, the profits will be considered as accruing to the lessor at the time of receiving such produce, and not at the time of the sale of it, and therefore the statute will run from the time of such receipt, and not from the time of such sale. Ib.

Agent bound to account to Heir for all Rents and Profits received since Owner's Death.]—See Lyell v. Kennedy, col. 204.

Covenant to pay Rent or Royalty by Lessee of Mine in respect of Minerals carried over Surface—Arrears.]—See Darley v. Tennant, col. 276.

Additional Rent in lieu of Tithe Rent-charge.]—The Statute of Limitations (3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, s. 42) does not apply to additional rent in lieu of tithe rent-charge as between landlord and tenant. Warburton, Ex parte, 10 Ir. Eq. R. 206.

Arrears of Rent-charge—Collateral Covenant for Payment.]—The limitation prescribed by 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, s. 42, does not apply to an action on a collateral covenant for payment of a rent charged on land, and the covenantee may recover damages for the breach of that covenant, notwithstanding his right to recover the rent-charge is barred. Manning v. Phelps, 10 Ex. 59; 24 L. J., Ex. 62.

Action on Covenant for Rent-charge not within Limit as to Actions for Recovery of Land or Rent.]—See Strachan v. Thomas, col. 274.

Arrears of Annuity.]—Arrears of an annuity are recoverable for more than six years if there is a term to secure it. Snow v. Booth, 8 De G. M. & G. 69; 25 L. J., Ch. 417; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 244; 4 W. R. 345. But see now 37 & 38 Vict. c. 57, s. 10.

Interest not allowed on the arrears of an annuity, and the discretion of the court on the question is not affected by the statute 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 42, s. 28. Powell's Trust, In re, 10 Hare, 134.

An annuity given by a will, forming no charge upon land, but being personal only, is not within the Statute of Limitations, 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, s. 42. Roch v. Callen, 6 Hare, 531; 17 L. J., Ch. 144; 12 Jur. 112. And see Hunter v. Nockolds, 19 L. J., Ch. 177; col. 323.

Action by Annuitant against Purchaser of Estate charged.]—See Harrisson v. Duignan, col. 274.

Devisee of Estate charged with Annuity not a Trustee for Annuitant, and, therefore, not more than six years recoverable.]—See Francis v. Grover, col. 284.

Arrears of Interest on Mortgage.]—Where a debt is secured by a bond and a covenant of the debtor, as well as by a mortgage of his lands, the mortgagee will be entitled, under 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, s. 42, and 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 42, s. 3, to carry back the interest account in a suit to foreclose the mortgage for a period of twenty years. Du Vigier v. Lee, 2 Hare, 326; 12 L. J., Ch. 345; 7 Jur. 299.

A mortgagee, notwithstanding the interest mortgaged is reversionary, can only recover six years' arrears of interest as against the land mortgaged, although he may recover twenty years' arrears on the covenant to pay. Sinclair v. Jackson, 17 Beav. 405.

A mortgagee in a suit to foreclose can only recover arrears of interest for six years next preceding the suit, though the principal and interest are secured by the covenant and bond of the mortgagor. Round v. Bell, 30 Beav. 121; 31 L. J., Ch. 127; 9 W. R. 846.

After the sale of an estate by a trustee for a mortgagee, under a power of sale, in a suit by the mortgagor, to recover the surplus money, the mortgagee cannot, under 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, retain more than six years' arrears of interest out of the purchase-money. Mason v. Broadbent, 33 Beav. 296; 9 L. T. 565; 12 W. R. 1118.

Where a married woman, entitled, after the death of a tenant for life, to a share of a fund arising from moneys the proceeds of lands devised upon trust for sale, joined with her husband in a mortgage, by deed acknowledged, of her reversionary estate, such mortgage containing a covenant by husband and wife to pay full interest:—Held, that the wife's estate was money payable out of land within 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, s. 42; and that the mortgagee could not recover more than six years' arrears of interest on the mortgage on such an estate. Bowyer v. Woodman, L. R. 3 Eq. 313.

A canal company conveyed, under seal, the canal works and rates to a mortgagee, to hold, until repayment of certain money borrowed, and interest. There was no covenant to repay:—Held, that, although the mortgagee could recover the principal within twenty years, yet his remedy for arrears of interest was limited to six years. Hodges v. Croydon Canal Co., 3 Beav. 86.

Under 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, s. 42, a mortgagee, irrespective of a covenant to pay or a term to secure the payment, is entitled to six years' arrears of interest. Shaw v. Johnson, 1 Drew. & Sm. 412; 30 L. J., Ch. 646; 4 L. T. 460; 9 W. R. 629.

So far as a covenant to pay affects the land, it is limited to six years. Ib.

And see B, II. 9, ante (col. 206).

—— Where Express Trust is created.]—When a term is created on an express trust to secure principal and interest, the 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, s. 42, does not operate as a bar, and a mortgagee's right is not confined to six years. Ib. See now 37 & 38 Vict. c. 57, s. 10.

—— Equitable Mortgagee.]—A corporation agreed to purchase freehold premises subject to an equitable mortgage, with an agreement to give a legal mortgage, and paid the money into court. The equitable mortgagee petitioned that out of the fund there might be paid to him the principal money then due and nineteen years' interest:—Held, that the petition must be treated as a suit within 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, s. 42, and that the mortgagee was entitled only to his principal money and six years' interest. Stead's Settlement Trusts, In re, 45 L. J., Ch. 634; 2 Ch. D. 713; 35 L. T. 465; 24 W. R. 698.

—— When Mortgage is not a Charge on Realty.]—A. was legatee in reversion after certain life interests of a testatrix's residuary personal estate. The estate consisted wholly or chiefly of 3,000*l.* invested on mortgage of real estate by the testatrix and continued on such investment by her trustees. A. mortgaged his interest in the 3,000*l.*, and after sixteen years (during which A. paid no interest on his mortgage) A.'s reversion fell into possession:—Held, that A.'s mortgagee was entitled as against the residuary estate to recover the whole arrears of interest, the mortgage by A. not being a charge on real estate within s. 42 of the Statute of Limitations (3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27). Smith v. Hill, 47 L. J., Ch. 788; 9 Ch. D. 143; 38 L. T. 638; 26 W. R. 878.

Semble, however, that if it had been a charge on real estate, the fact of the interest being reversionary would not have prevented the operation of s. 42 in barring arrears of interest beyond six years. Ib.

—— In Cases where no Action necessary.]—The 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, s. 42, does not apply to any case in which there is not strictly a suit or an action for the recovery of interest. Edmunds v. Waugh, 35 L. J., Ch. 234; L. R. 1 Eq. 418; 12 Jur. (N.S.) 326; 13 L. T. 739; 14 W. R. 257.

Therefore where, under a power of sale in a mortgage deed, the property mortgaged was sold, and the proceeds paid into court to the general credit of an account in an administration suit of the estate of the mortgagee, upon a petition by trustees of the parties beneficially entitled to the fund in court:—Held, that they were entitled to the full arrears of interest on the mortgage, the fund after sale having been in their possession, and no recovery by distress, suit, or action being requisite. Ib.

—— Of Turnpike Tolls.]—See Mellish v. Brooks, col. 150.

—— Recital in Assignment of Mortgage of Interest due not a sufficient Acknowledgment.]—See Bolding v. Lane, col. 287.

Interest from filing of Charge in Cause.]—Held, that the action or suit by which the arrears of interest "shall be recovered" under 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, s. 42, was the charge filed in the cause, and not the scire facias, and therefore, that the party was entitled to six years' interest from the filing of the charge only. Hutchins v. O'Sullivan, 11 Ir. Eq. R. 443.

Prior to Statute, Interest on Charge from filing of Bill only.]—See Peyton v. McDermott, col. 150.

Arrears of Interest during preceding Estate for life paid by Remainderman—Right to be recouped—Fund in Court.]—A remainderman paid with his own money, after he came into possession, interest which had accrued, during the preceding estate for life, upon charges affecting the inheritance:—Held, first, that his executors were entitled, in 1870 (as against the personal representative of the tenant for life), to be recouped out of a fund in court, the produce of rents of the life estate brought in, in 1815, by a receiver appointed in an incumbrancer's suit instituted against the tenant for life. Howlin v. Sheppard, Ir. R. 6 Eq. 38.

Held, secondly, that the fund having remained in court, during the whole period from 1815 to 1870, in usum jus habentium, the claim of H.'s executor was not barred. Ib.

Tenant for Life liable to account for more than six years' Interest on Charge.]—See Stackhouse v. Barnston, col. 281.

Arrears of Interest on Portion appointed under Settlement to Child and charged on Land.]—By a marriage settlement of the year 1798, certain lands were limited to trustees to the use of A., the husband, and B., the intended wife, and the survivor of them, for their respective lives, with remainder to the issue of the marriage; and also to C. (a daughter of B. by a former marriage) in such shares as the survivor of them, the said A. and B., should appoint. In 1819, A. being the survivor, in pursuance of the power, appointed a certain sum to C., and limited a portion of the said lands to trustees to receive and levy, by sale or mortgage, the sum so appointed, and directed that the same should bear interest and be payable on the marriage of C., with a proviso that if the marriage of C. should take place in the lifetime of A., the said principal sum should not be raised until twelve months after the decease of A. On a bill filed by C. and her husband, after the death of A., against a son of A. and B., who had got into and continued in the possession of the lands since the year 1825, and disputed the validity of the original settlement of 1798:—Held, that the plaintiffs were within the 42nd section of the 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, and therefore only entitled to six years' arrears of interest on their charge. Burne v. Robinson, 1 Dr. & Wal. 688.

Reference as to Incumbrances directed in a Suit—Incumbrancer, not a Party, entitled to date back Arrears from Inquiry.]—On a bill to enforce a charge acquired by a judgment creditor on the estate of the debtor a receiver was appointed, and at the hearing a reference as to incumbrances on the estate was directed. A statement of facts and claim carried in before the master under such inquiry by an incumbrancer, not a party to the suit, was held to take the charge as to the interest out of the Statute of Limitations, 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, s. 42, and the incumbrancer was held to be entitled to arrears of interest for six years antecedent to the time of such claim. Greenway v. Bromfield, Handley v. Wood, 9 Hare, 201.

Arrears of Interest on Purchase-money unpaid.]—A contract for the sale of an estate made in March, 1811, stipulated that the purchase-money should be paid in on the 13th of May following. The purchase-money was not paid, but the purchaser entered into possession, and he and persons claiming under him continued in such possession. In 1834, their agent signed a written acknowledgment of the vendor's title, sufficient to take his lien for the principal of the purchase-money out of the 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, s. 40. In 1849, the assignees of the vendor filed a bill in equity, seeking to enforce the vendor's lien on the estate for the purchase-money:—Held, that the 42nd section did not apply to the arrears of interest, but that the whole was recoverable from the 13th of May, 1811. Tyft v. Stevenson, 5 De G. M. & G. 735.

Interest on Legacies.]—Upon the constructive admission of assets:—Held, that the residuary legatees were entitled to immediate payment of their legacies, and under circumstances with interest beyond the time allowed by the Statute of Limitations (3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, s. 40). Dinsdale v. Dudding, 1 Y. & Coll. C. C. 265.

Many of the provisions of the statute 4 Will. 4, c. 42, which were intended primarily for the courts of common law, will be adopted, mutatis mutandis, by the court of equity. Hyde v. Price, 8 Sim. 578. S. C., nom. Hart v. Cradock, 6 L. J., Ch. 358. S. C., C. P. Cooper, 193. And see the cases on the question of interest cited and discussed, C. P. Cooper, 193, n.

A. B. being seised in fee of four estates, mortgaged two of them, and subsequently settled the mortgaged estates and one of the others on himself for life, with remainder to his son in tail, and covenanted against incumbrances, but the settlement did not recite that there were any incumbrances. He afterwards mortgaged the fourth estate and took the benefit of the Insolvent Debtors Act. After this, a creditor, on certain bills of exchange, became a registered judgment creditor, and then filed a bill against the tenant in tail and the assignee under the insolvency and the other incumbrancers, praying a sale, in satisfaction of the judgment debt, and what might be paid by the plaintiff in satisfaction of prior incumbrances, subject to the estate and interest of the tenant in tail under the settlement. Among other incumbrances on the estates in question was a legacy of 800*l.*, subject to the payment of which the estates had been devised to A. B. The testator's death took place in 1810, and the bill was filed in 1843, at which time the legacy, and the arrears of interest thereon, remained unpaid:—Held, that the arrears of interest on such legacy could only be recovered from within six years from the filing of the bill. Hughes v. Williams, 3 Mac. & G. 683; 16 Jur. 415. And see Chappell v. Rees, 1 De G. M. & G. 393; 3 Mac. & G. 683; 16 Jur. 415.

Arrears of interest on a legacy are not recoverable beyond six years before the filing of the bill. Holland v. Clarke, 1 Y. & Coll. C. C. 151.

A testator, who died in 1823, directed the trustees of his will to raise a legacy by sale of his real estates:—Held, that the legatee was not barred by the 42nd section of the Statute of Limitations (3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27) from claiming interest on the legacy from the end of the first year after the testator's death. Gough v. Bult, 16 Sim. 323; 17 L. J., Ch. 486; 12 Jur. 859.

A testator gave a fund to his executrix for her life, subject to the immediate payment thereout of a legacy to be divided amongst the children of P., to whom he also gave the fund after the death of the executrix. He died in 1847. One of P.'s children, of whom there had been five, was last heard of in 1845. The executrix, W., retained one-fifth of the legacy. She became lunatic in 1851, whereupon the fund was carried to an account entitled "The account of W. and the children of P.," and the income of the whole was applied for the benefit of the lunatic. To a petition presented in 1871 by the four surviving children, for payment of the fifth share, which remained unpaid out of the fund, and for the payment of the interest thereon out of another fund belonging absolutely to the lunatic, it was objected that the Statute of Limitations was a bar:—Held, that the statute was no bar to the claim for the principal, but was a bar to the claim for more than six years' interest. Walker, In re, 41 L. J., Ch. 219; L. R. 7 Ch. 120; 25 L. T. 775; 20 W. R. 171.

—— Express Trust.]—See Thompson v. Eastwood, col. 194.

Interest on Judgments.]—A judgment upon a bond in a penalty conditioned for the payment of a principal sum with interest is "a sum of money charged upon or payable out of land or rent," within the meaning of s. 42 of the 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, and that statute bars the recovery of all arrears of interest thereon, which have accrued due more than six years next before the commencement of a suit instituted after the 31st December, 1833, to enforce payment thereof out of the land or rent. O'Kelly v. Bodkin, 3 Ir. Eq. R. 390.

Semble, that the statute is a similar bar to the recovery of interest thereon, by a proceeding against the person or personal chattels of the debtor. Ib.

A judgment is not a sum charged upon or payable out of land, within the meaning of 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, s. 42. An application, therefore, to discharge an order for a receiver, under 5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 55, upon payment of the principal sum due upon the judgment, with six years' interest, was refused. Kealy v. Bodkin, Sau. & Sc. 211.

Debts secured by judgments are sums of money charged upon or payable out of land within the meaning of the statute 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, s. 42, and only six years' arrears of interest can be recovered upon such debts. Henry v. Smith, 2 Dr. & War. 381; 1 Con. & L. 506; 4 Ir. Eq. R. 502.

In relation to the Statute of Limitations, the rights of judgment creditors for arrears of interest as against the real and personal estates of their debtor, are equal and co-extensive. As far as the bar of the statute operates for the protection of the real estates to the same extent, the personal estate is protected. Ib.

The statute 3 & 4 Vict. c. 105, s. 26, enacts that every judgment debt due upon any judgment not confessed or recovered for any penal sum for securing principal and interest, shall carry interest, &c. The interest thus given is subject to the limitations of the statutes 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27. s. 42. Ib.

On a reference to inquire the sum due for principal, interest and costs, on foot of a judgment, for which a receiver has been appointed, the respondent is entitled to the benefit of the Statute of Limitations, although not set up in shewing cause against the appointment of the receiver; and the petitioner is entitled only to interest for six years from the date of the conditional order for the appointment of the receiver. Dowell v. Burke, 9 Ir. Eq. R. 83.

A judgment creditor of a tenant in fee in remainder, after an estate for life, is not entitled to recover out of the lands arrears of interest which accrue due during the existence of the tenancy for life, and more than six years before the commencement of the suit. Vincent v. Going, 1 Jo. & Lat. 697; 7 Ir. Eq. R. 463.

The period of limitation applicable to the recovery of interest upon a judgment is regulated by 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, s. 42, and only six years' interest is recoverable out of the personal estate of the judgment debtor. Breslin v. Hodgens (Ir. R. 10 Eq. 260) not followed. M'Donnell v. Fitzgerald, [1897] 1 Ir. R. 556.

XII. PLEADINGS AND PROCEDURE.

See also ante, A, VIII. (col. 144).

By R. S. C., 1883, Ord. XIX. r. 15, the Statute of Limitations must be pleaded.

Necessity of Pleading specially.]—Where a Statute of Limitations extinguishes the right, and does not merely bar the remedy, the defence under such statute need not be pleaded specially; and, therefore, in replevin, evidence of the lapse of twenty years, under the 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, ss. 23, 34, since the last payment of rent, may be given under a plea in bar of non tenuit. De Beauvoir v. Owen, 5 Ex. 166; 19 L. J., Ex. 177—Ex. Ch.

In an action for the recovery of real property, if the statement of claim shews on the face of it that the time within which the title to land must be asserted has gone by, the defence of the Statute of Limitations can be raised upon demurrer. Dawkins v. Penrhyn (Lord), 48 L. J., Ch. 304; 4 App. Cas. 51; 39 L. T. 583; 27 W. R. 173—H. L. (E.)

See Burge, In re, Gillard v. Lawrenson, col. 192.

Replication of the Statute to Plea justifying Trespass—Rejoinder.]—In trespass quare clausum fregit, the defendant in his plea, deduced title by an inclosure act to an allotment of land comprising the locus in quo, to T., a trustee for him. It then stated the entry and possession of T., until just before the time of the trespasses, gave express colour to the plaintiff, and stated his possession at the time of the trespass under a charter of demise, without livery, and justified the trespass as servant of T., and by his command. The plaintiff replied, that the defendant entered and committed the trespasses after the 1st December, 1833, and that the entry was made for the purpose of recovering the close, and that the supposed right to enter did not first come to T. or the defendant, or any person through whom he claimed the estate and interest in the close, at any time within twenty years before making that entry; and that by reason thereof the supposed right of T. and the defendant as his servant was extinguished:—Held, that the replication was sufficient, and that it was not necessary that it should shew what the defendant's title was, and how it was barred; and that, if the defendant wished to avail himself of the right of entry under 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, s. 15, he ought to have rejoined it. Jones v. Jones, 4 D. & L. 494; 16 M. & W. 699; 16 L. J., Ex. 299; 11 Jur. 335.

Admission in Plea that Possession in Plaintiff at time of alleged Trespass, Effect of.]—See Keyse v. Powell, col. 254.

Replication of Acknowledgment to Plea of Statute.]—To a plea of the 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 42, in an action upon a mortgage deed, the plaintiff, in order to take the case out of such statute by an acknowledgment in writing, under s. 5, must reply such acknowledgment specially. Kempe or Kent v. Gibbon or Gibbons, 9 Q. B. 609; 16 L. J., Q. B. 120; 11 Jur. 299.

But the plaintiff need not set out the acknowledgment in his replication. S. C., 12 Q. B. 662; 17 L. J., Q. B. 298; 12 Jur. 697.

To an action on a deed the defendant pleaded the 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 42, to which the plaintiff replied, that the defendant before suit made an acknowledgment that the debt remained unpaid and due to the plaintiff, within the true intent and meaning of the statute, and that the action was brought within twenty years next after such acknowledgment. The court directed this replication to be amended, as being so framed as to prejudice the fair trial of the cause; but refused to give the defendant the costs of the application, or to compel the plaintiff to specify the date of the acknowledgment on which he relied. Forsyth v. Bristowe, 8 Ex. 347; 22 L. J., Ex. 70; 17 Jur. 46.

Demurrer to Bill in Equity in aid of Claim barred at Law.]—The right to a real estate vested in possession in October, 1803, but the claimant did not pursue her right until December, 1833, and obtained judgment by default in 1834. In 1835 that judgment was reversed. A demurrer to a bill in equity to correct error in the latter judgment, allowed, on the ground that more than twenty years had elapsed since the right to the property accrued. Plunkett v. Burlington (Lord), 1 Jur. 376.

A plaintiff brought an action of ejectment against a person in possession, and afterwards filed a bill of discovery in aid of the action, and to restrain the defendant from setting up outstanding terms. By the death of the defendant the suit abated, and the benefit of the action at law became lost. After twenty years' adverse possession, the plaintiff having filed a bill of revivor, a demurrer thereto was allowed, on the ground that no effectual proceeding could now be had at law, and that the discovery and relief sought would, therefore, be useless. Bampton v. Birchall, 11 Beav. 38.

Statute a bar to Discovery.]—See Cuthbert v. Creasy, col. 178.

Allegation in Bill of previous Proceedings, without stating Result.]—An ejectment bill filed in 1842 stating that the plaintiff's alleged right to the land accrued in 1812, that a bill had been filed in 1824 to recover the property, and that an ejectment had been brought in 1832, which was stayed until the plaintiff had paid the costs of a former ejectment; but it did not state the result of the suit or action:—Held, that it must be inferred that they had failed, and that they did not prevent the operation of the Statute of Limitations. Bampton v. Birchall, 5 Beav. 67; 6 Jur. 815. And see 11 L. J., Ch. 200.

1. Generally.

Doctrine as to.]—The doctrine as to the effect of lis pendens on the title of an alienee, is not founded on any principles of courts of equity with regard to notice, but on the ground that it is necessary to the administration of justice that the decision of the court in a suit should be binding, not only on the litigant parties, but on those who derive title from them pendente lite, whether with notice of the suit or not. Bellamy v. Sabine, 1 De G. & J. 566; 26 L. J., Ch. 797; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 943; 6 W. R. 1.

In what Cases.]—When a suit has been instituted in order to obtain a specific property, and the object of the suit may be wholly baffled by a sale by the defendant if the suit is not registered, that is a case of lis pendens. Plant v. Pearman, 41 L. J., Q. B. 169; 26 L. T. 313; 20 W. R. 314.

The 7 & 8 Vict. c. 90, s. 10 (equivalent to 2 & 3 Vict. c. 11, s. 7), which requires that a lis pendens shall be registered to affect a purchaser, does not apply to a purchase made before the passing of the act. Jennings v. Bond, 2 Jo. & Lat. 720; 8 Ir. Eq. R. 755.

Where the question is not between a registered and unregistered deed, notice by lis pendens is not affected by the registration of the title-deed of the person sought to be affected thereby. Ib.

—— How far applicable to Chattels.]—The doctrine of lis pendens does not apply to personal property, except leaseholds, and possibly money in court. Wigram v. Buckley, 63 L. J., Ch. 689; [1894] 3 Ch. 483; 7 R. 469; 71 L. T. 287; 43 W. R. 147—C. A.

—— Creditors' Administration Action—Real Estate specifically devised—Priority.]—Where debts are charged upon a testator's real estate by his will, or as judgment debts under the old law, an action by a creditor for the administration of the real and personal estate is a lis pendens which, when registered, gives the plaintiff priority over a purchaser or mortgagee from any defendant entitled to real estate under the will, except where the defendant is in such a position that the purchaser or mortgagee has a right to suppose he is selling or mortgaging for the purpose of paying the testator's debts. Price v. Price, 56 L. J., Ch. 530; 35 Ch. D. 297; 56 L. T. 842; 35 W. R. 386.

A creditor's action for general administration may be a sufficient lis pendens, before final decree, so as to entitle the plaintiff to priority over a purchaser or mortgagee taking, subsequently to the registration of the lis, from a specific devisee who is a defendant, if the plaintiff, previously to the purchase or mortgage, has sufficiently indicated the real estate sought to be charged in the action; a mere general claim for administration of the real and personal estate not being of itself a sufficient indication of intention to make liable the specifically devised real estate. Drew v. Norbury (Earl) (3 Jo. & Lat. 267), and Walker v. Flamstead (2 Keny., part 2, p. 57), considered. Ib.

A general administration suit is a lis pendens, quoad lands afterwards sold under the decree in it. Drew v. Norbury (Earl), 3 Jo. & Lat. 267; 9 Ir. Eq. R. 171, 524.

—— Winding-up Petition.]—A petition to wind up a company does not constitute a lis pendens as against a contributory. Thornton, Ex parte, Barned's Banking Co., In re, 36 L. J., Ch. 190; L. R. 2 Ch. 171; 15 L. T. 523; 15 W. R. 292.

Operation of, when Registered.]—In a suit which had been registered as a lis pendens, a decree was made for administration of a testator's estate. The executrix subsequently deposited an asset of the testator with a bank as security for advances. The bank had no notice of the suit:—Held, that the bank had a good lien on the property deposited. Berry v. Gibbons, 42 L. J., Ch. 89; L. R. 8 Ch. 747; 29 L. T. 88; 21 W. R. 754.

A registered lis pendens does not of itself create an incumbrance upon property, apart from the subject-matter in respect of which the lis pendens is registered. It is the duty of a purchaser, when he has notice of a lis pendens, to look into it, and see if it does really constitute a charge on the property he is going to purchase. If the claim, in respect of which the lis pendens is registered, creates no incumbrance on the property, the lis pendens itself will not. Bull v. Hutchens, 32 Beav. 615; 2 N. R. 306; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 954; 8 L. T. 716; 11 W. R. 866.

Registration of a petition for sale by the second mortgagee as a lis pendens, has not the effect of notice to the first mortgagee, so as to affect the priority of further advances made by him in ignorance of such petition and registration. Hawes, Ex parte, Byrne, In re, 15 L. R., Ir. 373—C. A.

Interests of defendants inter se, arising out of the rights of the plaintiffs, protected by the doctrine of lis pendens. Tyler v. Thomas, 25 Beav. 47.

In a suit instituted by creditors for the administration of a testator's estate, the deficiency of the personal estate for payment of the debts was payable out of two real estates devised separately to A. and B. In 1846, the debts were ordered to be paid out of A.'s estate alone, without prejudice to his right of contribution against B.'s estate. In 1852 the suit was registered as a lis pendens, and two months afterwards B. mortgaged his estate to C., who had no notice of A.'s rights:—Held, that there was a lis pendens, as regarded A.'s rights, and that C.'s mortgage must be postponed to A.'s claims. Ib.

Vacating Registration—Affidavit.]—On an application under 30 & 31 Vict. c. 47, s. 2, by a defendant in a suit which had been registered as a lis pendens, and subsequently by consent dismissed for want of prosecution, the court ordered the registration to be vacated upon production of an affidavit of service of the notice of motion upon the solicitor of one of two plaintiffs who could not be found, and upon the solicitor of the trustee in bankruptcy of the other plaintiff. Jervis v. Berridge, 44 L. J., Ch. 164; 31 L. T. 426; 23 W. R. 43.

—— Motion for.]—An application under 30 & 31 Vict. c. 47, s. 2, for vacating the registration of a lis pendens after the determination of the litigation should be made by motion or otherwise in the matter of the act, and of the action, suit, or proceeding. Clutton v. Lee, 45 L. J., Ch. 684; 24 W. R. 607.

When an action which was registered as a lis pendens had been dismissed for want of prosecution, the court, on motion made ex parte on behalf of the defendant, under 30 & 31 Vict. c. 47, s. 2, to vacate the registration, made an order nisi, the plaintiff to shew cause within one week why the order should not be made absolute. Pooley v. Bosanquet, 7 Ch. D. 541; 26 W. R. 587.

—— Application by Person not a Party to Action.]—Where an action is improperly registered as a lis pendens against a person who is not a party thereto, the court has jurisdiction to vacate the registration under 30 & 31 Vict. c. 47, s. 2, notwithstanding that the action is being prosecuted bonâ fide by the plaintiff as against the defendant. Schofield v. Solomon, 54 L. J., Ch. 1101; 52 L. T. 679.

—— When Ordered.]—When the official liquidator had registered the winding-up as a lis pendens against a contributory, the court ordered him to vacate the registration. Thornton, Ex parte, Barned's Banking Co., In re, 36 L. J., Ch. 190; L. R. 2 Ch. 171; 15 L. T. 523; 15 W. R. 292.

2. Transactions pending Proceedings.

See 2 & 3 Vict. c. 11, s. 7.

a. In General.

A lis pendens cannot affect any particular person with a fraud, unless he has special notice of the title in dispute there. Mead v. Orrery (Lord), 3 Atk. 243.

Pending an information filed for the purpose of having new trustees of a charity appointed in the place of some who were dead, the surviving trustees took upon themselves, without the sanction of the court, to appoint new trustees:—Held, that though this was neither a contempt nor an act altogether void, yet it imposed upon the trustees the necessity of proving, by the strictest evidence, and at their own expense, that what had been done was perfectly right and proper; and the case not appearing altogether clear, the appointment was set aside, and the trustees were ordered personally to pay all the extra costs occasioned by their act. Att.-Gen. v. Clack, 1 Beav. 467; 3 Jur. 215.

Pending a suit to set aside agreements, defendants were bound to give plaintiff the benefit of those terms of agreement which were for his advantage. Rowe v. Wood, 2 Jac. & Walk. 559; 22 R. R. 208.

An attendant term having become vested in the wife of the owner of the inheritance, as the administratrix of the trustee, and her husband becoming bankrupt, his assignees agree to sell the estate, and file a bill for specific performance of the agreement, pending which suit the husband dies:—Held, that the widow was not entitled to dower; that she was bound to assign the term to the purchaser; and that he was bound to accept the title. Mole v. Smith, Jac. 490.

When the plaintiff has by tortious means got into possession of property pending a suit to establish his equitable title to it, the court will not stay legal proceedings against him for the recovery of possession. Grafton v. Griffin, 1 Russ. & M. 336.

b. Alienation of Subject-Matter.

Effect of.]—The administratrix, and one of the next of kin of an intestate, pending a suit in which a decree was obtained against her as debtor to the estate of the intestate, by another of the next of kin, who was also his heiress-at-law, assigned for valuable consideration her interest in the assets to a purchaser, and in another cause, in which the administratrix of the intestate, together with the heirs-at-law, were declared entitled to a fund in court as part of his assets:—Held, that the assignee of the interest of the administratrix took subject to the demands of the heirs-at-law. Hodgens v. Wheeler, 1 Sau. & Sc. 443.

The doctrine of lis pendens applies to all alienations during the pendency of a suit, whether immediate by a party to the suit, or mediate, by persons purchasing from those claiming under parties to the suit. Robertson v. Cox, 2 L. J., Ch. 41.

Property was brought into a marriage settlement by the wife only, but a first life interest in three-eighths of it was given to the husband. She obtained a decree nisi for the dissolution of the marriage, but during the hearing of her suit, and before the decree nisi in it had in fact been pronounced, the respondent had given a charge on his life interest to his solicitors for the amount of the costs incurred in defending the suit:—Held, that, as at the time when such charge had been so given by him it had been uncertain whether the decree nisi would have been granted against him, the court, in an application to vary the settlement by extinguishing his life interest under it, could not interfere with the mortgage so executed by him in favour of his solicitors. Wigney v. Wigney, 51 L. J., P. 84; 7 P. D. 228; 47 L. T. 129; 31 W. R. 140.

A joint-stock company, established by act of parliament, vesting in them all property belonging to them, and authorising them to bring actions in the name of their treasurer for the time being, having purchased an estate pending a suit against the vendors, to compel specific performance of an agreement to grant a lease of part; on a bill by the vendee against the treasurer and directors, the plaintiffs were declared entitled to a lease, and the treasurer was enjoined from disturbing their possession, though the rest of the proprietors, being very numerous, were not parties; but no decree could be made for the execution of a lease. Meux v. Maltby, 2 Swan. 277.

Third mortgagee having, pendente lite and after the first mortgagee had by his answer submitted (on payment of the money due to him) to assign to the plaintiff (the second mortgagee), obtained an assignment of the first mortgage, decreed to be entitled to hold the estate against the second mortgagee, till he should be paid what was due to him upon both, he having had no notice of the second mortgage when he advanced his money. Belchier v. Butler, 1 Eden, 522.

Third mortgagee buying in the first mortgage, pendente lite, shall exclude the second. Robinson v. Davison, 1 Bro. C. C. 63.

A leasehold estate is affected by an elegit or fieri facias, from the time it is lodged in the sheriff's hands; and if the debtor afterwards make an assignment of it, the judgment creditor may proceed at law to sell the term, and the vendee will be entitled to the possession, notwithstanding such assignment. Burden v. Kennedy, 3 Atk. 739.

A conveyance established against a sequestration, and the sequestrators who had obtained possession, ordered to account to the alienee for rents and profits. Another conveyance rescinded, but the alienee declared entitled to be reimbursed from the subsequent rents, the balance of payments for interest, taxes, and repairs. Hamblyn v. Ley, 3 Swan. 301.

The court only removes fraudulent conveyances out of the way; but will not decree profits back, against the original debtor and owner of the estate, received pendente lite, in favour of judgment creditors from the filing of the bill. Higgins v. York Buildings Co., 2 Atk. 107.

A sequestration prevails against a prior conveyance designed to defeat it; not against prior conveyances for valuable consideration, or bonâ fide. Coulston v. Gardiner, 3 Swan. 279.

Sequestration not defeated by a voluntary conveyance, pendente lite. Witham v. Bland, 3 Swan. 276.

A bankrupt, whose estate is in mortgage, conveys the equity of redemption to a third person after an act of bankruptcy, but before the commission and assignment. This shall not defeat the assignees. But where a bonâ fide purchaser for a valuable consideration, and without notice, has a contest with the assignees, this court will not take any advantage from him, and therefore will not compel a discovery; but a commission issued is notice of the bankruptcy. Collet v. De Gols, Forest, Cas. temp. Talbot, 65.

A purchase pendente lite, though without actual notice, and for a valuable consideration, yet shall be set aside; though in this case the rule of equity be hard, yet it is in imitation of the common law; where in a real action, if the defendant aliens pending the writ, the judgment will overreach the alienation; but as it is hard enough, in some cases, to make people take notice of a decree, it is harder still to oblige them to take notice of a pendency of a suit; and in case of a real purchase pendente lite, the plaintiff is to be held to strict proof; and if any flaw, at the hearing, be on the plaintiff's side, the court will not let him amend; but if the purchase, pendente lite, be fraudulent, and to elude the justice of the court, it ought to be highly discountenanced. Sorrell v. Carpenter, 2 P. W. 482.

A. brings an action against B. for lying with his wife; after which B. assigns his estate to trustees in trust to pay the several debts mentioned in a schedule, and such other debts as he should name, within ten days; then A. recovers 5,000*l.* damages, and brings his bill to set aside the deed as fraudulent, and made to defeat him of his recovery: but held not to be fraudulent, the plaintiff being no creditor at making the deed, and his debt recovered after founded in maleficio; but the others were real creditors, which it was conscientious to prefer: but for the surplus the plaintiff may come in. Lewkner v. Freeman, Pre. Ch. 105; 2 Freem. 236.

A., being decreed to pay a sum of money, or deliver possession of a house to B. by a certain day, conveys the house to a creditor in satisfaction of a real debt. This shall not defeat B. of the benefit of a decree. Self v. Madox, 1 Vern. 459.

Effect of judgments confessed by an administrator pendente lite. Pigott v. Nower, 3 Swan. 534. Parker v. Dee, Ib., 529.

Proceedings under a sequestration for nonperformance of a decree, after an assignment by the defendant for valuable consideration. Bird v. Littlehales, 3 Swan. 299.

Under articles of 1760, estates were covenanted to be settled on A. for life, remainder to B. for life, remainder to the heirs of his body; the estates were subject to prior incumbrances. A. executed a trust deed for payment of creditors, and a bill was filed by one of the creditors by judgment against A., puisne to the articles of 1760, and under the directions of A. By an arrangement made in the course of the suit, but in pursuance of a private agreement, and without the sanction of the court, the lands were conveyed in fee farm by A. and B. to X., who had notice of the articles, the rent being reserved to B., the purchase-money being applied partly to discharge incumbrances prior to 1760. In a sale in the suit, X. afterwards purchased the fee-farm rent. The proceeds of the sale were paid to B., and otherwise without regard to the rights of his children, all parties apparently acting under a mistake as to the effect of the articles; a bill afterwards filed by A. and B. against X., impeaching the sale for fraud, was dismissed:—Held, on a bill by the son of B., claiming as remainderman in tail under the articles, that the fee-farm grant should be treated as a private sale, and set aside, but that the purchase under the decree should be upheld. Fitzmaurice v. Sadleir, 9 Ir. Eq. R. 595.

One of several cestuis que trustent having taken the benefit of the Insolvent Act, joins as a co-plaintiff, with two others of the cestuis que trustent, in a bill to carry the trust deed into execution, the assignee of the insolvent being a defendant, and the bill alleging that there is a surplus coming to the insolvent, after payment of all his debts. This is not a misjoinder of which advantage can be taken at the hearing, and semble, that it is no ground of demurrer. Eades v. Harris, 1 Y. & Coll. C. C. 230.

With respect to the effect which such assignments have upon the suit, there is no distinction between assignments pendente lite of equitable interests, by plaintiffs, and similar assignments by defendants. Ib.

A decree was made against A. B. setting aside, as fraudulent, a purchase by an agent from his principal; and a reconveyance, and the usual accounts of rents and purchase-money, were directed, in which an allowance was to be made for substantial repairs and lasting improvements. A. B. sold and conveyed part of the property, pendente lite, and died before the accounts were completed; a supplemental bill was filed against the purchasers, and the heir and personal representatives of A. B.; the bill charged that the purchasers, in case of eviction, claimed compensation out of the estate of A. B. The conveyances, pendente lite, being set aside:—Held, that the purchasers were entitled in this suit, as against their co-defendants, the personal representatives of A. B., to an order for the repayment of their purchase-money, and were entitled as against the plaintiff to an allowance for substantial repairs and lasting improvements, but that no greater relief could be given them in this suit. Trevelyan v. White, 1 Beav. 588.

The plaintiff, previous to his marriage with A.'s daughter, wrote a letter to A., inquiring what fortune his daughter was entitled to. A., in reply, wrote to the plaintiff, and stated that certain houses were entailed on his daughter, after his decease. A. died, leaving his daughter, his only child, and having devised all his real estates to his wife. It was then discovered that A. was tenant, in tail male, of the houses, with reversion to himself in fee. In January, 1816, the plaintiff and his wife filed a bill against A.'s widow (who was in possession of the houses) to have the houses conveyed to the plaintiff's wife, conformably to the representation in the letter, and for a receiver and an injunction to stay proceedings at law. An injunction was granted, and the widow having put in her answer, the injunction was, in January, 1818, continued. On the same day the plaintiff obtained an order to amend, but did not act upon it, or take any further proceedings, till May, 1820. In April, 1818, the widow mortgaged the houses for five hundred years to H., and in May, 1819, she sold an annuity to M., and secured it by a conveyance of the houses to trustees in fee; and in May, 1819, she sold and conveyed the houses, subject to the mortgage and annuity to W., in fee. H., W. and M. had not then any of them notice of the suit, or of the plaintiff's claim. In January, 1820, at which time M. had notice, the houses were purchased by M. and conveyed by him to H. and W. In May, 1820, the bill was amended. The widow having gone abroad without answering the amended bill, a decree was taken pro confesso against her in November, 1822. In December following, the plaintiff had notice of the conveyance to M., but did not make him a party to the suit, and opposed his attending the master upon the inquiries directed by the decree. In March, 1831, the plaintiff filed a bill against M., stating the proceedings in the original suit, and praying that M. might be decreed to convey the houses to the plaintiff's wife, and for a receiver. M. put in his answer, and relied on the delay in the proceedings of the original suit, the decree having been taken pro confesso, the want of notice in H. and W., and in himself when he purchased the annuity, and on the plaintiff not having made him a party to that suit; but the court, on motion, granted a receiver. Landon v. Morris, 5 Sim. 247; 2 L. J., Ch. 35.

Trust funds, of which A. was entitled to a share under a settlement, had been lent to B. on his covenant, and, as to part, secured by a mortgage. A. afterwards became executor of B. A suit was instituted by other parties interested in the trust funds to recover the funds out of B.'s estate, and generally for administration of his will. After a decree for accounts, A., with notice of the suit, assigned his share in the funds. He was subsequently found to be indebted, as executor to B.'s estate, beyond the amount of his share:—Held, that B.'s creditors were entitled to be paid out of the estate in priority to the assignees of A.'s share. Irby v. Irby, 4 Jur. (N.S.) 989; 6 W. R. 853.

c. Notice.

A person in Ireland purchasing an annuity granted out of an annuity charged on an estate which was the subject of litigation in a suit in England, at the time of the purchase:—Held, to be a purchaser for a valuable consideration without notice, as the original annuity was not sought to be impeached in the suit. Houlditch v. Wallace, 5 Cl. & F. 629; 1 Dr. & Wal. 490.

Parties claiming under a marriage settlement subsequently to a decree to account are affected with notice, for they are purchasers pendente lite, a decree for an account being only a continuance of the litigation. Higgins v. Shaw, 2 Dr. & War. 356; 1 Con. & L. 400.

Lis pendens is not notice of every equity which arises in the course of a suit. Shalcross v. Dixon, 7 L. J., Ch. 180.

A testatrix entitled, upon the decease of a tenant for life, to a sum of stock standing in the names of D. and L., as trustees, bequeathed such stock to P. and appointed D. her sole executor. In 1834, after the death of the testatrix, P. assigned all his estate and effects to L. and H. upon trust for his creditors. In 1838 P. assigned his interest in the stock to the plaintiff by way of mortgage, and the plaintiff thereupon gave D. notice of the incumbrance. No notice of the assignment of 1834 was given to D. until 1843:—Held, that a suit instituted by some of the creditors under the deed of 1834 to execute the trusts of such deed, as it did not give the plaintiff or the executor actual, so neither could it be held to give them constructive, notice of that instrument. Holt v. Dewell, 4 Hare, 446; 15 L. J., Ch. 14; 9 Jur. 1005.

A suit by a judgment creditor for an account of the real and personal estate of his debtor and the payment of his debts, is a sufficient lis pendens to affect an incumbrancer on the life estate of a defaulting executor in lands, the fee of which was subject to the judgment, with notice of an equity to have the life estate applied to answer the default of the executor. Jennings v. Bond, 2 Jo. & Lat. 720; 8 Ir. Eq. R. 755.

A person who, without notice of a suit, purchases from one of the defendants property which is the subject of it, is not in consequence of the pendency of the suit affected by an equitable title of another defendant, which appears on the face of the proceedings, but of which he has no notice, and to which it is not necessary, for any of the purposes of the suit, to give effect. Bellamy v. Sabine, 1 De G. & J. 566; 26 L. J., Ch. 797; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 943; 6 W. R. 1.

LITERARY SOCIETY.

Dissolution — Distribution of Property—Literary and Scientific Institutions Act, 1854 (17 & 18 Vict. c. 112).]—Where a literary or scientific institution, not established for the purpose of gain, is dissolved by its members, its property ought to be given to some kindred institution, to be determined in manner prescribed in s. 30 of the Literary and Scientific Institutions Act, 1854, even if the rules contain a provision that the property of the society on its dissolution is to be divided among its shareholders, such a provision being contrary to the act. Such an institution is not a joint-stock company, although some of its members may be shareholders, and does not therefore come within the proviso in s. 30 of the act of 1854, which excepts from the operation of the section any institution "which shall have been founded or established by the contributions of shareholders in the nature of a joint-stock company." Bristol Athenæum, In re, 59 L. ### I. AUTHORITIES.

1. COUNTY COUNCIL.

a. Election.

Mandamus for.]—Where an election for a casual vacancy on a county council has been omitted to be held or been a void election, application should be made to the court for an order for a writ of mandamus for an election to be held on an appointed day, in accordance with the provisions of s. 70, sub-s. 2, of the Municipal Corporations Act, 1882, as incorporated into the Local Government Act, 1888. West Sussex County Council, In re, Henderson, Ex parte, 65 L. J., Q. B. 184; 73 L. T. 566; 59 J. P. 808.

Corrupt and Illegal Practices — Incorporation of Provisions.]—The effect of s. 75 of the Local Government Act, 1888, is to incorporate into that act ss. 13, 17, and 20 of the Municipal Elections (Corrupt and Illegal Practices) Act, 1884. Walker, Ex parte, 58 L. J., Q. B. 190; 22 Q. B. D. 384; 60 L. T. 581; 37 W. R. 293; 53 J. P. 260—C. A.

—— Relief from Penalties — Appeal.] — An appeal lies to the Court of Appeal against the refusal of a divisional court to make an order, under s. 20 of the Municipal Elections (Corrupt and Illegal Practices) Act, 1884, exempting a candidate at an election of county councillors from penalties incurred by him through inadvertence, under s. 17, by reason of practices which are declared to be illegal by s. 13, such a matter not being a criminal matter within the meaning of s. 47 of the Judicature Act, 1883. Ib.

—— Relief, when granted.]—On the occasion of the first election of county councillors under the Local Government Act, 1888, a candidate inadvertently incurred a penalty for an illegal practice, and a divisional court refused to grant him relief, on the ground that ignorance of the provisions of the act was no excuse for a breach of them:—Held, that having regard to the difficulty of construing s. 75 of the Local Government Act, 1888, and to the fact that another divisional court had granted relief to other candidates under precisely similar circumstances, the exercise of the discretion by the divisional court might (with their assent on being informed of the decision of the other court), be overruled, and the relief granted. Ib.

On the occasion of the first election of county councillors under the Local Government Act, 1888, the court will be disposed to deal leniently with bonâ fide mistakes. When a candidate through inadvertence employed and paid twelve messengers to distribute an election address, the legal limit being two only, the court granted the relief prayed. Darlington, Ex parte, 53 J. P. 71.

Inadvertence in s. 20 of the Municipal Elections (Corrupt Practices) Act, 1884, means negligence or carelessness where the circumstances shew an absence of bad faith. Lenanton, Ex parte, 53 J. P. 263.

The court has no power to grant relief to a printer, who has been guilty of an offence relating to a "bill, placard, or poster" within s. 14 of the Municipal Elections (Corrupt Practices) Act, 1884. Ib.

A divisional court refused to make an order under s. 20 of the Municipal Elections (Corrupt and Illegal Practices) Act, 1884, allowing the employment of paid canvassers by a candidate at a county council election to be an exception from the provisions of the act which would otherwise (by s. 13) make the same an illegal employment:—Held, upon appeal from such refusal, that it was a matter in the discretion of the divisional court; but that (Fry, L.J., dissentiente) the fact that the election had taken place since the hearing in the divisional court and the applicant had not been elected constituted a change which entitled the Court of Appeal to take all the existing circumstances into their consideration, and to make the order. Thomas, Ex parte, 60 L. T. 728—C. A.

Notice of Application for Relief.]—Notice of application for relief should be given (1) to the opposing candidate or candidates, (2) to the returning officer, and (3) should be posted about the district and (4) advertisements should be inserted in the newspapers circulating in the district. No notice to the attorney-general is necessary. Lenanton, Ex parte, supra.

b. Vesting and Exercise of Powers.

Question submitted to High Court.]—In a case stated under s. 29 of the Local Government Act, 1888, the court has no jurisdiction to decide questions of adjustment of liabilities under s. 62. Salop County Council, In re, 65 L. T. 416; 56 J. P. 213.

In stating a case under s. 29 of the Local Government Act, 1888, the facts which have actually arisen and the decision thereon, must be set forth; the High Court will not answer abstract questions as to the construction of the statute, unless arising out of facts which have actually occurred. Cardigan County Council, In re, 54 J. P. 792.

—— Appeal.]—The Court of Appeal has no jurisdiction to entertain an appeal from the decision of the High Court on questions submitted to it under s. 29 of the Local Government Act, 1888. Kent County Council, In re, 60 L. J., Q. B. 435; [1891] 1 Q. B. 725; 65 L. T. 213; 39 W. R. 465; 55 J. P. 647—C. A.

Transfer of Right to use County "Property."]—By an agreement between a private owner of certain rooms and the clerk of the peace, as trustees for the justices in quarter sessions, the justices in quarter sessions were permitted to use the rooms for the purpose of transacting their duties in quarter sessions, free of charge:—Held, that the use of the rooms by the county council free of charge was not transferred by s. 64 of the Local Government Act, 1888, to the county council. Montgomeryshire County Council v. Pryce-Jones, 57 J. P. 308—C. A.

Executive Committee—Delegation of Powers to Sub-Committee.]—Under schedule 6, clauses 5 and 6, of the Contagious Diseases (Animals) Act, 1878, a local authority may appoint an executive committee, which is to have all the powers of the local authority, except rating powers, and the executive committee may appoint sub-committees and delegate to them all or any of the powers of the executive committee with or without restrictions, and may from time to time revoke or alter any such delegation. The duly appointed executive committee of a county council (which, by virtue of the Local Government Act, 1888, is the local authority for the purpose of the Contagious Diseases (Animals) Act, made an order delegating to local sub-committees its power under the Contagious Diseases (Animals) Acts and under certain orders in council, including the Rabies Order, 1887. Subsequently to such delegation the executive committee, without expressly revoking the delegation, issued certain regulations under the Rabies Order, 1887, as to the muzzling of dogs and keeping them under control; no regulation under the Rabies Order, 1887, had been issued by the local sub-committee:—Held, that the delegation was not equivalent to a resignation by the executive committee of its own powers, that the delegated authority was subject to resumption at any time, and that the regulations were therefore valid. Huth v. Clarke, 59 L. J., M. C. 120; 25 Q. B. D. 391; 63 L. T. 348; 38 W. R. 655; 55 J. P. 86.

c. Liability for Expenses.

Salary of Justices' Clerk.]—In a non-quarter sessions borough which has a separate commission of the peace, the county council is liable to pay the salary of the justices' clerk. Cornwall County Council v. Truro Town Council, 63 L. J., M. C. 60; 10 R. 595; 70 L. T. 354; 58 J. P. 299.

The county council, and not a town council of a borough within the county, is liable for the salary of the clerk to the justices of a borough having a separate commission of the peace, and all fees and costs payable to such clerk, and which are not excluded in the fixing of the salary, must be paid into the county fund. Herefordshire County Council and Leominster Town Council, In re, 64 L. J., M. C. 26; [1895] 1 Q. B. 43; 15 R. 77; 71 L. T. 576; 59 J. P. 348.

—— Salaries of Recorder and Clerk of Peace—Fees to Clerk of Visiting Justices.]—The liability, under charter or under the Municipal Corporations Acts, of boroughs having separate courts of quarter sessions to pay the salaries of their recorders and clerks of the peace out of borough funds is not in any way altered, as regards such boroughs containing a population of less than ten thousand, by any provisions of the Local Government Act, 1888. Thetford Corporation v. Norfolk County Council, 67 L. J., Q. B. 55; 77 L. T. 498.

The county council in which such a borough is included for administrative purposes is liable under s. 84 for the salary of the clerk to the borough justices at petty sessions; but the borough is liable for the fees to the clerk to the visiting justices of borough asylums. Ib.

Local Grants—Current Charges in Aid.]—Under s. 24 of the Local Government Act, 1888, the county council in substitution for the Exchequer, are bound to pay out of the county fund local grants in respect of the period between the 24th September, 1888, and the 1st April, 1889, though the county councils did not come into existence until the latter date. West Riding County Council, In re, 54 J. P. 533.

Maintenance of Borough Police—Contribution—Constables temporarily added from another Force.]—The costs of the pay and clothing of the police of a borough (of which costs, by the Local Government Act, 1888, s. 24, sub-s. 2 (j), the county council are to pay one-half) include the cost of police belonging to another force and temporarily added to the borough force under s. 25 of the Police Act, 1890. Reg. v. West Riding of Yorkshire County Council, 64 L. J., M. C. 145; [1895] 1 Q. B. 805; 14 R. 391; 72 L. T. 520; 43 W. R. 386; 18 Cox, C. C. 141; 59 J. P. 340—C. A.

Maintenance of Main Roads.] — The maintenance of main roads throughout a county remains a "general county purpose" within the definition of s. 11, sub-s. 1, and s. 68 of the Local Government Act, 1888, and chargeable on the Exchequer Contribution Fund appropriated under that act for "general county purposes," although the county council may by resolution adopt the provisions of s. 20 of the Highways Act, 1878, and throw the expense of maintaining main roads on the hundreds. Reg. v. Dolby, 61 L. J., Q. B. 826; [1892] 2 Q. B. 736; 67 L. T. 619.

—— Repayment to Urban Authority—Borrowed Money.]—A county council is bound to repay the whole burden of the cost of maintaining main roads to the urban authority under s. 11 of the Local Government Act, 1888, but the council have only to defray that burden in the same way as the urban authority has done, and whether it be defrayed out of current rates, or by means of a loan. If the urban authority spread the cost over two or three years, the county council may do the same. Marlborough Town Council v. Wilts County Council, 58 J. P. 213.

Repayment of Proportionate Amount of Contribution by Borough — Mandamus.] — The justices of a county, as the local authority for the county, neglected between the years 1869 and 1878 to recoup to the plaintiffs, as the local authority for a borough within the county, the proportionate amount contributed by the borough to the expenses incurred by the local authority of the county, in carrying out the provisions of the Contagious Diseases (Animals) Act, 1869, which they were bound to repay under s. 97 of that act. After the passing of the Local Government Act, 1888, the plaintiffs sued the defendants, as successors of the local authority for the county, to recover the sums which should have been recouped:—Held, that the only remedy against the justices would have been by mandamus to them to pay the amounts claimed out of moneys in their hands, or to levy a rate for the purpose; and that, as the Local Government Act, 1888, vests in the county council the property of the justices for the county subject to the same conditions and restrictions as if the act had not been passed, the defendants were not liable in the action. Salford Corporation v. Lancashire County Council, 59 L. J., Q. B. 576; 25 Q. B. D. 384; 63 L. T. 409; 38 W. R. 661; 55 J. P. 85—C. A.

—— Action for Recovery of Rate, whether Maintainable—Extortion Colore Officii—Money Paid under Mistake of Law.]—In pursuance of a resolution passed by the watch committee of a borough incorporated under the Municipal Corporations Act, 1835, the justices of the county provided police for the borough from 1869 to 1887. The expenses of such police for each half year were provided for in advance by a rate levied on the borough, and the sum so raised was, together with the sums collected from the other townships of the union in which the borough was situate, paid to the county treasurer by the guardians of the union in obedience to a precept addressed to them by the county justices. By the Municipal Corporations Act, 1835, the watch committee were required to appoint police for the borough, and on the 30th June, 1887, they withdrew the county police and appointed borough constables. At this date the county justices had in their hands a sum arising from a rate levied on the borough applicable for the future expenses of the police in the division in which the borough was situate, but there was no ascertained sum applicable exclusively to the police provided for the borough. In an action by the mayor and corporation (suing on behalf of all the ratepayers of the borough) and the guardians of the union against the council of the county, as successors of the county justices, to recover the amount overpaid by the borough:—Held, first, that the plaintiffs were not entitled to represent the ratepayers of the borough; secondly, that the remedy against the defendants (if any) was by mandamus; thirdly, on the merits, that the money was not recoverable on the ground of extortion colore officii, as it was paid under a voluntary arrangement; nor on the ground of a partial failure of consideration, as the proportion overpaid was not properly ascertainable. Bootle-cum-Linacre Corporation v. Lancashire County Council, 60 L. J., Q. B. 323—C. A.

Stipendiary District—Rating.]—A local act created a stipendiary justice's district, under which act the quarter sessions of the county could levy rates on the district in the same manner as was then authorised for making county rates. There are now two county boroughs under the Local Government Act, 1888, in the district:—Held, that the county council has the power to levy the rates on such part of the stipendiary district as is not included within either of the county boroughs, and that the liability of the county boroughs should be redeemed by an adjustment under s. 32 of the Local Government Act. Staffordshire County Council, Ex parte, 54 J. P. 72.

Expenses of Quarter and Petty Sessions, how Payable.]—Upon the true construction of the Local Government Act, 1888, a quarter sessions borough having in 1881 a population of 10,000 or upwards, and not being a county borough, which at the time of the passing of the act was exempt, in whole or in part, from contributing towards costs incurred for any purpose for which the quarter sessions of the county in which it is situate were authorised to incur costs, retains the exemption, except as to costs incurred for the purpose of any powers, duties, or liabilities of the justices of the borough transferred by the act to the county council, and as to the costs of felonies and offences, the costs attending the prosecution whereof are by law payable as in the case of a felony committed or supposed to have been committed in the borough, for which the parishes of the borough are liable to be assessed to and to contribute to the county fund. Such a borough, therefore, retains, with the exceptions stated, the power and duty to raise by a borough rate the expenses of the borough, quarter and petty sessions, and is pro tanto exempted from proportionate contribution to the expenses of county sessions. Kent County Council, Ex parte, 60 L. J., Q. B. 314; [1891] 1 Q. B. 389; 64 L. T. 421; 55 J. P. 248.

In the case of a borough having liberties, the exemption extends to the liberties. Ib.

Quarter sessions boroughs having in 1881 a population of less than 10,000 are, on the contrary, not exempted from any county contribution, and, as it could not have been the intention of the legislature to impose upon such boroughs the double burden of contributing their proportion of the county sessions expenses, and also defraying their own borough sessions expenses, the duty of paying the expenses of such borough sessions is transferred to the county council. Ib.

2. District Council, formerly Local Board.

a. Election.

i. Qualification of Voter.

"As Owner."]—At an election of members of a local board of health, several persons were nominated in September, 1871; one of the candidates was nominated by M.; and the nomination paper was signed by M., "being duly qualified as owner in the district." M. had sent in the notice required as owner fourteen days before the election in 1870, and had not sent in a notice since; but he was still qualified in respect of the same property as owner. He was also qualified to vote as a ratepayer:—Held, that in order to be entitled to vote as owner, the notice required must be sent before each election, and the nomination by M. as owner was therefore bad; but that as the 11 & 12 Vict. c. 63, s. 24, did not require any particulars of qualification, but only the signature of the person nominating, "as owner" might be rejected as surplusage, and, he being qualified as ratepayer, the nomination was good. Reg. v. Morgan, 41 L. J., Q. B. 55; L. R. 7 Q. B. 26; 25 L. T. 930; 20 W. R. 279.

ii. Number of Members.

Election of New Members—Proper Constitution.]—A local board of health, constituted under an order in council, consisted of nine members, one-third of the persons first elected to go out of office on 31st March, 1855. Before that day, three of the persons first elected ceased to be members, by reason of non-attendance. The local board selected these three to go out of office; and on 31st of March, three new members only were elected:—Held, under 11 & 12 Vict. c. 63, ss. 13, 18, that the board, consisting of the six members first elected, and of the three new members, was well constituted. Howitt v. Manfull, 6 El. & Bl. 736; 25 L. J., Q. B. 411; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 883; 4 W. R. 612.

—— Notice of Vacancies.]—Four members of a local board under the Public Health Act (11 & 12 Vict. c. 63), s. 13, having gone out of office, three at the expiration of their term of office, and one by resignation before the end of his term, four new members were elected at one election without distinction. Neither in the notice of election nor in the voting papers delivered to the electors, was any distinction made between the regular vacancies and the casual vacancy:—Held, that the election was invalid. Reg. v. Rippon, 45 L. J., Q. B. 188; 1 Q. B. D. 217; 34 L. T. 444; 24 W. R. 363.

Casual Vacancy—Computation of Time.]—The time specified by r. 65 of schedule II. of the Public Health Act, 1875, which provides that any casual vacancy on the board occurring "by failure duly to elect," shall be filled up by the board within six weeks, is to be computed from the day on which the retiring member goes out of office, and not from the day on which the election of a member to fill his place is held. Reg. v. Cooban, 56 L. J., M. C. 33; 18 Q. B. D. 269; 51 J. P. 500.

—— Quorum—Lapse of Board—Informality.]—Seven members of a local board constituted under the Public Health Act, 1875, and consisting of nine members, resigned, so that the quorum of three required by schedule I. r. 2, was not left. The two remaining members proceeded to fill up the vacancies. The board as thus constituted prescribed a building line under s. 155 of the act:—Held, by Pearson, J., that, as the resignations reduced the number of members to less than a quorum, the board had lapsed, that the two remaining members could not fill up the vacancies, that there was therefore no board, that the building line was therefore not well prescribed, and that schedule I. r. 9, to the act did not cure the defect:—Held, by the Court of Appeal, that the filling up of vacancies was "business" within the meaning of schedule I. r. 2, that the two members were not competent to transact it, and that the new members therefore were not duly elected; but that by schedule I. r. 9, the objection to the building line, founded on the fact that some of the members of the board were not duly elected, was removed. Newhaven Local Board v. Newhaven School Board, 30 Ch. D. 350; 53 L. T. 571; 34 W. R. 172—C. A.

iii. Chairman's Duties.

Statute.]—59 & 60 Vict. c. 22, is the Chairmen of District Councils Act, 1896.

Omission—Penalty.]—A chairman of a local board is required by 11 & 12 Vict. c. 63, s. 24, if the number of candidates exceeds the number of members to be elected, to cause voting papers of a certain form to be prepared and filled up; one of the blanks is for the number of votes as owner and as ratepayer respectively. At an election the chairman omitted to fill up the latter blanks:—Held, that the omission did not render the election illegal, but merely subjected the chairman to a penalty. Reg. v. Lofthouse, 7 B. & S. 447; 35 L. J., Q. B. 145; L. R. 1 Q. B. 433; 12 Jur. (N.S.) 619; 14 L. T. 359; 14 W. R. 649.

—— Right to Complain of.]—A relator, being a candidate, who complained of the illegality of the election on the above ground, having on former elections been himself elected on similar voting papers, is disqualified for applying for a quo warranto, after taking his chance of the election and being defeated. Ib.

Certificate—How given.]—An election of members of a local board of health, under 11 & 12 Vict. c. 63, ss. 21, 27, conducted by the statutory assistants of the chairman during his absence, and which is certified by him solely upon their report, is null and void. Reg. v. Backhouse, 7 B. & S. 911; 36 L. J., Q. B. 7; L. R. 2 Q. B. 16; 15 L. T. 240; 13 W. R. 846.

—— When Impeachable.]—After the election of a local board, under 11 & 12 Vict. c. 63, the chairman proceeded, under s. 27, to ascertain the number of valid votes for each candidate, and to cast up the votes; and he made his certificate as to who were the candidates elected. On the trial of a quo warranto information against one of the successful candidates, it appeared that the chairman had, by mistake, put down votes to one candidate which the voting papers shewed had been given to another; had omitted to reckon votes; and also had received as valid votes which were invalid, but as to which he had made no examination:—Held, that as to the first and second class of votes, the duty of the chairman was merely ministerial, viz. that of casting up the votes, and as to this his certificate could be impeached; but that as to the third class he had to exercise a judicial duty, and as to this therefore his certificate was conclusive. Reg. v. Collins, 46 L. J., Q. B. 257; 2 Q. B. D. 30; 36 L. T. 192—C. A. Affirming, 24 W. R. 732.

Casting up Votes.]—The duty of the chairman in counting up the votes, under the Public Health Act, 1848, s. 27, is ministerial, not judicial, and a quo warranto is the proper mode of trying the question whether he has made an erroneous calculation or not. Reg. v. Collins, 23 W. R. 325.

—— Employment of Assessors.]—At the election of members of a local board, under 11 & 12 Vict. c. 63, the chairman or a duly appointed deputy, must attend at the office of the board the day after the election, as returning officer, and perform in person the duties, which are judicial, of examining the votes, &c., as required by s. 27; and if assessors, appointed under s. 21, make the examination in the chairman's absence, and he sign the returns, &c., on their report only and not on personal inspection, the election is void. Reg. v. Backhouse, 36 L. J., Q. B. 7; L. R. 2 Q. B. 16; 15 L. T. 240; 13 W. R. 846.

The chairman of a local board of health in a non-corporate district being absent during an annual election of members, and being by reason of defect in his eyesight unable by personal examination to ascertain the validity of the votes, or to cast them up, conducted the election by two persons appointed by the local board before the election to assist and attend upon him for that purpose, and ascertained the validity of the votes by their examination, conducted in pursuance of his directions, and nothing occurred in the examination which had not been provided for by his directions, or which required his presence. On a quo warranto information against one of the persons so elected:—Held, that the election was void, but that the relator was not entitled to costs. S. C., 7 B. & S. 911.

iv. Regulation of Expenses.

Discretion of Board.]—By 11 & 12 Vict. c. 63, s. 30, the local board of health has a discretion as to what is a reasonable remuneration for the person conducting the election of the board; and the court cannot review their decision upon an affidavit that the sum allowed was not reasonable. Metcalfe, Ex parte, 6 El. & Bl. 287; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 1245; 4 W. R. 490.

v. Irregularities.

Fabrication of Voting Papers.]—At an election of a member of a local board of health, the respondent was canvassing for one of the candidates. The wife of a voter, in the absence of her husband, promised his vote, and, not being able to write, placed a mark on his voting paper, which was in the form prescribed by schedule A. of the Local Government Act, 1848, which requires that, in the case of a voter who cannot write, a witness shall attest the voter's mark, and place the voter's initials against the name of the persons for whom the voter intends to vote. The respondent, believing that the wife was authorised to fill up the voting paper, and that he was not acting contrary to the act, attested the mark made by her, describing it as the mark of the voter, and placed the voter's initials against the name of the candidate. On an information under the Local Government Act, 1858, s. 13, sub-s. 5, for fabricating a voting paper:—Held, that in the absence of an unlawful intention on the part of the respondent, he had not fabricated a voting paper, within the meaning of the act. Aberdare Local Board v. Hammett, 44 L. J., M. C. 49; L. R. 10 Q. B. 162; 32 L. T. 20; 23 W. R. 617.

—— Falsely assuming to act on behalf of Voter.]—The respondent, a candidate at an election for members of a local board of health, called at the house of a voter to whom a voting paper had been sent, and asked her how she intended to vote, and to hand him the voting paper, which she did. He then inquired if she knew how to fill it up, and she replied in the affirmative. The respondent thereupon, without any authority, express or implied from the voter, wrote in pencil the initial of the voter against his own name. The voter objected to his doing so. The respondent left the voting paper with the voter, with her initials so written by him against his own name, but with no other mark upon it. The voter subsequently struck out the initials so written by the respondent, and placed her initials against the names of three other candidates, and signed her own name to the voting paper. It was found that the respondent so pencilled the initials of the voter with the intent of indicating on her behalf that she intended to vote for him, and of inducing and procuring her to vote for him. The respondent was successful at the poll. A petition was lodged against his return, on the ground of illegal practices, inter alia, of fabricating in whole or in part a voting paper, and of falsely assuming to act in the name or on behalf of a voter:—Held, that the act of the respondent did not amount to a fabrication in whole or in part of the voting paper, nor to falsely assuming to act in the name or on behalf of the voter, within the meaning of r. 69 of sched. II., part 1, of the Public Health Act, 1875. Gough v. Murdoch, 57 L. T. 308; 35 W. R. 836; 51 J. P. 471.

—— Recovery of Penalty—Party Aggrieved.]—At an election for a member of a local board, V. and M. were the only candidates; M. was declared to be elected, he having obtained ninety-four votes and V. eighty-nine. V., without the consent of the attorney-general, preferred an information under the Public Health Act, 1875, sched. II. r. 69, against W., charging him with fabricating in part the voting paper of D., a person entitled to three votes at the election; but the justices dismissed it on the ground that V. was not a "party aggrieved" within the Public Health Act, 1875, s. 253, and therefore that the consent of the attorney-general was requisite:—Held, that the dismissal of the information was wrong, for V. was a party aggrieved within the meaning of that statute. Verdin v. Wray, 46 L. J., M. C. 170; 2 Q. B. D. 608; 35 L. T. 942; 25 W. R. 274.

Interference of Candidate.]—W. was chairman of a local board, and it was his duty under 11 & 12 Vict. c. 63, s. 21, to conduct and complete the elections of members for the ensuing year, and by the same section if the chairman became unable to act, some other person was to be appointed by the local board to perform such of his duties as then remained to be performed. F. was appointed by the local board to act as returning officer in case of nomination of chairman as a candidate. W. published a notice, fixing day of election and day for receiving nomination papers. He received a nomination paper nominating himself, and afterwards continued to receive other nomination papers. More candidates were nominated than vacancies. W. filled up the form of voting paper and sent it to be printed, with directions for the printer to return it to F., and from that time forward everything was done by F. W. was elected, and returned by F. No improper motive was imputed to W., nor did his acts produce any inconvenience, or in any way influence the result of the election. The court, in the exercise of its discretion, refused leave to file a quo warranto. Reg. v. Ward, 42 L. J., Q. B. 126; L. R. 8 Q. B. 210; 28 L. T. 118; 21 W. R. 632.

Name of withdrawn Candidate on Ballot-paper—Election Petition—Liability of Returning Officer to be made Respondent—Costs.]—At an election of urban district councillors the ballot-papers, by a mistake of a clerk of the returning officer, contained the name of a candidate who had withdrawn. A petition having been presented to avoid the election of those candidates who had been elected by a majority of votes less than the number given to the candidate who had withdrawn:—Held, that the election of those candidates was void, and that, notwithstanding s. 11 of the Ballot Act, 1872, which provides a penalty for a returning officer who is guilty of any wilful misfeasance or any wilful act or omission in contravention of the act, the returning officer was rightly made a respondent, and that the court had power, although in the circumstances such power ought not to be exercised, to make an order for the payment of costs against the returning officer by whose negligence an election is avoided. Wilson v. Ingham, 64 L. J., Q. B. 775; 15 R. 488; 72 L. T. 796; 43 W. R. 621; 59 J. P. 614.

b. Members.

i. Qualification.

Disability by Contract—Penalty for Acting.]—By r. 64 of sched. II. to Public Health Act, 1875 (38 & 39 Vict. c. 55), it is declared that any member of a local board who "in any manner is concerned in any bargain or contract entered into by such board," shall "cease to be such member, and his office as such shall thereupon become vacant;" and r. 70 imposes a penalty of 50*l.* on "any person who, not being duly qualified to act as member of the local board," "or being disabled from acting by any provisions of this act, acts as such member":—Held, by Brett and Cotton, L.JJ. (Bramwell, L.J., dissenting), that a member of such board, who having been concerned in a contract by the board, has thereupon ceased to be such member by force of r. 64, is a person disabled from acting as a member by a provision of the act within the meaning of r. 70, and consequently, that if afterwards he does so act, he is liable to the penalty of 50*l.* Fletcher v. Hudson, 51 L. J., Q. B. 48; 7 Q. B. D. 611; 46 L. T. 125; 30 W. R. 349; 46 J. P. 372—C. A.

—— Acting as Mayor.]—By a provisional order of the Board of Health, confirmed by statute, the 11 & 12 Vict. c. 63, was applied to a district wholly comprised within a single municipal borough, and the corporation was constituted by the council the local board of health. An alderman of the borough, after such confirmation, sold some iron to a party who had contracted to supply the local board with iron railings, and who purchased the iron for the purpose of performing the contract. He afterwards continuing to be an alderman, was elected mayor, and acted as such. An action was brought against him for penalties under 5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 76, ss. 28, 53, for having acted as mayor, while disqualified by being interested in a contract with the council:—Held, assuming a contract with such local board to be a contract with the council within the 5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 76, s. 28, and assuming also that a mayor elected when alderman is disqualified to act as mayor under s. 53, by reason of a disqualification as alderman, that nevertheless, this was not an interest in a contract within s. 28, and there was no liability to any penalty. Le Feuvre v. Lankester, 3 El. & Bl. 530; 2 C. L. R. 1426; 23 L. J., Q. B. 254; 18 Jur. 894; 2 W. R. 307.

—— Work done by Member for Contractor—Penalty.]—By the Public Health Act, 1875, sched. II. r. 64, a member of a local board who is in any manner concerned in any bargain or contract entered into by such board shall (except in certain cases) cease to be such member, and his office as such shall thereupon become vacant; and by r. 70 of the same schedule a penalty is imposed on a person who acts as such member when disabled from acting by any provision of the act. The defendant, a member of a local board, was employed by persons, with whom the board had contracted for the performance of certain works on the premises of the board, to do portions of the works so contracted for:—Held, that the defendant had been concerned in contracts entered into by the board within the meaning of the act, and was therefore disqualified: and that, having acted as a member of such board since becoming so disqualified, he had incurred the penalty imposed by the act. Nutton v. Wilson, 58 L. J., Q. B. 443; 22 Q. B. D. 744; 37 W. R. 522; 53 J. P. 644—C. A.

—— Lease to Member.]—A person is not disqualified for membership of a local board, under the 64th clause of the second schedule to the Public Health Act, 1875, by reason of a lease by the board to him of a sewage farm containing covenants on the part of the board to supply, and on his part to use on the premises the sewage of the district. Reg. v. Gasharth, 49 L. J., Q. B. 509; 5 Q. B. D. 321; 42 L. T. 688; 28 W. R. 596; 44 J. P. 507.

Recovery of Penalty by Party aggrieved.]—By the Public Health Act, 1875, s. 253, proceedings for the recovery of a penalty under that act shall not be "taken by any person other than by a party aggrieved," or by a local authority, without the consent of the attorney-general; and by sched. II. r. 70, a penalty of 50*l.* is imposed upon any person acting as member of a local board without qualification. The defendant, who was acting as chairman of a local board after disqualification, made a complaint to the members thereof as to certain conduct of the plaintiff, who was clerk to the board; the plaintiff, fearing that he might be dismissed from his office, resigned it, and sued the defendant to recover a penalty of 50*l.* for acting without qualification:—Held, that the plaintiff was not "a party aggrieved," within the meaning of the Public Health Act, 1875, s. 253, and that he could not sue for the penalty without the consent of the attorney-general. Rochfort v. Atherley, 1 Ex. D. 511. S. C., nom. Smith v. Fieldhouse, 35 L. T. 602.

At an election for a member of a local board, V. and M. were the only candidates; M. was declared to be elected, he having obtained ninety-four votes and V. eighty-nine. V., without the consent of the attorney-general, preferred an information under the Public Health Act, 1875, sched. II. r. 69, against W., charging him with fabricating in part the voting paper of D., a person entitled to three votes at the election; but the justices dismissed it on the ground that V. was not a "party aggrieved" within the Public Health Act, 1875, s. 253, and therefore that the consent of the attorney-general was requisite:—Held, that the dismissal of the information was wrong, for V. was a party aggrieved within the meaning of that statute. Verdin v. Wray, 46 L. J., M. C. 170; 2 Q. B. D. 608; 35 L. T. 942; 25 W. R. 274.

B. was an inhabitant and ratepayer of Margate, and entitled to vote for members of the local board of health, and was in the habit of using the Margate pier. The defendant was one of the company of proprietors of that pier, established under a local act, and had been elected a member of the local board of health, and as such voted on a question in which the company was interested:—Held, that B. was not a party aggrieved within s. 133 of 11 & 12 Vict. c. 63, and could not sue the defendant for a penalty under s. 19, if any, incurred by his voting. Boyce v. Higgins, 14 C. B. 1; 23 L. J., C. P. 5; 2 C. L. R. 95; 18 Jur. 333; 2 W. R. 73.

A declaration, in a qui tam action, stated that the plaintiff and defendant were candidates for the office of commissioner under the Cheltenham Improvement Act; that the plaintiff could have been elected, but that the majority of votes was in favour of the defendant, who was thereupon elected, and acted as such commissioner without being duly qualified; whereby the plaintiff was aggrieved as a ratepayer, voter, and resident within the borough, and also as such candidate. The Cheltenham Act incorporates s. 15 of the Commissioners Clauses Act, 10 & 11 Vict. c. 16, which enacts, that every person who shall act as a commissioner without being duly qualified shall be liable to a penalty of 50*l.*, and such penalty may be recovered by any person. The Cheltenham Act also incorporates s. 133 of the 11 & 12 Vict. c. 63, which enacts that no proceedings for the recovery of any penalty under that act shall be taken "by any person other than by a party grieved, or the local board of health in whose district the offence is committed without the consent of the attorney-general; and if the application of the penalty be not otherwise provided for, one-half thereof shall go to the informer, and the remainder to the local board of health." The cause was tried and a verdict found for the plaintiff:—Held, first, that the plaintiff was not a party aggrieved by the defendant acting as such commissioner. Hollis v. Marshall, 2 H. & N. 755; 27 L. J., Ex. 235; 6 W. R. 365.

—— Consent of Attorney-General.]—Held, secondly, that the declaration was not authorised by s. 15 of the Commissioners Clauses Act, and under 11 & 12 Vict. c. 63, s. 133, it was bad in arrest of judgment, inasmuch as (the plaintiff not being a party aggrieved) it ought to have alleged the consent of the attorney-general. Ib.

Held, thirdly, that although the want of the consent of the attorney-general was an objection which might be taken by plea or demurrer, it was also a ground for staying the proceedings after trial. Ib.

By the Public Health Act, 1875, s. 253, proceedings for the recovery of a penalty under that act shall not, "except as in this act is expressly provided," be taken by any person other than a party aggrieved, or a local authority, without the consent of the attorney-general; by r. 70 of sched. II. (which by s. 317 is to be read as part of the act) a penalty is imposed upon any person acting as a member of a local board without qualification, such penalty being by the same rule made recoverable by any person:—Held, that the provision of r. 70 that the penalty might be recovered by any person was an "express provision" of the act, within the meaning of s. 253, and that consequently in actions for penalties under that rule the consent of the attorney-general was not necessary. Fletcher v. Hudson, 49 L. J., Ex. 793; 5 Ex. D. 287; 43 L. T. 404; 45 J. P. 5—C. A.

Omission of Name from Rate-book.]—E. and R. were candidates for a place in a local board. The nomination was on March 25, and the votes for R. were 57 and for E. 52. The returning officer decided that R. was disqualified, as his name was omitted from the rate-book, and his son-in-law was rated instead of him:—Held, that the officer was justified in disqualifying R., or at least R. had led to the mistake, and the rule for quo warranto against E. was discharged. Reg. v. Ellis, 44 J. P. 748.

Composition with Creditors—Time for filling casual Vacancy.]—A candidate for election as member for a local board of health had assigned all his property by deed to a trustee for the benefit of those of his creditors who should sign the deed, no sum being mentioned in it as a composition to be paid on the debts therein scheduled as due to them, and the creditors signing the deed thereby discharged him from all debts due to them by him:—Held, that he was not disqualified under 38 & 39 Vict. c. 55, sched. II. r. 5, which provides that a person "who has entered into any composition with his creditors," shall be ineligible "so long as any proceedings in relation to such composition are pending," even though at the time of his election some of his creditors had signed the deed, while others did not sign it till after the election, for that the deed was not a composition with creditors. Reg. v. Cooban, 56 L. J., M. C. 33; 18 Q. B. D. 269; 51 J. P. 500.

Non-attendance—Improper Constitution of Board—Enforcement of Rate.]—The court will grant a mandamus to compel a justice to grant a warrant for payment of a rate made by a local board when payment thereof is refused on the ground that the board is not properly constituted, that being a matter to be determined in another way. Reg. v. Derbyshire JJ., 4 W. R. 118.

Semble, that the board may select as retiring members those who at the time of election named in the order in council have by non-attendance ceased to be members. Ib.

ii. Personal Liability.

For Expenses of Witness.] — In an action against four members of a local board of health, for the plaintiff's expenses as a witness before a parliamentary committee in opposition to a gas bill:—Held, that they were not liable personally, as it appeared that the instructions to the plaintiff had been given, and the opposition to the bill had been entirely carried on, by the local board. Bailey v. Cuckson, 7 W. R. 16.

Payment to Officer — Certiorari.] — A municipal corporation having adopted a drainage scheme which had been drawn up by their surveyor, resolved that he should superintend the works, and that he should be paid a certain rate on the cost of the work, the whole remuneration not to exceed a fixed sum. Proceedings having been instituted against the surveyor to recover penalties under the Public Health Act, 1875, on the ground that he was interested in the contracts within the meaning of the section, the corporation resolved to contribute the sum of 300*l.* towards his legal expenses. Certain penalties having been recovered against the surveyor, a rule was obtained for a writ of certiorari to bring up the order of the corporation settling the remuneration of the surveyor and the order for the payment of the sum of 300*l.* in order that they might be quashed, on the ground that they were illegal and ultra vires, and that the corporation had no power to make them. This rule was made absolute, and the court further ordered that "the prosecutors (the mayor, aldermen, and burgesses) do pay the costs of and occasioned by the application." The court was now asked to make an order that certain members of the corporation should personally pay the costs of and occasioned by the writ of certiorari, the issuing thereof, and consequent thereon:—Held, that the members of the corporation who voted in favour of the resolutions for carrying on the legal proceedings were personally liable for the costs occasioned thereby. Reg. v. Whiteley, or Vaile, 58 L. J., M. C. 164; 23 Q. B. D. 483; 61 L. T. 253; 54 J. P. 134.

Act done under the Provisions of the Public Health Act—Notice of Action.]—The effect of the Public Health Act, 1875, which makes improvement commissioners under local acts urban sanitary authorities, is to reconstitute them as new bodies under the act, vesting in them as such new bodies the powers given by the local acts as well as those given by the Public Health Act; and such commissioners in subsequently doing any act in the exercise of the powers originally conferred by their local acts are acting under the Public Health Act, 1875, and consequently are entitled in respect of such act to any protection or privileges given by that act to members of local authorities acting under its provisions. Lea v. Facey, 56 L. J., Q. B. 536; 19 Q. B. D 352; 58 L. T. 32; 35 W. R. 721; 51 J. P. 756—C. A.

A person who is in fact disqualified from being a member of a local authority but who acts in the bonâ fide belief that he is a member, is entitled to notice of action under s. 264 of the Public Health Act, 1875. Ib. And see next case.

Non-delivery of Rate-book — Commitment—Limitation.]—The commitment by two justices under 11 & 12 Vict. c. 63, s. 39, of a member of the town council and local board of a borough for non-delivery of a rate-book in his possession by virtue of his office as overseer and collector of the borough rates, is a civil and not a criminal proceeding, being in the nature of a distraint. The offence of non-delivery consists in continuing to retain the subject of the distraint. The limitation of six months by s. 11 of Jervis's Act (11 & 12 Vict. c. 43) will therefore not apply. Semble, per Lush, J., that such limitation will only apply where the object of the proceeding is punishment, and not merely coercion. Mayer v. Harding, 17 L. T. 140.

iii. Personal Interest.

Effect of.]—The presence at a meeting of a local board of a member having a personal interest in the matter before the board, and his taking part in the proceedings of the board thereon, do not vitiate such proceedings. Aberdeen Ry. v. Blaikie (1 Macq. H. L. 461), discussed and distinguished. Murray v. Epsom Local Board, 66 L. J., Ch. 107; [1897] 1 Ch. 35; 75 L. T. 579; 45 W. R. 185; 61 J. P. 71.

Although the presence of a person having a pecuniary interest at a meeting of a public body vitiates its proceedings where it is acting judicially, a local body acting in the capacity of surveyors of highways and performing the duties imposed upon it by the Local Government Act, 1894, s. 26, sub-s. 1, in reference to an obstruction to a public right of way, is not acting judicially, but is in the same position as a private individual protecting his own property. Ib.

c. General Powers and Duties.

Ownership of Property.]—The words "council of such borough" in s. 310 of the Public Health Act, 1875, mean the mayor, aldermen, and burgesses acting by the council. The effect of the section, therefore, is that, when the district of a local board is incorporated as a borough, all the property of the board (including property acquired by them by purchase after the passing of the act) vests at once in the corporation, without the necessity of any conveyance or transfer. In such a case the Bank of England are bound, on the request of the corporation, to register in their corporate name government stock previously standing in the books of the bank in the name of the local board, without requiring any transfer to be executed. Hyde Corporation v. Bank of England, 51 L. J., Ch. 747; 21 Ch. D. 176; 46 L. T. 910; 30 W. R. 790.

Land Acquired for Definite Purpose—Interim User.]—Land acquired by a local authority under the Public Health Act, 1875, for a definite purpose may, in the interval before it is required for such purpose, be used in any lawful manner which does not substantially interfere with its immediate use when so needed for the purpose for which it was acquired; it is not necessary that during such interval the land should be kept in the same state in which it was when acquired. Att.-Gen. v. Teddington Urban Council, 67 L. J., Ch. 23; [1898] 1 Ch. 66; 77 L. T. 426; 46 W. R. 88; 61 J. P. 825.

Delegation of Powers — To Committees.]—Where a board constituted by an act of parliament is authorised by it to delegate any of its powers to a committee, the powers so conferred upon the committee must be exercised by them acting in concert; and it is not competent to the committee to apportion amongst themselves the duties so delegated to them; and one of them acting alone, pursuant to such apportionment, cannot justify his acts under the act of parliament. Cook v. Ward, 2 C. P. D. 255; 36 L. T. 893; 25 W. R. 593—C. A. Affirming 46 L. J., C. P. 554.

—— To Bodies Corporate.]—A local board of health acting under 11 & 12 Vict. c. 63, are not such trustees for paving, lighting, and other local purposes within the meaning of the 5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 76, s. 75, and 20 & 21 Vict. c. 50, s. 2, as are enabled thereby to transfer their powers, property, and liabilities to bodies corporate. Swinford v. Keble, 7 B. & S. 573; 35 L. J., Q. B. 185; L. R. 1 Q. B. 549; 12 Jur. (N.S.) 783; 14 L. T. 770; 14 W. R. 858.

—— To Police of Right to Prosecute.]—A local board, acting under an act which embodied the provisions of s. 259 of the Public Health Act, 1875, passed a resolution that in pursuance of the power vested in the board by s. 259 of the Public Health Act, 1875, the superintendent and the sergeants of the county police, for the time being acting within the district, be authorised as officers of the board to institute and prosecute all such proceedings as may be necessary under the specified clauses of the local act. In an information preferred by the superintendent of police, against the appellant for an offence under the act:—Held, that the local board had no power under s. 259 of the Public Health Act, 1875, to delegate the prosecution to the police, who are not officers of the board, nor under their control. Kyle v. Barbor, 58 L. T. 229; 16 Cox, C. C. 378; 52 J. P. 501, 725.

—— To Waterworks Company.]—A waterworks company is not, within the meaning of the Public Health Act, 1875, s. 52, able and willing "to supply water within the district of a local authority," unless it has both the necessary powers and the requisite supply of water. Richmond Waterworks Co. and Southwark and Vauxhall Waterworks Co. v. Richmond Vestry, 45 L. J., Ch. 441; 3 Ch. D. 82; 34 L. T. 480.

When company R. had the necessary powers but no water, and company S. had the requisite supply of water but no powers within the district, and company R. sold its plant to company S., and certain members of company S. bought all the shares in company R. with the intention of allowing company S. to exercise the powers of company R.:—Held, that the powers could not be so delegated, and that neither company was able and willing within the meaning of the act, and consequently that neither was entitled to notice under the Public Health Act, 1848, s. 75, or under the Public Health Act, 1875, s. 52, from a local authority desiring to construct waterworks. Ib.

Appointments of Officers and Others.]—The provision contained in 11 & 12 Vict. c. 63, s. 149, that whenever the consent, sanction, approval, or authority of the local board is required, the same shall (in case of a non-corporate district) be in writing and under their seal and the hands of five or more of them, does not mean that every act of the local board should be under their hands and seal, but such only as sanctions the acts of others; and, therefore, the appointments of clerk and surveyor to the board need not be under their hands and seal, and a resolution of the board directing their officers to take certain steps need not be under the hands and seal of the board. Smith v. Hirst, 23 L. T. 665.

—— Employment as Witness.]—A municipal corporation having, by transfer from a body of commissioners, power to purchase certain gas works, and being also a local board, took proceedings for the purpose of purchasing the works and assessing the price by arbitration. In pursuance of a resolution passed at a meeting of a sub-committee appointed for the management of the business, the report of which was adopted by the council, the plaintiff was employed as a witness on the arbitration to support the evidence of the valuer of the corporation. No appointment of the plaintiff under seal was made, but he acted as witness under the instructions of the valuer who was so appointed. In all these proceedings the corporation erroneously described itself as "acting as the local board," and its seal as "the seal of the local board"; but it did not appear that the seal of the local board was any other than the municipal seal. In an action by the plaintiff against the corporation for his services as a witness:—Held, that the corporation and the local board could not be treated as independent bodies; that the plaintiff's contract was in substance with the corporation; and that he was entitled to recover. Andrews v. Ryde Corporation, 43 L. J., Ex. 174; L. R. 9 Ex. 302; 23 W. R. 58.

—— Dismissal.]—A by-law of a local board of health, duly made and confirmed, forbade the rescission of any resolution of the board, unless at a meeting where at least as many members were present as were present when such resolution was passed:—Held, that such by-law did not apply to the dismissal of the clerk to the board; for a resolution to effect this was not in the nature of a rescission of that by which he had been appointed, but was a new resolution in itself. Richards, Ex parte, 47 L. J., Q. B. 498; 3 Q. B. D. 368; 38 L. T. 684; 26 W. R. 695.

Such clerk, therefore, holding his office under the Public Health Acts, "at the pleasure of the board," could not obtain a quo warranto because of his dismissal by the resolution of a meeting consisting of fewer members than were present when he was appointed. Ib.

—— Employment of Solicitor—Stopping up Highways.]—The U. land company being desirous of diverting certain public footways on their estate in the parish of T., requested the T. local board of health to assent to such diversion, and to take the necessary steps to have the said footways closed. The T. local board assented, and instructed their solicitors to take the necessary steps, and this having been done, paid their bill of costs, and recovered the amount summarily as "expenses" within the meaning of s. 84 of the act of 1835:—Held, on a case stated, that the words of s. 144 of the Public Health Act, 1875, "may be done by or to the surveyor of the urban authority or by or to such other person as they may appoint," did not empower the local board to employ a solicitor to do the ministerial acts in question, and that therefore the solicitor's charges were not "expenses" payable by the land company under s. 84 of the act of 1835. United Land Co. v. Tottenham Local Board, 51 L. T. 364; 48 J. P. 726.

Churchwardens.]—Overseers in 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 90, include churchwardens. Reg. v. Rye JJ., 10 L. T. 525; 13 W. R. 142.

Overseers include churchwardens, although the parish is divided, and each part has separate elected overseers, the division not being under 13 & 14 Car. 2, c. 12, or 59 Geo. 3, c. 134. Ib.

Promoting Bill in Parliament.]—A rural sanitary authority has no power to charge the rates with the expenses of promoting a bill in parliament. Cleverton v. St. Germain's Union, 56 L. J., Q. B. 83.

A rural sanitary authority, being unable to acquire by purchase land and water rights necessary for the purpose of procuring a water supply for their district, which it was the duty of the authority to do under the Public Health Act, instructed their solicitor to promote a bill in parliament for the purpose of obtaining powers to purchase the land and water rights compulsorily:—Held, that the rural sanitary authority had no power to promote such bill, and that therefore their solicitor could not recover his costs from them. Ib.

Register of Owners and Proxies—Poll.]—The town council of a borough is not bound, under the Public Health Act, 1875, schedule II. r. 19, to keep a register of owners and proxies for the purpose of taking a poll in the borough with respect to the application under 35 & 36 Vict. c. 91, of the borough funds in opposing local and personal bills in parliament. Ward v. Sheffield Corporation, 56 L. J., Q. B. 418; 19 Q. B. D. 22.

Suing or Presenting Petition.]—A local board of health cannot sue or present a petition as a corporate body. Petitions may be presented in the name of their clerk, and moneys may be paid to their treasurer. Llanelly Local Board, Ex parte, 22 L. J., Ch. 419; 17 Jur. 107; 1 W. R. 159.

Rural Authority—Lighting District—Order of Local Government Board.]—The local government board having made an order under s. 276 of the Public Health Act, 1875, directing that the provisions of the first paragraph of s. 161 (respecting the powers of urban authorities for lighting their districts) should be in force within certain contributory districts of a rural sanitary authority, and that the rural authority should be invested with the powers, &c., of the urban authorities "under those provisions" the rural authority issued their precept under s. 230 for payment of the lighting expenses. A railway company who had property in one of the contributory districts claimed to be assessed at one-fourth only of the ratable value of their property under s. 211:—Held, that on the true construction of the order of the local government board, the rural authority was invested only with the power of an urban authority to incur lighting expenses, and not with the powers of rating of the urban authority, but were only entitled to issue the precept under their ordinary powers, and consequently the railway company must be rated at the full ratable value of their property. Lancashire and Yorkshire Ry. v. Bolton Union, 60 L. J., Q. B. 118; 15 App. Cas. 323; 63 L. T. 358; 54 J. P. 532—H. L. (E.)

Giving of Consent.]—By 11 & 12 Vict. c. 63, s. 149, whenever the consent or authority of the local board of health is required by the provisions of the act, the same shall be in writing, under their seal, and the hands of five or more of them:—Held, that this applies in the case of a general district rate imposed by a local board upon the inhabitants of the district, and that such a rate, if not under the seal of the board, and signed by five of its members, is invalid. Reg. v. Worksop Local Board, 5 B. & S. 951; 34 L. J., M. C. 220; 11 Jur. (N.S.) 1015; 10 L. T. 297; 13 W. R. 253. And see S. C., 12 W. R. 710.

—— Resolutions and Notices.]—But a local board, after adopting resolutions by a committee to the same effect, may pass resolutions that certain streets shall be levelled, and serve notices upon the occupiers of the houses adjoining, and, upon their default, direct a surveyor to perform the works and apportion the expenses, although the resolutions of the committee are not approved by writing under the seal of the board and the hands of five of its members, and although not any of the resolutions and notices of the board are so authenticated, as the committee did not act, but merely advised proceedings, and the acts of the board themselves in passing resolutions and giving notices do not require to be authenticated by the seal and signatures. Barnsley Local Board v. Sedgwick, 36 L. J., M. C. 65; L. R. 2 Q. B. 185; 15 L. T. 569; 15 W. R. 514.

d. Adoption of Local Boards.

i. By what Places.

Place with known or defined Boundary.]—By the Local Government Act, 1858 (21 & 22 Vict. c. 98), the act may be adopted in corporate boroughs and places under the jurisdiction of a board of competent commissioners, and in all other places having a known or defined boundary, by a resolution of the owners and ratepayers, subject to appeal to the local government board:—Held, that interpreting the words "place having a known or defined boundary" in the statute, the word "place" is to be received with the widest possible signification, and is not restricted to the accustomed legal divisions of the country, such as manors, hamlets, townships, or parishes, and may, therefore, consist of portions of different townships or parishes, and a place so composed has a "known or defined boundary," which has a physical, visible, and notorious boundary, so that there can be no mistake as to its limits. Reg. v. Local Government Board, Taylor, Ex parte, 42 L. J., Q. B. 131; L. R. 8 Q. B. 227; 21 W. R. 445.

Therefore, where the township of Grasmere contained certain small detached portions of the neighbouring townships of Rydal and Loughrigg, wholly surrounded by portions of the township of Grasmere, and included within the boundary of that township, the district so composed was held to be a place having a known or defined boundary within the statute, and an order of the local government board made under s. 17 of that act, and 34 & 35 Vict. c. 70, s. 2, for the adoption of the first-mentioned act by such district, was valid. Ib.

—— Part of Parish outside a Borough.]—When a borough is not co-extensive with a parish, the portion of the parish without the borough is not a place having a known or defined boundary within 21 & 22 Vict. c. 98, s. 13. Reg. v. Hardy, 9 B. & S. 926; 38 L. J., Q. B. 9; L. R. 4 Q. B. 117; 19 L. T. 352; 17 W. R. 173.

—— District for Spiritual Purposes.]—A district for spiritual purposes, formed under 6 & 7 Vict. c. 37, s. 9, is entitled, by resolution of its owners and ratepayers (without reference to the proceedings of townships out of which it is formed), to adopt the Local Government Act, 1858, as being a place with a "known or definite boundary" according to the provisions of the act. Reg. v. Northowram and Clayton, 7 B. & S. 110; 35 L. J., Q. B. 90.

Seashore Boundary.]—By 18 & 19 Vict. c. 121, s. 6, extra-parochial places, having a population of less than 200 persons, shall, for the purpose of the act, be attached to and form part of the adjacent place, having the largest common boundary with the extra-parochial place; and notice of vestry meetings for the election of a local authority, under and for the purposes of the act, shall be given in such extra-parochial places, and the householders within such places may attend such vestry meetings and vote on such elections:—Held, that, where the seashore forms the boundary of a parish, the portion of the shore below the high-water mark of medium tides is an extra-parochial place within this enactment. Reg. v. Gee, 1 El. & El. 1068; 28 L. J., Q. B. 298; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 1348; 7 W. R. 528.

Settlement of Boundaries by Home Secretary.]—A district not having any ascertained or defined boundary, and a portion of a parish, obtained from the secretary of state for the home department an order under 21 & 22 Vict. c. 98, s. 16, settling its boundaries for the purposes of that act, and subsequently adopted the act within the district. Afterwards the parish adopted the act. The court refused a mandamus to the secretary of state to publish the notice of the adoption of the act by the district, under s. 19, holding that s. 14 applied to places the boundaries of which were settled by an order of the secretary of state, and therefore that the district could not adopt the act unless the parish had refused to do so. Matlock Bath District, In re, 2 B. & S. 453; 31 L. J., Q. B. 177; 6 L. T. 243; 10 W. R. 537.

—— Appeal to Home Secretary—Finality.]—The ratepayers of a district petitioned the secretary of state to settle the boundaries with a view to the adoption of the act. An order was made setting out the boundaries, and a resolution was duly carried for the adoption of the act. An appeal was presented to the secretary of state by a ratepayer, on the ground that the boundaries, as set out, comprised land not included within the limits from which the petition proceeded. After inquiry into the circumstances, the secretary of state dismissed the petition, and ordered that the act should, after the expiration of one month from the date of the order, have the force of law within the district:—Held, that the court would not, after all this had been done, issue a certiorari to bring up the order for settling the boundaries of the district. Todmorden District, In re, 30 L. J., Q. B. 305; 4 L. T. 509. S. C., nom. Smith, Ex parte, 1 B. & S. 412.

ii. How Decided.

Meeting of Ratepayers—Declaration of Chairman.]—When a meeting of ratepayers and owners of a place having a known and defined boundary is called for the purpose of adopting the provisions of the act, the chairman is the person to take the sense of such meeting, unless a poll is demanded. But if a poll is demanded, the functions of the chairman will thereupon cease, and such poll should be taken, and all things connected therewith carried out by the summoning officer. Littleborough Local Board, Ex parte, 22 L. T. 437.

—— Appeal to Home Secretary.]—The 21 & 22 Vict. c. 98, s. 18, empowers any ratepayer who disputes the validity of a vote for the adoption of the act, to appeal to a secretary of state, who may, after inquiry, issue such order thereon as he may deem requisite to determine the questions arising on such appeal, and as to the validity or invalidity of such vote. By s. 81, all orders made by a secretary of state in pursuance of the act shall be binding and conclusive, in respect of the matters to which they refer:—Held, that an order issued by the secretary of state upon an appeal to him by ratepayers, whereby he determined the validity of the vote appealed against, was binding and conclusive, by reason of s. 81, although it was doubtful, on the face of the order, whether his ratio decidendi was good. And therefore the court refused to issue a mandamus to the summoning officer of the district in which the vote had been taken, to summon a meeting of the ratepayers, and ascertain by a poll whether the act should be adopted. Bird, Ex parte, 1 El. & El. 931; 28 L. J., Q. B. 223; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 1009; 7 W. R. 476.

Order in Council.]—Upon the petition of the requisite number of inhabitants of a parish, consisting of a township and three hamlets, the general board of health sent an inspector to inquire into and report, under 11 & 12 Vict. c. 63, s. 9, as to the application of the act to the parish. The inspector inquired as to the parish, and recommended the application of the act to the township; and public notice to that effect was appended to the report. The general board reported that the act should be applied to the parish, within its existing boundaries; and, by an order in council thereon, the act was ordered to be applied to and put in force within the entire parish:—Held, that the order was valid. Barber v. Jessop, 1 H. & N. 578; 26 L. J., Ex. 186; 5 W. R. 366.

3. Parish Council.

Qualification of Electors—Statute.]—60 Vict. c. 1, amends the law as to qualifications for elections and as to the annual assembly of the parish meeting.

—— Freemen on the Parliamentary Register.]—Freemen having no qualification to be on the parliamentary register of a borough other than as freemen are not entitled to be placed upon the lists of parochial electors authorised by the Local Government Act, 1894, whether resident or nonresident within the borough, nor is it the duty of the revising barrister or of the town-clerk of the borough under the provisions of the Registration Act, 1843, to allocate the freemen to particular parish lists formed under that or subsequent acts. Hart v. Beard, 65 L. J., Q. B. 157; [1896] 1 Q. B. 54; 73 L. T. 535; 44 W. R. 154; 1 Smith, 9.

—— Married Woman—Ownership Qualification.]—A married woman is not entitled, by reason of ownership of property within a parish, to have her name put upon the list of parochial electors. Drax v. Ffooks, 65 L. J., Q. B. 270; [1896] 1 Q. B. 238; 74 L. T. 43; 44 W. R. 393; 1 Smith, 40; 60 J. P. 214—C. A.

Disqualification of Candidate—Partnership's Arrangement with Creditors.]—A person who within five years before an election of parish councillors has been a member of a firm which has executed and registered under the Deeds of Arrangement Act, 1887, a deed of arrangement for the benefit of its creditors, is disqualified for election to the office of parish councillor. Ward v Radford, 59 J. P. 632.

Irregular Demand of Poll—Defeat of Candidate elected at Meeting—Mode of questioning Result.]—The mode of questioning the validity of a parish council election is by petition under the provisions of the Municipal Corporations Act, 1882, incorporated in the Local Government Act, 1894; or by an application to the county council under s. 48, sub-s. 5, and s. 80 of the Local Government Act, 1894. A mandamus will not be granted, at the instance of a candidate elected at a parish meeting, and whose return has been certified by the chairman, but who was not returned at a poll afterwards held, to the chairman to compel him to convene a meeting, to permit such candidate to make and sign the declaration of office, on the ground that the demand for the poll was wrongly made. Quære per Wright, J., whether an application to the county council can be made except in the case of the first parish election. Reg. v. Miles, Cole, Ex parte, 64 L. J., Q. B. 420; 15 R. 446; 72 L. T. 502; 43 W. R. 445; 59 J. P. 407.

Vestry.]—See Metropolis and Ecclesiastical Law.

4. Standing Joint Committee.

Buildings for Quarter and Petty Sessions—Police Stations—Maintenance.]—As between the county council on the one hand, and the standing joint committee of quarter sessions and county council on the other, the latter body has exclusive control of buildings and premises, within the purview of s. 30, sub-s. 3, of the Local Government Act, 1888, for the accommodation of quarter sessions, or justices out of session, or for the use of the police or clerks to justices. All questions as to the maintenance, repair, alterations, or improvement of such buildings and premises are to be determined by the standing joint committee. The county council has no power to place its veto upon the requirements of the standing joint committee made under s. 30. It is the duty of the county council to raise and pay such sums as the standing joint committee shall in their discretion deem it necessary to expend in and about such buildings and premises. Somerset County Council, Ex parte, 58 L. J., Q. B. 513; 61 L. T. 512; 54 J. P. 182.

Constitution of Police Districts.]—The powers conferred upon the justices in quarter sessions by ss. 3 and 27 of the Police Act, 1840, with respect to the determination of police districts, are vested by the Local Government Act, 1888, in the standing joint committee of the quarter sessions and county council. Leicestershire County Council, Ex parte, 60 L. J., M. C. 45; [1891] 1 Q. B. 53; 64 L. T. 25; 39 W. R. 160; 17 Cox, C. C. 205; 55 J. P. 87.

5. Determination of Differences.

Statute.]—59 Vict. c. 9, is the Local Government (Determination of Differences) Act, 1896.

Arbitration of Local Government Board—Maintenance of Main Road—Dispute between County Council and Urban Authority—Contribution.]—Where differences under the Local Government Act, 1888, are to be determined by the arbitration of the local government board, the mode of determining them is provided by s. 63, and not by s. 87, which is confined to cases of difference determinable by the local government board otherwise than by arbitration. Where differences are to be determined by arbitration of the local government board, the board are arbitrators within the meaning of the Arbitration Act, 1889, and a special case may be ordered to be stated under s. 19 of that act. Kent County Council and Sandgate Local Board, In re, 64 L. J., Q. B. 502; [1895] 2 Q. B. 43; 15 R. 452; 72 L. T. 725; 43 W. R. 601; 59 J. P. 456.

—— Differences between District Councils.]—In the case of differences between district councils, a provision in the order or scheme under s. 57 of the Local Government Act, 1888, that such differences may be adjusted by the county council, is not another mode of adjustment within s. 62, sub-s. 2, of that act. The mode of adjustment contemplated in s. 59, sub-s. 4, is adjustment by the order or scheme itself. Sowerby Urban Council and Mytholmroyd Urban Council, In re, 74 L. T. 313.

II. CONTRACTS BY AND WITH AUTHORITIES.

1. VALIDITY.

General Principle.]—A municipal corporation which is constituted a local board of health under 11 & 12 Vict. c. 63, may be sued on a contract entered into by them under their common seal, according to the provisions of that act. Nowell v. Worcester Corporation, 9 Ex. 457; 2 C. L. R. 981; 23 L. J., Ex. 139; 18 Jur. 64.

A local board of health is liable on contracts entered into by them, though the provisoes in s. 85 have not been complied with, those provisoes being only directory and not conditions precedent to the right to contract with third parties. Ib.

Contracts under Seal—Value more than £10.]—By 11 & 12 Vict. c. 63, s. 85, it is enacted, that "the local board of health may enter into all such contracts as may be necessary for carrying the act into execution; and every such contract whereof the value or amount shall exceed 10*l.*, shall be in writing, and sealed with the seal of the local board":—Held, that a contract which did not comply with this condition is not capable of being enforced. Frend v. Dennett, 4 C. B. (N.S.) 576; 27 L. J., C. P. 314; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 897.

—— Exceeding £50.]—By s. 174 of 38 & 39 Vict. c. 55, every contract made by an urban authority whereof the value or amount exceeds 50*l.* shall be in writing and sealed with the common seal of such authority. The defendants, an urban authority, verbally directed their surveyor to employ the plaintiff to prepare plans for offices. The plans were prepared by the plaintiff, and the defendants advertised for tenders for building the offices in accordance therewith, but when these were sent in, it was found that the plaintiff's plans were upon too expensive a scale, and the intended offices were not erected. There was no ratification under seal of the act of the plaintiff's surveyor in procuring the plans. At the trial the jury found that offices were necessary for the purposes of the defendants, and the plaintiff's plans were necessary for the erection of the buildings for which they were designed, and that the cost of the plans was 94*l.*:—Held, that, assuming the contract was founded on an executed consideration, the plaintiff could not recover, for s. 174 was imperative, and not directory, and applied to every contract for a sum exceeding 50*l.* entered into by an urban authority. Semble, that, as the plaintiff's plans did not enable the defendants to erect the offices required by them, they had not derived such a benefit as would entitle the plaintiff to sue upon an executed consideration. Hunt v. Wimbledon Local Board, 48 L. J., C. P. 207; 4 C. P. D. 48; 40 L. T. 115; 27 W. R. 123—C. A.

Sect. 174 of the Public Health Act, 1875, which directs a contract made by an urban authority to be under their common seal, if "the value or amount exceeds 50*l.*," applies only to a contract, the parties to which at the time of entering into it contemplate that it shall exceed that sum. Eaton v. Basker, 50 L. J., Q. B. 444; 7 Q. B. D. 529; 44 L. T. 703; 29 W. R. 597; 45 J. P. 616—C. A.

Scarlet fever having broken out, an urban sanitary authority appointed a committee under s. 200 of the Public Health Act, 1875. A medical man agreed verbally with the committee on behalf of the urban sanitary authority, to attend the patients at the rate of 5*s.* 3*d.* per cent. per day, and attended until the amount due was nearly 100*l.*:—Held (affirming the judgment of Stephen, J.), that the committee-men were not liable to pay the medical man. But held (reversing the judgment of Stephen, J.), that, although more than 50*l.* became due, it was not a contract "whereof the value or amount exceeds 50*l.*" within the meaning of the Public Health Act, 1875, s. 174, because, at the time of entering into it, the parties had not ascertained that it would exceed 50*l.*, and that the urban sanitary authority were liable to the medical man. Hunt v. Wimbledon Local Board (4 C. P. D. 48) distinguished. Ib.

—— Executed and Executory Contracts.]—The 174th section of the Public Health Act, 1875, which imperatively requires that every contract made by an urban authority, whereof the value or amount exceeds 50*l.*, must be in writing and sealed with the common seal of such authority, applies not only to an executory but also to an executed contract, although made by an agent duly appointed under seal. The defendants, being an urban sanitary authority, by contract under seal duly employed P. to construct waterworks. One of the terms of such contract was, that if P. should make default the defendants' engineer might employ persons to finish it, and charge P. with the expense. P. made default, and the defendants' engineer, who had been appointed under seal, by contract in writing employed the plaintiffs not only to finish P.'s contract, but to execute certain additional works not specified therein. The plaintiffs executed such works, and the defendants had the benefit of them. The defendants, acting throughout as an urban sanitary authority, approved the contract of their engineer with the plaintiffs, but none of the provisions of the 174th section of the Public Health Act, 1875, were complied with in relation to such contract:—Held, that such contract was not binding on the defendants. Young v. Leamington Corporation, 51 L. J., Q. B. 292; 8 Q. B. D. 579; 46 L. T. 555; 30 W. R. 500; 46 J. P. 516—C. A. Affirmed, 52 L. J., Q. B. 713; 8 App. Cas. 517; 49 L. T. 1; 31 W. R. 925; 47 J. P. 660—H. L. (E.)

—— Agreement to Compromise.]—An agreement between a local board and a person, against whom an action to restrain his interference with a public highway had been commenced by the local board, that the action should be settled by his paying the costs of the board (which exceeded 50*l.*), and undertaking not to build on the unbuilt land, the board agreeing not to proceed further as to pulling down the obstruction, is not a contract within the Public Health Act, 1875, necessary for carrying the act into execution (s. 173) so as to require to be sealed with the common seal of the local board under s. 174; and therefore such agreement, though not under seal, is capable of being enforced by the board. Att.-Gen. v. Gaskill,

—— Alterations.]—Where an urban authority enters into a contract in writing sealed with the common seal of such authority, pursuant to ss. 173 and 174 of the Public Health Act, 1875, with a contractor for the construction by him, e.g. of sewerage works, and the contract contains the usual power for the engineer, who has the control and supervision of the works, to vary, alter, enlarge or diminish any of them, all variations and alterations coming within the terms of the power conferred on the engineer can be validly made without being under the common seal of the urban authority. An agreement between an urban authority and a contractor employed to construct works for them, as a compromise and in full settlement of all claims by him against the urban authority, is not a contract within s. 173 of the Public Health Act, 1875, necessary for carrying that act into execution, so as to require to be sealed with the common seal of the urban authority under s. 174 ; and therefore such agreement, though not under seal, is capable of being enforced against the urban authority. Williams v. Barmouth Urban Council, 77 L. T. 383—C. A.

—— Petition is not a Deed.]—A petition was presented by the plaintiffs and defendants to the Local Government Board, stating an agreement whereby the plaintiffs were to transfer to the defendants certain land forming part of the plaintiffs' district, on condition that the defendants should adopt a certain road and dedicate it as a public highway. The agreement referred to was not under seal, but the petition was sealed with the common seals of the plaintiffs and defendants. The cost of completing the road was estimated at over 50*l*. On action for specific performance of the agreement :—Held, that under s. 174 of the Public Health Act the agreement must be under seal, and that the petition, though under seal, was not a deed, and therefore was not a contract under seal within the section : —Held, further, that if the deed were valid, the local authority had no power to enter into an agreement for the dedication of a road or street as a highway. Tunbridge Wells Improvement Commissioners v. Southborough Local Board, 60 L. T. 172.

—— Confirmation under Seal before Completion.]—It is competent for an urban authority, honestly and for the advantage of their district, to confirm under their seal a previous contract not under seal for an amount exceeding 50*l*. before such contract is completely executed, so as to render the contract valid within s. 174 of the Public Health Act, 1875. Melliss v. Shirley Local Board, 54 L. J., Q. B. 408 ; 14 Q. B. D. 911 ; 52 L. T. 544. See S. C., in C. A., infra, col. 374.

—— Amount uncertain at Time of Contract.]—A contract not under seal, made by an urban authority, whereof the value or amount in fact exceeds 50*l*., is invalid by reason of s. 174 of the Public Health Act, 1875, notwithstanding that at the time of entering into the contract it was uncertain what would be the value or amount of the contract when executed. Eaton v. Basher (7 Q .B. D. 529) distinguished. Ib.

Contract over £50—Absence of Pecuniary Penalty—Validity.]—The provision in sub-s. 2 of s. 174 of the Public Health Act, 1875, that every contract made by an urban authority whereof the value or amount exceeds 50*l*., "shall specify some pecuniary penalty to be fixed in case the terms of the contract are not duly performed," is obligatory, and not merely directory ; and if such penalty is not specified, an action on the contract against an urban authority cannot be maintained. British Insulated Wire Co. v. Prescot Urban District Council, 64 L. J., Q. B. 811 ; [1895] 2 Q. B. 463 ; 15 R. 633 ; 73 L. T. 383 ; 44 W. R. 224 ; 59 J. P. 552. Affirmed, 65 L. J., Q. B. 190 ; [1895] 2 Q. B. 538 ; 15 R. 636, n.—C. A.

Binding Successors—Improvident Bargain—Change of Circumstances.]—Under the Public Health Act, 1848, s. 48, the owner of land adjoining a district by deed agreed with the local board to do certain works and pay 10*l*. a year, and the board gave him leave to drain through their drain all sewage from the property and houses then belonging to the landowner, and from any houses thereafter to be erected on the property. Many more houses were afterwards erected, and the urban sanitary authority (which had succeeded the local board) were, under a new act of parliament, prevented from passing as before the sewage through the drain into the Thames :—Held, that the deed was not ultra vires, and that the board could bind their successors as to the sewage of houses not then in existence. New Windsor Corporation v. Stovell, 54 L. J., Ch. 113 ; 27 Ch. D. 665 ; 51 L. T. 626 ; 33 W. R. 223.

Held, that though the board were trustees for the ratepayers, they had exercised their discretion, and the agreement did not appear at the time improvident, and its turning out badly for them did not affect it :—Held, also, that the law being altered so as to prevent the discharge of sewage into the Thames was no ground for setting aside the deed. Ib.

Binding upon Rates.]—A board of health has no power to enter into a contract which can bind the rates of the particular district, unless such contract is made, and the engagements therein contained entered into, in the mode prescribed by the 11 & 12 Vict. c. 63. Frend v. Dennett, 5 L. T. 73.

A court of equity has jurisdiction to adjudicate upon the validity of such contract. Ib.

Inconsistent with Act of Parliament.]—By an agreement between the N. local board and the C. local board, it was agreed that the N. board should make a sewer and allow the sewers of the C. district to drain into it, but the sewage of any other districts or places was not to be permitted by the C. board to pass into their sewers so as to discharge into the sewer to be made by the N. board. Under acts of parliament then in existence, the owner of premises beyond the limits of a district had power to make a sewer to communicate with the sewers of the district, and by an act subsequently passed similar powers were given :—Held, that the provisions of the agreement were overruled by the subsequent act, and that the N. board could not restrain the C. board and the owners of premises beyond their district from making sewers which would discharge into the sewer of the N. district :—Held, also, that the agreement must be taken to have been made subject to the provisions of the law then existing, under which the owners of premises beyond the

C. district had similar powers. Newington Local Board v. Cottingham Local Board, 48 L. J., Ch. 226; 12 Ch. D. 725; 40 L. T. 58.

To pay Employés—Extra Work.]—On a contract by a board of health to employ an engineer about works, and pay him 500*l.* during two years, he undertaking to do his best in order to complete the works within that period:—Held, that the board was not liable for refusing to allow him to carry on the works beyond that time, although the delay was caused by their fault or default, they paying him the whole 500*l.*; nor were they liable for any extra work not contracted for by deed. Rutledge v. Farnham Local Board, 2 F. & F. 406.

—— Salary Unprovided for.]—A local act for regulating the markets in a town, created trustees for carrying out its objects, vested property in them, and gave them power to levy tolls and rates, and to borrow money on mortgage of such tolls and rates. It was provided, that out of the first moneys received, the trustees should, in the first place, pay the costs and expenses of passing the act, and apply the remainder, at the discretion of the trustees, in payment of the rents and fines, and in the purchases and other expenditure pointed out by the act, including the payment of the salary to the organist of the church, and the several principal sums of money and interest borrowed on mortgage:—Held, in an action on the case, by the organist of the church, against the local board of health, for a breach of duty in simply refusing to pay his salary, that he and the board stood in the relation to each other of trustee and cestui que trust; and as the board had not, in the exercise of its discretion, specifically appropriated an amount as payable to the organist, no action could be maintained against the board for the recovery of the salary, the remedy being in equity. Edwards v. Lowndes, 1 El. & Bl. 81; 22 L. J., Q. B. 104; 17 Jur. 412.

Indemnity to Contractor.]—A local board of health for a non-corporate district gave notice to the owners of the premises fronting, adjoining, or abutting on certain streets, requiring them to sewer, level, pave, flag, and channel the same, which notices not being complied with within the specified time, the board entered into contracts with a third person for their performance; which contained provisions that the contractor was to be paid for the work when the money was collected from the owners of the adjacent properties: the work was done accordingly, but the owners having refused payment, justices before whom they were summoned for non-payment dismissed the summonses:—Held, that the contractor was entitled to sue the board of health for the work done by him under the contracts. Worthington v. Sudlow, 2 B. & S. 508; 31 L. J., Q. B. 131; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 668; 6 L. T. 283; 10 W. R. 621.

Illegality—Contract by Officer or Servant.]—Sect. 193 of the Public Health Act, 1875, provides that officers or servants employed by a local authority shall not in anywise be concerned or interested in any contract with such authority for any of the purposes of the act, and that, if any such officer or servant is so concerned or interested, he shall be incapable of afterwards holding or continuing in any office or employment under the act, and shall forfeit the sum of 50*l.*:—Held, that the effect of this section is to render such a contract illegal, and to prevent an officer or servant of a local authority from suing on the contract. Melliss v. Shirley Local Board, 55 L. J., Q. B. 143; 16 Q. B. D. 446; 53 L. T. 810; 34 W. R. 187; 50 J. P. 214—C. A.

Semble, that if, after the making of a contract with a local authority, an officer of the authority became interested in it, s. 193 would not avoid the contract. Ib.

Party to Sue.]—A contract was entered into with the defendant by five persons named, who were members of a local board of health, for works to be done by the defendant. The five covenanted for themselves, their heirs, executors, and administrators, but the contract professed to be entered into by them for and on behalf of the local board:—Held, that the clerk to the local board was the proper person to sue for a breach of this contract by virtue of 11 & 12 Vict. c. 63, s. 138. Cobham v. Holcombe, 8 C. B. (N.S.) 815.

Conveyance—Exemption from Stamp Duty.]—The City of Bath Act, 1851, constituting the corporation of Bath the local board of health for the city, incorporates portions of the Public Health Act, 1848, but expressly excepts s. 151, which exempts from stamp duty, deeds, &c., executed by local boards for the purpose of that act. The Bath Act declares that the act shall be subject to the provisions of any subsequent act for amending the Public Health Act, 1848. The Local Government Act, 1858, is to be construed with and form part of the Public Health Act, 1848, and to take effect where the act of 1848 was already in force wholly or partially; and local boards formed under the later act are to have all the rights and liabilities of boards under the act of 1848. A subsequent act of 1861 provides that the act of 1858 shall extend to local boards constituted under local acts as well as under the general act of 1858, with this qualification, that provisions of the general act opposed to or restrictive of the provision of any local act, shall be of no force in the district for which the local act was passed:—Held, that a deed by which (in pursuance of the powers in the act of 1858) land was conveyed to the corporation of Bath "acting as the local board, and requiring the land thereby conveyed for a street improvement within their district," was exempt from stamp duty by virtue of the Public Health Act, 1848, s. 151, notwithstanding the express exception of that section from the Bath Local Act of 1851. Bath Corporation v. Inland Revenue Commissioners, 40 L. J., Ex. 181; 20 W. R. 80.

Contract by Third Parties for Benefit of Parish.]—A. agrees in writing with B. and C. to pave the streets in the parish of D.; B. and C., on behalf of themselves and the rest of the parish, agree to pay A. The agreement is lodged in the hands of B. A. shall have his remedy against B. and C., and they must resort to the rest of the parish. Meriel v. Wymondsall, Hard. 205.

2. LIABILITY OF OFFICERS FOR PENALTIES.

See 48 & 49 Vict. c. 53.

"Interested in Bargain or Contract"—Demise to Board—"Allowance."]—A demise of rooms is a "bargain or contract" within the meaning of

s. 193 of the Public Health Act, 1875, and if an officer, employed by a local board constituted under that statute, lets rooms to the board at a rent payable by it to him, although the rooms are used by it in the transaction of its business, he becomes liable to the penalty imposed by that section; for the rent payable by the local board cannot be considered as an "allowance" to the officer in addition to his salary within the meaning of ss. 189, 193, it being unconnected with the performance of any services in the course of his employment under the board. Burgess v. Clark, 14 Q. B. D. 735; 33 W. R. 269; 49 J. P. 388—C. A.

—— Shareholder in Company — Contract between Company and Local Board.]—An officer of a local board, who is a shareholder in a company, having a contract with the board, is, so long as the contract exists, "interested in a bargain or contract" with the board within the meaning of the Public Health Act, 1875, s. 193, and if the contract is capable of producing any profit to the shareholders of the company, he is liable to the penalty imposed by that enactment. Todd v. Robinson, 54 L. J., Q. B. 47; 14 Q. B. D. 739; 52 L. T. 120; 49 J. P. 278—C. A.

—— Percentage payable by Contractor.]—By the terms of contracts entered into with a local authority for the purpose of the Public Health Act, 1875, the surveyor to the local authority was to receive from the contractors, in respect of bills of quantities to be prepared by him, percentages on the amounts he should certify to be due to such contractors respectively by the local authority:—Held, that in respect of each contract the surveyor was liable to a penalty as having been "concerned or interested" therein within the meaning of s. 193 of the Public Health Act, 1875. Whiteley v. Barley, 57 L. J., Q. B. 643; 21 Q. B. D. 154; 60 L. T. 86; 36 W. R. 823; 52 J. P. 595—C. A.

—— Allowance in Addition to Salary.]—A local authority employed their surveyor, apart from his ordinary duties, to superintend the construction of certain drainage works as their engineer, and agreed to remunerate him by a percentage on the outlay:—Held, that the surveyor was liable to the penalty imposed by s. 193 of the Public Health Act, 1875. Ib. See Burgess v. Clark, supra.

Semble, that the word "allowances" in s. 193 of the Public Health Act, 1875, includes extra payments for extra work, and is not limited to allowances in respect of lodgings, coals, gas, and other like matters. Edwards v. Salmon, 58 L. J., Q. B. 571; 23 Q. B. D. 531; 38 W. R. 166; 54 J. P. 180—C. A.

Semble, the word "allowance" in s. 189 of the Public Health Act, 1875, does not include an allowance of money. Reg. v. Ramsgate Corporation, infra.

Acceptance of Fee under Colour of Office.]—The council of a borough, being also the local sanitary authority under the Public Health Act, 1875, appointed the defendant, a solicitor and the town clerk of the borough, to be clerk to the sanitary authority; and by a resolution of the council the defendant's salary was fixed at a certain sum "to include all legal charges except for contentious business matters, travelling expenses and payments out of pocket. Subsequently the council, as local sanitary authority, promoted a sewage scheme, which had not been contemplated when the defendant's salary was fixed, and in connection with this scheme the defendant did work, partly in respect of contentious and partly in respect of non-contentious matters. On the completion of the sewage works the council passed a resolution that the defendant be paid a sum of money for his services in connection with the scheme; and the money was duly paid to and received by him:—Held, that the facts did not show an acceptance by the defendant under colour of his office or employment of a fee or reward other than his proper salary, wages, and allowances within the meaning of s. 193 of the Public Health Act, 1875, and that he was not liable to the penalty imposed by the section. Edwards v. Salmon, 58 L. J., Q. B. 571; 23 Q. B. D. 531; 38 W. R. 166; 54 J. P. 180.

Resolution for Payment of Commission — Disallowance of—Certiorari.]—A local authority employed one of their officers, apart from his ordinary duties, to superintend the execution of certain works on their behalf, upon the terms that he should be paid for his services by a commission upon the contract price of such works, whereby he became "interested" in the contract for the works contrary to the provisions of s. 193 of the Public Health Act, 1875. The officer duly superintended the execution of the works, and the local authority passed resolutions for the payment of, and paid him, the amount of the stipulated commission. On application for a certiorari to bring up such resolutions for the purpose of quashing them, it was admitted by the defendants that the payment was invalid, but it was contended that a fixed sum equal to the amount of the commission might have been lawfully paid to the officer as an "allowance" under s. 189 of the Public Health Act, 1875:—Held, that the payment being illegal, the application must be granted. Reg. v. Ramsgate Corporation, 58 L. J., Q. B. 352; 23 Q. B. D. 66; 61 L. T. 333; 37 W. R. 781; 53 J. P. 740.

3. Liability of Contractor for Negligence.

A contractor employed by a local board to execute a work on a highway is not relieved by s. 140 of the Public Health Act, 1848, from liability for negligence in the execution of the work whereby a third party suffers damage. Arthy v. Coleman, 6 W. R. 34.

III. JURISDICTION.

1. Streets and Roads.

a. What are.

Street.]—The word "street" in the Towns Police Clauses Act, 1847, and the Public Health Act, 1848, means a place to which the public have a right of access, and does not include a spot from which the public may be shut out by the owner of the soil. Curtis v. Embrey, 42 L. J., M. C. 39; L. R. 7 Ex. 369; 21 W. R. 143.

A piece of ground dedicated by user to the public as a road is not a "street, not being a highway" within the Public Health Act, 1848,

s. 69. Healey v. Batley Corporation, 44 L. J., Ch. 642 ; L. R. 19 Eq. 375.

Sect. 150 of the Public Health Act, 1875, applies only to streets which are, in the ordinary and proper sense of the word, "streets" ; and the word "street" in that section does not necessarily include every meaning given to it by s. 4 of the act. Reg. v. Burnup, 50 J. P. 598.

The meaning of "street" in s. 150 of the Public Health Act, 1875, includes such of the terms set out in the interpretation clause (s. 4) as are not inconsistent with the context or subject-matter of that section ; and such extended meaning, if so applicable, must be read into the word "street" throughout the section without regard to the particular work to be done under it. Jowett v. Idle Local Board, 36 W. R. 530—C. A. Affirming, 57 L. T. 928.

—— Private Road.]—A private road is a "street" within the meaning of ss. 16 and 54 of the Public Health Act, 1875. Hill v. Wallasey Local Board, 63 L. J., Ch. 1 ; 7 R. 51 ; 42 W. R. 81—C. A.

A private road may be a street within the meaning of s. 150 of the Public Health Act, 1875. Midland Ry. v. Watton, 55 L. J., M. C. 99 ; 17 Q. B. D. 30 ; 54 L. T. 482 ; 34 W. R. 524 ; 50 J. P. 405—C. A.

—— Line of Buildings.]—Under the Towns Improvement Clauses Act, 1847, s. 66, the commissioners may allow, upon such terms as they think fit, any building within the limits of the special act to be set forward, for improving the line of the street in which such building or any building adjacent thereto is situated. "Street" is here used in its proper acceptation of a line of buildings, and does not include a highway generally. The commissioners have no power under this section to divert a highway by widening it, and closing a longitudinal part of the old highway ; to do this they must apply to the magistrates under the Highway Acts. Reg. v. Platts, 49 L. J., Q. B. 848 ; 43 L. T. 159 ; 28 W. R. 915 ; 44 J. P. 765.

—— Finding of Fact by Justices.]—By s. 4 of the Public Health Act, 1875, "in this act, if not inconsistent with the context, the following words and expressions have the meaning hereinafter respectively assigned to them," and (amongst other definitions) "street includes any road," &c. By s. 150, "where any street within any urban district (not being a highway repairable by the inhabitants at large)" is not sewered, paved, and channelled to the satisfaction of the urban authority they may give notice to the owners of the adjoining premises to sewer, &c., the street, and on failure to comply with the notice the urban authority may execute the works themselves, and recover the expense of so doing from the adjoining owners in a summary manner. Summary proceedings having been taken by an urban authority to recover under s. 153, the expense of sewering, &c., a road within the district which was not a highway repairable by the inhabitants at large :—Held, that it was a question of fact for the justices to determine whether or not the road was a street within s. 150, and that they were not bound to find as matter of law that it was a street by the terms of the definition in s. 4. Maude v. Baildon Local Board, 10 Q. B. D. 394 ; 48 L. T. 874 ; 47 J. P. 644.

In summary proceedings to recover expenses under s. 150, it is for the justices, having regard to the surrounding circumstances, and to whether there is any intention of building along a road so as to convert it into a street, to find as a fact whether the road in question is a street in the ordinary and popular sense of the word ; and it makes no difference that the section has been applied or may apply to a portion of the road other than that in question. Where the justices find a road or a portion of a road is not a street in the ordinary and popular sense, they will be right in holding that the section is not applicable to the road or portion of a road. Reg. v. Burnup, 50 J. P. 598.

—— Question of Law—Direction to Jury.]—The question whether the place in dispute comes within the interpretation clause is one of law for the judge at the trial, and the question which may properly be left to the jury is whether the said place is "a street in the popular acceptation of the term." Jowett v. Idle Local Board, 36 W. R. 530—C. A. Affirming, 57 L. T. 928.

—— Includes Houses.]—The word "streets" in the Local Government Act, 1858 (21 & 22 Vict. c. 98), s. 32, means, not only the roadway, but the houses and the ground on which they are built, on each side of the roadway. Baker v. Portsmouth Corporation, 3 Ex. D. 4 ; 37 L. T. 381 ; 25 W. R. 677. Affirmed, 47 L. J., Ex. 223 ; 3 Ex. D. 157 ; 37 L. T. 822 ; 26 W. R. 303—C. A.

Street may include as well the houses abutting upon or fronting a public thoroughfare, as the actual roadway or footways. Yet the strict and primâ facie meaning of the word is confined to the roadway and footways. L. C. & D. Ry. v. London Corporation, 19 L. T. 250.

—— Strip of Land added to Highway repairable by Inhabitants at large.]—Owners of land adjoining a highway repairable by the inhabitants at large, erected houses on their land, and threw open to the highway a strip of land in front of them :—Held, that the houses with the strip of land in front, together formed a "street" within the meaning of s. 150 of the Public Health Act, 1875 (38 & 39 Vict. c. 55), which the urban sanitary authority within whose district it was situate could compel the frontagers to pave, channel, and kerb under the provisions of that section. Richards v. Kessick, 57 L. J., M. C. 48 ; 59 L. T. 318 ; 52 J. P. 756.

—— Estate laid out for Building—Roads.]—By a local act commissioners were created having duties with regard to streets and buildings within a certain area. In 1878 it was proposed to lay out an estate within such area for building, and plans were submitted to and approved by the commissioners. By an agreement between them and the defendant, the defendant was, on completion of the roads in question, to throw eighteen feet of his land into the said roads (which was done), but not to make the roads. In 1887 the powers of the commissioners passed to the council on incorporation. In 1892 the council by an order required the defendant to sewer, drain, level, flag, and metal the said roads so far as his premises fronted, adjoined, or abutted thereon. The order not having been complied with, the council did the work themselves, and on making request for payment the defendant's agent disputed that the property was liable. On a summons taken out by the council to have the sums expended declared a charge on the property:—Held, first, that the said roads were streets as to which the council had power to make the said order; secondly, that they were public streets as well as streets within the ordinary meaning of the term; thirdly, that entry upon lands in obedience to the said order could not constitute a trespass; fourthly, following Folkestone Corporation v. Brooks (62 L. J., Ch. 863; [1893] 3 Ch. 22), that the dispute not being as to the amount of apportionment, but whether the defendant was liable at all, the plaintiffs were not compelled to go to arbitration, and therefore were not disentitled to sue; fifthly, that the said agreement did not constitute a defence to the action; and, sixthly, that accordingly the plaintiffs must succeed, but, following Walthamstow Local Board v. Staines (60 L. J., Ch. 738; [1891] 2 Ch. 606), decided on s. 278 of the Public Health Act, 1875, which was substantially in the same words, that having regard to s. 349 of the local act it appeared to be a case where a memorial to the secretary of state for relief would lie. West Hartlepool Corporation v. Robinson, 75 L. T. 677; 45 W. R. 312; 61 J. P. 200. Affirmed, 77 L. T. 387—C. A.

—— Highway repairable by Inhabitants at large.]—To an action by commissioners acting under a local improvement act against the owners, &c., of buildings to recover the expenses incurred in paving, flagging, soughing, cleansing, and completing a certain street, the defendant pleaded that the said street was a public street and common highway repairable and repaired by the inhabitants at large as a common highway:—Held, on demurrer (with reference to several local acts), a bad plea. Stockport Corporation v. Cheetham, 1 L. T. 541.

The promoters of an intended road by deed declared that the road should not only be enjoyed by them for their individual purposes, but "should be open to the use of the public at large for all manner of purposes in all respects as a common turnpike road":—Held, that this was not a dedication of the road to the public, and that the road was not a highway repairable by the inhabitants at large under s. 150 of the Public Health Act, 1875. Austerberry v. Oldham Corporation, 55 L. J., Ch. 633; 29 Ch. D. 750; 53 L. T. 543; 33 W. R. 807; 49 J. P. 532—C. A.

—— "Turnpike Road."]—Semble, an individual cannot, without legislative authority, dedicate a road to the public if he reserves the right to charge tolls for the user; and the mere fact that a number of persons form themselves into a company for making and maintaining a road, and erect gates and bars and charge tolls, does not make the road a "turnpike road" in the sense of a turnpike road made such by act of parliament, and so dedicated to the public. Ib.

The owners of a road put up bars upon it and took tolls from the public for the passage of vehicles, horses, and cattle:—Held, that such road was not a turnpike road within the meaning of the exception contained in the definition of "street" given by s. 4 of the Public Health Act, 1875. Midland Ry. v. Watton, 55 L. J., M. C. 99; 17 Q. B. D. 30; 54 L. T. 482; 34 W. R. 524; 50 J. P. 405—C. A.

—— Order investing Rural with powers of Urban Authority—Highway not repairable by Inhabitants at large.]—The appellant owned premises fronting upon a road, 900 feet long, which had several houses in it on the south side but none on the north. By an order of the local government board, s. 150 of the Public Health Act, 1875, was declared to be in force in the district in which the road was situated, and the road was declared to be a "street." The road was a public highway, but there was no evidence of its formal dedication. There was some evidence of its use prior to 1835, but none inconsistent with its having been a mere occupation road or a footpath. The appellant was summoned for nonpayment of expenses incurred by the rural authority in sewering, levelling, and paving the road. The justices decided that the order of the local government board was conclusive, although in their opinion the road was not a street according to the common use and simple ordinary meaning of the word; they also decided that it was a street by virtue of the definition in s. 4 of the act of 1875, and, subject to a case stated, held the appellant liable to pay the amounts claimed:—Held, that the order of the local government board was not conclusive with reference to the application of s. 150 to the road in question, but that the road was within the definition "street" in s. 4, and was, therefore, a street within the meaning of s. 150. Fenwick v. Croydon Sanitary Authority, 60 L. J., M. C. 161; [1891] 2 Q. B. 216; 65 L. T. 645; 40 W. R. 124; 55 J. P. 470.

—— Soil below Surface—Urinals.]—In 1739, by an agreement, which was ratified by a special act of parliament, between the plaintiff's predecessors in title, being lords of a manor, and their freehold tenants, certain walks which formed part of the waste of the manor were dedicated "to remain always open and free for the public use and benefit of the persons frequenting Tunbridge Wells in the manner the same then were or lately had been used." In 1876, 1887 and 1888 the town authorities of Tunbridge Wells, with the consent of the lord, made certain alterations and improvements in the walks. From the earliest time to the present the public had always passed and repassed on foot over the walks. In 1890 the Tunbridge Wells Improvement Act authorised the defendant corporation to "erect and maintain in any street or public place" conveniences for the use of the public, the word "street" to have the same meaning as in the Public Health Act, 1875. The defendants having constructed underground conveniences beneath the walks:—Held, that the soil in which the conveniences were constructed below the surface was not part of "a street" within the meaning of the Public Health Act, 1875, repairable by the inhabitants at large and so vested in the defendants, nor was it part of a "street or public place" within the meaning of the Tunbridge Wells Improvement Act of 1890; and that the plaintiffs were entitled to a declaration that the defendants were not entitled to, or to the use of, the conveniences without the plaintiff's consent. Baird v. Tunbridge Wells Corporation, 64 L. J., Q. B. 145; [1894] 2 Q. B. 867; 9 R. 479; 71 L. T. 211; 59 J. P. 36—C. A. See S. C. in H. L. infra, col. 382.

New Streets.]—The 11 & 12 Vict. c. 63, s. 69, does not empower a local board to make new streets, and rate the owners of the adjoining land for paving them; but the enactment only applies to existing streets not repairable by the parish. Kingston-upon-Hull Local Board v. Jones, 1 H. & N. 489; 26 L. J., Ex. 33; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 1193; 5 W. R. 161.

—— Old Country Road.]—The term "new street" in the Public Health Act, 1875, s. 157, applies to an old country road near a town which, by the building of houses along it, has become a street in the common sense of the word, notwithstanding that before the building of such houses it was a street within the meaning of s. 4 of the act. Robinson v. Barton Local Board, 53 L. J., Ch. 226; 8 App. Cas. 798; 50 L. T. 57; 32 W. R. 249; 48 J. P. 276—H. L. (E.)

—— Passages at Back of House—Jurisdiction of Local Board.]—Passages at the back of houses intended to afford access to the ashpits and privies of such houses come within the definition of "street" as defined by s. 4 of the Public Health Act, 1875, and are therefore subject to the by-laws made by a local board in pursuance of the powers contained in s. 157, sub-s. 1, of the same act. Reg. v. Goole Local Board, 60 L. J., Q. B. 617; [1891] 2 Q. B. 212; 64 L. T. 595; 39 W. R. 608; 55 J. P. 535.

—— Conversion.]—The appellant built six cottages upon a piece of garden ground in a lane 6 feet wide and 250 feet long, which was admitted to be a street within the meaning of the definition of that word in the Public Health Acts:—Held, that the justices were not justified in coming to the conclusion that the land had been converted into a "new street," and therefore they were wrong in convicting the appellant for having violated certain by-laws made by the urban sanitary authority pursuant to the powers contained in the Public Health Act, 1848, and the Local Government Act, 1858, one of which provided that every new street not being a carriage road should be laid out and formed at least 18 feet wide. Williams v. Powning, 48 L. T. 672; 47 J. P. 486.

—— By-laws—"Person who lays out."]—An urban sanitary authority made by-laws under s. 157 of the Public Health Act, 1875. By the first by-law it was provided that "every person who lays out a new street shall, as regards the minimum width of such street, comply with such of the requirements hereinafter specified as shall be applicable to the case":—Held, that a person who in accordance with his contract with a building owner simply builds along the line of street already laid out by such owner is not a "person who lays out a new street" within the meaning of the by-law. Sunderland Corporation v. Brown, 43 L. T. 478; 44 J. P. 831.

b. Property in.

Street "vesting" in Urban Authority.]—Plaintiff was lessee, under a local board, the urban authority, of the right of pasturage over the herbage at the side of a public road, which was a "street" within the meaning of the Public Health Act, 1875, and which, therefore, by s. 149 "vested in and was under the control of" the local board. He was also lessee to the same extent of the herbage at the side of the private road, within the district of the board, and he turned out his cattle to graze on both roads. Defendant turned out his cattle on the same roads without any right to do so:—Held, that plaintiff could maintain an action against defendant for depasturing the public road, inasmuch as that road "vested" in the local board, which thereby acquired such a property in the soil of the road as was necessary for the purpose of exercising the powers over the road given by the statute, and which therefore could give plaintiff a title to the pasturage; but that he could not do so with respect to the private road, for the local board could not give him any title to the pasturage, and he had no such possession as enabled him to maintain an action against defendant for interfering with his enjoyment of the pasturage on that road. Coverdale v. Charlton, 48 L. J., Q. B. 128; 4 Q. B. D. 104; 40 L. T. 88; 27 W. R. 257—C. A.

Highway "vesting" in Local Board.]—The commissioners appointed in pursuance of the South Wales Turnpike Act, 1844 (by which act, also, the roads of the county of Glamorganshire were vested in the defendant board), directed that a certain road, situated within the borough of S., should be continued as a turnpike road, and in 1845 a toll-gate was erected on it, at which tolls have been collected up to the present time. In the year 1850 a provisional order was made, by which the Public Health Act, 1848, was applied to the borough of S., and a local board of health for the borough was appointed. By the 68th section of that act it is provided that all present and future streets, being highways without any district, shall vest in and be under the management of the local board of health, and that board is directed to repair these roads. By 15 & 16 Vict. c. 42, s. 13, it is declared that the word "highway" in the above section shall mean "any highway repairable by the inhabitants at large":—Held, that, though the road in question was in fact a street, it was not a "highway repairable by the inhabitants at large," and therefore had not become vested in the local board of health, but had remained vested in and subject to the powers of the defendant board. Nutter v. Accrington Local Board (4 Q. B. D. 375), distinguished. The commissioners having done certain acts more than thirty years ago which had ever since been acted on, the court refused to review their decision, though it appeared wrong. Swansea Improvement Co. v. County Roads Board, Glamorganshire, 41 L. T. 583.

Vesting of Subsoil — Underground Conveniences.]—The declaration in a private act of parliament that a place of usual resort is a "public place" does not imply a dedication to the public of anything except the surface, and a corporation is not entitled to erect public conveniences under the surface of such public place. Even if such "public place" be a street within the meaning of the Public Health Act, 1875, the property in the soil does not vest in the local authority, but remains in the original owners. Tunbridge Wells Corporation v. Baird, 65 L. J., Q. B. 451; [1896] A. C. 434; 74 L. T. 385; 60 J. P. 788—H. L. (E.)

The appellants, purporting to act under the authority of a local act of parliament which empowered them to erect in any street or public place, or on any land belonging to them or under their control, conveniences for the use of the public, constructed a convenience under a public promenade within the borough. The soil under the promenade belonged to the respondents, although the promenade itself had been dedicated to the public:—Held, that, even if the promenade was a street, the soil thereunder did not vest in the appellants, who therefore had no right to construct the conveniences in question. Dicta in Coverdale v. Charlton (48 L. J., Q. B. 128; 4 Q. B. D. 104), as to vesting in an urban authority of soil below a street, disapproved by Lord Herschell. Ib.

Authorising the laying of Trade Pipes under Street—Ultra vires.]—The laying of pipes to be used for trade purposes under a street cannot be authorised by an urban authority under s. 149 of the Public Health Act, 1875. Salt Union v. Harvey, 61 J. P. 375.

Power to Dedicate Road to Public.]—See Tunbridge Wells Improvement Commissioners v. Southborough Local Board, 60 L. T. 172.

Right of Gas Company to Break up.]—A corporation, being the local board of health for a particular town, and being also the paving commissioners for the same town, permitted pipes to be laid down in certain streets for the purpose of supplying the town with gas. The gas company, being about to lay down new pipes, and for that purpose being about to break up the pavements, were interfered with by the corporation:—Held, that the gas company has a right to break up the pavements, and the corporation was restrained from interfering with the gas company. Dover Gaslight Co. v. Dover Corporation, 1 Jur. (N.S.) 812—L.JJ.

c. Formation and Alteration.

Uniform Level—Adjacent Streets.]—Under 11 & 12 Vict. c. 63, s. 69, a local board of health has power only to require a street to be levelled with reference to any want of inequality or want of uniformity in the street itself. The local board has no power to require the level of a street to be raised or lowered so as to bring it into uniformity with the adjacent streets. Caley v. Kingston-upon-Hull Local Board, 5 B. & S. 815; 34 L. J., M. C. 7; 11 Jur. (N.S.) 171; 11 L. T. 339; 13 W. R. 143.

Paving—Trustees for—Who are.]—The 20 & 21 Vict. c. 50, s. 2, applies only to bodies charged with the duty of executing local and personal acts of the kind mentioned in the enactment, and a local board of health constituted under 11 & 12 Vict. c. 63, are not trustees acting under an act for paving, &c., within the meaning of that enactment. Swinford v. Keble, 7 B. & S. 573; 35 L. J., Q. B. 185; L. R. 1 Q. B. 54; 12 Jur. (N.S.) 783; 14 L. T. 770; 14 W. R. 858.

—— Notice to "Owner"—Validity.]—The term "owner" as defined in s. 4 of the Public Health Act, 1875, does not include a receiver of rents and profits appointed by the court, and service on him of a notice under s. 150 of the act is invalid. Bacup Corporation v. Smith, 59 L. J., Ch. 518; 44 Ch. D. 395; 63 L. T. 195; 38 W. R. 697.

In Jan., 1883, a local board passed a resolution for the paving and sewering of a certain street, and on the 11th May, 1883, notice was served on P. & Co. requiring them to pave and sewer the street. P. & Co. had been the owners of the land abutting on the street, but by a conveyance of the 27th April, 1883, had conveyed their estate to the respondent; the local board, however, had no notice of this conveyance. In an action by the local board to recover the paving expenses from the respondent:—Held, that P. & Co. were not at the time of the service of the notice either "owners or occupiers" of the premises, and that as the proper steps prescribed by the Public Health Act, 1875, s. 150, had not been taken, the respondent was not liable. Wallsend Local Board v. Murphy, 61 L. T. 777.

—— Service of Notice.]—A new street being about to be paved by the urban authority, they addressed a notice to pave to the owner of a vacant field, whose name was doubtful, thus: "To B., or other the owner, or other the occupier," &c. The notice was affixed to a conspicuous part of the premises. No notice ever reached B.:—Held, that the service of notice was sufficient under the Public Health Act, 1875, s. 267. Butler v. Gravesend Urban Authority, 58 J. P. 446.

Alteration of Turnpike Road—Liability for Damage.]—By the Public Health Act, 1848 (11 & 12 Vict. c. 63), s. 68, streets being highways within the district of a local board shall vest in and be under the management of the board, and the board shall cause all such streets to be levelled, paved, flagged, channelled, altered, and repaired as occasion may require. By the interpretation clause (s. 2): "The word 'street' shall apply to and include any highway (not being a turnpike road)." By s. 144 compensation shall be made to all persons sustaining any damage by reason of the exercise of the powers of the act; and in case of dispute as to amount, the same shall be settled by arbitration in the manner provided by the act.—The footpath of a street which was a highway and also a turnpike road within the district of a local board, was altered by them under an agreement with the turnpike trustees, so as to raise the level of the footpath in front of the house of the plaintiff and cause him damage:—Held, that a street which is also a turnpike road is not excluded by s. 2 from the operation of ss. 68 and 144, and that the plaintiff was therefore entitled to recover compensation from the board in the manner prescribed by s. 144. Nutter v. Accrington Local Board, 48 L. J., Q. B. 487; 4 Q. B. D. 375; 40 L. T. 802—C. A. Affirmed, 43 L. T. 710—H. L. (E.)

—— Access to House Impeded.]—A local board of health gave notice, under 11 & 12 Vict. c. 63, s. 69, to the owner of a house abutting on a street to level and pave it, and in default of the owner, they did the work themselves. By the alteration so caused in the level of the street, the access to the house was rendered difficult and dangerous:—Held, that the owner was entitled to compensation under s. 144. Reg. v. Wallasey

Local Board, 10 B. & S. 428; 38 L. J., Q. B. 217; L. R. 4 Q. B. 351; 21 L. T. 90; 17 W. R. 766.

Breaking up Private Road.]—A corporation, affecting to act under the provisions of their local act, commenced to break up and excavate a private road belonging to the plaintiff, and situate within the borough, for the purpose of laying down a sewer:—Held, that on the construction of the local act, taken with the provisions contained in the Public Health Act, 1848, the Sewage Utilisation Act, 1865 (28 & 29 Vict. c. 75), and the Public Health Act, 1875, the road was a street within those acts, and that the corporation had power to lay down the sewer thereunder, and for that purpose to break up the soil thereof. Taylor v. Oldham Corporation, 46 L. J., Ch. 105; 4 Ch. D. 395; 35 L. T. 696; 25 W. R. 178—C. A.

Injunction restraining unnecessary Damage.]—A local board of health in repairing and improving a road under the powers of the Public Health Act, 1848 (11 & 12 Vict. c. 63), raised a footpath by the side of the road a few inches, the effect of which was to prevent water, which fell upon the space between a warehouse of the plaintiff in which needles were stored and the road, from draining into the road. On a bill filed by him against the local board for an injunction:—Held, that they had no right to make improvements in a way calculated to cause unnecessary injury to the plaintiff; that the evil complained of was one of easy remedy, and that the case was not one for pecuniary compensation; and a mandatory injunction was granted to prevent the local board from allowing such water to remain dammed up to the injury of the plaintiff. Milward v. Redditch Local Board, 21 W. R. 429.

Power of Local Authority to change Name.]—By s. 6 (1) of the Towns Improvement Clauses Act, 1847, the Commissioners might, from time to time, cause the houses and buildings in all or any of the streets to be marked with numbers, as they might think fit, and should cause to be put up or painted on a conspicuous part of some house, building, or place at or near each end, corner, or entrance of every such street, the name by which such street was to be known. The corporation of Dublin adopted a resolution that the name of Sackville Street be changed to O'Connell Street, for the purpose of commemorating by this and other intended alterations in street nomenclature the past historical events of the country and the names of illustrious men. The householders of Sackville Street, with very few exceptions, objected to the proposed change in its name on the ground of inconvenience and of detriment to their trades and businesses:—Held, in an action by some of the objecting householders, that the corporation had no power, either by statute or at common law, to make the change, and that even if they possessed such power, the court had jurisdiction to restrain them from doing so, if satisfied that the proposed change would be injurious to the owners or occupiers of houses in the street. Anderson v. Dublin Corporation, 15 L. R., Ir. 410.

Repair — Liability — Ancient Highway, altered, and added to.]—An ancient footpath or highway, the original track of which has been partially altered, widened and added to, and abutting upon which houses have been built, is a new street within the meaning of the Public Health Act, 1875, and repairable by the owning frontages and not by the inhabitants at large. The last clause of the 150th section of the act is conclusive upon the point. Evans v. Newport Sanitary Authority, 59 L. J., M. C. 8; 24 Q. B. D. 264; 61 L. T. 684; 38 W. R. 400; 54 J. P. 374.

—— Precautions during Repairs.]—Sect. 79 of the Towns Improvement Clauses Act, 1847, prescribes certain precautions to be taken during the construction and repair of sewers, streets, and houses. The section does not mean that the traffic in the street is to be entirely stopped during the execution of the works, but merely that protection should be afforded to prevent vehicles and persons from passing over the place where the works are being executed. Woodall v. Nuttall, 56 J. P. 150—C. A.

New Street—Width—By-laws.]—A by-law of an urban authority provided that every person who constructed a new street which was 100 feet long should make it 30 feet wide. The other streets in the town were generally of less width. The appellant bought some land on one side of a road and proceeded to erect thereon a wall 170 feet long, thereby reducing the width of the roadway to seven feet:—Held, that an offence against the by-law had been committed, and that the by-law was not unreasonable. Roberts v. Richards, 54 J. P. 693.

By the Public Health Act, 1875, s. 157, every urban sanitary authority may make by-laws with respect to the width and construction of new streets. The respondents, an urban sanitary authority, made by-laws providing that every person who should lay out a new street exceeding 100 feet in length should lay out such street as a carriage road, with footways, and of a width of not less than thirty-six feet. The appellant was lessee of a piece of ground, together with a right of way over the adjoining road, which was fifteen feet wide, for a distance of more than 100 feet. The appellant commenced to build two houses on the ground of which he was lessee, but did not widen the road over which he had a right of way to thirty-six feet. He was summoned by the respondents for laying out a new street of a width of less than thirty-six feet, contrary to the by-laws:—Held, that what the appellant had done, in commencing to erect the houses on the piece of ground adjoining the road, did not amount to laying out the road as a new street, and therefore he was not liable to be convicted. Gozzett v. Maldon Urban Sanitary Authority, [1894] 1 Q. B. 327; 70 L. T. 414; 58 J. P. 229.

A builder purchased a plot of land fronting upon a main thoroughfare, and on one side abutting for a distance of 176 feet upon a narrow lane which ran at right angles to the thoroughfare. He built three houses fronting the thoroughfare; the wall of the corner house extended up the lane for forty feet, and a high wall, bounding the back-yard of the house, extended for another forty feet, but there was no window or means of access on that side:—Held, that these facts alone were not sufficient to show that he was beginning to build a new street so as to subject himself to by-laws as to width made under the provisions of s. 157 of the Public Health Act, 1875. St. George's Local Board v. Ballard, 64 L. J., Q. B. 547; [1895] 1 Q. B. 702; 14 R. 293; 72 L. T. 345; 43 W. R. 409; 59 J. P. 182—C. A.

—— Width of Entrance—By-laws.]—The by-laws of a local board provided: (4) "Every person who shall lay out a new street shall so lay out such street that the width thereof shall be forty feet at the least." (6) "Every person who shall construct a new street shall provide at one end, at least, of such street, an entrance of a width equal to the width of such street, and open from the ground upwards":—Held, that the 6th by-law was intra vires and reasonable, and that it prevented a landowner from "constructing" a new street upon his land until he had provided an "entrance" to the new street of the specified width, even though that entrance could only be made upon the land of another person over whom he had no control:—Held, also, that the "construction" of a new street included the building of the houses abutting on it, and, consequently, that the landowner could not, until an adequate entrance had been provided, erect houses abutting on the proposed new street. Hendon Local Board v. Pounce, 42 Ch. D. 602; 61 L. T. 465; 38 W. R. 377.

The by-laws of a sanitary authority, which had been duly confirmed by the local government board, provided that: "4. Every person who shall lay out a new street, which shall be intended for use as a carriage road, shall so lay out such street that the width thereof shall be forty feet at the least. 8. Every person who shall construct a new street shall provide at one end, at least, of such street, an entrance of a width equal to the width of such street, and open from the ground upwards." Upon motion on behalf of the sanitary authority for an injunction to restrain a landowner from constructing or commencing a new street until an entrance should have been provided according to by-law 8:—Held, that, under the by-laws, a person proposing to construct a new street must provide a mode of access thereto of a width equal to the width of the new street; that it made no difference that the mode of access to the new street was by means of a public street, if such street was of less than the required width; and, therefore, that an injunction must be granted. Bromley Local Board v. Lloyd, 66 L. T. 462; 56 J. P. 278.

Where the by-laws of a local authority require that the entrance to any new street shall be thirty-six feet wide at the least, the local authority is justified in refusing to pass the plans for the construction of a new street, the entrance to which is by an existing street outside the district of the local authority, which is not of the width required by the by-laws. Barton Regis Rural Council v. Stevens, 61 J. P. 598.

—— Notice of Intention to Lay Out—Abandonment.]—S. had an old house with a shop front abutting on a lane, and also other property near; he gave notice to the urban authority of his intention to lay out a new street, and submitted a plan that was approved, shewing the alterations and proposed width of the new street, which involved setting back the shop and garden. He did nothing to carry out the plan, but two months later put in a new shop front and rebuilt the garden wall on the old site:—Held, that as he had abandoned his intention of laying out a new street, he had committed no offence against a by-law regulating the width of new streets. Sunderland Corporation v. Skinner, 53 J. P. 660.

—— Approval of Plans by Local Board—Encroachment.]—An alleged encroachment upon a street as marked in a plan approved by a local board was made by a building which was itself built according to a plan approved by the local board:—Held, that the owner of a house in the same street opposite the alleged encroachment had no cause of action, either in the name of the attorney-general against the local board for not preventing the encroachment, or against the alleged trespasser. Att.-Gen. v. Pudsey Local Board, 59 J. P. 329.

—— Approval of Local Authority—Erection of Buildings before whole Street constructed.]—The Sunderland Local Improvement Act, 1885, by s. 37, enacts that it shall not be lawful for any person, except with the consent of the corporation, to erect or build, or begin to erect or build, any new buildings abutting upon any new street or part of a new street, unless the corporation shall have previously approved of the level and available width of such new street or part of a new street, nor until the carriage way and footway of such new street, or part of a new street, shall have been formed to such a level and of such a width, and constructed and sewered to the satisfaction of the corporation, in accordance with s. 150 of the Public Health Act, 1875. The appellants, who were builders, gave notice to the Sunderland local authority, the respondents, of their intention to lay out a new street, the plans for which were approved by the respondents. They subsequently gave notice that they intended to erect four new houses in that street, the plans of which were submitted to and approved by the respondents. The appellants began to erect these houses abutting upon or fronting that part of the new street which had been sewered, levelled, paved, metalled, flagged and channelled to the satisfaction of the respondents; but the whole of the new street had not been constructed and made good to the satisfaction of the respondents within s. 37 of the Sunderland Local Improvement Act, 1885. The appellants were summoned in respect of the infringement of that section and fined:—Held, on appeal, that the conviction was right, and that, as the appellants had given notice to lay out the whole of a new street, the urban authority, under their local act, were entitled to withhold their consent to the erection of any house or building abutting on the new street, unless the whole of the new street were constructed and sewered to their satisfaction. Woodhill v. Sunderland Corporation, 57 L. T. 303; 52 J. P. 5.

Road—Width—Plan referred to in Act—Time of Indictment.]—A local act, after reciting that certain roads were "intended to be made in the courses and directions as shewn" on a certain plan, enacted that the said roads should be made "as shewn or laid down on the said plan." The width of the roads was delineated on the plan, but in the act nothing was said regarding it:—Held, that the roads must be of the width shewn on the plan; and also that an indictment would lie in respect of their being made of a less width when such width was tendered as sufficient, although the time for completion of the roads, under the act, had not expired. Reg. v. Liverpool Corporation, 5 W. R. 503.

Liability to Fence Lands abutting on Highway.]—By s. 81 of the Rotherham Borough Extension and Sewerage Act, 1879, "If the corporation are of opinion that danger to the public is likely to ensue by reason of lands abutting on streets not being fenced, the owner of such land shall, when required by the corporation, and to their satisfaction, sufficiently fence off the land from the street, and shall afterwards keep such fence in good repair, to the satisfaction of the corporation, and if he fails so to fence or repair as aforesaid, within fourteen days after notice for that purpose given to him by the corporation, the corporation may fence or repair and recover the expenses for so doing from him under the Public Health Act, 1875":—Held, that this act did not apply to fences by the side of a road which had been a turnpike highway, but applies only to new streets where there are no fences, and which, in the opinion of the corporation, are dangerous to the public. Rotherham Corporation v. Fullerton, 50 L. T. 364.

d. Obstructions in.

Enclosure—Removal of.]—The owner in fee of a house abutting on the highway in 1858, wrongfully enclosed a portion of the highway as a garden. In 1873, the local board of health served a notice on the occupier to remove the obstruction, and stating that in default it would be removed at his expense. On a bill filed by the occupier and owner to restrain the local board:—Held (assuming the enclosure to be wrongful), the board had power, under 10 & 11 Vict. c. 34 (The Towns Improvement Clauses Act, 1847), ss. 69 & 70, to remove the garden, as an obstruction to the safe and convenient passage along the highway. Bagshaw v. Buxton Local Board, 45 L. J., Ch. 260; 1 Ch. D. 220; 34 L. T. 112; 24 W. R. 231.

Collecting Crowd — Auction Caravan.] — A person had an auction caravan, standing in the market-place of a town, for which he paid a rent or toll to the improvement commissioners, appointed by a local act, the lords of the manor. The caravan was only three feet from a public street of the town, and many persons obstructed the thoroughfare by stopping to listen to his sales. The justices convicted him under 10 & 11 Vict. c. 89 (The Town Police Clauses Act, 1847), s. 28, of causing an obstruction in a thoroughfare:—Held, that what he did was not an offence within that act. Ball v. Ward, 33 L. T. 170.

Blocking and Walking Abreast on Footpath—Conviction.]—Three defendants were convicted under s. 28 of the Towns Clauses Act, 1847, for obstructing passengers in the public streets, and unlawfully preventing persons passing there. It appeared by the evidence of a police constable that the three defendants were standing, with three or four other persons, on the pavement, blocking up the same. They then walked up the street, all three abreast, causing passengers who met them to leave the footpath and go into the road. Sect. 28 of the act provides that "every person who by means of any cart, carriage, sledge, truck, or barrow, or any animal, or other means, wilfully interrupts any public crossing, or wilfully causes any obstruction in any public footpath, or other public thoroughfare," shall be guilty of an offence under the act, and liable to a penalty:—Held, that the conviction was wrong, and could not be sustained. Reg. v. Long, 59 L. T. 33; 52 J. P. 630; 16 Cox, C. C. 442.

Four men walked abreast on the pavement, causing passengers to go into the carriage way in order to pass them:—Held, that they could not be convicted summarily under s. 28 of the Towns Police Clauses Act, 1847, for obstructing the highway. Reg. v. Williams, 55 J. P. 406.

Exposing Goods for Sale outside Shop.]—See post, col. 434.

Erecting Posts—Action to Restrain Removal—Striking out Pleadings on the Ground of Irrelevance.]—Where the owners of land adjoining a public footpath brought an action against the local board to restrain the removal of posts erected by the plaintiffs to prevent vehicular traffic over the footpath, the court struck out as irrelevant allegations in the statement of claim that one of the members of the board, who was also an adjoining landowner, had taken an active part in the plaintiffs' negotiations with the board for the protection of the footpath, and had acted therein with a view to his own private interest, and that consequently the plaintiffs had not succeeded in inducing the board to take any steps for the protection of the footpath. Murray v. Epsom Local Board, 66 L. J., Ch. 107; [1897] 1 Ch. 35; 75 L. T. 579; 45 W. R. 185; 61 J. P. 71.

e. Other Offences in.

Street Cries to Annoyance of Inhabitants—Evidence.]—In a prosecution under a by-law of a town providing that any person making a violent noise in the streets to the annoyance of the inhabitants shall be guilty of an offence, it is sufficient to prove that one inhabitant has been annoyed. Innes v. Newman, 63 L. J., M. C. 198; [1894] 2 Q. B. 292; 10 R. 348; 70 L. T. 689; 42 W. R. 573; 58 J. P. 543.

Indecent or Profane Language.] — See post, col. 479.

Display of Advertisements on "Vehicle"—Bicycle.]—A bicycle is a vehicle within s. 12 of the Liverpool Corporation Act, 1889, which provides that it shall not be lawful in any street in the city to use any vehicle exclusively or principally for the purpose of displaying advertisements, without the consent of the corporation. Ellis v. Nott-Bower, 60 J. P. 760.

2. Buildings.

a. Definition.

"Building" — Jurisdiction of Justices — Buildings in Streets Act, 1888.]—Whether a structure is a "building" within the meaning of s. 3 of the Public Health (Buildings in Streets) Act, 1888, is a question of fact to be determined by the justices, provided the thing erected is of such a nature that it is capable of being a building. A wooden structure, used for advertising purposes, that was nine feet six inches long, three feet wide, and seven feet high, was roofed over, and had a glass front and a door by which to enter, and was fastened into the ground by four posts, let into the ground to the depth of nine to twelve inches, is of such a nature that it is capable of being a "building" within the above section. Leicester Corporation v. Brown, 62 L. J., M. C. 22; 5 R. 35; 67 L. T. 686; 41 W. R. 78; 57 J. P. 70.

"New Building"—Jurisdiction of Justices.]—A local board, having power to make by-laws under the Local Government Act, 1858 (21 & 22 Vict. c. 98), s. 34, made and published a by-law enjoining, under penalty, that a notice should be given to its surveyor of any new building erected, or intended to be erected, within its district. D., having in his back-yard a stable, pulled the same down, and with a small part of the materials and a quantity of new materials, built a stable partly on the former site, but chiefly on a new site, in another part of the yard. The justices, having dismissed a summons against D. for an infringement of the by-law in not giving notice of the erection of this structure to the surveyor, on the ground that they did not consider the erection a new building within the meaning of the statute and by-law:—Held, that this was a "new building." Held, also, that the question of new building or not was not one within the justices' province on evidence and inspection absolutely and conclusively to determine, but was a question of legal definition, and that the justices' decision was based upon a construction which might be reviewed by the court. Hobbs v. Dance, 43 L. J., M. C. 21; L. R. 9 C. P. 30; 29 L. T. 687; 22 W. R. 90.

—— Question of fact—By-laws—Penalty.]—By-laws were made for the borough of S., under the powers given by s. 34 of the Local Government Act 1858. This act was repealed by the Public Health Act, 1875, but by s. 326 of the latter act all by-laws duly made under any of the sanitary acts by this act repealed, and not inconsistent with any of the provisions of this act, shall be deemed to be by-laws under that act. The 27th by-law provided that every person who intended to erect any new building should give one month's notice of such intention, and send in a plan of the works to the surveyor for the urban sanitary authority. The 31st by-law provided that if the owner or person intending to construct any new building fail to give the required notices, or construct or cause to be constructed, any buildings contrary to the provisions of any of the said by-laws, he shall be liable for each offence to a penalty not exceeding 5*l.*; and he shall pay a further sum not exceeding 40*s.* for each day such buildings shall continue or remain contrary to the said provision. The appellant contended that he was not bound to give notice or send a plan of alterations he proposed to make in his house, as the alterations merely consisted in raising the old walls a storey higher, but he sent a plan, as he said, as a matter of courtesy. This plan was disapproved of, and notice of such disapproval was sent to the appellant, but he went on with the buildings. He was then summoned by the respondent, who was the surveyor for the urban sanitary authority, for neglecting to give notice and send plans as required by the by-laws. The magistrate found that the structure was in fact a comfortable, good-looking dwelling-house, which previously it was not. He also found, as a fact, that the old building was partly pulled down to the ground floor, and that the buildings erected on the site thereof formed a new building intended for occupation, and that they were not adapted for personal occupation previously, and that they were "a new building" within s. 159 of the Public Health Act, 1875. The appellant was convicted and fined 40*s.* and costs, and a further sum of 20*s.* for each day the work should continue or remain contrary to the provisions of the said by-laws:—Held, that the question whether the alterations constituted a "new building" was a question of fact for the magistrate to decide, and that he had decided as a fact that they did constitute a "new building," and that the penalty of 5*l.* was payable in addition to the penalty of 40*s.* a day, though the information laid against the appellant was only for not having given the notices and plans under the 27th by-law. James v. Wyrill, 51 L. T. 237; 48 J. P. 725. See also Reay v. Gateshead Corporation, infra, col. 409.

—— Construction of By-law.]—A local board made by-laws with a general heading, following the language of 21 & 22 Vict. c. 98, s. 34. The first by-law was also headed, "width and level of new streets." It provided for the width of new streets, dividing them into front streets, cross streets, and back streets; and went on, in a subsequent paragraph, to provide "that no dwelling-house shall be built immediately adjoining any back street without the special permission of the local board":—Held, that this provision applied only to new back streets, and not to a new building in an old back street. Shiel v. Sunderland Corporation, 6 H. & N. 796; 30 L. J., M. C. 215.

—— Wooden Building on Wheels.]—R. was charged under the W. Improvement Act with unlawfully erecting a new building without notice to the local board. The building was made of wood, thirty feet long and thirteen feet wide, and was brought along the street on wheels, and put at the corner of a new street. It had spouts and a down corner, had a supply of gas, and was used as a butcher's shop:—Held, that the justices were right in treating this as a new building, and subject to the ordinary requirements as to new buildings. Richardson v. Brown, 49 J. P. 661.

—— Ground enclosed by Hoardings for Advertisements.]—An advertising company surrounded a piece of ground, within a borough, with boarded walls or hoardings raised to a height of from thirteen to nineteen feet on three of its sides. These hoardings were stayed, fastened, and tied together, and strengthened on the inner side. The space inside was used for the preparation of wood for other hoardings:—Held, that this structure was not a new building within a by-law in force within the borough, made in pursuance of s. 157 of the Public Health Act, 1875. Slaughter v. Sunderland Corporation, 60 L. J., M. C. 91; 65 L. T. 250; 55 J. P. 519.

——New Boiler—No Roof.]—The substitution of a new boiler for an old one, which is sunk in the ground and has a casing of brickwork without any covering, is not a new building within s. 157 of the Public Health Act, 1875, or by-laws relating to new buildings. Gery v. Black Lion Brewery Co., 55 J. P. 711.

—— Addition to an existing Building.]—A local act, and by-laws passed therewith, provided that before "any addition to an existing building by raising any part thereof" was made, certain notices, &c., should be given to the surveyor of the urban sanitary authority. The respondent was summoned before justices for making an addition, contrary to the above act and by-laws, without giving the proper notices, he having pulled down a conservatory and erected in its stead a bedroom, at the same time raising one of the external walls to the height at which the top of the conservatory was previously situate. The justices dismissed the summons on the ground that, as the bedroom, when erected, did not occupy any greater space than was previously to its erection occupied by the conservatory, the respondent had not made an addition to an existing building:—Held, that the ground of the decision by the justices was erroneous in point of law, and that the case should accordingly be remitted to them to consider whether, under all the circumstances, there had been an addition to an existing building. Meadows v. Taylor, 59 L. J., M. C. 99; 24 Q. B. D. 717; 62 L. T. 658; 54 J. P. 757.

Buildings in "New Street."]—A country road, which had long been a public highway, and was therefore a "street" within the Public Health Act, 1875, s. 4, though there had been very few houses along its sides, was in course of becoming a street in the ordinary acceptation of the term, by the erection of houses on both sides, but those houses were scattered singly and in small groups at irregular distances, and did not form continuous lines. The urban authority made by-laws to regulate "new streets," and acting, as they considered, under those by-laws, disapproved the building plans of a lessee of a plot of ground on one side of the above road, on the ground that the proposed houses would contravene their building line, and be built within the line of the existing buildings on that side of the street. The buildings were nevertheless commenced in accordance with the disapproved plan, and the urban authority, relying upon their by-laws, called upon the lessee to shew cause why his buildings should not be removed:—Held, that the road was a "new street" within s. 157 of the act, and that the urban authority was not entitled under a by-law for regulating the width of the street to disapprove of and pull down houses in the course of erection in a "new street," on the ground that the building line was too near the roadway. Robinson v. Barton Local Board, 53 L. J., Ch. 226; 8 App. Cas. 798; 50 L. T. 57; 32 W. R. 249; 48 J. P. 276—H. L. (E.) ### b. General Regulations.

Regular Line of Street.]—Sect. 162 of the General Police and Improvement (Scotland) Act, 1862, provides that, "when any house or building, any part of which projects beyond the regular line of the street, or beyond the front of the house or building on either side thereof, has been taken down in order to be altered, or is to be rebuilt, the commissioners may require the same to be set backward to or toward the line of the street or the line of the adjoining houses or buildings in such manner as the commissioners may direct for the improvement of such street":—Held, that the words "regular line of the street" refer to a street that is built upon to the line of the buildings, and not to a line which has been drawn along the pavement to indicate that a part of the street has been dedicated to the public as a highway. Sect. 40 of the Galashiels Municipal Extension Police and Water Act, 1876, incorporates s. 91 of the General Turnpike (Scotland) Act, 1831, and therefore no building exceeding seven feet in height can be erected within twenty-five feet of the centre of any street within the borough without the consent of the corporation. Schulze v. Galashiels Corporation, [1895] A. C. 666; 11 R. 219; 60 J. P. 277—H. L. (Sc.)

Prescribed Line — Projection — Continuing Offence.]—By s. 156 of the Public Health Act, 1875, it is an offence to bring forward or build any addition to a house in a street beyond the front of the house or building on either side without the consent of the urban authority; and "any person offending against this enactment shall be liable to a penalty not exceeding 40*s.* for every day during which the offence is continued after written notice in this behalf from the urban authority":—Held, that an offence to which the penalty was applicable continued so long as the addition to the house was maintained after written notice from the urban authority, notwithstanding that the addition was completed before the notice was given. Marshall v. Smith (L. R. 8 C. P. 416) distinguished. Rumball v. Schmidt, 8 Q. B. D. 603; 46 L. T. 661; 30 W. R. 949; 46 J. P. 567.

—— "Bringing forward" House—Buildings on Land never before built upon.]—In the Public Health Act, 1875 (38 & 39 Vict. c. 55), s. 156—which enacts that it shall not be lawful in any urban district without the written consent of the urban authority to bring forward any house or building forming part of any street, or any part thereof, beyond the front wall of the house or building on either side thereof—the expression "house or building" does not include new buildings in course of erection upon land never before built upon. Williams v. Wallasey Local Board, 55 L. J., M. C. 133; 16 Q. B. D. 718; 55 L. T. 27; 34 W. R. 517; 50 J. P. 582.

—— Rebuilding—Board misleading Owners.]—The defendants being about to pull down a school and erect a new one, submitted plans to the local board. The board objected to the plans, as violating a by-law, which obliged a person laying out a new street to leave it of a certain width. This by-law was not applicable, as South Lane, on which the school fronted, was not a new street. The defendants disregarded the objection, commenced their works on the 5th of January, 1885, laid the foundations of the main wall towards South Lane on the 12th, and proceeded rapidly with the erection of it. On the 22nd of January, the board prescribed a building line which would prevent the erection of certain annexes between South Lane and the main wall, which annexes were shewn on the plans. The defendants had ground enough to allow of the annexes being erected elsewhere. The defendants proceeded with the annexes, and the board brought their action to restrain them from building beyond the line, and to compel them to pull down what they had built beyond it:—Held, that under s. 155, the commencement of the main building did not preclude the board from laying down a line which would prevent the erection of the annexes which had not then been commenced. Held, also, that as the notice given by the board, though ineffectual for the purpose of empowering them to pull down the erection under s. 158, gave the defendants to understand that the board objected on the ground that buildings according to the plan would make the street too narrow, the board had not done anything to induce the defendants to believe that they would not prescribe a building line, and that there was no equity to prevent the board from exercising their powers under s. 155, on the ground that they had misled the defendants. Newhaven Local Board v. Newhaven School Board, 30 Ch. D. 350; 53 L. T. 571; 34 W. R. 172—C. A.

—— "Taking down House to be Rebuilt or Altered"—Laches.]—In order that the power given by s. 155 of the Public Health Act, 1875, to an urban authority to prescribe the line of frontage where any house or building in the district "or the front thereof has been taken down in order to be rebuilt or altered" may arise, there must be a substantial taking down of the house or building or the front thereof. Where, therefore, the defendant, with the view of converting two low-pitched floors into one lofty room, removed the front wall of the ground and first floors, leaving the basement untouched and supporting the top (second) floor in the state in which it was (and which it was intended to leave as it was) by means of supports placed beneath: —Held, that the power to prescribe the line of frontage had not arisen. Att.-Gen. v. Hatch, 62 L. J., Ch. 857; [1893] 3 Ch. 36; 2 R. 533; 69 L. T. 469; 57 J. P. 825—C. A.

Where the building-line is prescribed after the building has been partially erected on the old site, it is too late for the urban authority to interfere. Ib.

—— "Front Main Wall of House"—House "on either side."]—By s. 3 of the Public Health (Buildings in Streets) Act, 1888, it is enacted that "it shall not be lawful in any urban district, without the written consent of the urban authority, to erect or bring forward any house or building in any street, or any part of such house or building, beyond the front main wall of the house or building on either side thereof in the same street." The respondent, on the 30th April, 1889, began to erect, at the distance of six feet from the edge of B. Street, a building, the plans for which had not been approved by the local board. Before that date plans had been approved by the board for the erection of a house by B. on a site at the distance of 300 yards from the respondent's site on the same side, but at the distance of twelve feet from the edge, of B. Street. On the 30th April, 1889, the front main wall of B.'s building was four inches above the ground, but below the level of the street, and foundations for other walls had also been laid: —Held, that the respondents had not committed an offence against the above section. Ravensthorpe Local Board v. Hinchcliffe, 59 L. J., M. C. 19; 24 Q. B. D. 168; 61 L. T. 780; 54 J. P. 421.

In considering which is the "front main wall" of a house or building for the purposes of s. 3 of the Public Health (Buildings in Streets) Act, 1888, and whether such house or building is "on either side of" or "in the same street" as a house or building in course of erection, for the purposes of the same section, all the circumstances of the case must be taken into consideration. The building must be looked at as a whole; its character, its position, its distance from the house or building which is being erected or brought forward in alleged contravention of s. 3, must be considered; a particular wing or other projection must not be selected, the front of which is to be treated as the "front main wall" that is to give the governing line, nor are two buildings necessarily "in the same street" for the purposes of the section because one faces on the same road or street, or a continuation of the same road or street, as the other. Att.-Gen. v. Edwards, [1891] 1 Ch. 194; 63 L. T. 639.

In November, 1893, T. built a house near to, but not abutting, on the west side of Westbourne Grove (part of Ormesby Road), 240 yards north of a house on the west side erected in 1886. The house fronted towards the south. In February, 1894, T. bought some land, seventy feet deep, along the west side of Ormesby Road, to the north of his house, with the object of erecting cottages upon it. On the east side of Ormesby Road a number of houses had been built close up to the road. The building plans shewed that the cottages would be somewhat nearer Ormesby Road than T.'s house was. The urban authority decided that the cottages must be in line with T.'s house under s. 3 of the Public Health (Buildings in Streets) Act, 1888. There was no continuous line of buildings where it was proposed to build the cottages:—Held, that the cottages need not be in a line with T.'s house, as, in the above circumstances, there will be no erection of a "house or building beyond the front main wall of the house or building on either side thereof in the same street." Reg. v. Ormesby Local Board, 43 W. R. 96.

—— Building "on either side" in the same Street.]—In 1887, R., the owner of a plot of ground on an estate laid out for building purposes, abutting on a new street, built two semi-detached villas on his property, leaving a space of sixty-two feet between their front wall and the road. In 1889, R. acquired the adjoining plot on the east side, and built other two villas at the same distance back from the road as the first. In 1894, L., who had in 1887 acquired the plot adjoining R.'s plot on the west side, proposed to erect a house on his property with a clear space of only twenty-one feet between the house and the road. The local authority considered that the proposed new house was a building in a street "beyond the front main wall of the house or building on either side thereof in the same street," within the meaning of s. 3 of the Public Health (Buildings in Streets) Act, 1888, and in the exercise of the discretion conferred upon them by that section refused to admit the plans. Upon a rule nisi for a mandamus to compel the local authority to admit the plans:—Held, that R.'s villas, although they were buildings "on either side" of the proposed new building, were not buildings "in the same street," within the meaning of s. 3. Reg. v. Fulwood Local Board, 72 L. T. 592; 59 J. P. 311.

—— House on either side—Question of Fact.]—At the junction of O. and C. Roads a house was erected abutting on the footpath of C. Road. The main entrance of the house was in O. Road. At a distance of sixty-four feet from the back wall of the premises attached to the house in C. Road was situate a row of eleven small cottages, set back eight feet from C. Road. The justices, on an information against the appellant, the owner of the house, under the Public Health (Buildings in Streets) Act, 1888, s. 3, held that the house in question was both in O. and C. Roads, that the cottages were buildings on one side of the house within the meaning of the section, and convicted the appellant:—Held, that it was a question of fact for the justices whether the house in question was or was not both in O. and C. Roads, and also whether the cottages were sufficiently near to the house to be on one side thereof within the meaning of the section, and that the conviction must be affirmed. Warren v. Mustard, 61 L. J., M. C. 18; 66 L. T. 26; 56 J. P. 502.

—— Meaning of either Side.]—Where s. 3 of the Public Health (Buildings in Streets) Act, 1888, prohibits a house being brought forward beyond the front main wall of the house or building on either side thereof, this includes the case of buildings being only on one side thereof. Leyton Local Board v. Causton, 57 J. P. 135.

—— When Building not Restrainable.]—A corporation had by a private act, with which the Towns Improvement Clauses Act, 1847, was mainly incorporated, power in cases where the width of a street was less than forty feet to prescribe the line within which any house to be built or rebuilt should be erected, on compensating the owner if his house was set back. Land having been conveyed to a vicar for building a church, he first erected a temporary wooden structure. After some years he pulled it down and began to build a permanent church, still on the land conveyed. The church so to be erected would abut upon a street averaging thirty-two feet in width. The corporation prescribed a line within which the vicar should build, but the formal prescription was not made until some weeks after the foundations were laid. The proposed church would at one corner abut six feet beyond the prescribed line. There was no evidence to shew that land could not be taken from the other side of the street, if necessary, to widen it:—Held, that a church was a house within the meaning of the acts, and that the vicar was the owner to whom compensation would be paid, but that as the corporation had in the opinion of the court unreasonably exercised their strict power, and had prescribed the boundary line after the building was begun, the court would not restrain the vicar from continuing his building. Folkestone Corporation v. Woodward, 42 L. J., Ch. 782; L. R. 15 Eq. 159; 27 L. T. 574; 21 W. R. 97.

—— House forming Part of a Street.]—Whether a house or building forms part of a street within the meaning of the 24 & 25 Vict. c. 61, s. 28, which enacts that it shall not be lawful to bring forward any house or building forming part of any street beyond the front wall of the house or building on either side thereof without the consent of the local board, is a question of fact. Reg. v. Fullford, L. & C. 403; 33 L. J., M. C. 122; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 522; 10 L. T. 346; 12 W. R. 715; 9 Cox, C. C. 453.

Houses form part of a street within the meaning of the act when they are so contiguous as substantially to form a continuous row. Ib.

—— Projection—Where no Obstruction to Traffic.]—A local act for the promotion of health and the regulation of buildings in a borough, enacted after making various provisions for the prevention of nuisances upon the pavements of streets, that no projection should be made in front of any building over or upon the pavement:—Held, that this enactment did not apply to projections from the front of a building which were too high up to interfere with free passage along the footpath. Goldstraw v. Duckworth, 49 L. J., M. C. 73; 5 Q. B. D. 275; 42 L. T. 440; 28 W. R. 504; 44 J. P. 410.

—— Power to order Removal.]—By a local act owners of buildings within the district were required, within fourteen days after receiving notice in writing from the local authority, to remove all signs or other projections affixed to their buildings which, in the judgment of the local authority, should be considered annoying or dangerous to the public passage along the streets:—Held, that the local authority were not obliged to act as a court, and give the owner of a building an opportunity of being heard before they passed a resolution to send him notice to remove a sign affixed to his building; his proper course, if he objected to their order, was to apply to them to allow him to be heard and lay his objections before them. Att.-Gen. v. Hooper, 63 L. J., Ch. 18; [1893] 3 Ch. 483; 8 R. 535; 69 L. T. 340; 57 J. P. 564.

Open Space—Addition to old Dwelling-house.]—The proprietor of a house erected before the constitution of the district, and used for an hotel, having a yard with coach-house and stables in the rear, for the purpose of making an addition to the hotel, pulled down the coach-house and stables below the ground floor, and erected upon the site a building three storeys high; the only means of access to the upper chambers being up the staircase of the old house, and through a passage into the new building. On an information against the proprietor for an offence against the by-law of the local board, made under 21 & 22 Vict. c. 98, s. 34, in not leaving an open space equal to one-third of the area of the ground on which the dwelling-house stood, the justices found that the building erected in the yard being a new building built up to, and adjoining the old building, must either be considered with the old building as one house, or that the old house and new building must be considered as two erections, and that both old and new buildings must be considered in reckoning the ground upon which the building stood, and convicted him of a breach of the by-law:—Held, that the conviction could not be sustained, because the new erection was not a new dwelling-house, but merely an addition to an old dwelling-house, or because the justices had not found that it was a new dwelling-house, which was essential to the validity of the conviction. Shiel v. Sunderland Corporation, 6 H. & N. 796; 30 L. J., M. C. 215.

Thickness of Walls.]—A local board of health made a by-law under 11 & 12 Vict. c. 63, s. 115, and 21 & 22 Vict. c. 98, s. 34, as to the structure of new buildings, requiring the party-wall of a house of more than one storey to be built of the thickness of nine inches, subject to a penalty, and by another by-law a penalty was imposed of forty shillings, de die in diem, in case of a continuing offence under other by-laws after written notice by the board to the offender. A person built a house of more than one storey with a party-wall of a thickness of four and a half inches, and sold and disposed of the house and did nothing more to it. Five months afterwards he was fined under the former by-law. Subsequently, notice having been given to him to make the walls of the requisite thickness, he was fined again under the latter by-law in a continuing penalty for seven days of five shillings a day:—Held, that the latter by-law did not apply to an offence of this description, which was complete before the first conviction, and that the latter conviction was therefore bad. Marshall v. Smith, 42 L. J., M. C. 108; L. R. 8 C. P. 416; 28 L. T. 538.

By 3 & 4 Vict. c. 85, s. 6, "all partitions between any chimney or flue . . . shall be of brick or stone, and at least equal to half a brick in thickness. A subsequent local statute enacted that "the chimneys and flues of every new building shall be constructed in such mode and of such materials and dimensions as shall from time to time be determined or approved by the corporation," and then, if no direction should be given by the corporation, prescribed certain directions different from those contained in 3 & 4 Vict. c. 85, s. 6. A master builder built a chimney not in accordance with the provisions of 3 & 4 Vict. c. 85, s. 6, and he was convicted before justices of an offence against that act:—Held, that the local statute had not repealed 3 & 4 Vict. c. 85, s. 6, and that the conviction was right. Hill v. Hall, 45 L. J., M. C. 153; 1 Ex. D. 411; 35 L. T. 860.

—— Party Liable.]—B. contracted with W., the owner of land, to erect seventy-six houses thereon for a certain price and on certain terms, and lodged plans with the urban sanitary authority. After erecting fifty-nine houses B. agreed on 1st September with C., that C. should erect the rest of the houses at a certain price, and C., in erecting the houses, made the walls insufficient, and not in compliance with the by-law of the urban sanitary authority, but C.'s violation of the by-law was after 1st September, when B. had ceased to have anything to do with the buildings:—Held, that B. was not "the person erecting the buildings" which C. was building, and, therefore, not liable under the by-law, which imposed a penalty for violation of rules as to thickness of walls. Brown v. Edmonton Local Board, 45 J. P. 553.

Walls of "Hard and Incombustible Material"—Galvanised Iron Building—Wooden Framework—By-laws.]—Where a by-law of a local sanitary authority provides that the walls of new buildings shall be composed only of "hard and incombustible material," such by-law applies to walls composed of wooden posts attached to a wooden frame, covered on the outside by a skin of galvanised iron. Badley v. Cuckfield District Council, 64 L. J., Q. B. 571; 15 R. 461; 72 L. T. 775; 43 W. R. 663; 59 J. P. 582.

Height of Floor—By-law—Deviation from Plan.]—A by-law of a sanitary authority, made under s. 157 of the Public Health Act, 1875, required that a plan shewing the dimensions of the several parts of any proposed building should be sent to, and approved by, the sanitary authority before the work of building was commenced. The respondent sent in plans of a proposed building, which were approved by the sanitary authority. In the course of building he deviated from the plans sent in by altering the height of the floors of the building:—Held, that the respondent had committed a breach of the by-law. James v. Master, [1893] 1 Q. B. 355; 5 R. 112; 67 L. T. 855; 41 W. R. 174; 57 J. P. 167.

Open Spaces—Old Buildings.]—A local board of health made a by-law, that wherever any open space had been left belonging to any building, such space should never afterwards be built upon without the consent of, &c., and without leaving an open space belonging to such building of a specified size and dimensions:—Held, that if the by-law applied to open spaces belonging to old buildings it was bad, as exceeding the powers conferred by 21 & 22 Vict. c. 98, s. 34. Tucker v. Rees, 7 Jur. (N.S.) 629.

—— Between opposite Properties—How Calculated.]—By a by-law made by commissioners, under 21 & 22 Vict. c. 98, it was provided that every building to be erected and used as a dwelling-house shall, during such use, have in the rear or at the side thereof an open space exclusively belonging thereto, to the extent of at least 150 square feet, free from any erection thereon above the level of the ground, other than a privy; but where there is a water-closet and no other privy, an open space of not less than 100 feet may be allowed, and the distance across such open space between every such building and the opposite property at the rear or side, exclusive of any common passage, shall be ten feet at least; if such building be two storeys in height above the level of such open space, the distance across shall be fifteen feet; if such building be three storeys, it shall be twenty feet; if more than three storeys, twenty-five feet:—Held, that the space required to be left between the building to be erected and the opposite property must be co-extensive with the line of demarcation between such building and such opposite property, and that at no point should a less distance than that prescribed by the by-law intervene between them, exclusive of any common passage. Anderton v. Rigby, 13 C. B. (N.S.) 603; 32 L. J., M. C. 137; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 1058.

—— Buildings not in a Street.]—By a local improvement act, "it shall not be lawful to build within the borough any houses with their fronts facing each other, which shall be separated from each other by a space of less than twenty-four feet wide":—Held, that this did not apply to the erection of buildings not in a street, but that the prohibition affected only the building in a street of two or more houses at the same time, with their fronts facing each other, within the prescribed distance. Reg. v. Sidebotham, Bell, C. C. 171; 28 L. J., M. C. 189; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 1083; 7 W. R. 450; 8 Cox, C. C. 206.

—— Distance across to opposite Property.]—The L. improvement commissioners made a by-law that every person erecting a new building for a dwelling-house should provide in the rear an open space exclusively belonging thereto, to the extent of at least 150 square feet, and should cause the distance across such open space between every such building and the opposite property at the rear to be at least twenty feet. P. erected a new building to be used as a dwelling-house; in the rear there was a space exclusively belonging thereto of 700 square feet; the distance across such open space to the opposite houses was fifty-two feet; but as P.'s land was bounded by a public street, the distance from the houses of P. to the edge of the street was only eight feet:—Held, that on the true construction of the by-law the public street was the opposite property, and that P. had committed a breach of the by-law. Jones v. Parry, 57 L. T. 492; 52 J. P. 69.

Suitableness of Building to locality—Power to disapprove.]—Plans of an intended new dwelling-house were submitted to the respondents under s. 68 of the Newcastle-upon-Tyne Improvement Act, 1870. The plans did not disclose the breach of any of the statutory provisions or by-laws of the respondents. The respondents, however, disapproved of the intended building on the ground that a house of the nature and character intended to be erected would be unsuitable to the locality, and would tend to depreciate the character of the neighbouring property:—Held, that s. 69 did not give the respondents an absolute discretionary power of approval or disapproval, and that under the circumstances they were bound to approve of the intended new building. Reg. v. Newcastle-on-Tyne Corporation, 60 L. T. 963; 53 J. P. 788.

Wooden Fence with Covering—Liability of Owner.]—B., being owner of waste ground in an urban district, put up a wooden fence along the boundary without floor or roof, and let the place to R., but forbade R. to affix anything to the structure. R., without B.'s knowledge, stretched canvas across the top of the fence, and left the premises. B. was then charged with erecting a wooden building contrary to the by-laws:—Held, that the justices were wrong in convicting B., the mere fact of being owner shewing no offence. Bennett v. Skegness Local Board, 54 J. P. 469.

Back Yard—Contravention of Plan.]—Sect. 99 of the Kingston-upon-Hull Improvement Act of 1854, enacts that every house to be thereafter constructed on vacant ground (except corner houses, &c.), shall have a back yard, or other vacant ground and area, of not less than eight feet, extending from the main building for the whole length of such building; and by s. 101, a plan shall be furnished to the local board of health by persons intending to build, shewing the particulars required by that act; and the building shall not be commenced until the local board approve the plan. A builder submitted to the local board of health of the borough of Kingston-upon-Hull a plan of four new houses (not corner houses), having vacant ground at the side, but not at the back. The local board disapproved the plan, as not complying with s. 99, but the party commenced to build notwithstanding:—Held, that whether s. 99 required the vacant space to be at the back or not, the party was rightly convicted of an offence against s. 101. Pearson v. Kingston-upon-Hull Local Board, 3 H. & C. 921; 35 L. J., M. C. 36; 13 L. T. 180.

Building without Consent of Board.]—Sect. 97 enacts, that any building, after the commencement of the act, built, shall not, without the previous consent of the local board, be used as a dwelling-house, except only during such time as there is adjoining or belonging thereto, or occupied therewith, either a street or a clear open space in and to the full extent of the front thereof, and of not less than twenty feet in width:—Held, that a party had committed an offence under this section in building, and causing to be used without the consent of the local board, a dwelling-house with an open space in front less than twenty feet in width. Ib.

Sect. 103 enacts, that if any sewer, drain, privy, cesspool, ashpit, building, or other work be made or suffered to continue contrary to any of the provisions of this act . . . every person so offending shall for every such offence forfeit a sum not exceeding 5*l.*, and for every day after the first during which the offence continues, a sum not exceeding 10*s.*:—Held (by reference to the sections preceding), that the word "building" is not restricted to a building of similar description with the class of buildings previously enumerated in the section, but includes a dwelling-house; and that the commencing a building within s. 101 is the making a building within s. 103. Ib.

Held, also, that the user of a dwelling-house, contrary to s. 97, is not the making or suffering it to continue contrary to the act, within s. 103. Ib.

The owners of a house and area situate in and fronting a street, altered the front of the house by throwing out bay windows projecting beyond the street line of frontage, but not beyond the limits of the area. After the completion of the alterations, the local authority threatened them with summary proceedings before the justices for the recovery of penalties under the Public Health Act, 1875, on the ground that they had set forward their building without the written consent of the local authority under s. 156. The owners then moved ex parte for an injunction to restrain the local authority from taking these proceedings, alleging that as the alterations had been made over their own property, the local authority, in threatening proceedings, were acting ultra vires; that they having had notice of the intention of the owners to make the alterations, were bound by acquiescence; and that the justices had no jurisdiction, as the local authority had not made their complaint within six months after the alleged offence, as required by s. 252; the injunction was refused. Kerr v. Preston Corporation, 46 L. J., Ch. 409; 6 Ch. D. 463; 25 W. R. 264.

—— Consent, how given.]—A board having statutory power to consent in writing to a particular act is not bound by tacit acquiescence. Ib.

Building Plans—Approval of—Mandamus.]—A rural district council invested with the powers of an urban sanitary authority to make by-laws respecting the sewerage of new streets, the drainage of new buildings and the depositing of plans for the same under s. 157 of the Public Health Act, 1875, are not entitled to reject the plans of an owner of a proposed building estate, properly deposited with them, and not contravening any of their by-laws, solely on the ground that the plans do not disclose a complete system of sewerage, including outfall, for the building estate; and a mandamus will issue to the council to enforce the passing of the plans if their approval is withheld on that ground. Reg. v. Tynemouth District Council, 65 L. J., Q. B. 545; [1896]

2 Q. B. 451; 75 L. T. 86; 60 J. P. 804—C. A. Affirming 44 W. R. 646.

No action will lie against a local authority for a mandamus compelling them to approve building plans submitted to them in pursuance of the by-laws in force in their district, which plans the authority in the bonâ fide exercise of their powers have already disapproved of, on the ground that they are not in conformity with the by-laws. Smith v. Chorley District Council, 66 L. J., Q. B. 427; [1897] 1 Q. B. 678; 76 L. T. 637; 45 W. R. 417; 61 J. P. 340—C. A.

c. Right to Pull Down.

Power of Local Board—Notice to Building Owner.]—The provisions of s. 158 of the Public Health Act, 1875 (38 & 39 Vict. c. 55), and of the by-laws of a local board giving them power to pull down or remove any work executed without the approval or after the disapproval of the local board, and which is in any respect not in conformity with any by-law of the local board, do not authorise them to pull down a building without giving notice of their intention so to do to the owner, in order that he may have an opportunity of shewing cause why the building should not be pulled down. Cooper v. Wandsworth Board of Works (14 C. B. (N.S.) 180), and Masters v. Pontypool Local Board (9 Ch. D. 677), approved. Hopkins v. Smethwick Local Board, 59 L. J., Q. B. 250; 24 Q. B. D. 712; 62 L. T. 783; 38 W. R. 499; 54 J. P. 693—C. A.

For Infringement of By-laws.]—On the infringement of by-laws made by an urban sanitary authority, whether as to structural requirements or the depositing of plans, respecting the building of houses in a new street, they are empowered under s. 34 of the Local Government Act of 1858, to pull down the houses. Baker v. Portsmouth Corporation, 47 L. J., Ex. 223; 3 Ex. D. 157; 37 L. T. 822; 26 W. R. 303—C. A.

A local board of health made by-laws, under the Local Government Act, 1858 (21 & 22 Vict. c. 98), s. 34, as follows: "6th. Every person intending to erect any new building shall give fourteen days' notice, to be delivered to the board's surveyor, or left at his house, with detail plans and sections, and any person who shall erect any new building without delivering such notice, and plans and sections, or without having the plans, &c., approved by the board, shall be liable to a penalty of 40*s*." By by-law 36, the board might cause to be altered or pulled down any work begun or done in contravention of the by-laws:—Held, that the 6th by-law was within the powers conferred by s. 34, and was reasonable and therefore valid. Hall v. Nixon, 44 L. J., M. C. 51; L. R. 10 Q. B. 152; 32 L. T. 87; 23 W. R. 612.

"Width" in s. 157 of Public Health Act, 1875, and the by-laws under it, means width of roadway and not width between houses on each side of the street, so that an urban authority is not entitled under the above section and by-laws to disapprove of and pull down houses in the course of erection in a new street on the ground that the building was too near the pathway. Robinson v. Barton Local Board, 53 L. J., Ch. 226; 8 App. Cas. 798; 50 L. T. 57; 32 W. R. 249; 48 J. P. 276—H. L. (E.)

—— Part of Building.]—A by-law of the defendants provided that fifteen square feet of air space should be left open in the rear of any new building. The plaintiff built in contravention of this by-law:—Held, that the defendants might pull down that part of the building that infringed the by-law in any way they pleased consistently with safety, but not in a dangerous way; that where there had been excess in pulling down the building the defendants were not liable unless the damage caused thereby was appreciable. Jagger v. Doncaster Sanitary Authority, 54 J. P. 438.

For not giving Notice or depositing Plans.]—By the Local Government Act, 1858 (21 & 22 Vict. c. 28), s. 34, local boards have power to make by-laws with respect to—first, the level, width and construction of new streets; second, the structure of the walls of new buildings; third, the sufficiency of space about buildings; fourth, the drainage, &c., of buildings. And they may further provide for the observance of the same by enacting therein such provisions as they think necessary, as to the giving of notices, as to the deposit of plans and sections by persons intending to lay out streets or to construct buildings, as to inspection by the local board, and as to the power of the local board to remove, alter or pull down buildings:—Held, that the power to pull down buildings for which the local boards might make provision was not confined to cases of contravention of by-laws relating to structure, but might be extended to cases of contravention of by-laws relating to the giving of notices, the deposit of plans, &c. Baker v. Portsmouth Corporation, 47 L. J., Ex. 223; 3 Ex. D. 157; 37 L. T. 822; 26 W. R. 303—C. A.

Notice and Deposit of Plans.]—If a person gives a notice of his intention to build, and leaves with the local board plans and sections, he may at once commence the building, subject to the right of its being altered or pulled down, if not in conformity with the by-laws of the board. Hattersley v. Barr, 4 H. & C. 523; 12 Jur. (N.S.) 894; 14 L. T. 565; 14 W. R. 864.

—— Approval of Plan.]—The owner of a house after having, in accordance with a by-law of the local government board, left, on the 16th of October, a plan of an intended new building, the local board passed a resolution that the plan was approved of, and that he should be offered 40*l*. for certain land of his thrown into the street. He refused to accept the 40*l*., but proceeded with his works, and by the 26th of October had pulled down the front wall of his house. On the 27th of October the board passed a resolution abandoning the terms before offered, and requiring him to set his frontage further back. This notice was given under s. 155 of the Public Health Act, 1875, as on the front of a house having been pulled down. On the 27th of November the owner of the house proceeded with his building, and on the 21st of December he was served with notice to pull down his new building:—Held, that the local board having approved of a plan, and having allowed a house-owner to proceed and pull down the front wall of his house, could not afterwards avail itself of the powers acquired when the front of a house has been taken down. Masters v. Ponty-

pool Local Board, 47 L. J., Ch. 797; 9 Ch. D. 677.

—— Time for Disapproval.]—Held, that where a local board has not, during the month prescribed by the Public Health Act, s. 158, signified its disapproval of plans laid before it, it cannot afterwards object to the building according to the plan. Ib.

—— Consent to Plans—Objection afterwards to Width of Street.]—T., having land within the area of a local board upon which he proposed to build six houses, sent a notice and plan shewing what he intended to do, and where the new street of ten yards wide was to be. The board sanctioned the houses, and they were built. Some years afterwards T. was summoned for disobeying the by-law in not leaving a space of thirty feet wide for the street. The fact was, that his land extended only nine feet in front of the houses, but this was not known to the board till afterwards. T. was convicted:—Held, that the conviction was wrong, and that the local board ought to have satisfied themselves before sanctioning the plans that T. had land of sufficient width to make the proposed new street when the houses were completed. Thompson v. Failsworth Local Board, 46 J. P. 21.

—— Injunction to Prevent Interference.]—An owner of a factory being desirous of rebuilding his premises, submitted the plans to a committee, to whom the town council, also the local board of health, delegated their powers, and the plans having been approved, pulled down the factory, and proceeded to rebuild it according to such plans. The town council, under the 21 & 22 Vict. c. 98, s. 35, relating to buildings to be erected, having required him to set back his premises, the court restrained them by injunction from interfering with the erection of the factory according to the approved plans. Slee v. Bradford Corporation, 4 Giff. 262; 1 N. R. 386; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 815; 8 L. T. 491.

—— New or Old Buildings.]—The 21 & 22 Vict. c. 98, s. 34, empowers a town council, being a local board, to make a by-law requiring to be given to them a notice, plan, &c., of a new building; and s. 25 applies only to buildings that have been taken down "without any previous approval of a plan, &c., for their re-erection." Ib.

The 21 & 22 Vict. c. 98, s. 34, does not authorise the local board to make a by-law so as to affect premises erected prior to 1853, when the district was formed. Burgess v. Peacock, 16 C. B. (N.S.) 624; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 803; 10 L. T. 617.

—— Temporary Erections.]—Under a local act incorporating the provisions of the Public Health Acts, 1848 and 1858, by-laws were made, by which it was provided that "every person who shall intend to erect any new building shall give a week's notice to the town-surveyor of such intention, by writing delivered to the surveyor or left at his office, and shall at the same time leave at the office detail plans and sections of every floor of such intended new building"; and a penalty not exceeding 5*l.* is imposed for non-compliance with this requirement. F. without giving such notice or delivering any plans, erected structures which from their description could not be intended for residential purposes, and which were found by the justices to have been erected for a temporary purpose only, and to have been intended to be pulled down by F. when that purpose was answered:—Held, that a conviction under the by-laws could not be sustained, inasmuch as such by-laws, if intended to apply to such structures, were unreasonable and bad. Fielding v. Rhyl Improvement Commissioners, 3 C. P. D. 272; 38 L. T. 223; 26 W. R. 881.

Right of Owner to shew Cause.]—A local board cannot, under s. 158 of the Public Health Act, 1875, pull down a building without giving the owner an opportunity of shewing cause why it should not be pulled down. Masters v. Pontypool Local Board, 47 L. J., Ch. 797; 9 Ch. D. 677.

Dangerous Buildings—Effect of Surveyor's Certificate.]—A local act enacted that "if the surveyor of the city, or, in his absence, any other duly qualified surveyor, shall certify in writing that there is imminent danger from any building, the corporation" of the city "shall and may, without any presentment, notice or other formality, cause the same to be taken down either wholly or in part, or to be repaired or secured in such manner as the corporation shall think requisite." It also enacted that if any summons, demand or notice or other such document under the act, "require authentication by the corporation, the signature of the town-clerk thereto shall be a sufficient authentication":—Held, that the certificate of the surveyor was conclusive as to whether danger was imminent, and that the corporation was bound to act upon it; secondly, that by force of the statutory provisions, the directions by the town-clerk to the surveyor must be deemed the act of the corporation, which had ratified his proceedings; and that the certificate of the surveyor sufficiently described two houses having internal communication as "a building, No. 95, Market Street." Cheetham v. Manchester Corporation, 44 L. J., C. P. 139; L. R. 10 C. P. 249; 32 L. T. 28.

Held, also, that the acts of the surveyor, authenticated by the town-clerk, were the acts of the corporation; or that, at all events, they were ratified and adopted by them so as to justify what was done under the certificate. Ib.

The certificate and notice referred generally to the "building," No. 95, Market Street; the premises dealt with consisted, besides No. 95, Market Street, of other premises adjoining thereto, being No. 2, Palace Street, for which the plaintiff was separately rated, but connected therewith by internal communications, and occupied therewith by him as one set of business premises:—Held, that the description in the certificate and notice was sufficient to cover both sets of premises. Ib.

Demolition when Insanitary — Service of Notice on Owner.]—The "owner" of an insanitary dwelling to be served with notice under s. 32 of the Housing of the Working Classes Act, 1890, is the person defined by s. 29 of the same act. Osborne v. Skinners' Co., 60 L. J., M. C. 156; 39 W. R. 715.

Where the person receiving the rents and profits is a leaseholder with less than twenty-one years of his lease to run, he is not the person to be served, notwithstanding that s. 32 and schedules 3 and 4 of the same act refer to the Public Health Act, 1875, and the Nuisances Removal Act, 1854, for purposes of procedure, and those acts regard the receiver of the rents and profits as owner. Ib.

—— Compensation—Basis of Arbitration.]—By a presentment of the grand jury, at the Liverpool city sessions, under the provisions of the Liverpool Sanitary Amendment Act, 1864, certain houses were condemned as unfit for human habitation. In the proceedings which followed, to determine the amount of compensation to be paid to the owner, the arbitrator made his award on the basis of the value of the site and materials of the houses only:—Held, that the houses ought to have been valued as they stood before demolition, and without reference to the fact of their approaching demolition, as premises which might have been let; and that their value was unaffected by the presentment of the grand jury. Gough v. Liverpool Corporation, 64 L. T. 596; 55 J. P. 648. Varied, 65 L. T. 512; 55 J. P. 789—C. A.

—— Award.]—If an arbitrator appointed under the Liverpool Sanitary Amendment Acts, 1864 and 1869, assesses on correct principles, the amount of compensation should be left to his discretion. Gough v. Liverpool Corporation, 56 J. P. 357—C. A.

—— Several Houses—One Report and one Order.]—A medical officer of health reported, under the Artizans' and Labourers' Dwellings Act, 1868 (31 & 32 Vict. c. 130), ss. 5 and 6, that the premises in Marsh's Court, in the parish of St. George the Martyr, Nos. 1 to 12 and 13, were in a condition or state injurious to health, so as to be unfit for human habitation; and upon this report the surveyor reported that he had surveyed the premises, and was of opinion that the causes of the evil were structural defects in the premises, and that such defects could not be remedied by structural alterations or improvements, or otherwise, but such premises ought to be demolished. The whole of the premises belonged to one party. The vestry subsequently made an order that the premises should be totally demolished:—Held, first, that it was not necessary that there should be a report and an order in respect to each house, but that one report and one order were, under the circumstances, sufficient. Flight v. St. George the Martyr, 24 L. T. 24.

—— Report of Surveyor.]—Held, secondly, that as the report of the surveyor stated that the structural defects could not be remedied, but that the premises ought to be demolished, it was unnecessary to specify in detail in what the structural defects consisted. Ib.

d. By-Laws ultra vires.

A by-law made by a local board of health, that no dwelling-house should be erected without having at the rear, or side, a sufficient roadway for the purpose of affording efficient means of access to the privy or ashpit belonging to the house, is bad, as beyond the jurisdiction conferred by the act. Waite v. Garston Local Board, 37 L. J., M. C. 19; L. R. 3 Q. B. 5; 17 L. T. 201; 16 W. R. 78.

Lessees had for ninety-nine years a piece of land within the jurisdiction of a local board. The land leased was higher than the street, and was bounded from the street by a wall. They erected a chapel on the land, and in order to approach the chapel steps were placed on their land. The chapel was erected before the local board was in existence, but the steps and boundary wall were completed afterwards. After a resolution of the board and a notice to the lessees, the local board removed the steps and boundary wall and refused compensation:—Held, that the local board was not justified, under 21 & 22 Vict. c. 98, and if any by-law authorised the act such by-law would be unreasonable. Brown v. Holyhead Local Board, 1 H. & C. 601; 32 L. J., Ex. 25; 7 L. T. 332; 11 W. R. 71.

A by-law by a local board of health, imposing continuing penalties on any person who shall construct any works, or do, or omit to do, any act, or to comply with any requirements of the board, or shall make any alteration or deviation in any plan approved by the board, whether in new or existing buildings contrary to the provisions therein contained, or shall do any act, matter, or thing contrary to the by-laws made under the authority of 21 & 22 Vict. c. 98, s. 34, or shall omit, neglect, or fail to perform any of the works, matters, or things required by such by-laws, and empowering the board to remove, alter, pull down, or otherwise deal with such work as the case may require, is invalid, as exceeding the authority given by the 21 & 22 Vict. c. 98. Young v. Edwards, 33 L. J., M. C. 227; 11 L. T. 424.

Requiring a Month's Notice.]—A by-law under 21 & 22 Vict. c. 98, requiring a month's notice before proceeding to build, is bad. Hattersley v. Barr, 4 H. & C. 523; 12 Jur. (N.S.) 894; 14 L. T. 565; 14 W. R. 864.

Erection before Kerb put in.]—By s. 157 of the Public Health Act, 1875, every urban authority is empowered to make by-laws "with respect to the level, width and construction of new streets":—Held, that the section did not empower the making of a by-law that "no person shall commence the erection of a building in a new street unless and until the kerb of each footpath therein shall have been put in at such level as may be fixed or approved by the urban sanitary authority." Rudland v. Sunderland Corporation, 52 L. T. 617; 33 W. R. 164; 49 J. P. 359.

Plans—Power to Retain.]—It is reasonable for an urban sanitary authority to make a by-law and regulations enabling it to retain the plans of intended buildings deposited under the Public Health Act, 1875, although such plans be disapproved of and rejected. Gooding v. Ealing Local Board, 1 Cab. & E. 359.

—— Power to approve or disapprove.]—A by-law giving power to a corporation to approve or disapprove of plans of proposed new buildings is not unreasonable where by the special legislation under which it is made power to appeal to quarter sessions from the decision of the corporation is given to the building owner. Cook v. Hainsworth, 65 L. J., M. C. 190; [1896] 2 Q. B. 85; 75 L. T. 51; 44 W. R. 541; 60 J. P. 439.

—— No Approval of—Continuing Penalty—Limitation of Time for Proceedings.]—On the 11th December, 1885, an information was preferred against the appellant for that he, between the 6th March, 1885, and October, 1885, had commenced the execution of works, the plans of which were not in conformity with the by-laws, and had erected such works notwithstanding the disapproval of the urban sanitary authority, and permitted the same to continue, notwithstanding written notice of such contravention of the by-laws. By by-law 5, s. 9, "If the person intending to construct new houses shall construct, or cause to be constructed, any works, or do any act, or omit to do any act, or comply with any requirements of the local board, contrary to the provisions herein contained, he shall be liable for each offence to a penalty not exceeding 5*l.*, and he shall pay a further sum not exceeding 40*s.* for each and every day during which such works shall continue or remain contrary to the said provisions." The justices convicted the appellant of the offence, and ordered him to pay the penalty of 5*l.* and costs, and also to pay a further sum of 5*s.* per day from the 12th of October, 1885, being the day on which the respondent first served a notice of objection, to the 11th December, 1885, being the day on which the said information was laid:—Held, that the conviction could not be sustained, and that the 9th paragraph of the 5th by-law was bad, because there was no authority to inflict, by a by-law, a continuing penalty for merely not pulling down a building actually erected and completed. Held, also, that the said by-law was ultra vires, because, under s. 115 of the Public Health Act, 1848 (11 & 12 Vict. c. 63), a continuing penalty is to run only for each day after written notice of the offence has been given by the local board. The section does not authorise the infliction of a continuing penalty "for each day during which the works shall continue contrary to the provisions of the by-laws." Held, also, that the respondents had not taken proceedings in time, and were barred by s. 11 of Jervis' Act (11 & 12 Vict. c. 43), because the original offence of commencing the work was not shewn to have been committed within six months of the date of the information. The period of limitation mentioned in s. 158 of the Public Health Act, 1875, applies only to the case of a continued offence. Reay v. Gateshead Corporation. 55 L. T. 92; 34 W. R. 682; 50 J. P. 805. See also James v. Wycill, supra, col. 392.

Sufficiency of Space about Building.]—A local improvement act authorised by-laws to be made for sufficiency of space about buildings. A by-law provided that every new building should have in the rear or side an open space of at least 150 square feet, and wherever any open space had been left, when the building was approved, such space should not afterwards be built upon without approval:—Held, that the by-law was bad so far as prohibiting future buildings on the spaces left open. Quinby v. Liverpool Corporation, 53 J. P. 213.

Prohibition of use unless fit for Human Habitation.]—An urban sanitary authority made the following by-law under the Local Government Act, 1858 (all by-laws made under which are deemed to be by-laws under the Public Health Act, 1875, if not inconsistent with any of the provisions of that act): "No new house shall be occupied until the house drainage has been made and completed, nor until such house has been certified by the local board, or their officer authorised to give such certificate, after examination, to be in every respect fit for human habitation in their or his opinion":—Held, that the by-law was reasonable and not inconsistent with any of the provisions of the Public Health Act, 1875, and therefore valid. Horsell v. Swindon Local Board, 58 L. T. 732; 52 J. P. 597.

Dwellings for Servants of Railway Company—Not "Buildings used for purposes of such Railway."]—The appellants erected dwelling-houses for their servants whose duties required them to live upon the spot, on vacant land, acquired and held by them under certain acts of parliament, near to but not forming part of one of their stations, nor used for the purposes of their railway. The appellants were convicted and fined at petty sessions for not having given the respondents, who were the rural sanitary authority, notice in writing of their intention to erect the buildings as required by one of the by-laws, then in force, made by the respondents for the regulation of new streets and buildings under ss. 157 and 276 of the Public Health Act, 1875, and allowed by the Local Government Board. Sect. 157 contains a proviso that the section is not to apply to "buildings belonging to any railway company, and used for the purposes of such railway under any act of parliament":—Held, that the by-law was valid, and that the buildings in question were not within the proviso. Manchester, Sheffield and Lincolnshire Ry. v. Barnsley Union, 67 L. T. 119; 56 J. P. 679.

Power of Local Authority to set aside By-laws.]—Even though the plans of new buildings have been passed by the local authority, the building owner will not be entitled to erect buildings in contravention of any of their by-laws. Semble, that a local authority empowered to make by-laws has no power to sanction plans in contravention of by-laws properly made. McIntosh and Pontypridd Improvements Co., In re, 61 L. J., Q. B. 164.

Power to order Removal.]—A local board made by-laws with respect to new streets, by one of which their approval was required for the erection of buildings; and it was provided that if any works were constructed "contrary to the provisions herein contained," the board might have such works removed, altered, or pulled down:—Held, that the by-law did not give the board a general power of veto on the construction of buildings, but only of disapproving and ordering the removal of buildings which contravened specific regulations contained in the by-laws. Robinson v. Barton Local Board, 53 L. J., Ch. 226; 8 App. Cas. 798; 50 L. T. 57; 32 W. R. 249; 48 J. P. 276—H. L. (E.)

e. Used as Watch-Houses.

The provisions of the Municipal Corporations Act (5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 76), s. 84, with regard to buildings used as watch-houses, apply to such buildings in those places only that were under the control of various local authorities before the passing of the act. Baldwin v. White, L. R. 10 Q. B. 279; 32 L. T. 365; 23 W. R. 826.

3. Recreation Grounds and Parks.

Power to Regulate.]—26 & 27 Vict. c. 13, only applies to cases where land, by act of parliament or otherwise, has been vested in trustees, or irrevocably set apart for the use and enjoyment of the inhabitants of a square or a street, and it gives no power to deprive the owner of his beneficial interest in property where he has not given it up. Tulk v. Metropolitan Board of Works, 37 L. J., Q. B. 272; L. R. 3 Q. B. 682; 19 L. T. 18; 16 W. R. 985—Ex. Ch.

Origin of Right.]—The law of Scotland agrees with the law of England in holding that the right to village greens and playgrounds stands upon a principle of original dedication to the use of the public. Dyce v. Hay, 1 Macq. H. L. 305.

What Buildings may be Erected on.]—When premises have been provided for the purpose of being used as public walks or pleasure grounds, under the Public Health Act, 1848 (11 & 12 Vict. c. 63), s. 74, it is allowable to erect thereon such buildings as may be conducive to the purpose for which the premises have been acquired. Of such a nature are a conservatory, a museum, and a public library, but not a town hall or a school of art. Att.-Gen. v. Sunderland Corporation, 45 L. J., Ch. 839; 2 Ch. D. 634; 34 L. T. 921; 24 W. R. 991—C. A.

Holding of Fairs.]—Where, by an act of parliament, a corporation was directed to cause a piece of land to be drained and levelled, and kept in a proper condition for the purpose of public recreation, the court restrained the corporation by injunction from permitting a cattle fair to be held on such piece of land. Att.-Gen. v. Southampton Corporation, 2 Giff. 363; 29 L. J., Ch. 282; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 36; 1 L. T. 155.

Straying of Fowls—By-law.]—A local board made by-laws for the regulation of a pleasure ground within their jurisdiction, and one was, "A person shall not suffer any fowl, &c. belonging to him to enter or remain in the pleasure ground." And the fine for offending was 5*l.* B.'s six fowls strayed inside, there being no fence between sufficient to prevent them; and the justices declined to convict, holding the by-law to be repugnant to the law of England and not warranted by s. 164 of the Public Health Act. Torquay Local Board v. Bridle, 47 J. P. 183.

Royal Parks — Rules — Conviction for Infringing.]—By the Parks Regulation Act, 1872 (35 & 36 Vict. c. 15), s. 9, any rule made in pursuance of the first schedule to this act shall be forthwith laid before both houses of parliament, if parliament be sitting, or if not, then within three weeks after the beginning of the then next ensuing session of parliament; and if any such rules shall be disapproved of by either house of parliament within one month after the same shall have been so laid before parliament, such rules, or such parts thereof as shall be disapproved of, shall not be enforced:—Held, that rules made during the recess came into operation and remained in force until disapproved of by parliament; and a conviction for infringing such rules was valid. Bailey v. Williamson, 42 L. J., M. C. 49; L. R. 8 Q. B. 118; 28 L. T. 28; 21 W. R. 404.

Held, also, that there was no right in the public to hold meetings in the royal parks, and therefore there was no right interfered with within s. 11; and that the conviction was therefore right. Ib.

4. Sewers.

a. What are.

Private Drain for more than one House.]—The word "sewer" in the Public Health Act, 1875, should receive the largest possible interpretation, and a drain is a "sewer" within the meaning of s. 13 when more than one house has been connected with it. Acton Local Board v. Batten, 54 L. J., Ch. 251; 28 Ch. D. 283; 52 L. T. 17; 49 J. P. 357.

A drain passing through private ground, but receiving the drainage of more than one building, is a "sewer" within the meaning of the Public Health Act, 1875. Travis v. Uttley, 63 L. J., M. C. 48; [1894] 1 Q. B. 233; 70 L. T. 242; 42 W. R. 461; 58 J. P. 85.

A single private drain conveying the drainage of two or more houses belonging to different owners into a public sewer is a sewer within the meaning of the Public Health Acts, 1875 and 1890, and as such vests in and is repairable by the local authority. Hill v. Hair, 64 L. J., M. C. 164; [1895] 1 Q. B. 906; 15 R. 424; 72 L. T. 629; 43 W. R. 651; 59 J. P. 374.

Where part III. of the Public Health Act, 1890, has been adopted by a sanitary authority, a drain passing through private ground, but receiving the drainage of more than one house, is a drain within the meaning of s. 19 of this act, and is not a sewer within the meaning of the Public Health Act, 1875. Travis v. Uttley ([1894] 1 Q. B. 233) considered and distinguished. Self v. Hove Commissioners, 64 L. J., Q. B. 217; [1895] 1 Q. B. 685; 15 R. 283; 72 L. T. 234; 43 W. R. 300; 59 J. P. 103.

A local sanitary authority who have adopted part III. of the Public Health Acts Amendment Act, 1890, may upon the true construction of s. 19, treat a drain which connects two or more houses, the property of different owners, with a public sewer, as a single private drain, and repairable by such owners individually. Self v. Hove Commissioners (64 L. J., Q. B. 217; [1895] 1 Q. B. 685) approved and followed. Hill v. Hair (64 L. J., M. C. 164; [1895] 1 Q. B. 906) disapproved. Dictum of Wills, J., in Travis v. Uttley (63 L. J., M. C. 48; [1894] 1 Q. B. 233) commented on. Eastbourne Corporation v. Bradford, 65 L. J., Q. B. 571; [1896] 2 Q. B. 205; 74 L. T. 762; 45 W. R. 31; 60 J. P. 501.

Sect. 15 of the Public Health Act, 1875, which imposes upon every local authority the duty of keeping in repair all sewers belonging to them, has not been altered by s. 19 of the Public Health Acts Amendment Act, 1890, or by a section in a local act which confers on the local authority all the powers given by s. 41 of the Public Health Act, 1875. Therefore drains draining two or more houses not within the same curtilage are still "sewers" for the purposes of the general obligation of s. 15 of the act of 1875. Where it is sought to compel a local authority to perform its duty in this respect the proper procedure is by complaint to the Local Government Board under s. 299 of the Public Health Act, 1875, and not, as a general rule, by prerogative writ of mandamus. Reg. v. Hastings Corporation, 66 L. J., Q. B. 80; [1897] 1 Q. B. 46; 75 L. T. 377; 45 W. R. 109; 60 J. P. 759.

A drain constructed upon private ground to which the public have not access is a private drain within the meaning of s. 19 of the Public Health Acts Amendment Act, 1890. Hill v. Hair (64 L. J., M. C. 164; [1895] 1 Q. B. 906) discussed and doubted. Seal v. Merthyr Tydfil Urban Council, 67 L. J., Q. B. 37; [1897] 2 Q. B. 543; 77 L. T. 303; 61 J. P. 551.

—— After Point of Junction.]—A drain used for the drainage of more buildings than one becomes a "sewer" within the meaning of s. 4 of the Public Health Act, 1875, from and after the point where it receives the drainage of more than one of such buildings. Such a drain is not a "sewer" from end to end. Dicta of Wills, J., in Travis v. Uttley (63 L. J., M. C. 48; [1894] 1 Q. B. 233) explained. Beckenham Urban District Council v. Wood, 60 J. P. 490.

Water-course.]—The sewage of certain houses drained into a sewer, and, after passing through the sewer, was for a period of some years allowed to fall into an open water-course, which, in its turn, flowed into a brook:—Held, that, under the circumstances of the case, the open water-course was a sewer within the meaning of s. 4 of the Public Health Act, 1875. Wheatcroft v. Matlock Local Board, 52 L. T. 356.

Cesspit.]—A cesspit into which ten houses are drained by their owner is not a sewer or a work belonging thereto, so as to vest in the local board under s. 13 of the Public Health Act, 1875. Meader v. West Clowes Local Board, 61 L. J., Ch. 561; [1892] 3 Ch. 18; 67 L. T. 454; 40 W. R. 676.—C. A.

Reservoir or Cesspool.]—The word "drain" in the above act means a passage for sewage from a single house; the word "sewer" extends to any system of drainage; but neither word includes reservoirs or cesspools. Sutton v. Norwich Corporation, 6 W. R. 432.

Sewer "to Satisfaction of Urban Authority."]—In 1885 plans relating to the proposed erection of seven houses along part of a private street were submitted to a local board and approved of by them. Upon one of the plans certain surface and slop-water drains were marked, leading into a nine-inch stoneware pipe. The houses were built, and the drains made, the nine-inch pipe being connected with a sewer in an adjoining street. There was no express approval or disapproval of the drain by the local board, and it became vested in them on completion. Other houses were subsequently built along the private street, and in 1890 the local board required the frontagers to sewer the street pursuant to s. 150 of the Public Health Act, 1875. On their default, the local board executed the works, and claimed a proportionate part of the expenses from the defendants, who had become the owners of the houses in question. In an action by the local board to enforce payment:—Held, that the sanction given to the plans by the local board did not amount to an approval of the drain in question as a sewer for part of the street to their satisfaction within the meaning of s. 150 of the Public Health Act; and that the defendants were liable for the payment demanded. Handsworth Local Board v. Taylor, 69 L. T. 798.

The existence of sewers under a street for the independent drainage of particular houses, and the fact that the street has become vested in the urban authority, are not sufficient to shew that the street has been sewered as a whole. Still less can the legal assumption be made that such a street has been sewered "to the satisfaction of the urban authority" within s. 150 of the Public Health Act, 1875, when notices to sewer have been given by them, and proceedings taken under that section. Handsworth Urban Council v. Derrington, 66 L. J., Ch. 691; [1897] 2 Ch. 438; 77 L. T. 73; 61 J. P. 518.

"New Sewer"—Enlarging old Sewer.]—The commissioners, under an improvement act, were empowered to make new sewers, but prohibited from making any new sewer to drain into a public river above a certain point:—Held, that they ought to be restrained, at the suit of the private owners of a weir in and part of the soil of the river below that point, from enlarging and deepening an old sewer running into the river above that point, so as to make it virtually a new sewer. Holt v. Rochdale Corporation, 39 L. J., Ch. 761; L. R. 10 Eq. 354; 23 L. T. 43; 18 W. R. 885.

Held, also, that the plaintiff's suit, being based upon their statutory rights, was maintainable without making the attorney-general a party thereto, or proving special injury. Ib.

"Works for Sewage purposes."]—The cleaning, levelling and cementing the bottom of a pool, into which the effluent from sewage works flows, is a work for sewage purposes within the meaning of s. 32 of the Public Health Act, 1875. Wimbledon Local Board v. Croydon Sanitary Authority, 56 L. J., Ch. 159; 32 Ch. D. 421; 55 L. T. 106—C. A.

b. Duty of Board.

To Repair.]—By 18 & 19 Vict. c. 121, s. 22, the local authority of a district is required to lay down a sewer in such district when necessary, and keep the same in good and serviceable repair:—Held, that the expression repair does not mean the reconstruction of a sewer which has been originally defectively made; but the keeping the original sewer in proper repair. Reg. v. Epsom Union, 8 L. T. 383; 11 W. R. 593.

By s. 148 of the Hastings Improvement Act, 1885, "in cases where two or more houses are connected with a single private drain which conveys their drainage into a public sewer, the corporation shall have all the powers conferred by s. 41 of the Public Health Act, 1875." The owner of a number of houses, which were drained into a drain running into a common sewer, called upon the local authority to execute certain necessary repairs to the drain:—Held, that the general obligation to repair imposed upon the local authority by s. 15 of the Public Health Act, 1875, was not taken away by s. 148 of the Hastings Improvement Act, 1885, and that the local authority, and not the owner, were liable to repair the drain. Reg. v. Hastings Corporation, 66 L. J., Q. B. 80; [1897] 1 Q. B. 46; 75 L. T. 377; 45 W. R. 109; 60 J. P. 759.

To Cleanse—Agreement with Sewage Company.]—A sewage company was under covenant with a local board to keep their own works in order, so as to admit the free flow of sewage from sewers of the board. A demurrer to a bill seeking to restrain the company from causing or permitting sewage to remain in the sewers of the board was overruled. Nuneaton Local Board v. General Sewage Co., 44 L. J., Ch. 561; L. R. 20 Eq. 127.

Omitting to Provide.]—An order under the Sanitary Act, 1866 (29 & 30 Vict. c. 90), s. 49, reciting that a sewer authority "had made default in providing a proper system of main drainage," and ordering the authority to "do its duty, and begin to set about the works for the purpose, within one month from the date of the order, and proceed therewith until completion," is good, and a second order made after default in complying with the first, appointing a person to "perform the duty of the sewer authority in respect to sewerage, as he should be directed by the secretary of state," is also good. Reg. v. Cocherell, 40 L. J., M. C. 153; L. R. 6 Q. B. 252; 19 W. R. 1133.

New Sewer — Old Water-course.]—A local authority, under 18 & 19 Vict. c. 121, s. 22, in laying down a new sewer is not bound to follow the course of an old water-course, but may carry the new sewer across inclosed land adjoining the old water-course. Derby (Earl) v. Bury Improvement Commissioners, 38 L. J., Ex. 100; L. R. 4 Ex. 222; 20 L. T. 927; 17 W. R. 772—Ex. Ch.

Right of Householder to Drain into Sewer.]—The owner and occupier of a house within a sanitary district was summoned at petty sessions by the sanitary authority for causing the water-closet attached to the house to discharge night-soil into the water-channel under the main street of N., a town within the district, causing a dangerous nuisance. It was proved that the channel or drain in question was, from its size and form, having a gravel bottom, unsuited to receive and carry off fæcal matter, and was only intended to carry off surface water. There was no other sewer in N. into which the sewage from the houses could be discharged, but the sanitary authority had made arrangements for the carting away of sewage weekly. There was no evidence of any nuisance on the defendant's premises; but it appeared that the drain or channel was in a most offensive state, and the justices being satisfied that a nuisance existed, ordered the defendant to disconnect the soil-pipe of the water-closet with the drain in the main street, so as to prevent any deposit or accumulation from the water-closet being discharged into the drain. On a case stated:—Held, that the justices' order was wrong, and should be quashed. Molloy v. Gray, 24 L. R., Ir. 258.

—— Drainage flowing through Sewer into Stream—Conjoint Default of Owner and Local Authority—Discretion.]—Sect. 17 of the Public Health Act, 1875, does not affect the right conferred by s. 21 upon the owner or occupier of premises within the district of a local board, to drain into the existing sewers of the board, and it is for the board to see that their sewers are so arranged that they do not contravene s. 17. Kirkheaton Local Board v. Ainley, 60 L. J., Ch. 734; 55 J. P. 230.

The plaintiffs, who were owners of premises within the district of the defendant local board, had, eight years before action, connected a drain with the defendants' sewer, which was formerly an open watercourse, and still emptied into a natural stream. Proceedings having been taken against the board to restrain the fouling of the stream, the board gave notice to the plaintiffs under s. 21 of the Public Health Act, 1875, of their intention to cut off their drain:—Held, that the plaintiffs' right to drain into the sewer was absolute, that the board was bound to see that sewage was not conveyed into the stream without first being freed from noxious matter, and that the board must be restrained by injunction from cutting off the plaintiffs' drain. Ib.

The defendants erected water-closets on their premises, the drains from which they connected with two small natural water-courses, which had become sewers and were, therefore, vested in the plaintiffs, a local board. Through these sewers the sewage from the water-closets flowed by natural gravitation into a larger stream. The defendants were entitled as against the plaintiffs to connect the drains from their water-closets with these sewers under s. 21 of the Public Health Act, 1875; but the plaintiffs had not sanctioned their so doing. The plaintiffs, under s. 10 of the Rivers Pollution Prevention Act, 1876, applied to a county court for and obtained an order to restrain the defendants from causing the sewage to flow into the stream. On appeal against this order, it appeared to the court that, upon the facts of the case, the plaintiffs were themselves in default in not having made any provision for dealing with the sewage in these sewers, as required by the Public Health Act, 1875:—Held, that the making of the order was discretionary, and although the defendants had offended against the Rivers Pollution Prevention Act, 1876, as a matter of discretion, under the circumstances of the case, an order ought not to be made against them at the instance of the plaintiffs, who were themselves offenders against that act, and were seeking to avoid performance of their duty under the Public Health Act, 1875. S. C., 61 L. J., Q. B. 812; [1892] 2 Q. B. 274; 67 L. T. 209; 41 W. R. 99; 57 J. P. 36—C. A.

—— County Court Appeal—Mode of Bringing.]—An appeal on the above-mentioned ground is correctly brought by way of motion. An appeal from a county court on the merits under s. 11 of the Rivers Pollution Prevention Act, is by s. 124 of the County Courts Act, 1888, brought within the operation of s. 120 of the latter act. Ib.

Duty to Prevent Nuisance.]—It is no answer to an information at the relation of a local board of health to abate a nuisance arising from sewage, that the board has power itself to remedy the evil by making sewers, because it is the duty of the board to prevent a nuisance arising in its district, instead of putting the ratepayers to the expense of additional works. Att.-Gen. v. Colney Hatch Lunatic Asylum, 38 L. J., Ch. 265; L. R. 4 Ch. 146.

c. Power to Create a Nuisance.

General Rule.]—The Public Health Act, 1875, does not authorise a sewer which would cause a nuisance, and an injunction was granted accordingly when a jury found that a nuisance would be created. Lamacraft v. St. Thomas Sanitary Authority, 42 L. T. 365; 44 J. P. 441.

Discharge of Sewage—Into a River.]—The Local Government Act, 1858, and Amendment Act, 1861 (24 & 25 Vict. c. 61), s. 4, enable local boards to execute works without their districts for the purpose of the outfall or distribution of sewage, subject to the following proviso: "That nothing herein contained shall give or be construed to give power to any local board to construct or use any outfall, drain, or sewer for the purpose of conveying sewage or filthy water into any natural watercourse or stream until such sewage or filthy or refuse water be freed from all excrementitious or other foul or noxious matter, such as would affect or deteriorate the purity and quality of the water in such stream or watercourse":—Held, that a local board is not entitled to discharge sewage by an outfall out of their district into a river so as to affect or deteriorate the water at the point of discharge. Att.-Gen. v. Cockermouth Local Board, 44 L. J., Ch. 118; L. R. 18 Eq. 172; 30 L. T. 590; 22 W. R. 619.

A local board discharged sewage into a river by an outfall out of their district so as to pollute the water at the point of discharge; but such pollution was imperceptible at a town situated eight miles farther down, and supplied with water for domestic purposes from the river. Upon an information and bill filed by the local board (in whom the waterworks were vested), as relators and plaintiffs, seeking to restrain the local board from so discharging the sewage, on the ground that their acts were, first, an infringement of the above-mentioned provisions of the Local Government Act, 1861, and, secondly, a nuisance to the inhabitants:—Held, that upon the information an injunction to restrain the local board from infringing the act of parliament must be granted with costs; but that the bill which sought to make out a case of nuisance must be dismissed with costs. Ib.

—— Into the Sea.]—The right of drainage into the sea and public rivers conferred by s. 24, is subject to the condition that no nuisance is created. Att.-Gen. v. Kingston-on-Thames, 34 L. J., Ch. 481; 11 Jur. (N.S.) 596; 12 L. T. 665; 13 W. R. 888.

—— Into Watercourses.]—The fact that a watercourse is a natural drain of a district, and is polluted to some extent, but not so as to be a nuisance or to prevent a qualified enjoyment of it, by the sewage of some of the houses on its banks flowing or draining into it, does not entitle a local board of health to treat it as a common sewer, and to connect other sewers with it so that it becomes a public nuisance. Att.-Gen. v. Hackney Local Board, 44 L. J., Ch. 545; L. R. 20 Eq. 626; 33 L. T. 244.

—— Restraining Board from Interference.]—When a local board of health is interfering with a watercourse in a manner not authorised by the Local Government Act (21 & 22 Vict. c. 98), s. 68, art. 3, it will be restrained from so doing, and the person injured will not be left to his remedy under the compensation clause of the 11 & 12 Vict. c. 63, s. 144. Grand Junction Canal Co. v. Shugar, L. R. 6 Ch. 483; 24 L. T. 402; 19 W. R. 569.

Where a man has the right to the use of an ancient stream of water flowing through his land and sewage matter is precipitated into it so as to pollute it and prevent his using it, he may obtain an injunction to prevent its becoming an undoubted nuisance; and it is not competent to claim as against him a prescriptive right to discharge the sewage into the stream. Goldsmid v. Tunbridge Wells Improvement Commissioners, 35 L. J., Ch. 88; L. R. 1 Eq. 161; 13 L. T. 332; 14 W. R. 92. Affirmed, 35 L. J., Ch. 382; L. R. 1 Ch. 349; 12 Jur. (N.S.) 308; 14 L. T. 154; 14 W. R. 562.

—— Into an Open Gutter.]—A local board of health is not justified in polluting the surface water, which flows by an open gutter into a canal, by diverting it into a sewer and passing the sewage into it. Manchester, Sheffield and Lincolnshire Ry. v. Worksop Local Board, 23 Beav. 198; 26 L. J., Ch. 345; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 304; 5 W. R. 279.

—— Surface Water.]—Where a canal company had a statutory power to supply the canal with water out of such "brooks, streams, and watercourses as should be found within a certain distance":—Held, that it would be difficult to hold that the mere surface water of a road, not arising from any spring or natural certain supply, could fall within the act, so far and to such an extent as to exclude a local board of health from making a system of drainage essential to the district which, offending against the rights of no one in any other particular, merely allowed to flow through gratings into the sewer the water collected on a public road from rain and from the overflowing of the surplus of the neighbouring houses, which water had theretofore flowed down an open gutter into a canal. Ib.

A local authority, when draining their district under the powers of the Public Health Act, 1875, and the Private Street Works Act, 1892, have, under ss. 15, 16, and 17 of the act of 1875, a right to discharge surface water into a natural stream or watercourse or canal on land belonging to another person within their district, so long as such surface water is, as required by s. 17, free from all excrementitious or other foul or noxious matter such as would affect or deteriorate the purity and quality of the water in such stream or watercourse. Durrant v. Branksome Urban Council, 66 L. J., Ch. 653; [1897] 2 Ch. 291; 76 L. T. 739; 46 W. R. 134—C. A. Affirming 61 J. P. 472.

Deleterious Matter.]—Sand and silt are not "deleterious matter" within the meaning of s. 17 if the stream is already naturally charged therewith. Ib.

Damage—Compensation.]—Any damage caused by the proper exercise by the local authority of the right in question is a matter for compensation under s. 308 of the act of 1875, and forms no ground for an injunction against the local authority or for an action for damages by the owner of the land on which is the bed of the stream. Ib.

Injuries—Private Streams.]—By direction of a local board of health the sewage of a town had been by means of drainage conveyed to a river, which sewage, not having been completely deodorised before coming in contact with the river, had so polluted the stream passing B.'s property as to kill the fish therein, and otherwise cause a nuisance:—Held, that B. was entitled to an injunction to restrain the further pollution of the water passing by his property. Bidder v. Croydon Local Board, 6 L. T. 778.

The council of a borough was bound by a local act incorporating the Towns Improvement Clauses Act (10 & 11 Vict. c. 34), effectually to drain the town:—Held, that they were not justified in so carrying on their operations for this purpose as to drive away fish, and prevent cattle from drinking of the water of a river at a part seven miles below the town, and where it belonged to the plaintiff. Att.-Gen. v. Birmingham Borough Council, 4 Kay & J. 528; 6 W. R. 811.

Held, also, that, assuming the inhabitants of the borough to have had before their act a right to drain their houses into a river, that circumstance would not authorise the council discharging the sewage in such manner as to subject the plaintiff to the inconvenience of which he now complained. Ib.

—— Prescriptive Rights of a few Inhabitants.]—A local board carried the whole drainage of the town into an adjacent river, a small stream which, immediately below the town, flowed for three miles through the plaintiff's lands on both sides. The plaintiff was also seised of a mill upon the stream. The quantity of sewage matter thrown into the stream was greatly increased, the population of the town having increased nearly one-half, and the extent of sewers from 250 yards in 1848, to 10,500 yards in 1855; and besides other evidence of that, it appeared that sheep could no longer be washed there, that the fish were all dead, and that the exhalations were noisome:—Held, first, that the practice, long previously and up to 1848, of a few houses in the town to drain into the river, afforded no ground for the local board setting up a prescriptive right, and that the local board, as a modern corporation, could claim no prescriptive rights. Att.-Gen. v. Luton Local Board, 2 Jur. (N.S.) 180.

—— Consent of Owner.]—Held, secondly, that the stream was a private stream, the property of the plaintiff, and, therefore, that the board had no rights, except with his consent. Ib.

—— Watering-places in a River.]—Under 11 & 12 Vict. c. 53, ss. 45, 46 and 145, providing that the local boards may make necessary sewers through or under any lands whatever, and cause them to be emptied into such places as may be fit and necessary, provided that nothing in the act should authorise the boards to use, injure, or interfere with any watercourse, stream, river, &c., in which the owner of any lands may be interested, without the consent of such owner:—Held, first, that persons having a right to watering-places in a river adjoining lands, for the use of their cattle, are interested in the river within the meaning of the proviso, but would not be able to maintain an action for an interference with their rights, unless they were injured by such interference. Oldaker v. Hunt, 6 De G. M. & G. 376; 3 Eq. R. 671; 19 Beav. 485; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 785; 3 W. R. 297.

Held, secondly, that works of a local board of health, producing an outfall of the sewage of a town above such a watering-place, was such an interference as to cause injury to the landowners; but that whether this was established or not, it ought (if not consented to by them) to be restrained by injunction, being the act of a public body exceeding its powers. Ib.

—— Right of Fishing.]—A right of fishing is within the term "land," according to the interpretation clause of the 11 & 12 Vict. c. 63, s. 2. Ib.

—— Mill Stream.]—A local board of health made sewers in execution of the powers of 11 & 12 Vict. c. 63, and 21 & 22 Vict. c. 98, and in doing so injuriously affected a stream, without having obtained the consent of the occupier of a mill on the stream and entitled to the flow of the stream to his mill. He obtained a mandamus to the local board for compensation, and made a claim, first, for damage sustained in consequence of the board opening the main sewer so as to allow the water of the stream to flow through it for forty-six hours; and secondly, for a drain or a trap door being made out of the stream, and water allowed to flow out of the stream into the trap door:—Held, first, that 21 & 22 Vict. c. 98, s. 73, was not confined to cases in which a court of equity would grant an injunction against the local board, and that the occupier of a mill was in the position of a person who would, if the act had not passed, have been entitled by law to prevent the injuriously affecting the stream. Reg. v. Darlington Local Board, 6 B. & S. 562; 35 L. J., Q. B. 45; 13 W. R. 789—Ex. Ch.

Held, secondly, that the works of the local board were not authorised by s. 73, and therefore the claim of the occupier was not the subject of compensation, but a ground of action. Ib.

New Board — Existing Nuisance.] — An annual highway board, constitued under 5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 50, acting as a local authority, under the Nuisance Removal Act, 18 & 19 Vict. c. 121, constructed in 1859 a system of sewers, which conveyed the sewage of their district into a stream, and thus occasioned a nuisance in the adjoining district:—Held, that the highway board of 1865 could not be compelled to take any steps to remedy the existing nuisance, but that they could be restrained from exercising their statutory powers so as to increase the nuisance. Att.-Gen. v. Richmond, 35 L. J., Ch. 597; L. R. 2 Eq. 306; 12 Jur. (N.S.) 554; 14 L. T. 398; 14 W. R. 686.

Power to Carry Above Ground.]—By the Public Health Act, 1875, s. 16, a local authority is empowered to carry any sewer, "into, through or under" any lands within its district, and the act provides for compensation to all persons sustaining damage by reason of the exercise of the powers of the act in relation to any matters as to which they are not themselves in default. A local board under this act proceeded to carry a sewer across private pleasure grounds on such a level that the bottom of the sewer would be only slightly below the surface, and a permanent embankment about six feet high would be made:—Held, that the local board was authorised so to do, for that the act did not confine them to carrying a sewer underground. Roderick v. Aston Local Board, 46 L. J., Ch. 802; 5 Ch. D. 328; 36 L. T. 328; 25 W. R. 403—C. A.

Tenant Obstructing.]—A landlord made a sewer under land occupied by A. as his tenant without A.'s consent. A. afterwards stopped up the sewer and caused a nuisance, but not on the land occupied by him :—Held, that A. was liable to conviction under the Public Health Act, as a person by whose act a nuisance arose or continued. Riddell v. Spear, 40 L. T. 130.

Nuisance from Sewage Works — Order of Justices.]—The provisions of 38 & 39 Vict. c. 55 (the Public Health Act, 1875), ss. 91 to 96, for the abatement of certain nuisances do not apply to a nuisance arising from sewage tanks and works constructed under s. 27 by a local board of health, and a court of summary jurisdiction has, therefore, no power, on proof of a nuisance so caused, to make an order for the abatement of such nuisance under s. 96. Reg. v. Parlby, 58 L. J., M. C. 49 ; 22 Q. B. D. 250 ; 60 L. T. 422 ; 37 W. R. 335 ; 53 J. P. 327.

d. Compulsory Entry on Lands.

For making Reservoirs.]—A local board of health has no power under s. 46 of 11 & 12 Vict. c. 63, to enter upon land without the consent of the owner for the purpose of making reservoirs and deposit beds for retaining the sewage. Sutton v. Norwich Corporation, 27 L. J., Ch. 739 ; 6 W. R. 432.

Out of Particular District.]—The 11 & 12 Vict. c. 63, and the 21 & 22 Vict. c. 98, do not give to a local board of health power to go out of its district to make sewers. Haywood v. Lowndes, 4 Drew. 454 ; 28 L. J., Ch. 400 ; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 185 ; 7 W. R. 279.

For the Purposes of Outfall.]—The 21 & 22 Vict. c. 98, extends the exercise of those powers beyond the district only where it may be necessary for the purpose of outfall or distribution of sewage, and not for the purpose of making new sewers. Ib.

To Repair — Compensation.]—The B. improvement commissioners in 1843 constructed a sewer through certain lands belonging to a railway company, and through other lands, not the property of the commissioners, which the company subsequently acquired for the purposes of their railway. Nothing was ever done by the commissioners or their successors to acquire any rights with regard to the sewer beyond its construction. Within twenty years from the construction of the sewer the company made an embankment for their railway upon the lands and over the sewer. In 1879 it became necessary for the plaintiffs, the successors of the commissioners, to make an open cutting through the embankment in order to do repairs to the sewers, which could not be effected from the inside. In an action upon an inquisition under the Lands Clauses Consolidation Act, 1845, to assess compensation claimed by the plaintiffs from the defendants, in respect of the injuriously affecting of the sewer by the embankment :—Held, that the plaintiffs had no title or interest at law in the sewer, or in the lands in which it was situate, sufficient to support the claim :—Held, on appeal, that as a right of access to the sewer had not been expressly given to the improvement commissioners, but had to be implied, the right of access which ought to be implied was not any particular mode of access, but such only as was reasonably necessary for enabling the repair of the sewer to be done, and as that had not been prevented by the defendant's embankment, but only rendered less easy and convenient, the plaintiffs had no right to compensation. Birkenhead Corporation v. L. & N. W. Ry., 55 L. J., Q. B. 48 ; 15 Q. B. D. 572 ; 50 J. P. 84—C. A.

Order of Justices.]—L., the owner of a meadow, received notice from the rural sanitary authority that they intended to enter and make a sewer under the meadow, and this being objected to, they entered forcibly. An action of trespass and injunction being brought by L., on the ground that the sewer would create a nuisance :—Held, that the order of justices mentioned in s. 305 of Public Health Act does not apply when proceedings are taken under s. 16. Lamacraft v. St. Thomas Sanitary Authority, 42 L. T. 365 ; 44 J. P. 441.

—— To Execute Works on Land of Stranger.]—An order was made by justices, under the 112th section of the Public Health (Ireland) Act, 1878, that M., on whose premises a nuisance existed, should abate the same by continuing a sewer, which already ran through his own land to the boundary between his land and that of C., across C.'s lands to a public road. C. refused to allow M. to enter on his lands for the purpose of executing this work, which, therefore, was not done ; whereupon the complainants, as the urban sanitary authority, obtained an order from justices, authorising their officer to enter on C.'s lands to do the work, and C. having refused to allow him to enter, C. was convicted and fined, under s. 119 :—Held, that the original order, directing the work by M. on premises in the occupation of C., was ultra vires and illegal, and that the conviction for refusal to allow the complainant's officer to enter on C.'s premises, based on it, was illegal. Scarborough v. Scarborough Sanitary Authority (1 Ex. D. 344), followed. Letterkenny Commissioners v. Collins, 28 L. R., Ir. 235.

Notice of Entry.]—A notice is reasonable, within the meaning of 11 & 12 Vict. c. 63, s. 45, when it specifies the object of an entry on private premises to be the construction of a sewer of certain dimensions, and shews that the entry will be made at a particular point, and that the sewer will go from that point in an oblique direction. It is not necessary that this notice should be accompanied by a map. Cleckheaton Industrial Self-help Society v. Jackson, 14 W. R. 950.

Breaking up Private Roads.]—A corporation, affecting to act under the provisions of their local act, commenced to break up and excavate a private road belonging to the plaintiff, and situate within the borough, for the purpose of laying down a sewer :—Held, that on the construction of the local act, taken with the provisions contained in the Public Health Act, 1848, the Sewage Utilisation Act, 1865 (28 & 29 Vict. c. 75), and the Public Health Act, 1875, the road was a street within those acts, and that the corporation had power to lay down the sewer thereunder, and for that purpose to break up the soil thereof. Taylor v. Oldham Corporation, 46 L. J., Ch. 105 ; 4 Ch. D. 395 ; 35 L. T. 696 ; 25 W. R. 178.

—— For making a Man-hole.]—The defendants, a local board of health, prior to 1875, constructed a sewer under a public footpath, the soil of which belonged to the plaintiff, and they made a shaft thirty feet deep into the sewer, with an entrance or man-hole upon the footpath, at a point where there was a junction of two sewers. The defendants also gave the plaintiff notice after 1875 of their intention to make similar man-holes into their sewers upon other parts of the plaintiff's property :—Held, that they were parts of the sewer within the meaning of 11 & 12 Vict. c. 63, s. 45, and could be made without purchasing land for the purpose; and that the plaintiff was only entitled to compensation for the damage arising from making them. Swanston v. Twickenham Local Board, 48 L. J., Ch. 623; 11 Ch. D. 838; 40 L. T. 734; 27 W. R. 924—C. A.

Application of Lands Clauses Act, 1845.]—A provisional order of a secretary of state empowering a local board of health to put in force the powers of the Lands Clauses Act of 1845, with respect to the purchase of lands otherwise than by agreement, is nothing more than a substitution for proceedings before a standing orders committee, and has no force or validity until confirmed by act of parliament; and cannot be brought up by certiorari for the purpose of being quashed. Frewen v. Hastings Local Board, 6 B. & S. 401; 34 L. J., Q. B. 159; 11 Jur. (N.S.) 670; 12 L. T. 346; 13 W. R. 678.

Taking more Lands than required.]—A corporation being, as the sanitary authority for a city, duly empowered to take lands specified in the schedule to its provisional order for the purpose of public improvements, served notice to treat upon the trustees of a charity, who were the owners of the lands. The lands comprised in the notice were more than were actually required for the purpose of the works :—Held, that the cases deciding that a railway company cannot take compulsorily more land than is actually required for its works did not apply to a corporation taking lands for public improvements, and that the corporation was entitled to take compulsorily the whole of the lands comprised in the notice. Quinton v. Bristol Corporation, 43 L. J., Ch. 783; L. R. 17 Eq. 523; 30 L. T. 112; 22 W. R. 434.

See also LANDS CLAUSES ACT.

Jurisdiction of Justices.]—The power of justices to grant or refuse an order enabling a local authority to enter lands under s. 305 of the Public Health Act of 1875 is wholly discretionary, their decision being, therefore, final. Diss Urban Sanitary Authority v. Aldrich, 46 L. J., M. C. 183; 2 Q. B. D. 179; 36 L. T. 663.

—— Power to State a Case.]—A. applied to the justices under s. 305 of the Public Health Act, 1875, for an order authorising them, as the local authority, to enter upon certain lands of the defendant for the purposes of the act. The application was dismissed, but the justices stated a case under 20 & 21 Vict. c. 43, s. 2, for the opinion of the court :—Held, that the justices had no power to state a case, as this was not the determination of a complaint within 20 & 21 Vict. c. 43, s. 2. Ib.

e. Property in Sewers.

Natural Stream—Exception in s. 43 of the Public Health Act, 1875.]—A natural stream, flowing through and draining agricultural land, was widened, deepened, and otherwise improved, by inclosure commissioners under a private act, at the expense of the landowners. In its course it passed through a town, receiving the drainage of two or three houses :—Held, that it was not thereby converted into a sewer, within 11 & 12 Vict. c. 63; but even if so, it came within the second exception in s. 43, and therefore did not vest in the local board so as to cast upon the board the duty of cleansing and repairing it. Reg. v. Godmanchester Local Board, 5 B. & S. 886; 34 L. J., Q. B. 13; 11 Jur. (N.S.) 63; 13 W. R. 155. Affirmed, 5 B. & S. 936; 35 L. J., Q. B. 125; L. R. 1 Q. B. 328; 14 L. T. 104; 14 W. R. 375—Ex. Ch.

Sewer made by Owner—Made "for his own Profit."]—A sewer made by the owner of some only of the houses in a street not yet a highway, though made for the purpose of draining his own amongst other houses, is not a sewer made by a person "for his own profit" within the meaning of the exception in s. 13 of the Public Health Act, 1875. Acton Local Board v. Batten, 54 L. J., Ch. 251; 28 Ch. D. 283; 52 L. T. 17; 49 J. P. 357.

A street having been laid out by the owners of a building estate, a sewer was made by them for the drainage of the houses in the street. Subsequently, in the year 1868, a local board was formed whose district included such street. The sewer, which discharged into the Thames, was sufficient for the purpose of the drainage of the street, assuming that drainage into the Thames could be continued. In 1884 the local board, having received notice from the Thames conservators to discontinue the discharge of sewage into the Thames, gave notice under s. 150 of the Public Health Act, 1875, to the frontagers in the street to make a new sewer, and on their default themselves constructed such sewer and sought to charge the expenses upon the frontagers :—Held, that the original sewer was not a sewer made by the owners for their own profit, and therefore had vested in the board under the Public Health Act, 1875; that the board not having taken any steps to compel the frontagers to sewer the street within a reasonable time after the sewer became vested in them, must be taken to have been satisfied with the sewer, and could not afterwards proceed against the frontagers under s. 150, but were bound themselves to keep the sewer in repair under s. 15 of the Public Health Act, 1875, and, if it became necessary, to enlarge or alter it under s. 18; and that consequently the expenses of constructing the new sewer were chargeable not on the frontagers but on the general district rate. Bonella v. Twickenham Local Board, 57 L. J., M. C. 1; 20 Q. B. D. 63; 58 L. T. 299; 36 W. R. 50; 52 J. P. 356—C. A.

A sewer that is made by a company solely for the purpose of draining the cottages upon their estate is not a sewer "made by any company for the profit of the shareholders," within the exception contained in s. 13 of the Public Health Act, 1875. Such a sewer, therefore, vests in and is under the control of the local authority. Assuming that the value of the premises was enhanced to the owners by the construction by them of the sewer, that was not the kind of "profit" contemplated by the exception in s. 13. Ferrand v. Hallas Land and Building Co., 62 L. J., Q. B. 479; [1893] 2 Q. B. 135; 4 R. 430; 69 L. T. 8; 41 W. R. 580; 57 J. P. 692—C. A.

A landowner who has constructed a sewage system on his own property, intending to receive a sewer-rate from those using his sewers, and who has received such a rate, is a person making sewers "for his own profit" within the exception in s. 13, sub-s. 1 of the Public Health Act, 1875. Acton Local Board v. Batten (28 Ch. D. 283), Bonella v. Twickenham Local Board (18 Q. B. D. 577), and Ferrand v. Hallas Land and Building Co. (4 R. 430) distinguished. Minehead Local Board v. Luttrell, 63 L. J., Ch. 497; [1894] 2 Ch. 178; 8 R. 379; 70 L. T. 446; 42 W. R. 667.

A landowner, who has constructed a sewer on his own property for the improvement of his estate, but which was not intended for the use of owners of property and houses not on the estate, and who has made purchasers of plots of his land pay him a specific sum for the use of the sewer on making a connection with it, is not a person making a sewer "for his own profit" within the exception in s. 13, sub-s. 1 of the Public Health Act, 1875. Minehead Local Board v. Luttrell ([1894] 2 Ch. 178) distinguished; Ferrand v. Hallas Land and Building Co. ([1893] 2 Q. B. 135) applied. Vowles v. Colmer, 64 L. J., Ch. 414; 13 R. 583; 72 L. T. 389.

Sewage "caused" or "suffered" to flow into River—Notice to discontinue—Change of Parties.]—Two local sanitary authorities appointed a joint drainage committee consisting of members from each board, and gave to such joint committee the exclusive control and management of the sewage and sewage works, and henceforward the disposal and treatment of the sewage of both districts were carried out under the control of the said committee. The sewerage works continued to remain the property of the local board to which the said works belonged prior to the appointment of the said joint committee. Sewage or other offensive or injurious matter was allowed to flow from the said sewerage works into an adjoining river, thereby polluting it. The conservancy board thereupon served a notice in writing upon the local board to which the sewerage works belonged to discontinue the flow of sewage into the river. The local board, having failed to comply with the terms of the notice, were summoned before the magistrates to compel them to discontinue the nuisance, or to render them liable to the penalty for not doing so:—Held, that the local board were not liable, as they had ceased to have the control over the sewers, and so could not have "caused" or "suffered" the outflow into the river. Lea Conservancy Board v. Tottenham Local Board, 64 L. T. 198; 55 J. P. 343.

Railway Accommodation Works—Pipes laid for Draining Land.]—Drains and pipes laid by a railway company, in whose special act is an express incorporation of the Railways Clauses Consolidation Act, 1845, for the purpose of conveying away the water from the lands lying near to or affected by the railway as clearly as before the making of the railway, as required by s. 68 of that act, and so used—if, being also used de facto for carrying away the sewage of more than one building, they constitute a "sewer" within the meaning of s. 4 of the Public Health Act, 1875, as to which quære—are within the exception in sub-s. 2 of s. 13 of the act of 1875, of "sewers made and used for the purpose of draining, preserving, or improving land under any private or local act of parliament," and accordingly do not vest in the local authority under the act. L. & N. W. Ry. v. Runcorn Rural Council, 67 L. J., Ch. 23; [1898] 1 Ch. 34; 77 L. T. 485; 46 W. R. 121; 62 J. P. 9. Affirmed, 67 L. J., Ch. 324.

Pollution of Stream—Prescriptive Right to use Sewers—Neglect of Duty—"Cause or Suffer."]—A local board under the Public Health Act, 1875, have only a qualified property in the sewers within their district, and cannot prevent persons who have acquired a prescriptive right to use them from so doing unless they provide other sewers equally effectual. Where a local board have not themselves constructed sewers which are a nuisance, but only permitted them to be used by inhabitants who have acquired a prescriptive right to use them, the local board do not "cause or suffer" sewage to flow into the Thames within the meaning of s. 64 of the Thames Navigation Act, 1866, and cannot be convicted of a misdemeanour under that act. Reg. v. Staines Local Board, 60 L. T. 261; 53 J. P. 358.

f. Obligations of Landowners.

Subjacent Support.]—The Public Health Act, 1875, imposes on landowners, through whose land a sewer is run under that act, an obligation to preserve to such sewer subjacent support, and gives them a right to immediate compensation for being deprived of free power to work subjacent mines, but not for the risk of percolation of sewage into the subjacent mines. Dudley Corporation, In re, 51 L. J., Q. B. 121; 8 Q. B. D. 86; 45 L. T. 733; 46 J. P. 340—C. A.

5. Drains.

When a Sewer.]—See next case and ante, 4, a (cols. 412—414).

Liability to Repair.]—A drain constructed upon private ground to which the public have not access is a private drain within the meaning of s. 19 of the Public Health Acts Amendment Act, 1890. Therefore, if such drain becomes a nuisance, a local authority who have adopted the act of 1890, may take proceedings under s. 41 of the Public Health Act, 1875, against any owner of premises connected with the drain by a branch drain. Hill v. Hair (64 L. J., M. C. 164; [1895] 1 Q. B. 906) discussed and doubted. Seal v. Merthyr Tydfil Urban Council, 67 L. J., Q. B. 37; [1897] 2 Q. B. 543; 77 L. T. 303; 61 J. P. 551.

Cleansing of.]—A mandamus to a local board of health alleged that a drain or a watercourse was in such a state as to be a nuisance injurious to health, and commanded the board to cleanse it. On a return and plea, the stream was found to be in the state alleged:—Held, that the prosecution was not entitled to judgment, for that the duty of the local board under 11 & 12 Vict. c. 63, s. 58, to cleanse ditches, &c. is only conditional on the neglect of the owner or occupier of the land on which the nuisance exists to remove it after notice, and no such notice or neglect was alleged in the mandamus. Reg. v. Godmanchester Local Board, 5 B. & S. 936; 35 L. J., Q. B. 125; L. R. 1 Q. B. 328; 14 L. T. 104; 14 W. R. 375—Ex. Ch.

Nuisance—Abatement—Default of Sanitary Authority.]—A sanitary authority which has not complied with the requirements of s. 15 of the Public Health Act, 1875, in providing sewers for effectually draining their district cannot obtain an order to compel a person discharging sewage matter into a sewer which has no proper outlet to discontinue such discharge on the ground that it contributes to a nuisance. Wycombe Rural Sanitary Authority v. Parsons, 64 L. J., M. C. 22; [1894] 2 Q. B. 780; 10 R. 426; 71 L. T. 428; 58 J. P. 765.

6. Ditches, Cesspools and Deposits.

Right to Fill up.]—By a section of a local act, a local board when they think fit may cause the ditches at the sides of, or across public roads and public footpaths to be filled up, and may substitute pipe or other drains alongside or across such roads. A. was possessed of a freehold close adjoining a public highway. By the side of the highway was a low fence about two feet high, then a strip of greensward averaging ten feet in width, with a broad ditch running parallel to the highway. The close was separated from the strip of greensward by a paling eight feet high. The local board, under the authority of the act of parliament, filled up the ditch and substituted drain pipes:—Held, that the ditch being fenced from the highway, the presumption was that it belonged to A., and also, that, as the section referred only to ditches by the side of the highway, the act was not applicable. Tutil v. West Ham Local Board, L. R. 8 C. P. 477; 28 L. T. 597.

Fencing of.]—An ancient open watercourse alongside a public footpath which has been from time immemorial unfenced is not a "hole or other place near a street" within s. 83 of the Towns Improvement Clauses Act, 1847, so as to impose on the local board of health for the district the duty of protecting or inclosing the same. Wilson v. Halifax Corporation, 37 L. J., Ex. 44; 3 L. R., Ex. 114; 17 L. T. 666; 16 W. R. 707.

Abatement of Nuisance from.]—By an order of justices under the Public Health Act, 1875, ss. 94, 96, it was found that on land, the property of a certain person named, a nuisance existed, viz. a foul ditch, caused by refuse water and offensive liquid from an adjoining brewery, and that this nuisance was caused by the act or default of the defendant as owner and occupier of the brewery, and it was ordered that the defendant, within three months, should abate the nuisance, and for that purpose should execute such works and do all such things as might be necessary so that the same should no longer be a nuisance or injurious to health. Upon a rule for certiorari, on the ground that the defendant was not the occupier of the premises on which the nuisance was proved to exist, and that he had no power or authority from the owner to enter on the premises for any purpose whatever:—Held, that the order must be quashed. Reg. v. Trimble, 36 L. T. 508.

—— On Boundary of two Districts.]—A ditch ran along a highway which divided two rural sanitary districts. The ditch was situated in N., but a nuisance was caused in greater part by sewage from premises in W. The W. sanitary authority applied to justices for an order on the N. authority to cleanse the ditch as being in their area:—Held, that the justices were right in ordering W. to cleanse the ditch. Woburn Union v. Newport Pagnell Union, 51 J. P. 694.

—— Action for Injunction by Local Authority—Sanction of Attorney-General.]—The Public Health Act, 1875, enacts in s. 107 that any local authority may, if in their opinion summary proceedings would afford an inadequate remedy, "cause any proceedings to be taken" against any person in any superior court of law or equity to enforce the abatement or prohibition of any nuisance under the act:—Held, that such proceedings must be ordinary proceedings known to the law, and that in the absence of special damage a local authority cannot sue in respect of a public nuisance except with the sanction of the attorney-general by action in the nature of an information. Wallasey Local Board v. Gracey, 56 L. J., Ch. 739; 36 Ch. D. 593; 57 L. T. 51; 35 W. R. 694; 51 J. P. 740.

A local authority is not empowered by s. 107 of the Public Health Act, 1875, to bring an action in their own name for an injunction to restrain a public nuisance by which they have not suffered any special damage. Wallasey Local Board v. Gracey (56 L. J., Ch. 739; 36 Ch. D. 593) approved. Tottenham Urban District Council v. Williamson, 65 L. J., Q. B. 591; [1896] 2 Q. B. 353; 75 L. T. 238; 44 W. R. 676; 60 J. P. 725—C. A.

Semble, if the sanction of the attorney-general be obtained, such an action may be brought in the name of the attorney-general at the instance of the local authority as relators. Ib.

Filling up—Injury to Public.]—The local board of S. filed a bill for an injunction against the defendant as Secretary for War to restrain him from stopping up a ditch in S., the War Office having nearly filled the ditch with soil, and made only a small grip or cutting in the place of the old passage. The plaintiffs alleged injury to certain sanitary measures of their own, as representing the S. public, who are entitled to the free use of the ditch. No one appearing for the defendant:—Held, that as the real objects of all parties must in this case be in common, and no danger was threatened to the people of S., the injunction must be refused. Felkin v. Herbert (Lord), 4 L. T. 433; 9 W. R. 496.

—— Remedy of Board.]—A local board of health instituted a suit against an owner of a ditch for filling it up, thereby obstructing an ancient easement which the plaintiffs possessed in a flow of water through the ditch, and interfering with their right to its free use for sanitary purposes. The plaintiffs claimed the easement with regard to the drainage of the whole district, whereas it appeared that, from the nature of the locality, the ditch could carry off only the surface water, which collected on an undulating space of ground 114 yards in length. The suit was dismissed with costs, principally on the ground that the proper remedy for a board of health to resort to in such a case was under the 11 & 12 Vict. c. 63. S. C., 11 L. T. 173.

Cesspool—Rural District Council—Powers of Urban Sanitary Authority—By-laws.]—A by-law, issued by a rural district council having the powers of an urban sanitary authority duly extended to them by an order of the local government board and approved by the local government board, requiring "every person constructing a cesspool in connection with a building to construct the same at a distance of fifty feet at least from a dwelling house," is properly applicable to cesspools in connection with old as well as with new buildings, and is not unreasonable merely from the fact that it may be impossible in a particular instance to construct a cesspool at that distance. Simmons v. Malling Rural Council, 66 L. J., Q. B. 585; [1897] 2 Q. B. 433; 77 L. T. 341; 45 W. R. 603; 61 J. P. 502.

Accumulation or Deposit—Nuisance or Injurious to Health.]—In s. 107, sub-s. 4, of the Public Health (Ireland) Act, 1878, corresponding to s. 91, sub-s. 4, of the Public Health Act, 1875, which provides that "any accumulation or deposit which is a nuisance or injurious to health" shall be deemed to be a nuisance within the act, the word "accumulation" implies some gradual accretion, a heaping up of matter from day to day; and "deposit" means something put down in some place and left there. Both words involve the idea of a certain degree of permanency, and do not extend to the case of loading and unloading manure in the ordinary course from a railway company's waggons for the purpose of delivery to customers. G. N. Ry. v. Lurgan Commissioners, [1897] 2 Ir. R. 340.

—— Absence of Injury to Health.]—By s. 91 of the Public Health Act, 1875, "any accumulation or deposit which is a nuisance or injurious to health" shall be deemed to be a nuisance liable to be dealt with summarily under the act:—Held, that an offence within the section was committed where the accumulation emitted offensive smells which interfered with the personal comfort of persons living in the neighbourhood, but did not cause injury to health. G. W. Ry. v. Bishop (L. R. 7 Q. B. 550) distinguished. Bishop Auckland Local Board v. Bishop Auckland Iron Co., 52 L. J., M. C. 38; 10 Q. B. D. 138; 48 L. T. 223; 31 W. R. 288; 47 J. P. 389.

7. WATER-CLOSETS, ASH-PITS, &c.

Orders for necessary Work.]—By 11 & 12 Vict. c. 63, s. 54, the surveyor of the local board of health may examine any drain, water-closet, privy, cesspool, or ash-pit; and if it is in bad order and condition, the board shall cause notice in writing to be given to the owner or occupier of the premises, requiring him to do the necessary works; and if such notice be not complied with, the party shall be liable to a penalty for every day during which he makes default:—Held, that the discretion to determine what works are necessary to be done is vested in the board, and that, on a proceeding before justices to recover the penalty under s. 129, they have no jurisdiction to review its determination. Hargreaves v. Taylor, 3 B. & S. 613; 32 L. J., M. C. 111; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 1053; 8 L. T. 149; 11 W. R. 562.

General Order to Construct particular Kind of Water-closet—Consideration of Requirements of each particular House.]—Under s. 36 of the Public Health Act, 1875, a local authority have no power to pass a general resolution that a particular kind of water-closet shall be furnished to all houses within the district. The requirements of each particular house must be considered, and the only power the local authority have is to require a sufficient water-closet to be provided. Tinkler v. Wandsworth Board of Works (2 De G. & J. 261; 27 L. J., Ch. 342) followed. Wood v. Widnes Corporation, 66 L. J., Q. B. 797; [1897] 2 Q. B. 357; 77 L. T. 306; 46 W. R. 30; 61 J. P. 646.

One Privy for Two Cottages.]—The respondent built two cottages with one privy sufficient for the use of the occupiers of both cottages:—Held, that he had complied with the requirements of the 35th section of the Public Health Act, 1875, on the ground that the section does not require a separate water-closet, earth-closet, or privy for every house built or rebuilt. Clutton Union v. Pointing, 48 L. J., M. C. 135; 4 Q. B. D. 340; 40 L. T. 844; 27 W. R. 658.

By-law requiring Plans — Deviation from Plans—Position of Privies.]—B. was charged with erecting new buildings not in accordance with the plans, in so far as the tub closets were not in the positions shewn on the plans. The closets had been erected from 15 to 27 feet distant from main buildings instead of 2½ feet as shewn on the plans:—Held, that the justices were right in holding that tub-closets came within the meaning of "privies" in 21 & 22 Vict. c. 98, s. 34, and that it was an offence against by-laws to deviate from the plans. Burton v. Acton, 51 J. P. 566.

Abatement of Nuisance—Who Liable.]—A nuisance arose from a privy in the upper part of a house, of which, with the shop belonging thereto, H. was the lessee, at a rack rent, for twenty-one years. H. occupied the shop only, and sub-let the other part, where the nuisance arose, to K., a weekly tenant, and to this part of the premises H. had no access. C., as agent for H.'s lessor, collected the rent. The parish authorities, for the purpose of abating the nuisance, under the powers given them by 29 & 30 Vict. c. 90, s. 21, and 18 & 19 Vict. c. 121, s. 12, summoned C., as the owner of the premises within the interpretation clause (s. 2) of the latter statute, before the justices, who made an order upon him to abate the nuisance:—Held, that C. was not the owner within the true construction of s. 2, as K., the weekly tenant, was the occupier of the premises where the nuisance arose, and that therefore H. was not the occupier, but the person receiving rent from the occupier of the property within the meaning of the statutes. Reg. v. Bath JJ., or Cook v. Montague, 41 L. J., M. C. 149; L. R. 7 Q. B. 418; 26 L. T. 471; 20 W. R. 624.

—— Premises Leased for Years.]—A local authority served the owner of premises with a notice, under s. 94 of the Public Health Act, 1875, requiring him within seven days to abate a nuisance arising from the defective construction of a structural convenience, and for that purpose to execute certain specified works. Having failed to comply with the notice, the owner was summoned under s. 95 before a court of summary jurisdiction, and on the hearing it was proved that the premises in question were occupied by a tenant to the owner under a lease for twenty-one years containing the usual covenants:—Held, that the owner, even although he could not enter upon the premises and execute the works without the tenant's permission, had "made default" in complying with the requisitions of the notice within the meaning of s. 95, and therefore that the justices had jurisdiction to make an order under s. 96, requiring him to abate the nuisance. Parker v. Inge, 55 L. J., M. C. 149; 17 Q. B. D. 584; 55 L. T. 300; 51 J. P. 20.

—— "Forthwith."]—N. was duly served with a notice under s. 94 of the Public Health Act, 1875, requiring him to abate forthwith a nuisance arising from filth:—Held, that the word "forthwith" meant within a reasonable time, and sufficiently defined the time for doing the work. Thomas v. Nokes, 58 J. P. 672.

—— Jurisdiction of Justices.]—Under 18 & 19 Vict. c. 121, s. 12, the power of a local authority to prefer, and the jurisdiction of justices to determine, a complaint in respect of a nuisance existing within the area of that local authority, arises only where the cause of such nuisance is also within that area. Reg. v. Cotton, 1 El. & El. 203; 28 L. J., M. C. 22; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 311; 7 W. R. 62.

—— Power of Justices to order Specific Works.] — A water-closet in the centre of a house being a nuisance, the sanitary authority gave notice to the owner of the house under the 94th section of the Public Health Act, 1875, to abate the nuisance, and for that purpose to remove the said closet from the centre of the house and place the same near an outer wall where there might be efficient ventilation, and to fix the soil-pipe outside the walls. The owner making default in so doing, justices thereupon, under s. 96, ordered him to do the things above specified:—Held, that they had jurisdiction under the 96th section to make the order. Whitchurch, Ex parte (6 Q. B. D. 545), distinguished. Saunders, Ex parte, 52 L. J., M. C. 89; 11 Q. B. D. 191; 31 W. R. 918; 47 J. P. 584.

A nuisance existed consisting of a privy and ash-pit in such a state as to be a nuisance, and the local sanitary authority gave notice to the owner under the Public Health Act, 1875, s. 94, to abate the same, and for that purpose to fill up the ashpit, abandon the privy, and build a pail closet. The owner failed to do so, and justices thereupon, under s. 96, ordered the owner to fill up the ashpit, to abandon the privy, and to construct a proper and sufficient pail closet in lieu thereof. On a rule for a certiorari to quash the order of justices:—Held, that the order was bad, as the justices had no power under s. 96 to order the erection of the pail closet. Whitchurch, Ex parte, 50 L. J., M. C. 41; 6 Q. B. D. 545; 29 W. R. 507; 45 J. P. 392.

The respondents, an urban sanitary authority, served, under the provisions of s. 94 of the Public Health Act, 1875, upon the appellant, who was the owner of certain houses within the borough to which respectively were attached privies and ashpits which were a nuisance, a notice requiring him to abate the nuisance, "and for that purpose, to deodorise and fill in the privies, privy vaults, and ashpits, convert the same to proper pan water-closets, and connect them with the main sewer." The notice was not complied with. An order was thereupon made by two justices under the provisions of s. 96 of the act, in the terms of the notice:—Held, upon a case stated, that the order was a good order, for that by s. 96 it was left absolutely to the justices to order any works or structural alterations which they in their discretion might think necessary for the abatement of the nuisance. Whitaker v. Derby Urban Sanitary Authority, 55 L. J., M. C. 8; 50 J. P. 357.

A privy openly discharged night-soil and offensive matter on the bank of a river; the sanitary authority served the owner of the premises with a notice to abate the nuisance, and for that purpose to "remove the present pipes and pan, level the floor under the seat of the privy, and provide a galvanised double-handled pail under the seat, the cover of which said seat to be movable, so that the premises should no longer be a nuisance or injurious to health"; and the justices at sessions made an order in the terms of the notice:—Held, that they had jurisdiction to make the order. Saunders, Ex parte (11 Q. B. D. 191), followed, and Whitchurch, Ex parte (6 Q. B. D. 545), distinguished or dissented from. Reg. v. Llewellyn, 55 L. J., M. C. 9, n.; 13 Q. B. D. 681; 33 W. R. 150; 49 J. P. 101.

A sanitary authority had served a notice under s. 94 of the Public Health Act, 1875, on the owner of premises to abate a nuisance, and had ordered the owner "to lay down a six-inch glazed stoneware drain-pipe, and to connect it with the main sewer in front of his house":—Held, that the justices had jurisdiction under s. 96 to make the order in that form. Reg. v. Kent Inhabitants, 55 L. J., M. C. 9, n.

—— Order should specify Work required to be done.]—An order of justices made under s. 96 of the Public Health Act, 1875, upon the complaint of a local authority, required the owner of premises to abate within a specified time a nuisance arising from untrapped drains, "and to execute such works and do such things as may be necessary for that purpose, so that the same shall no longer be a nuisance or injurious to health":—Held, that this order was bad, because it did not specify what works and things the owner should execute and do for the purpose of abating the nuisance. Reg. v. Wheatley, 55 L. J., M. C. 11; 16 Q. B. D. 34; 54 L. T. 680; 34 W. R. 257; 50 J. P. 424.

8. URINALS.

Proper and Convenient Situation—Discretion of Urban Authority.]—Where an urban authority, acting under s. 39 of the Public Health Act, 1875, selects a site as a proper and convenient situation for a urinal, then, in the absence of malâ fides, and assuming that no case of nuisance is made out, the onus lies on persons objecting to that particular site to shew that it is not a proper and convenient situation, and for this purpose evidence that there are other situations more proper and more convenient is irrelevant. Pethick v. Plymouth Corporation, 8 R. 107; 70 L. T. 304; 42 W. R. 246; 58 J. P. 476.

Liability of Person Erecting.]—An owner of a public-house erected a urinal in a private passage leading out of the street, and enclosed it between doors which he kept locked every night. There was a space between the line of area railings in the street and the urinal door nearest to the street, which space he shut off from the street with an iron gate placed flush with the line of railings. This gate was never locked. It being proved that persons habitually used the space between the door and the gate in such a manner as to cause to the neighbours a nuisance, which he took no steps to prevent:—Held, that he was responsible for such user, it being a probable consequence of the manner in which he had arranged the premises. Chibnall v. Paul, 29 W. R. 536.

9. Lodging Houses.

What are.]—A local board made by-laws requiring registration, &c., from the landlord of a lodging-house, and defined "lodging-house" to mean "a house or part of a house which is let in lodgings or occupied by members of more than one family." B. let four unfurnished rooms of her house to M. and his family:—Held, that the justices were wrong in holding that B. did not come within the meaning of the definition as landlord of a lodging-house. Roots v. Beaumont, 51 J. P. 197.

A lodging-house maintained as a charitable institution for the reception of poor persons at a small payment, and not for purposes of gain, held not to be a common lodging-house within the Common Lodging Houses Act, 1853, s. 3. Booth v. Ferrett, 59 L. J., M. C. 136; 25 Q. B. D. 87; 63 L. T. 346; 38 W. R. 718; 55 J. P. 7.

Resolution to Register—Registration.]—The respondent, having fulfilled the necessary preliminaries under s. 78 of the Public Health Act, 1875, applied to be registered as the keeper of a common lodging-house under s. 76, and the local authority passed a resolution that his house should be registered. The clerk did not carry out this resolution, and no formal registration of the respondent or his house was made, and eight months afterwards the local authority resolved that the respondent should not be registered, and two months later prosecuted him for keeping a common lodging-house without being registered. The justices refused to convict:—Held, upon a case stated, that, for the purpose of the act, the resolution of the local authority constituted registration, and that the justices were right in refusing to convict the respondent. Coles v. Fibbens, 52 L. T. 358; 49 J. P. 308.

Cancelling Registration—Keeping without Licence.]—K. was duly entered in the register of the B. urban authority as keeper of a common lodging-house. Two months later the inspector reported that it was kept as a house of bad repute, and the health committee by resolution withdrew the licence and ordered K. to clear out his lodgers in a week, and on his refusal he was charged with keeping the house without being registered:—Held, that the justices were right in dismissing the information, as there was no power to cancel the licence except for the reasons set forth in the statute. Blake v. Kelly, 52 J. P. 263.

10. Markets and Shops.

a. Locality.

Setting up Market in a New Place.]—A corporation, being lords of a market and owners of the soil, is entitled at common law to remove the market; but where the corporation, acting as a local board, takes steps under the Local Government Act, 1858, to set up a market in a new place it can only act under the powers and subject to the provisoes of the statute, and is not entitled to fall back on its common law right. Ellis v. Bridgenorth Corporation, 2 Johns. & H. 67; 4 L. T. 112; 9 W. R. 331.

Quære, whether the immemorial privilege of householders, of erecting and hiring out stalls in front of houses in a market place, is a right protected by the proviso in s. 50. Ib.

Semble, that the setting up of a new market under that statute, at a short distance from and in lieu of an ancient market, is an establishment of a market within s. 50, and not a mere removal. Ib.

—— Ancient Market.]—A local improvement act imposed a penalty for exposing for sale in any of the streets of the town any meat so as to project over or upon any foot or carriage-way. The act provided that no person should be subject to any penalty for placing any stall or exposing provisions for sale, so as such stalls be placed in such part of the street as should be appointed by the commissioners, and that no person should be subject to any penalty for placing any stall or exposing provisions for sale in such parts of the streets as should have been theretofore used for that purpose at the times of the usual fairs and markets within the town. In 1853 a local board of health was constituted in the township, under 16 & 17 Vict. c. 24, who, by by-laws duly allowed and published, appointed certain places for markets for certain descriptions of goods on market days, and imposed penalties for the breach thereof:—Held, that the provisions of the local act did not exempt from such penalties one who violated these by-laws by exposing for sale meat at a place other than that so appointed by the local board of health, notwithstanding the spot where such meat was so exposed for sale was a place where such articles had for a long series of years been sold by him and others. Savage v. Brook, 15 C. B. (N.S.) 264; 33 L. J., M. C. 42; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 587; 9 L. T. 334; 12 W. R. 81.

Obstruction of Footway—Exposing for Sale outside Shop.]—W.'s shop, on being rebuilt, was set back four-and-a-half feet to suit the line of building. The space thus added to the pavement had been open to the street for two years, and W. put goods for sale on this space. He was charged, under a local act, for exposing goods in the street outside his shop:—Held, that the justices were right in holding that the intervening space so used was not part of the street, and that W. had a right to use it as he did. Hitchman v. Watt, 58 J. P. 720.

The defendant exposed goods for sale outside his shop in a street in the city of Dublin, but the place where they were so exposed was part of the premises of the defendant over which the public had no right to pass:—Held, that he was guilty of an offence within the meaning of 5 & 6 Vict. c. 24, s. 17, sub-s. 7. Dowling v. Byrne, Ir. R. 10 C. L. 135. Dolan v. Kavanagh, ib. 166.

A shopkeeper exposed goods for sale outside his shop in a street, on a space in front of it which was gained by covering over the area. This space lay between the shop and the public flagway, and at one end of it a railing projected from the house to the public flagway:—Held, that to expose things for sale on such a space was not an offence within 5 & 6 Vict. c. 24, s. 17, sub-s. 7. The concluding words of the sub-section, "so as to cause any annoyance or obstruction in any thoroughfare," govern only the immediately preceding portion of the section. Byrne v. Ring, Ir. R. 10 C. L. 192.

—— User for Thirty Years.]—W. was a draper, who had a shop with a grid in front and a cellar-flap on which he exposed goods about a foot or more from his outer wall. He and his predecessor had done the same for thirty years. Being summoned for exposing goods which projected over the footway, he set up a claim of right as the owner of the street or soil, and also on the ground of the original owner having always done the same:—Held, that there being no proof of the dedication by the original owner subject to such right, and no proof of ownership of the soil, the justices rightly convicted W. Whittaker v. Rhodes, 46 J. P. 182.

By a local act of 1872 (35 & 36 Vict. c. 78), s. 95, if any person places, hangs up, or otherwise exposes any furniture, goods, produce, wares, merchandise, matter, or thing, so that the same projects or project into or over any footway, or beyond the line of any house, shop, or building, at which the same is or are exposed, he shall be liable to a penalty. Justices refused to convict a person who was charged under this section; but they stated, in the case reserved at the complainant's request, that the defendant exposed greengrocery, in which he dealt, on a cooler or a tray of wood, projecting two feet nine inches beyond the line of the brickwork of his building. This tray fell forward from the shop window, and when used was supported by iron stanchions and hinges. The steps of the adjoining house projected three inches further than this tray during the day. At night, and on Sundays, the tray was not beyond the line of the defendant's and the adjoining house; the street was exceptionally wide at this particular part. The premises had been erected between thirty and forty years, and during that period the tenants had always used the same cooler or tray, or something of the same description:—Held, that the act must be taken to refer to the line of shop existing at the time of its passing, which in this case was the line of the tray; and that the justices were right. Wilson v. Cunliffe, 29 L. T. 913.

Sale on Land Leased by Corporation—Right of Corporation to establish Market—"Prescribed Limits."]—The appellant, a cattle salesman, occupied premises which he used for the sale of cattle under leases granted by the corporation of a borough, containing covenants for quiet enjoyment. Afterwards the corporation, as the urban authority, established a cattle market in the borough and published a list of tolls. The appellant was convicted for selling cattle for which no toll had been paid in his sale-yard, within the borough, but not within the limits of the markets. On a case stated:—Held, that the corporation had not derogated from their grant by establishing a market, that the appellant had not by virtue of the leases acquired any right to sell cattle within the meaning of s. 166 of the Public Health Act, 1875, which the urban authority could not interfere with by establishing a market, and was therefore liable to a penalty under s. 13 of the Markets and Fairs Clauses Act, 1847; that, by the use of the words "within their district" in s. 166 of the Public Health Act, 1875, the district of the urban authority was constituted "the prescribed limits" within the meaning of s. 13 of the Markets and Fairs Clauses Act, 1847. Spurling v. Bantoft, 60 L. J., Q. B. 745; [1891] 2 Q. B. 384; 65 L. T. 584; 40 W. R. 157; 17 Cox, C. C. 372; 56 J. P. 132.

Sale on Foreshore — By-law.]—A sanitary authority was empowered by a local act to make by-laws and regulations with reference to the seabeach and foreshore in the district which were vested in them for the purpose of public walks and pleasure-grounds. Subsequently to the passing of the local act a part of the foreshore was converted into an esplanade. The sanitary authority made a by-law prohibiting the sale of any goods on any part of the seabeach, foreshore, or esplanade, except by the direction of the local authority:—Held, that the by-law was not unreasonable or ultra vires. Gray v. Sylvester, 46 W. R. 63; 61 J. P. 807.

b. Regulation of Sales.

Of Coals.]—By 26 & 27 Vict. c. 32, the owner of any coals brought within the district of the local board of health for Hull is bound, "before such coal, or any part thereof, is sold or delivered or dealt with in the district," to deliver to the inspector appointed for the purpose the original pit note denoting the quantity and quality thereof. A shipowner brought coals in a lighter into the district of the board of health for Hull, where they were transferred into a steamer, also belonging to the shipowner:—Held, that this was dealing with the coals within the meaning of the statute, and that the shipowner was bound to deliver the pit note to the inspector. Wilson v. Kingston-upon-Hull Local Board, 12 Jur. (N.S.) 706; 14 W. R. 638.

And see COALS.

Of Bread.]—By 6 & 7 Will. 4. c. 37, s. 4, all bread sold beyond the city of London shall be sold by weight: provided that nothing in the act shall extend to prevent bakers "from selling bread usually sold under the denomination of French or fancy bread or rolls without previously weighing the same":—Held, that the proviso does not apply to bread which, having at the time of the passing of the act been usually sold under the denomination of fancy bread, had at the time of the sale ceased to be sold under that denomination. Reg. v. Wood, 10 B. & S. 534; 38 L. J., M. C. 144; L. R. 4 Q. B. 559; 20 L. T. 654; 17 W. R. 850.

The 6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 37, s. 4, provides, under a penalty, that all bread shall be sold by weight, but nothing in the act contained is to prevent any baker or seller of bread from selling "bread usually sold under the denomination of French or fancy bread or rolls without previously weighing the same." The exemption from the necessity of selling by weight applies only to that which was known as French or fancy bread at the time of the passing of the act (1836) and to bread of a like kind with it. Aërated Bread Co. v. Gregg or Grigg, 42 L. J., M. C. 117; L. R. 8 Q. B. 355; 28 L. T. 816.

Bread made in separate loaves, and so baked as to be crusty all over, and known in the trade as French or fancy bread, but differing from ordinary bread only in the manner of baking, is not French or fancy bread within the meaning of the exemption. Ib.

Where a customer applying to purchase bread asks for bread by weight, the baker is bound to sell by weight, whether he delivers to him ordinary bread or fancy bread, but, semble, he is not bound to weigh the loaf in the presence of the customer when he is not requested to do so. Reg. v. Kennett, 10 B. & S. 534; L. R. 4 Q. B. 565; 20 L. T. 656.

The practice of a baker was to sell loaves of bread at 6*d.*, varying the weight of the loaf with the price of corn. When he purposed to sell a 3½-lb. loaf for 6*d.*, the custom in his bakery was to put into the oven 4 lbs. of dough, but the loaf was not weighed after baking. He sold at 6*d.* each six loaves, which varied in weight, but all but one weighed over 3¼ lbs. :—Held, that he was rightly convicted of selling bread otherwise than by weight, under 6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 37, s. 4. Hill v. Browning, L. R. 5 Q. B. 453 ; 22 L. T. 584 ; 19 W. R. 21.

—— Obligation to Carry Weights and Scales.]—By 6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 37, s. 7, every baker or seller of bread . . . who shall convey or carry out bread for sale in and from any cart or other carriage, shall be provided with and shall constantly carry in such cart or other carriage a correct beam and scales with proper weights . . . and in case any such baker or seller of bread . . . shall, at any time, carry out or deliver any bread without being provided with such beam and scales with proper weights . . . then, and in every such case, every such baker or seller of bread shall for every such offence forfeit and pay a sum of money not exceeding 5*l.* A baker delivered bread from a cart at a customer's shop pursuant to a general order given some time previously ; he was then unprovided with scales and weights :—Held, that he had committed an offence against the foregoing enactment. Robinson v. Cliff, 45 L. J., M. C. 109 ; 1 Ex. D. 294 ; 34 L. T. 689.

11. OFFENSIVE TRADES.

a. Slaughter-houses.

What are.]—"Slaughter-house," as used in the Towns Improvement Clauses Act, 1847, and the Local Government Act, 1858, includes not merely the premises where the actual slaughtering of cattle takes place, but also the premises used for processes connected with or incident to the slaughtering ; and premises in use for these processes, even though no actual slaughtering of cattle takes place within them, are used as slaughter-houses within s. 126 of the Towns Improvement Clauses Act, 1847. Hides v. Littlejohn, 74 L. T. 24 ; 18 Cox, C. C. 219 ; 60 J. P. 101.

Consent to Erection—Licence.]—A corporation was also the local board of health under 11 & 12 Vict. c. 63. By the Local Government Act, 1858, which is to be read with that act, the clauses of 10 & 11 Vict. c. 34 (Towns Improvement Act), with respect to slaughter-houses, is incorporated. The effect of the clauses as incorporated is to provide that no slaughter-house shall be erected or used without the licence of the board of health. By a market act, passed subsequently to the local government act, for the better management of the property of the corporation, a company was incorporated, in which certain property of the corporation was vested, and the act provided that the company, with the consent of the corporation in writing under the hand of the town clerk, might erect and maintain slaughter-houses in the borough. The company erected a slaughter-house, having previously obtained the consent of the corporation in a memorandum of a resolution under the hand of the clerk ; but the corporation, acting as a local board, afterwards refused to license the slaughter-house. A., to whom the company had agreed to demise the tolls receivable under the act for slaughtering cattle in the slaughter-house, brought an action against the company for not making a good title to the tolls :—Held, that the consent given under the market act included the licence of the local board required by the 10 & 11 Vict. c. 34, s. 126. Anthony v. Brecon Markets Co., 41 L. J., Ex. 201 ; L. R. 7 Ex. 399 ; 26 L. T. 979 ; 21 W. R. 27—Ex. Ch.

By a local act of 1862, a company was empowered to erect a cattle market at Brecon, and by s. 65 the company from time to time, if and when they should think fit, and with, but not without, the consent of the corporation testified by writing under the hand of the mayor or town clerk, might provide and maintain slaughter-houses proper and sufficient for the slaughtering of cattle for the supply of the borough and its neighbourhood, upon such sites as they should think expedient. In 1863 the corporation consented to the provision and maintenance by the company of slaughter-houses proper and sufficient for the slaughtering of cattle for the supply of the borough and its neighbourhood, in pursuance of, and in accordance with, the above-mentioned s. 65 ; the company built slaughter-houses accordingly, but absolutely abandoned the use of them in 1864. The company subsequently built other slaughter-houses a quarter of a mile off ; but the corporation had always refused to give any further consent. Justices refused to convict under s. 19 of the Markets and Fairs Clauses Act, 1847, for slaughtering cattle on premises in the borough other than those leased by the appellant :—Held, that the slaughter-houses occupied by the appellant had not received the consent of the corporation under s. 65 of the local act of 1862, and that the justices were right. Hughes v. Trew, 36 L. T. 585.

—— By Resolution and Notice.]—A police act empowered a town council of a borough to grant licences for the erection of slaughter-houses. A. applied for a licence. The market committee inspected the site, and recommended the grant. The committee passed a resolution to grant the licence, and communicated the same to A., and the resolution was confirmed by the town council :—Held, that though it was usual afterwards to grant a formal licence in a printed form, still the grant was complete on the confirmation of the resolution and communication thereof to A., and operated as a licence. Howarth v. Manchester Corporation, 6 L. T. 683.

Penalty for Erecting—Liability.]—By 11 & 12 Vict. c. 63, s. 64, the business of a slaughterer of cattle, or other noxious or offensive business, shall not be newly established in any building or place in any district, after the act has been applied to it, without the consent of the local board of health ; and whosoever offends against this enactment shall be liable, for each offence, to a penalty of 50*l.* A cattle-market company, cattle having never been slaughtered in the market before, after the act had been applied to the district, erected a building in which they allowed persons to slaughter cattle on the payment of 2*s.* a head, the company finding the tackle attached to the building, but the persons slaughtering bringing their own implements :—Held, that the company was liable to the penalty. Liverpool New Cattle Market Co. v. Hodson, 36 L. J., M. C. 30 ; L. R. 2 Q. B. 131 ; 15 L. T. 534 ; 15 W. R. 563.

Premises Covered by Licence.]—Prior to the coming into operation in a town of the 31 & 32 Vict. c. 98, S. occupied premises in a street there for the purpose of slaughtering pigs. These premises consisted of a yard with an entrance by closed doors or gates from the street, and in the yard, pig-pens, a cart-shed, a shed used for slaughtering pigs, and a stable for horses, the external vaults of which constituted the walls of the building. Whilst the premises were so used S., upon the coming into operation of the act, obtained a licence, which licence stated that the animals to be slaughtered were pigs. No animals before them were ever slaughtered in the stable. Since obtaining such licence S. had converted the stable into another slaughtering shed, and used the same for slaughtering bullocks and sheep therein. Upon an information for using this stable as a slaughter-house without having obtained a licence for that purpose, the justices held that upon a proper application of the law to the facts, S. was entitled to use the stable as he did, for that the stable, as forming an original portion of the premises licenced as a slaughter-house, was covered by such licence: —Held, that the justices were right. Brighton Local Board v. Stenning, 15 L. T. 567.

Private Premises.]—By a clause in a local act, which closely followed the Markets and Fairs Clauses Act (10 & 11 Vict. c. 14), s. 19, it was enacted, that "no person shall slaughter any cattle, or dress any carcase for sale as human food, or food of man, in any place within the limits other than a slaughter-house": —Held, that to slaughter cattle on the private premises of an inhabitant of the town, unless for sale as human food, was no offence within this clause. Elias v. Nightingale, 8 El. & Bl. 698; 27 L. J., M. C. 151; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 166; 6 W. R. 91.

Using Horses Delivered to be Slaughtered.]—The huntsman of a pack of hounds had the care and management of the kennels, and of a place which was used solely as a slaughter-house for the purpose of slaughtering horses and other cattle sent there as food for the hounds. B. sent a horse to this place, and delivered it to the huntsman for the purpose of the horse being slaughtered as food for the hounds, telling him of the purpose. Instead of slaughtering the horse, he lent him to a person for the purpose of being worked, and he was worked by that person: —Held, that the 12 & 13 Vict. c. 92, s. 9 (which imposes a penalty for using horses delivered to be slaughtered at a place used for slaughtering), applied to the huntsman, and was not confined to persons having or managing licensed slaughter-houses under 26 Geo. 3, c. 71. Colam v. Hall, 40 L. J., M. C. 100; L. R. 6 Q. B. 206; 23 L. T. 802; 19 W. R. 563.

b. Other Trades.

Brick-making.]—Brick-making is not necessarily a noxious or offensive business, trade, or manufacture, within s. 64 of the Public Health Act, 1848. Wanstead Local Board v. Hill, 13 C. B. (N.S.) 479; 32 L. J., M. C. 135; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 972; 7 L. T. 744; 11 W. R. 368.

Keeping Swine.]—It is an offence under the Public Health Act, 1875, s. 47, to keep swine so as to be a "nuisance" in the common-law meaning of the term. It is not necessary to such offence that there should be any injury to health. Banbury Urban Sanitary Authority v. Page, 51 L. J., M. C. 21; 8 Q. B. D. 97; 45 L. T. 759; 30 W. R. 415; 46 J. P. 184.

Keeping of swine and a pig-sty in such a manner as to be a nuisance is an offence within 11 & 12 Vict. c. 63, s. 59. Digby v. West Ham Local Board, 6 W. R. 468.

—— Near Dwelling Houses—By-law.] — A rural sanitary authority, purporting to act under the powers of ss. 44 and 276 of the Public Health Act, 1875, made a by-law prohibiting the keeping of swine within the distance of fifty feet from any dwelling house within their district:—Held, that the by-law was unreasonable, and therefore bad. Heap v. Burnley Union, 53 L. J., M. C. 76; 12 Q. B. D. 617; 32 W. R. 660; 48 J. P. 359.

An urban sanitary authority, under the powers conferred by the Public Health (Ireland) Act, 1878 (41 & 42 Vict. c. 52), made certain by-laws, one of which was as follows:—No swine shall be kept in any yard within a distance of twenty-one feet from a dwelling-house or public building in which any person may be, or may be intended to be, employed in any manufacture, trade, or business, except with the special permission of the sanitary authority:—Held, that the by-law was valid. Lutton v. Doherty, 16 L. R., Ir. 493.

—— For some Hours only.]—A by-law made by an urban authority imposed a penalty for keeping swine within fifty yards of a dwelling-house. M., in course of business, used to buy swine elsewhere in the morning, and bring them within fifty yards, &c., and keep them till the evening, when they were sent off by the railway The justices held that, because the pigs were not fed and kept all night, this could not be a keeping within the by-law:—Held, the justices were wrong, and that keeping them all night was not necessary to the offence. Steers v. Manton, 57 J. P. 584.

Manure Making — Effluvia Injurious to Health.]—The respondents were manufacturers of artificial manures, and in the course of manufacture offensive effluvia were given off which were blown over the appellant's district, and occasionally interfered materially with the comfort of the inhabitants. The appellants made a complaint to the justices under s. 114 of the Public Health Act, 1875. The justices dismissed the complaint, but stated a special case:—Held, that inasmuch as the effluvia, though not injurious to persons in sound health, were calculated to cause sick persons to suffer, it was a nuisance and injurious to health within the 114th section. Malton Local Board v. Malton Farmers' Manure Co., 49 L. J., M. C. 90; 4 Ex. D. 302; 44 J. P. 155.

Injury to Health.]—It is not necessary, in order to bring a nuisance within the section, to prove that such nuisance is injurious to health. Ib. See Banbury Urban Sanitary Authority v. Page, supra.

Bone-boiling—Closed Cylinders.]—The appellants, without the leave of the sanitary authority, carried on a business of steaming bones by placing them in metal cylinders hermetically sealed, and introducing dry steam, which stripped the bones and caused no offensive smell, no water being used in the process:—Held, that the appellants could not be convicted under s. 112 of the Public Health Act, 1875, for establishing the offensive trade of bone-boiling. Cardiff Manure Co. v. Cardiff Union, 54 J. P. 661.

Smelting Works—Exemption—Public Nuisance.]—The provision in s. 334 of the Public Health Act, 1875, that nothing in that act shall extend to certain businesses therein specified, exempts their proprietors only from the liabilities created and penalties imposed by that act, and does not relieve them from liability for a public nuisance in a suit brought by the attorney-general for its abatement, nor from their ordinary common-law liability to an owner whose property is injuriously affected by it. Att.-Gen. v. Logan, [1891] 2 Q. B. 100; 65 L. T. 162; 55 J. P. 615.

Right of Local Board to sue as Owners and to act as Relators.]—A local authority may act as relators in an action brought by the attorney-general for the purpose of abating a public nuisance, and may themselves maintain an action for damages for a nuisance affecting property of which they are the actual owners. Ib.

Fish-Frying.]—By the 112th section of the Public Health Act, 1875 (38 & 39 Vict. c. 55), it is provided that any person who, after the passing of this act, establishes within the district of an urban authority, without their consent in writing, any offensive trade, that is to say, the trade of blood-boiler, or bone-boiler, or fell-monger, or soap-boiler, or tallow-melter, or tripe-boiler, or any other noxious or offensive trade, business, or manufacture, shall be liable to a penalty, &c. A fish-frying business, which is as a fact an offensive business by reason of effluvia arising therefrom and extending to a distance of two or three hundred yards, is not a noxious or offensive business within the meaning of the section, which only applies where a business is necessarily noxious or offensive. Braintree Local Board v. Boyton, 52 L. T. 99; 48 J. P. 582.

Smallpox Hospital — Adjoining District — Consent.]—A hospital is not a noxious business within s. 112 of the Public Health Act, 1875. The powers conferred by s. 131, exercisable by a local authority, are not limited for their exercise to the district of the particular local authority which exercises them. Sect. 285 does not apply to the powers conferred by s. 131 so as to require for their exercise in an adjoining district the consent of the local authority of such adjoining district. Withington Local Board v. Manchester Corporation, 62 L. J., Ch. 393; [1893] 2 Ch. 19; 2 R. 367; 68 L. T. 330; 41 W. R. 306; 57 J. P. 340—C. A.

12. Cleansing Pavements and Premises.

Removal of Snow — 11 & 12 Vict. c. 63—Power to make By-laws.]—Under 11 & 12 Vict. c. 63, local boards of health have no general power to make by-laws for carrying out the purposes of the act, but only such by-laws as are authorised by s. 55. Reg. v. Wood, 5 El. & Bl. 49; 3 C. L. R. 1134. S. C., nom. Reg. v. Rose, 24 L. J., M. C. 130; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 802; 3 W. R. 419.

A by-law, "that all occupiers of any premises within the district shall properly clean and remove all snow, or other obstructions, from the footpath and channel opposite their respective premises before nine of the clock in the forenoon of each day," is bad. Ib.

An information having been laid against an occupier under this by-law, and it being proved that the occupier had neglected to remove snow, it was objected that the by-law was bad; but the justice held that, inasmuch as it had been allowed by the secretary of state, he could not entertain the objection; and he convicted the occupier. The court quashed the conviction on certiorari, though s. 137 enacts that no proceeding touching the conviction of any offender against the act shall be removable by certiorari, holding that the justice acted without jurisdiction. Ib.

Dust and Ashes.]—The 10 & 11 Vict. c. 34, s. 82, which requires the commissioners under the special act to cause "all the dust, ashes and rubbish to be carried away from the houses and tenements of the inhabitants of the town or district within the limits of the special act," does not extend to the dust and ashes the exclusive produce of manufactories. Lyndon v. Standbridge, 2 H. & N. 45; 26 L. J., Ex. 386; 5 W. R. 590.

"House Refuse"—Clinkers from Furnaces in Steam Laundry.]—Clinkers produced in the furnaces of boilers belonging to a steam laundry, used to generate steam for the purpose principally of heating the water used in the business, but also for the purpose of warming the laundry, are not "house refuse" within the meaning of s. 42 of the Public Health Act, 1875, and therefore a local authority which has undertaken the removal of house refuse within its district is not bound to remove them. London and Provincial Laundry v. Willesden Local Board, [1892] 2 Q. B. 271; 67 L. T. 499; 40 W. R. 557; 56 J. P. 696.

—— Removal of, from "House"—What is.]—The definition of "house" in s. 4 of the Public Health Act, 1875, is not to be read into s. 42 of that act, and therefore a steam laundry, although containing a dwelling-house for the manageress and for the clerk in charge, is not a "house" for the purpose of the removal of "house refuse" under s. 42 of the same act. Ib.

Power to Enter Private Premises—Well on Private Property.]—The Public Health (Scotland) Act, 1867, s. 89, sub-s. 4, provides that "the local authority may cause all existing public cisterns, pumps, wells, reservoirs, conduits, aqueducts and works used for the gratuitous supply of water to the inhabitants to be continued, maintained and plentifully supplied with water." A well situated on private ground, the water of which has been used for domestic purposes gratuitously by the inhabitants in the vicinity for the prescriptive period, is a public well within the meaning of this section; and the local authority can enter on the land and do all acts to the well for continuing and maintaining it, which the inhabitants might have done before. And this, notwithstanding that there may be a company with a vested right to supply the inhabitants with water. Smith v. Archibald, 5 App. Cas. 489. And see Dungarvan Union v. Mansfield, and Holmfirth Local Board v. Shore, post, col. 478.

13. Food and Drink.

a. Sale of Unsound Meat.

Persons Liable for.]—Victuallers, brewers and other common dealers in victuals, who in the course of their trade sell provisions unfit for the food of man, are criminally responsible under 51 Hen. 3, "Pillor' et Tumbrel' &c." and of Edw. 1, "De Pistoribus et Hasiatoribus et aliis Vitellariis," if they do so knowingly, and probably if they even do not, and are liable civilly to the vendee without any fraud on their part or warranty of the soundness of the thing sold: but a private person, not following any of these trades, who sells an unwholesome article for food, is not liable under such circumstances. Burnby v. Rollitt, 16 M. & W. 644; 17 L. J., Ex. 190; 11 Jur. 827.

A meat salesman can be indicted at common law for knowingly sending or exposing meat for sale in a public market as fit for human food, which, in fact, was not so. Reg. v. Stevenson, 3 F. & F. 106.

So a carrier, for knowingly bringing to market meat unfit for human food. Reg. v. Jarvis, 3 F. & F. 108.

But a person is not indictable for sending to a meat-salesman meat he knows to be unfit for human food, if he does not know and intend that it is to be sold as human food. Reg. v. Crawley, 3 F. & F. 109.

Person "to Whom the Same belongs"—Under-bailiff.]—The appellant was an under-bailiff on the estate of N., a large landowner, and it was his duty to receive instructions from, and obey the orders of, the head bailiff. Two cows belonging to N. were slaughtered, as they were affected by disease; the appellant was not present when the cows were slaughtered, but on the same day he was told by the head bailiff to send the meat to Portsmouth, and to go there himself to meet it. The appellant went to Portsmouth on the following day and saw a butcher named B., and on the next day, the head bailiff, having been told that the meat had not been sent off, directed the appellant to take the meat to P. railway station and consign it to the butcher. The transit of the meat to the P. station was superintended by the appellant, who took charge of it. It was then sent by train in the appellant's own name to the butcher at Portsmouth, the appellant sending a telegram to the butcher, "Two carcases of meat addressed to you; make best of it." The butcher replied that the meat, which was then lying at Portsmouth railway station, was of no use to him. The appellant then sent a telegram to the station-master: "Ask consignee to do the best he can. If he can't dispose of it, ask him to bury it, and charge sender expenses." The meat was seized while lying at the station, and condemned as unsound. Upon these facts the appellant was convicted, under s. 117 of the Public Health Act, 1875, of exposing unsound meat for sale, as being the person "to whom the same belonged": —Held, quashing the conviction, that there was no evidence whatever upon the facts, to shew that the appellant was the person "to whom the meat belonged" within the meaning of s. 117 of the act. Newton v. Monkcom, 58 L. T. 231; 16 Cox, C. C. 382; 51 J. P. 692.

Exposure for Sale.]—Diseased meat placed on a cart, when passing along the streets of the city of Dublin from a slaughter-house to a place for the manufacture of preserved meats, in the city, was seized by the inspector of nuisances:—Held, that the meat was, when placed upon the cart, exposed for sale and intended for the food of man, within the meaning of the 26 & 27 Vict. c. 117, s. 2. Daly v. Webb, Ir. R. 4 C. L. 309; 18 W. R. 631.

The appellant, a farmer, sent to a salesman on the London Central Meat Market meat for the purpose of being sold for human food, such meat being unwholesome and unfit for the food of man. The salesman did not expose the meat for sale, but placed it on one side, and gave notice to an inspector of nuisances, who caused the meat to be removed and condemned by a justice. The appellant was thereupon summoned before a justice upon an information laid under s. 2 of the Nuisances Removal Act (Amendment Act), 1863, charging him with being the owner of meat "unlawfully deposited in the London Central Meat Market for the purpose of sale and intended for the food of man, the same being diseased, unsound, unwholesome and unfit for the food of man," and was convicted:—Held, that there having been no sale or exposure for sale of the meat, the appellant was wrongly convicted. Barlow v. Terrett, 60 L. J., M. C. 104; [1891] 2 Q. B. 107; 65 L. T. 148; 39 W. R. 640; 55 J. P. 632.

Intent to Sell.]—A person who has unsound meat in his possession with the intention of selling the same for the food of man is guilty of an offence under s. 117 of the Public Health Act, 1875, although he may not have actually exposed the meat for sale. Vinter v. Hind (10 Q. B. D. 63) distinguished. Mallinson v. Carr, 60 L. J., M. C. 34; [1891] 1 Q. B. 48; 63 L. T. 459; 39 W. R. 270; 17 Cox, C. C. 220; 55 J. P. 102.

The council of a borough under the Municipal Corporations Act (5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 76), s. 99, empowering them to make by-laws for the suppression of all such nuisances as are not already punishable in a summary manner, made a by-law imposing a penalty on any butcher or other person who should have in his possession, with intent to sell or expose for sale, any unsound, putrid or unwholesome meat or other victuals or provisions unfit for the food of man, or which would be deleterious to the health of persons who might feed thereon. S. was charged under this by-law with having in his possession, with intent to sell, some cheese unfit for the food of man:—Held, that the by-law was properly made, and was still in force, and that the having in possession with intent to sell, or exposing for sale, cheese which was in fact unfit for human food, was a nuisance at common law, and so within the scope of the Municipal Corporations Act, s. 90, and that S. was within the by-law. Shillito v. Thompson, 45 L. J., M. C. 18; 1 Q. B. D. 12; 33 L. T. 506; 24 W. R. 57.

Scienter.]—It is not necessary to support a conviction under s. 117 of the Public Health Act, 1875, against the owner of unsound meat for exposing it for sale, that proof should be given of actual personal knowledge on the part of the owner of the condition of the meat. Blaker v. Tillstone, 63 L. J., M. C. 72; [1894] 1 Q. B. 345; 10 R. 94; 70 L. T. 31; 42 W. R. 253; 58 J. P. 184.

Obstructing Inspection—On a Sunday.]—A butcher at his residence half a mile from his shop, on a Sunday afternoon was requested to go himself or send someone with the key to admit the inspector of nuisances to his shop, in order that some meat there might be examined. He refused, and was convicted under 26 & 27 Vict. c. 117, s. 3, of preventing, obstructing, or impeding the inspector when duly engaged in carrying the provisions of that act into execution:—Held, that although Sunday afternoon might, under some circumstances, be a reasonable time for the examination of meat under s. 2, the butcher had committed no offence under s. 3. Small v. Bickley, 32 L. T. 726.

Seizure.]—The respondent, a butcher, exposed for sale part of a cow which had died of disease, and sold the meat to a customer, who took it home for food, and some days afterwards at the request of the appellant, an inspector of nuisances, handed it over to him, and it was condemned by a justice as unfit for the food of man:—Held, that the meat was not "so seized" and condemned as is prescribed by ss. 116, 117, of the Public Health Act, 1875, and therefore the respondent was not liable as the person to whom the same "did belong at the time of the exposure for sale," to a penalty under s. 117. Vinter v. Hind, 52 L. J., M. C. 93; 10 Q. B. D. 63; 48 L. T. 359; 31 W. R. 198; 47 J. P. 373.

Some diseased meat was taken into a yard belonging to a butcher's shop and then seized by the police. Within this yard there was a slaughter-house:—Held, that the yard was a place within 26 & 27 Vict. c. 117, s. 2. Young v. Gattridge, 38 L. J., M. C. 67; L. R. 4 Q. B. 166.

Condemnation Day after Seizure — Whether Delay reasonable.]—Where unsound meat was seized by the inspector of nuisances at half-past nine in the evening, and he then went in search of a justice, but did not find one till next morning at a quarter-past ten, when an order to condemn the meat was made:—Held, that there had been no unreasonable delay, and that the justices were wrong in dismissing on that ground an information for having unsound meat for sale within the meaning of ss. 116 and 117 of the Public Health Act, 1875. Burton v. Bradley, 51 J. P. 118.

Evidence that Meat was wrongly Condemned —Admissibility.]—Meat exposed by a butcher for sale was seized and condemned under the Public Health Act, 1875, ss. 116 and 117, as unfit for the food of man. Upon a charge against the butcher under s. 117 (which enacts that the person to whom the meat seized and condemned belonged shall be liable to a penalty), the justices admitted evidence that the meat was sound and fit for the food of man, and, being satisfied that it was so, dismissed the charge:—Held, that the justices decided correctly. Waye v. Thompson, 54 L. J., M. C. 140; 15 Q. B. D. 342; 53 L. T. 358; 33 W. R. 733; 15 Cox, C. C. 485; 49 J. P. 693.

Refusal of Magistrate to Condemn — Compensation — Costs of Attendance.] — When a justice refuses to condemn as unwholesome meat that has been seized by the officer of a local authority under s. 116 of the Public Health Act, 1875, the owner is entitled to include in the amount of "full compensation" recoverable by him from the local authority under s. 308, the costs incurred through the attendance of himself and his witnesses before the magistrate. Bater and Birkenhead Corporation, In re, 62 L. J., M. C. 107; [1893] 2 Q. B. 77; 4 R. 438; 69 L. T. 220; 41 W. R. 513; 58 J. P. 7—C. A.

The Queen's Bench Division also held that where a justice refuses to condemn the meat, the owner cannot decline to take it back if tendered to him; and, therefore, the compensation he is in such case entitled to under s. 308 is the difference between the value of the meat when seized and when tendered. S. C., 62 L. J., M. C. 107; [1893] 1 Q. B. 679; 4 R. 438; 68 L. T. 680; 41 W. R. 513; 57 J. P. 487.

Destruction of Meat—Notice.]—The 116th and 117th sections of the Public Health Act, 1875, give power to a medical officer of health or inspector of nuisances to seize meat, &c. exposed for sale or deposited in any place for the purpose of sale, or of preparation for sale, and intended for the food of man, which may appear to him to be diseased or unsound, and carry it before a justice, who, if it appears to him to be diseased or unsound, is to condemn the same and order it to be destroyed. The person to whom such meat, &c. belongs is also rendered by s. 117, liable to a penalty:—Held, that meat might be taken before a justice under the above sections and condemned without any summons or notice to the person to whom it belonged, and that such person having been subsequently to the destruction of the meat summoned and convicted of an offence under the above sections, such conviction was good. Reg. v. White, or White v. Redfern, 49 L. J., M. C. 19; 5 Q. B. D. 15; 41 L. T. 524; 28 W. R. 168; 44 J. P. 87.

b. Adulteration of Food.

i. Offences generally.

"Food"—Baking Powder.]—Baking powder composed of ingredients some of which are injurious to health is not an article of "food" within the Sale of Food and Drugs Act, 1875, and a person selling the same cannot be convicted under s. 3. "Food" comprises articles intended to form substantial components of articles of food or to be eaten as adjuncts thereto. James v. Jones, 63 L. J., M. C. 41; [1894] 1 Q. B. 304; 10 R. 410; 70 L. T. 351; 42 W. R. 400; 17 Cox, C. C. 726; 58 J. P. 230.

"Drug"—Beeswax.]—In a prosecution, under s. 6 of the Sale of Food and Drugs Act, 1875, of a grocer for selling beeswax adulterated by being mixed with paraffin:—Held, that beeswax, so sold, was not a drug. Fowle v. Fowle, 75 L. T. 514; 18 Cox, C. C. 462; 60 J. P. 758.

Bread.]—Mixing alum with bread in such manner as that crude lumps were found in the bread is indictable. Rex v. Dixon, 3 M. & S. 11; 4 Camp. 12; 15 R. R. 381.

Indictment against a defendant who was employed to make bread for the Military Asylum, which charged that he delivered to J. H. divers, to wit, 297 loaves, as and for good household bread, for the use and supply of the asylum and the children belonging thereto, whereas the loaves were not good household bread, but contained divers noxious and unwholesome materials not fit for the food of man, is sufficiently certain, without shewing what the noxious materials were, or that the defendant intended to injure the children's health. Ib.

An indictment does not lie against a miller for receiving good barley to grind at his mill, and delivering a mixture of oatmeal and barleymeal differing from the produce of the barley and which is musty and unwholesome. Rex v. Haynes, 4 M. & S. 214.

Indictment against a miller, charging in the same count that he received two separate parcels of barley, each of four bushels, to be ground at his mill, and that he delivered three bushels forty-six lbs. of oatmeal and barleymeal mixed, other and different than the produce of the four bushels, is ill, for the uncertainty to which of the four bushels it relates. Ib.

Gin.]—A publican sold as a bottle of gin liquid composed of 26 per cent. alcohol, 70 per cent. water, and 4 per cent. sugar. Evidence was adduced that gin was sold by retailers at varying strength from proof to 20 per cent. under proof. This liquid was 44 per cent. under proof, but the analyst said he should call it "gin whose alcoholic strength was exceedingly low." Justices convicted the publican under the Sale of Food and Drugs Act, 1875 (38 & 39 Vict. c. 63), s. 6:—Held, the facts justified the finding that this liquid was not of the quality of gin, but that the excess of water was a fraudulent increase of the measure of the article within the enacting part of the section. Pashler v. Stevenitt, 35 L. T. 862.

A publican was convicted under the Sale of Food and Drugs Act, 1875 (38 & 39 Vict. c. 63), s. 6, for selling to the prejudice of the purchaser a pint of gin which was not of the nature, substance, and quality of the article demanded by such purchaser. A person asked for a pint of gin at the publican's premises. He said that he had gin at 2*s.* and 1*s.* 4*d.* per pint. The purchaser bought a pint at the latter price. On analysis the gin was found to contain 43·15 per cent. of water, that is, it was 43·15 below proof, but the mixture was not injurious to health. The magistrate found that there was no recognised standard of alcoholic strength for gin, but that it varied from proof to 20 under proof:—Held, that whether the mixture in question was what a purchaser buying gin without any further description would reasonably expect to receive was a question of fact for the magistrate; and that there was sufficient evidence to justify the conviction. Webb v. Knight, 46 L. J., M. C. 264; 2 Q. B. D. 530; 36 L. T. 791; 26 W. R. 14—C. A.

And see Gage v. Elsey, post, col. 453.

Tea.]—A tea dealer was convicted under the Adulteration of Food Act, 1870 (35 & 36 Vict. c. 74), s. 2 (repealed), for selling geeen tea as unadulterated which was adulterated. A person asked for two ounces of green tea at the shop, for which he paid 5½*d.*, the shopman stating that he was authorised by his employer to guarantee all their green teas of the value of 3*s.* per pound and upwards as genuine green teas. On analysis, the tea was proved to be painted or faced with gypsum and prussian blue for the purpose of colouring it. The tea was sold in the same state in which it comes from abroad. The tea, which is imported from China as green tea, and generally known as such in the tea trade, is painted and faced in this manner; but this practice is not known to the public. Pure green tea, though not known generally in the trade as green tea, is imported from Japan:—Held, by Cockburn, C.J., Blackburn and Archibald, JJ., Quain, J., dissentiente, that the conviction was right. Roberts v. Egerton, 43 L. J., M. C. 135; L. R. 9 Q. B. 494; 30 L. T. 633; 22 W. R. 797.

Coffee — Fraudulent Intention to Increase Bulk.]—The defendant was a shopkeeper, and on being asked for a pound of coffee served the purchaser out of a canister of Symington's coffee, for which 1*s.* 4*d.* was paid, and affixed a label stating that it was sold as a mixture of chicory and coffee. It contained 85 per cent. of chicory. The magistrate dismissed the information for selling to the prejudice of the purchaser, but did not find whether the mixture was made with a fraudulent intent to increase the bulk:—Held, that he was bound to find that fact, and if affirmatively, that he ought to convict, though the defendant might have sold the article as he purchased it. Horder v. Meddings, 44 J. P. 234.

The respondent went into the appellant's shop and asked for half a pound of coffee, for which he was charged 9*d.*, the price of pure coffee; when the coffee was put up in a parcel and lying on the counter after payment, the respondent said he had bought it for analysis. The appellant then pointed out a label outside the parcel with the words, "This is a mixture of coffee and chicory." On analysis the coffee was only 60 per cent.; and the justices found that the chicory was used fraudulently to increase the bulk, and convicted L.:—Held, that the justices, on finding that there was fraud, were right. Liddiard v. Reece, 44 J. P. 233.

O. sold French coffee, the label stating that it was mixed with chicory, and the purchaser was also told the same. The analysis shewed that there was 60 per cent. chicory, and 40 per cent. coffee. The justices convicted O., holding that, as the proportion of chicory was not stated, it must have been added fraudulently to increase the bulk:—Held, the justices were wrong, and that there was no evidence to support a conviction. Otter v. Edgley, 57 J. P. 457.

—— Article asked for.]—A. went into H.'s shop and asked for half a pound of coffee. H. said she did not keep it, whereon A. pointed to certain tins labelled "coffee and chicory." H. said she sold that as a mixture, and A. asked for half a pound of it, which H. sold. The mixture contained about 30 per cent. of coffee. H. was charged with selling coffee not of the nature, &c., of coffee:—Held, that the justices were wrong in convicting H. of selling coffee, for that she sold only a mixture as she was entitled to do, and in doing which, she committed no offence within s. 6 of 38 & 39 Vict. c. 63. Higgins v. Hall, 51 J. P. 293.

Milk—Skimmed Milk.]—It was proved on an information under s. 6 of the Sale of Food and Drugs Act, 1875, that the appellant, who was an inspector under the act, on asking the respondent, a milk seller, for "milk," was supplied by the respondent with milk which had been skimmed, and which was, in consequence, as compared with normal milk as it comes from the cow, deficient in butter fat to an extent of 60 per cent. :—Held, that on these facts it was not proved that any offence had been committed by the respondent against the provisions of s. 6 of the Sale of Food and Drugs Act, 1875. Lane v. Collins, 54 L. J., M. C. 76 ; 14 Q. B. D. 193 ; 52 L. T. 257 ; 33 W. R. 365 ; 49 J. P. 89.

—— In course of Delivery — Payment of Carriage by Purchaser—"Place of Delivery."]—By the Sale of Food and Drugs Act Amendment Act, 1879 (42 & 43 Vict. c. 30), s. 3, certain officers therein named "may procure at the place of delivery any sample of any milk in course of delivery to the purchaser or consignee in pursuance of any contract for the sale to such purchaser or consignee of such milk"; and power is given to submit such sample for analysis, and take proceedings as provided by s. 13 of the Sale of Food and Drugs Act, 1875. The appellant, who lived at C., contracted with a dairy company for the sale to them of the milk from his dairy, to be delivered at London, or at such other station as the purchasers should from time to time appoint ; the carriage of the milk from C. to be paid by the purchasers. The purchasers appointed H. as a station for the delivery of milk under the contract. The appellant consigned milk from C. to the purchasers at H. ; immediately on its arrival at the latter station, and before possession was taken of it by the purchasers, a sample was taken by the respondent, which, upon analysis, was found to be adulterated by the addition of water :—Held, that, notwithstanding the provision for payment of the carriage by the purchasers, H. was the place of delivery of the milk to the purchasers within the meaning of the section ; and the appellant was, therefore, rightly convicted of an offence under the acts. Filshie v. Evington, [1892] 2 Q. B. 200 ; 66 L. T. 199 ; 40 W. R. 380 ; 17 Cox, C. C. 481 ; 56 J. P. 312.

Mustard—Declaration of Impurity.]—The 35 & 36 Vict. c. 74, s. 3 (repealed), enacts, that "any person who shall sell any article of food . . . knowing the same to have been mixed with any other substance, with intent fraudulently to increase its weight or bulk, and who shall not declare such admixture to any purchaser thereof before delivering the same and no other, shall be deemed to have sold an adulterated article of food . . . under this act" :—Held, that a person who had sold mustard admixed with flour and turmeric, substances not injurious to health, declaring at the time of such sale that he did not sell the article as pure mustard, had been guilty of no offence under the statute, and that it was not necessary, in order to comply with s. 3, that he should declare the nature and proportion of the substances admixed. Pope v. Tearle, 43 L. J., M. C. 129 ; L. R. 9 C. P. 499 ; 30 L. T. 789 ; 22 W. R. 950.

Hops.]—It is an offence within 7 Geo. 2, c. 19, to mix the vapour of sulphur and brimstone with hops. Rex v. Pack, 6 Term Rep. 374.

Seeds—Dyeing.]—Under 32 & 33 Vict. c. 112 (The Adulteration of Seeds Act, 1869), which by s. 2 defines the term "to dye seeds" as giving to seeds by any process of colouring, dyeing, sulphur smoking, or other artificial means, the appearance of seeds of another kind, and by s. 3 imposes a penalty upon any person, who with intent to defraud, "dyes any seeds, or sells any dyed seed," no offence is committed by subjecting seeds to a process by sulphur smoking, so as to improve them in appearance, and to make old and inferior seed appear to be new seed, so long as such seed is not made to appear of a different species or description from that to which it actually belongs. Francis v. Maas, 47 L. J., M. C. 83 ; 3 Q. B. D. 341 ; 38 L. T. 100 ; 26 W. R. 422.

Saffron — Article sold, wholly different from that demanded.]—The Sale of Food and Drugs Act ,1875, after reciting that it is desirable to amend the law regarding the sale of foods and drugs in a pure and genuine condition, provides by s. 6 that no person shall sell to the prejudice of the purchaser any article of food or any drug which is not of the nature, substance, and quality of the article demanded by such purchaser under a penalty :—Held, that s. 6 was not limited in its application to sales of adulterated articles, but that it applied also to cases in which the article sold was unadulterated but wholly different from that demanded by the purchaser. Knight v. Bowers, 54 L. J., M. C. 108 ; 14 Q. B. D. 845 ; 53 L. T. 234 ; 33 W. R. 613 ; 15 Cox, C. C. 728 ; 49 J. P. 614.

Tincture of Opium — British Pharmacopœia Standard of Quality.]—Upon a complaint under s. 6 of the Food and Drugs Act, 1875, for selling tincture of opium which was not "of the nature, substance, or quality," of the article demanded by the purchaser, it appeared that the drug which was sold as "tincture of opium" by the defendant was deficient in opium to the extent of one third, and in alcohol to the extent of nearly one half as compared with the standard prescribed by the British Pharmacopœia :—Held, that the defendant was liable to be convicted, although the purchaser had not specifically asked for tincture of opium "prepared according to the recipe in the British Pharmacopœia." White v. Bywater, 19 Q. B. D. 582 ; 36 W. R. 280 ; 51 J. P. 821.

Representation at Time of Sale.] — To constitute an offence under s. 6 of the Food and Drugs Act, 1875, the representation of the "nature, substance, and quality" of the article must be made at the time of the sale. A prior false representation in this respect is no offence within the act, provided a true one is made at the time the sale actually takes place. Kirk v. Coates, 55 L. J., M. C. 182 ; 16 Q. B. D. 49 ; 54 L. T. 178 ; 34 W. R. 295 ; 50 J. P. 148.

By 35 & 36 Vict. c. 74, s. 2 (repealed), every person who shall sell as unadulterated any article of food or drink which is adulterated . . . shall forfeit a penalty not exceeding 20*l*. By s. 3, any person who shall sell any article of food or drink, knowing the same to have been mixed with any other substance, with intent fraudulently to increase its weight or bulk, and who shall not declare such admixture to any purchaser before delivering the same, shall be deemed to have sold an adulterated article of food or drink under the act. An information was laid against a provision and butter dealer for that he sold as unadulterated an article of food, to wit, butter which was adulterated. It was proved that an inspector of nuisances went to his shop and asked for a pound of butter at 7*d.*, and the shopman handed him a pound, his master being present; on being analysed, it was proved to have been largely adulterated with lard, tallow, or material of that nature. The magistrate was of opinion that it was necessary to prove that the butter when sold was represented as unadulterated, and that it was also necessary to prove that the dealer knew that the butter had been mixed with some other substance, with intent fraudulently to increase its weight or bulk, and he therefore dismissed the information:—Held, first, that it was not necessary that any express representation that the article sold was unadulterated should be made at the time of sale of a simple article like butter; butter was asked for, and something handed over as butter, and that was selling as unadulterated. Fitzpatrick v. Kelly, 42 L. J., M. C. 132; L. R. 8 Q. B. 337; 28 L. T. 558; 21 W. R. 681.

Scienter.]—Held, secondly, that s. 3 (repealed), whatever might be its effect, was not intended to cut down s. 2; it was merely adding an additional offence, and that, therefore, it was not necessary to prove that the butterman knew the butter had been mixed with some substance, with intent fraudulently to increase its bulk. Ib.

By s. 6 of the Sale of Food and Drugs Act, 1875, "no person shall sell to the prejudice of the purchaser any article of food or any drug which is not of the nature, substance, and quality of the article demanded by such purchaser, under a penalty not exceeding 20*l.*":—Held, that, an offence within that section was committed, although the seller did not know that the article sold was not of the nature, substance, and quality demanded. Betts v. Armstead, 57 L. J., M. C. 100; 20 Q. B. D. 771; 58 L. T. 811; 36 W. R. 720; 16 Cox, C. C. 418; 52 J. P. 471.

In a prosecution under s. 9 of the Sale of Food and Drugs Act, 1875, for the "abstraction of any part of an article of food before sale, and selling without making disclosure," it is unnecessary to prove guilty knowledge on the part of the seller. Pain v. Boughtwood, 59 L. J., M. C. 45; 24 Q. B. D. 353; 62 L. T. 284; 38 W. R. 428; 16 Cox, C. C. 747; 54 J. P. 469.

A person cannot be convicted under 6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 37, s. 8, for using prohibited mixtures or ingredients in the making of bread for sale, unless there is knowledge, either in himself or in the person employed by him, of the presence of the mixture or ingredient. Core v. James, 41 L. J., M. C. 19; L. R. 7 Q. B. 135; 25 L. T. 593; 20 W. R. 201.

Intent to sell in an altered State without Notice.]—In a prosecution under s. 9 of the Sale of Food and Drugs Act, 1875, it is sufficient to prove that an article of food has been altered by the abstraction of some part of it, and sold in its altered state without notice, and it is not necessary to prove that it was so altered by the seller with intent to sell it in its altered state without notice. Dyke v. Gower, 61 L. J., M. C. 70; [1892] 1 Q. B. 220; 65 L. T. 760; 17 Cox, C. C. 421; 56 J. P. 168.

False Warranty in Writing—Mens Rea.]—Under clause 3 of s. 27 of the Sale of Food and Drugs Act, 1875, in order to constitute the offence of giving a false warranty in writing to a purchaser in respect of an article of food or drug, a mens rea on the part of the seller at the time when the warranty was given must be proved. Derbyshire v. Houliston, 66 L. J., Q. B. 569; [1897] 1 Q. B. 772; 76 L. T. 624; 45 W. R. 527; 61 J. P. 374.

ii. Prejudice of Purchaser.

Purchaser.]—Where an article of food, which was not of the nature, substance, and quality of the article demanded, was sold to an inspector of nuisances, who purchased for the purpose of analysis under s. 13 of the Sale of Food and Drugs Act, 1875 (38 & 39 Vict. c. 63), with money belonging to the authority by whom he was employed:—Held, that such sale was "to the prejudice of the purchaser" within the meaning of the Sale of Food and Drugs Act, 1875, s. 6. Hoyle v. Hitchman, 48 L. J., M. C. 97; 4 Q. B. D. 233; 40 L. T. 252; 27 W. R. 487.

—— Purchase of Adulterated Article by Deputy Inspector.]—The respondent was summoned upon an information laid by the appellant, the inspector appointed under the Sale of Food and Drugs Act, 1875 (38 & 39 Vict. c. 63), for having sold to the prejudice of one Toy, certain coffee which was not of the nature and quality of the article demanded by such purchaser, contrary to the provisions of s. 6. It appeared that Toy went as the appellant's assistant, and asked for some best coffee, for which he paid. On being analysed, the coffee purchased was found to contain a large proportion of chicory. The justices dismissed the information on the ground, amongst others, that the proceeding having been instituted by the appellant in his official capacity, he and not Toy should have personally purchased the article, and dealt with the same:—Held, upon the above facts, that Toy might be treated as an ordinary purchaser, and that the justices had acted wrongly in entertaining the objection. Horder v. Scott, 49 L. J., M. C. 78; 5 Q. B. D. 552; 42 L. T. 660; 28 W. R. 918; 44 J. P. 520. S. P., Smith v. Stace, 44 J. P. 796.

An inspector gave his servant some money and sent him to a public-house to purchase a bottle of spirits; after the servant had been in the house a minute, and had paid for the bottle, the inspector entered:—Held, that the inspector was the purchaser and was himself prejudiced. Garforth v. Esam, 56 J. P. 521.

Notice to Purchaser.]—When the seller of an article brings to the purchaser's knowledge the fact that the article sold to him is not of the nature, substance, or quality of the article he demands, the sale is not "to the prejudice of the purchaser" within s. 6 of 38 & 39 Vict. c. 63, and consequently no offence is committed within that section. Sandys v. Small, 47 L. J., M. C. 115; 3 Q. B. D. 449; 39 L. T. 118; 26 W. R. 814.

Sect. 8 points out a mode of giving notice to the purchaser that is made by the statute sufficient, but it is not intended by that section that, whenever the mode therein specified is not adopted, there shall necessarily be an offence against s. 6. Ib.

By s. 6 of 42 & 43 Vict. c. 30, it is provided that "in determining whether an offence has been committed under 38 & 39 Vict. c. 63, s. 6, by selling to the prejudice of the purchaser spirits not adulterated otherwise than by the admixture of water, it shall be a good defence to prove that such admixture has not reduced the spirit more than . . . 35 degrees under proof for gin." The appellant sold to the respondent gin more than 35 degrees under proof, but, at the time of sale, brought to his knowledge a printed notice hanging up in the room to the effect that all spirits were sold "as diluted spirits, no alcoholic strength guaranteed":—Held, that, although the appellant had not a good defence under 42 & 43 Vict. c. 30, s. 6, he was not by that section deprived of any defence which he would have had under 38 & 39 Vict. c. 63, and that the sale not having been to the prejudice of the purchaser, no offence had been committed under 38 & 39 Vict. c. 63, s. 6. Gage v. Elsey, 52 L. J., M. C. 44; 10 Q. B. D. 518; 48 L. T. 226; 31 W. R. 500; 47 J. P. 391.

An agent of, and acting at the instance of, an inspector under the Sale of Food and Drugs Act, 1875, entered the shop of a provision dealer and, pointing to an article labelled "Valleyfield Finest Oleine Cheese," demanded two pounds of cheese. The words "Finest Oleine" were in smaller type than the other words. He did not notice the word "oleine" and did not know its meaning. He received the article and paid for it. The inspector then entered the shop and notified that he intended to have the substance analysed. The purchaser did not receive any label notifying that the article was a mixture. The analysis shewed the article to contain seventy per cent. of fat other than milk fat. The magistrate held that there was no sufficient indication of the admixture of the foreign ingredient, and that the purchaser was supplied to his prejudice with an article not of the nature and substance demanded:—Held, that the vendor was rightly convicted of selling the article to the prejudice of the purchaser. Collett v. Walker, 64 L. J., M. C. 267; 59 J. P. 600.

iii. Analysis.

Notice of — When Necessary.]—It is a condition precedent to a summary conviction under the Sale of Food and Drugs Act, 1875 (38 & 39 Vict. c. 63), s. 6, that the purchaser of the article shall notify to the seller his intention to have it analysed by the public analyst. It is not enough for him to say that he had purchased the article for the purpose of the analysis. Barnes v. Chipp, 47 L. J., M. C. 85; 3 Ex. D. 176; 38 L. T. 570; 26 W. R. 635.

The provisions of s. 14 of the Sale of Food and Drugs Act, 1875, apply to the purchase of an article by a private person as well as by one of the public officers named in the act; so that it is a condition precedent to the right of a private purchaser to take proceedings for a penalty under the act that he should have given to the seller the notification required by that section. Parsons v. Birmingham Dairy Co., 51 L. J., M. C. 111; 9 Q. B. D. 172; 30 W. R. 748; 46 J. P. 727.

—— When Unnecessary.]—It is not necessary, where a sample of milk in course of delivery is procured for analysis under s. 3 of the Sale of Food and Drugs Act Amendment Act, 1879, for the officer procuring such sample to notify to the seller or his agent his intention of having the sample analysed, or to deliver to the seller or his agent a portion of the sample in accordance with the provisions of s. 14 of the Sale of Food and Drugs Act, 1875. Rouch v. Hall, 50 L. J., M. C. 6; 6 Q. B. D. 17; 44 L. T. 183; 29 W. R. 304; 45 J. P. 220.

The provisions of s. 14 of the Sale of Food and Drugs Act, 1875, do not apply to the purchase of an article unless for analysis, and therefore it is not a condition precedent to the right of a purchaser for consumption to take proceedings for a penalty under the act that he should have given to the seller the notification required by that section. Parsons v. Birmingham Dairy Co. (9 Q. B. D. 172) dissented from. Enniskillen Union v. Hilliard, 14 L. R., Ir. 214.

A sample of milk in course of delivery by the defendant's servant under a contract for the delivery thereof to a workhouse, was procured for analysis by the master of the workhouse, and divided by him into three portions, one of which he retained, another he gave to the defendant's servant, and the third he enclosed in a bottle labelled "milk," and having on it the name of the contractor, and sent it by rail to the public analyst, who analysed it, and gave his certificate as provided by the statute. The defendant having been fined for the act of adulteration:—Held, that a purchase was shewn under the Sale of Food and Drugs Act, 1875, there being a buyer on one side and seller on the other; that the provisions of s. 14 of that statute did not apply, and no notification was necessary as a condition precedent to the bringing of the prosecution; that there was sufficient evidence that the milk taken was the milk submitted to analysis; and that a corporation such as the board of guardians was within the statute. Ib.

—— Sufficiency.]—W., the seller of spirits, was informed after the purchase that the article was to be examined by the "county analyst," and W. knew that the county analyst was the public analyst of the place:—Held, that this notice to W. was sufficient, though the words "public analyst" were not expressly used by the purchaser. Wheeker v. Webb, 51 J. P. 661.

S., the sanitary inspector, went with D. to a shop where butter was sold, and sent into the shop D., who bought a pound for a shilling. D. came out and gave it to S., who, within two minutes, went inside and gave notice to the shopkeeper that he had bought it for analysis, and he then and there divided it into parts, and S. laid the information for selling butter not of the nature, &c., of butter:—Held, the purchaser of the article was S. and not D., and that S. properly gave the notice and laid the information. Stace v. Smith, 45 J. P. 141.

—— Notification "forthwith."]—A constable acting on the instructions of an inspector went into an inn to buy some spirits, and upon bringing back what he had bought he and the inspector went into the inn two minutes after the sale and informed the innkeeper that the spirits were bought for analysis, and divided the sample:—Held, that the object of the purchase was notified forthwith within the meaning of s. 14 of the Food and Drugs Act, 1875, and that the justices should have convicted. Somerset v. Miller, 54 J. P. 614.

Sample—Authority of Inspector to demand.]—An inspector of nuisances cannot procure a sample in a district for which he is not appointed. Reg. v. Smith, 65 L. J., M. C. 104; [1896] 1 Q. B. 596; 74 L. T. 348; 44 W. R. 492; 18 Cox, C. C. 307; 60 J. P. 372. And see next case.

—— Demand of, from a particular Vessel.]—P., a publican, on request, supplied H. with rum out of a bottle on a shelf in the bar. After tasting it, H. requested to have half a pint of rum. P. was about to supply H. from another vessel, but H. demanded the supply from the same bottle, saying he was an inspector and that it was for analysis. H. refused, and was summoned for such refusal under the Food and Drugs Act, 1875, s. 17, and was convicted:—Held, (1) that as P. had not demanded to see H.'s authority, H. was not bound to produce it; and (2) that P. was bound to supply the sample from the same bottle as that from which he first supplied H. Payne v. Hack, 58 J. P. 165.

—— From Bulk for Sale by Wholesale.]—Sect. 17 of the Foods and Drugs Act, 1875, applies to articles of food, &c., exposed for sale by wholesale as well as by retail. M'Hugh v. M'Grath, [1894] 2 Ir. R. 78.

—— Offer to divide with Seller.]—E. purchased a pint of milk from C., and after the purchase told C. that he intended to have the milk analysed, and then offered to divide it with the seller, who refused to accept it. The milk was found to be adulterated to the extent of nine and a half degrees of added water:—Held, that it was not necessary for E. before the purchase to offer to divide the milk into three parts in so many words, and that this offer was a substantial compliance with the statute. Chapell v. Emson, 48 J. P. 200.

—— One Portion only forwarded to Analyst.]—It is unnecessary, where a sample of milk in the course of delivery is procured for analysis under s. 3 of the Sale of Food and Drugs Act (Amendment Act), 1879, for the officer procuring such sample to deliver the whole to the public analyst. It is none the less a sample because he divides it into two parts and delivers one part only. Rolfe v. Thompson, 61 L. J., M. C. 184; [1892] 2 Q. B. 196; 67 L. T. 295; 17 Cox, C. C. 551; 56 J. P. 425.

Certificate of Analyst—Form.]—To convict a person, under the Food and Drugs Acts, 1875 and 1879, of adulterating spirits, the certificate of analysis given in evidence against him must shew the quantities of each element in the compound substance. Newby v. Sims, 63 L. J., M. C. 228; [1894] 1 Q. B. 478; 10 R. 596; 70 L. T. 105; 58 J. P. 263.

A public analyst gave a certificate that a sample of milk contained "5 per cent. of added water":—Held, that this certificate was insufficient. The quantities and distinction of the constituent parts and the percentages, shewing the surplusage of water, should have been set out in detail. Fortune v. Hanson, 65 L. J., M. C. 71; [1896] 1 Q. B. 202; 74 L. T. 145; 44 W. R. 431; 18 Cox, C. C. 258; 60 J. P. 88.

The certificate of a public analyst in regard to a sample of "milk" to the effect that he was of opinion that the sample contained "milk 94 per cent., added water 6 per cent.," followed by the statement that "this opinion is based on the fact that the sample contained 7·97 per cent. solids, not fat, whereas genuine milk contains not less than 8·5 per cent. solids, not fat," is sufficient in form to comply with the requirements of the Sale of Food and Drugs Act, 1875, and is admissible as evidence under s. 21 of the act. Fortune v. Hanson (supra) distinguished. Bridge v. Howard, 65 L. J., M. C. 229; [1897] 1 Q. B. 80; 75 L. T. 300; 45 W. R. 78; 18 Cox, C. C. 421; 60 J. P. 790.

The duty of a public analyst under the Sale of Food and Drugs Act, 1875, is merely to analyse any sample of food or drugs submitted to him and to report the result of such analysis; and if he reports extraneous facts unconnected with the analysis, his certificate is inadmissible as evidence of such facts. Fortune v. Hanson (supra) explained. Reg. v. Smith, 65 L. J., M. C. 104; [1896] 1 Q. B. 596; 74 L. T. 348; 44 W. R. 492; 18 Cox, C. C. 307; 60 J. P. 372.

—— Where Adulteration charged.]—Where adulteration is not charged, a certificate of analysis under the Sale of Food and Drugs Act, 1875, should "specify the result" only of the analysis, the words in the form of certificate found in the schedule to the act, "I am of opinion that the said sample contained the parts as under" relating to cases of adulteration only. The heading "Observations," in the next paragraph of the schedule, also relates to cases of adulteration only; but the addition in other cases of "Observations," which ought not to be there, does not necessarily invalidate a certificate of analysis. Bakewell v. Davis, 63 L. J., M. C. 93; [1894] 1 Q. B. 296; 10 R. 617; 69 L. T. 832; 58 J. P. 228.

—— Validity—Analyst of District.]—An analyst cannot give a valid certificate in a district for which he is not appointed. Reg. v. Smith, supra.

—— Weight of, in Evidence.]—R. sold milk to H., which was stated to be purchased for analysis, and the milk was duly divided into parts, as required by the statute; and on analysis the certificate of the analyst, after stating the constituents, said the milk was adulterated with 20 per cent. of water. R. being charged with selling adulterated milk, the analyst's certificate was given in evidence, and R. gave no evidence to contradict it, but the magistrate, thinking that the state of the milk might be explained by it standing several hours in a large can, and the best milk at the top ladled out before the purchase, dismissed the summons:—Held, the magistrate was wrong, and as there was no evidence to contradict the certificate of the analyst, he ought to have acted on it, and convicted R. Harrison v. Richards, 45 J. P. 552.

Upon the true construction of s. 21 of the Sale of Food and Drugs Acts, 1875, the certificate of the analyst is, at the hearing of a proceeding under the act, sufficient, but not conclusive, evidence of the facts stated therein, and it is the duty of the justices to accept it as evidence and weigh it together with the other evidence for the prosecution upon the one side and any evidence given on behalf of the defendant upon the other side, and to come to a conclusion upon the fact of the adulteration of the food or drug upon a consideration of the whole of the evidence before them. Hewitt v. Taylor, 65 L. J., M. C. 68; [1896] 1 Q. B. 287;

74 L. T. 51; 44 W. R. 431; 18 Cox, C. C. 226; 60 J. P. 311.

Upon the hearing of a complaint under s. 6 of the Food and Drugs Act, 1875, justices, applying their own special knowledge of the article alleged to be adulterated, and without hearing evidence in contradiction of the public analyst's certificate, considered that the case came within the proviso to the section. Being doubtful, however, as to whether a technical offence had not been committed, but considering that, if it had, it was in the absence of fraud, of too trifling a nature to merit a penalty, they discharged the accused under s. 16 of the Summary Jurisdiction Act, 1879:—Held, that the justices need state no case, for though technically wrong in not hearing evidence in contradiction of the analyst's certificate, yet they were not bound to discard their own particular knowledge of and acquaintance with the subject-matter of the complaint, founded on practical experience:—Held, further, that fraud was no element of an offence under s. 6 of the Food and Drugs Act, 1875, and had the justices entertained the question of fraud they would have been wrong; but that, in determining whether they should act under s. 16 of the Summary Jurisdiction Act, 1879, they could take the fact of absence of fraud into their consideration. Reg. v. Field, White, Ex parte, 64 L. J., M. C. 158.

iv. Persons Liable.

Master — Unauthorised Act of Servant.]—A servant of the appellants sold lard adulterated with foreign matter without a proper label indicating its character. On the hearing of a summons against the appellants under s. 6 of the Sale of Food and Drugs Act, 1875, it was proposed on behalf of the appellants, to call evidence to shew that the action of the servant was contrary to their express instructions. The justices refused to admit the evidence:—Held, that the statute does not make a master responsible for the unauthorised acts of his servant, and that the evidence should have been admitted. Kearley v. Tonge, 60 L. J., M. C. 159; 65 L. T. 261; 56 J. P. 72; 17 Cox, C. C. 328.

—— Sale by Servant—No Evidence of Master's Knowledge or Connivance.]—P., a servant of the appellant, was employed to sell milk out of cans by retail. The cans were received by the appellant, the master, on arrival from the country, and a sample taken from each can before it was sent out for sale. The appellant had published a warning to his servants that any servant whose can of milk did not correspond with the sample taken from it would be liable to instant dismissal. P.'s can was duly sampled, and the sample proved to be unadulterated. Subsequently to his taking out the can for the sale of milk, P. admitted watering the milk, some of which milk he sold to an inspector, who thereupon summoned the appellant, the master, as "a person selling to the prejudice of the purchaser an article of food not of the nature, substance, and quality of the article demanded," under the terms of s. 6 of the Sale of Food and Drugs Act, 1875. The appellant was convicted by a magistrate and fined the full penalty:—Held, that the appellant was rightly convicted, on the ground that he was the seller within the meaning of the act, and was liable for his servant's action in selling adulterated milk:—Held, further, that the fact of the sale of adulterated milk was sufficient proof of the offence without evidence of any connivance by the appellant, though evidence rebutting connivance might properly be admitted by the magistrate with a view to mitigate any penalty he might otherwise have thought fit to impose. Brown v. Foot, 61 L. J., M. C. 110; 66 L. T. 649; 17 Cox, C. C. 509; 56 J. P. 581.

The servant of C., a dairyman, being short of milk, bought two gallons from another dairyman, and, having mixed it with his own, sold the same to customers:—Held, that the fact that neither C. nor his servant knew or had reason to suspect the milk was adulterated was no defence to a summons under s. 9 of the Sale of Food and Drugs Act, 1875. Morris v. Corbett, 56 J. P. 649.

Servant.]—A local foreman in the service of a company may be convicted of adulterating milk under s. 6 of the Sale of Food and Drugs Act, 1875. Hotchin v. Hindmarsh, 60 L. J., M. C. 146; [1891] 2 Q. B. 181; 65 L. T. 149; 39 W. R. 607; 55 J. P. 775.

v. Prosecution.

Jurisdiction of Justices.]—The prosecution of offenders under s. 20 of the Sale of Food and Drugs Act, 1875, must take place before justices of the peace having jurisdiction within the district where the offence was actually committed. An inspector of nuisances can neither procure a sample in a district for which he is not appointed, nor can an analyst not appointed to act for such district give a valid certificate. Reg. v. Smith, 65 L. J., M. C. 104; [1896] 1 Q. B. 596; 74 L. T. 348; 44 W. R. 492; 18 Cox, C. C. 307; 60 J. P. 372.

By Constable—Proof of Authority.]—Where a police constable prosecutes for adulteration of food it is not necessary for him to prove, as a condition precedent, that he was directed to prosecute by the local authority appointing him such constable. Hale v. Cole, 55 J. P. 376.

Several Informations in respect of One Delivery.] — The appellant contracted with guardians to supply milk daily throughout the year. The contract provided that the milk should be new milk, free from adulteration, yielding seven degrees of cream, the milk to be tested on each delivery, and a deduction made of 1*d.* per gallon for each degree of cream short under six degrees. As the appellant's servant was in the act of delivering a day's supply—seventy gallons in five separate cans—the inspector of weights and measures procured one sample from each can under s. 3 of the Sale of Food and Drugs Act Amendment Act, 1879. Upon analysis of the samples it was found that in two cases one half of the cream had been abstracted. Upon these facts two informations were laid against the appellant for offences under s. 9 of the Sale of Food and Drugs Act, 1875, and the justices convicted the appellant upon each:—Held, that, although there was but one sale in each day as between the appellant and the guardians, each sale of a sample to the police officer was a separate sale, and an information could be laid in respect of each, and that these sales were unaffected by the terms of the contract abstract from an article of food any part of it so as to affect injuriously its quality, substance, or nature, and no person shall sell any article so altered without making disclosure of the alteration, under a penalty in each case," &c. The respondent sold to the appellant a tin of skimmed milk, which purported to be, and was sold as marked upon a label upon the tin, "Condensed Milk." On another part of the label, in smaller print, it stated that "this tin contains skimmed milk." As to whether there had been a sufficient disclosure within the meaning of s. 9 of the Food and Drugs Act:—Held, that the label on the tin was a disclosure of the contents of the tin, and the appeal was dismissed. Jones v. Davies, 69 L. T. 497; 17 Cox, C. C. 694; 57 J. P. 808.

P. was charged under the Food and Drugs Act, 1875, ss. 8 and 9, with selling condensed milk, from which 80 per cent. of fat had been abstracted without making disclosure of the alteration. The purchaser was told it was skimmed milk, and was shewn a label on the tin, which, in smaller type, stated the milk to be skimmed. The justices convicted P., holding the disclosure insufficient:—Held, the justices were wrong, and that the disclosure was sufficient. Platt v. Tyler, 58 J. P. 71.

A person was charged with selling adulterated cocoa. The article was contained in a packet, on which was a label in small print, which stated that the cocoa was mixed. The packet was delivered, wrapped in opaque paper, to the purchaser. The article had been so sold, mixed, for thirty years. When analysed there was found to be 30 per cent. cocoa, and 70 per cent. starch:—Held, that the quarter sessions were wrong in holding that the label did not comply with s. 8 of the Food and Drugs Act, 1875, and in holding that the mixture was made for fraudulent purposes. Jones v. Jones, 58 J. P. 653.

—— Otherwise than by Label.]—In proceedings under the Sale of Food and Drugs Act, 1875, against the seller of diluted spirits, the defendant may prove that the sale was not to the prejudice of the purchaser, inasmuch as the purchaser had notice of the dilution. Such notice may be given otherwise than by a label. Palmer v. Tyler, 61 J. P. 389.

—— Implied Notice—Less than usual Price Charged.]—W. was charged before justices with selling for new milk an article not of the nature, substance, and quality demanded, contrary to s. 6 of the Food and Drugs Act, 1875. A sergeant of police, acting under H.'s orders, who was an inspector under the act, purchased the milk from W., who, when he was asked for new milk, sold skimmed, and charged a penny a pint, the usual price for skimmed. The justices differed—one being of the opinion that only a penny a pint being asked the purchaser must have been aware it was skimmed milk he was buying:—Held, that the knowledge of the purchaser was immaterial, and case remitted to the bench to convict. Heywood v. Whitehead, 76 L. T. 781.

vii. Effect on Action when both Parties in Default.

Costs.]—A bill was filed in equity by the manufacturers of a substance used instead of hops for brewing beer to restrain a company from making and selling a substance intended for the same purpose. As to some of the grounds for relief the plaintiffs had failed, and as to others they were held to be too late in their applications, and the bill was therefore dismissed:—Held, that as the substances made both by the plaintiffs and the company were intended to be used to deceive the public, no costs would be given to the company. Estcourt v. Estcourt Hop Essence Co., 44 L. J., Ch. 223; L. R. 10 Ch. 276; 32 L. T. 80; 23 W. R. 313.

c. Margarine.

"Exposed for Sale."]—The respondent was summoned, under 50 & 51 Vict. c. 29, for having unlawfully "exposed for sale by retail" a parcel of margarine without having attached to such parcel a label marked "margarine." The evidence shewed that the margarine in question had been placed behind a screen in the respondent's shop in the ordinary course of business, and where it could not be seen by a purchaser. A metropolitan police magistrate dismissed the summons on the ground that the margarine was not exposed for sale:—Held, that the magistrate was right, inasmuch as the words "exposed for sale" meant exposed to the view of the purchaser. Crane v. Lawrence, 59 L. J., M. C. 110; 25 Q. B. D. 152; 63 L. T. 197; 38 W. R. 620; 17 Cox, C. C. 135; 54 J. P. 471.

By the 6th section of the Margarine Act, 1887, "if such margarine be exposed for sale by retail, there shall be attached to each parcel thereof so exposed, and in such manner as to be clearly visible to the purchaser, a label marked in printed capital letters, not less than one and a-half-inches square 'Margarine.'" A dealer in margarine placed a number of parcels of margarine upon the counter of his shop. The parcels were in view of purchasers, but were wrapped in paper, so that they could not see the contents. The paper wrappers had the word "margarine" printed on them in letters a quarter of an inch square, but no label marked "margarine," in letters one inch and a-half square, was attached to any of the parcels in such manner as to be visible to purchasers. An information having been laid against the dealer for exposing a parcel of margarine for sale contrary to the section, the justices dismissed it on the ground that in order to constitute an offence under the section, the margarine itself must be exposed to the view of the purchaser:—Held, that it was not necessary in order to constitute an offence under the section, that the margarine itself should be exposed to the view of the purchaser. Wheat v. Brown, 61 L. J., M. C. 94; [1892] 1 Q. B. 418; 66 L. T. 464; 40 W. R. 462; 56 J. P. 153.

"Exposed for Sale by Retail"—Refreshment House.]—The sale of margarine in a refreshment house in conjunction with other articles of food is not a sale of margarine by retail within the meaning of s. 6 of the Margarine Act, 1887, nor is the separate exposure of the margarine which is being so used for sale with other food an exposure of such margarine for sale by retail within the meaning of the section. Moore v. Pearce's Dining and Refreshment Rooms, 65 L. J., M. C. 7; [1895] 2 Q. B. 657; 15 R. 611; 73 L. T. 400; 44 W. R. 94; 18 Cox, C. C. 196; 59 J. P. 805.

Offer to Sell.]—An offer to sell margarine under any other name is not an offence against the Margarine Act, 1887. An offering for sale contrary to the act is not proved by proof of an offer to sell. World's Tea Co. v. Gardner, 59 J. P. 358.

Mens rea.]—The Margarine Act, 1887, s. 7, does not make the sale of margarine as butter penal, irrespective of the defendant's state of mind, but throws on the defendant the burden of disproving intent and knowledge. Fitzgerald v. Leonard, 32 L. R., Ir. 675.

Package — Paper Wrapper — Cardboard Box fastened by Paper Band.]—A person sold margarine by retail in a cardboard box, the lid of which was fastened on by an adhesive paper band, to which was attached a folded paper containing an advertisement of margarine. The word "margarine" was stamped in letters a quarter of an inch square, partly on the box and partly on the paper band. The box was delivered to the purchaser wrapped in brown paper, which was not marked with the word "margarine," but it did not appear whether the covering of brown paper was added at the request of the purchaser or not:—Held, that the cardboard box, paper band, and advertisement together formed a paper wrapper within the meaning of the 3rd clause of s. 6 of the Margarine Act, 1887, and did not form a package within the meaning of the 1st clause of the section; and that if the outer covering of brown paper was added at the request of the purchaser the delivery of the box so covered did not constitute an offence against the section. Toler v. Bischop, 65 L. J., M. C. 4; 73 L. T. 403; 18 Cox, C. C. 202; 60 J. P. 9.

Quære, whether, if the outer covering had been added by the seller of his own accord or to conceal the mark of "margarine," the delivery of the box so covered would have constituted an offence against the act. Ib.

Other Words besides "Margarine" on Wrapper.]—It is not necessary that the word "margarine" should be the only word printed on the wrapper required by the act to be delivered to the purchaser on a sale of margarine by retail, so long as it is printed thereon in capital letters of the required size. World's Tea Co. v. Gardner, 59 J. P. 358.

Notification—Purchase for Consumption.]—It is not a condition precedent to the right of a purchaser for consumption to take proceedings for a penalty under s. 6 of the Margarine Act, 1887, that he should have given the seller the notification required by s. 14 of the Sale of Food and Drugs Act, 1875. Buckler v. Wilson, 65 L. J., M. C. 18; [1896] 1 Q. B. 83; 73 L. T. 580; 44 W. R. 220; 60 J. P. 118.

—— Purchase for Analysis.]—It is a condition precedent to a prosecution under s. 12 of the Margarine Act, 1887, that the officer authorised to take samples of margarine shall notify to the person dealing in it his intention of having it analysed. Smart v. Watts, 64 L. J., M. C. 89; [1895] 1 Q. B. 219; 15 R. 154; 71 L. T. 768; 43 W. R. 379; 18 Cox, C. C. 62; 59 J. P. 54.

Jurisdiction of Justices—Limit of Time.]—Where an offence under s. 6 of the Margarine Act, 1887, has been committed in a borough having no separate court of quarter sessions, the prosecution may be instituted before county justices, and is not by the operation of s. 20 of the Sale of Food and Drugs Act, 1875, solely within the jurisdiction of the borough justices, nor is the prosecution as regards time limited by s. 10 of the Sale of Food and Drugs (Amendment) Act, 1879. Buckler v. Wilson, supra.

Penalties recovered, to whom payable.]—Penalties recovered under the Margarine Act, 1887, are payable to the person who proceeds for the same where such person is an officer acting in execution of the Food and Drugs Act, 1875, and has been properly appointed under s. 26 of that act, and not to the receiver of police, under s. 47 of the Police Courts (Metropolis) Act, 1839. Reg. v. Titterton, Quelch, Ex parte, 64 L. J., M. C. 202; [1895] 2 Q. B. 61; 15 R. 418; 73 L. T. 345; 43 W. R. 603; 18 Cox, C. C. 181; 59 J. P. 327.

d. Other Offences.

Engrossing or Regrating.]—The common-law offence of engrossing or regrating applied only with respect to the necessaries of life. Pettumberdass v. Thackoorseydass, 5 Moore, Ind. App. 109; 7 Moore, P. C. 239; 15 Jur. 257; and 7 & 8 Vict. c. 24, abolished the law of engrossing or regrating.

14. Contagious Diseases.

a. Animals.

i. Generally.

Possession of Diseased Animals.]—By an order of the privy council, made in December, 1871, under the Contagious Diseases (Animals) Act, 1869 (32 & 33 Vict. c. 70, repealed), every person having in his possession an animal affected with a contagious or infectious disease, shall with all practicable speed give notice to a police constable. On an information against a party, alleging that he had five sheep affected with a contagious disease and did not give notice to a constable, it was proved that this person had five sheep so affected:—Held, that there was primâ facie evidence on which he might be convicted of the offence charged, and it lay on him to shew if he could that he had given notice to a police constable. Huggins v. Ward, L. R. 8 Q. B. 521; 29 L. T. 33; 21 W. R. 914.

Held, secondly, that whether publication of the order of the privy council was necessary to its validity or not, the production of a copy purporting to be printed by the government printers was primâ facie evidence of the order under the Documentary Evidence Act, 1868 (31 & 32 Vict. c. 37), s. 2. Ib.

Held, thirdly, that no penalty being imposed by the order, and the offence being with respect to more than four animals, the justices had power, under s. 103, to inflict a penalty of 20*l.*, or 5*l.* for each animal. Ib.

Possession of Cows without a Licence.]—S. was convicted of carrying on the trade of a cowkeeper without a licence. He was a farmer, keeping cows to supply his family and for amusement, and for some years had allowed some of his neighbours to get a few pints of milk when they required it. The neighbours lived a mile off. Twenty times in one period of six weeks a dairyman had got about six quarts at a time from S., but it being winter the dairyman was short of milk :—Held, that S. was in no sense a trader, and it was straining words to call him a cowkeeper because he occasionally supplied a neighbour in this way, and therefore the court quashed the conviction. Southwell v. Lewis, 44 J. P. 796.

Exposing Diseased Animals.]—To bring a horse infected with the glanders into a public place, to the danger of infecting the people, is a misdemeanour at common law. Reg. v. Henson, Dears, C. C. 24.

An indictment that the defendant knew that a mare which he brought into a fair was glandered : —Held, good, without an averment that he knew that the glanders was a disease communicable to mankind. Ib.

The mere fact of selling a glandered horse is not an illegal act, either at common law or under 16 & 17 Vict. c. 62. Hill v. Balls, 2 H. & N. 299 ; 27 L. J., Ex. 45 ; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 592 ; 5 W. R. 740.

The Contagious Diseases (Animals) Act, 1869, s. 57, does not render the sending of diseased animals to a public market an actionable wrong, in the absence of any warranty of soundness or of any evidence of fraud or misrepresentation. Ward v. Hobbs, 48 L. J., C. P. 281 ; 4 App. Cas. 13 ; 40 L. T. 73 ; 27 W. R. 114—H. L. (E.)

Scienter.]—By the Animals Order, 1871, made by the privy council under the Contagious Diseases (Animals) Act, 1869, s. 75 (repealed), it is provided that every person having in his possession or under his charge an animal affected with a contagious or infectious disease shall, "with all practicable speed, give notice to a police constable of the fact of the animal being so affected" :—Held, that in order to convict the person in possession or charge of a diseased animal of an offence against the order, it must be proved that he was aware of the fact that the animal was diseased. Nichols or Nicholls v. Hall, 42 L. J., M. C. 105 ; L. R. 8 C. P. 322 ; 28 L. T. 473 ; 21 W. R. 579.

So on a prosecution under the Cattle Disease Acts, Ireland (29 & 30 Vict. c. 4 ; 33 & 34 Vict. c. 36), and the orders of the privy council, knowledge that the cattle are diseased is part of the offence, and must be proved by the prosecutor. Carroll v. Ewers, Ir. R. 7 C. L. 226.

—— Evidence of.]—When the owner of an animal takes it to a public market for sale, this furnishes evidence of a representation on his part that the animal is not, so far as he knows, suffering from any infectious disease. Bodger v. Nicholls, 28 L. T. 441.

—— Certificate of Veterinary Inspector.]—H. was summoned for exposing in a public market pigs suffering from typhoid fever. A certificate of the veterinary inspector was produced, that the pigs were so suffering. H. produced evidence to prove that he did not know and had no means of knowing of the disease. The justices refused to receive such rebutting evidence, and convicted H. :—Held, that the justices were wrong in rejecting the evidence, though they were to determine whether it amounted to any excuse. Harris v. Smith, 44 J. P. 361.

Action for Neglect of Regulations.]—A declaration alleged that the defendant contracted with the plaintiff to carry on board his vessel the plaintiff's sheep from Hamburg to Newcastle, and omitted to provide any pens, battens or footholds for the sheep on board the vessel, as required by an order of the privy council ; and that by reason of this omission the sheep were washed overboard by the sea and lost. The order was made under the powers conferred by the Contagious Diseases (Animals) Act, 1869, s. 75 (repealed), which imposes penalties for disobedience :—Held, that the declaration was bad, because the object of the act and of the order of the privy council was not to protect owners of animals from such injuries, but to prevent the introduction and spread of contagious diseases in Great Britain. Gorris v. Scott, 43 L. J., Ex. 92 ; L. R. 9 Ex. 125 ; 30 L. T. 431 ; 22 W. R. 575.

Effect of Offence upon Contracts.]—By a charterparty made in France between the master of a ship and the agent of the charterer, it was stipulated that the ship should proceed to Trouville, a port in France, there load a cargo of pressed hay, and proceed therewith direct to London, and that all cargo should be brought and taken from the ship alongside. At the time the charterparty was entered into there was in existence an order in council made under the authority of the Contagious Diseases (Animals) Act, s. 78, prohibiting the landing in any port or place in Great Britain of hay brought from France. Neither party, however, knew, at the time, of the existence of this order in council, but the master of the ship was told by the charterer's agent that the consignees would require the hay to be delivered to them at a particular wharf in Deptford Creek. On arriving in the Thames, the master of the ship heard of the existence of the order in council, and could not therefore proceed to the wharf and deliver the cargo. After some delay the charterer received the hay from alongside the ship into another vessel, and exported it. The shipowner having brought an action against the charterer to recover damages in respect of the detention of the ship :—Held, that there was no such illegality in the voyage as entitled the charterer to resist the claim. Waugh v. Morris, 42 L. J., Q. B. 57 ; L. R. 8 Q. B. 202 ; 28 L. T. 265 ; 21 W. R. 438.

Liability to make Compensation—Slaughtering diseased Animals.]—By the 42nd section of the Contagious Diseases (Animals) Act, 1878 (41 & 42 Vict. c. 74), it is provided that every local authority shall, from time to time, appoint so many inspectors and other officers as they think necessary for the execution and enforcement of this act, and shall assign to those inspectors and officers such duties and salaries or allowances, and may delegate to any of them such authorities and discretion as to the local authority may seem fit, and may at any time revoke any appointment so made. The local authority failed to appoint an inspector, and disease having broken out amongst the plaintiff's cattle, some of them died. The local authority did not slaughter any of the plaintiff's cattle, nor did they pay him any compensation :—Held, that the plaintiff could not maintain an action for damages nor for a peremptory mandamus. Mulcahy v. Kilmacthomas Guardians, 18 L. R., Ir. 200.

—— Foreign Animals Slaughtered at Sea.]—Under the Contagious Diseases (Animals) Act (32 & 33 Vict. c. 70), no compensation is payable by local authorities in respect of foreign animals slaughtered after their arrival, but before being landed at a British port, for compensation is only payable where animals have been slaughtered in pursuance of the act, and the act does not authorise local authorities to order such animals to be slaughtered. Nissler v. Hull Corporation, 49 L. J., Q. B. 501; 5 Q. B. D. 325; 42 L. T. 894; 28 W. R. 700; 44 J. P. 664.

—— Animals Injured by Disinfecting Process—Liability.]—Where a plaintiff delivered certain pigs to a railway company for delivery to a third party, and the pigs were injured in the pens of the company; it was held that it was no defence for the railway company to say that the pigs had only been injured by them in carrying out the orders of the lord lieutenant in council under the Contagious Diseases (Animals) Act, 1878. Shaw v. Great Southern and Western Ry., 8 L. R., Ir. 10—C. A.

ii. Expenses of Enforcing Orders.

Recovery by Local Authority.]—By the Contagious Diseases (Animals) Act, 1869 (32 & 33 Vict. c. 70, s. 57, repealed), the local authority constituted by that act may exercise compulsory powers with regard to horses and other animals, "and the local authority may recover the expenses of the execution by them of this section from the owner of the horse or animal": —Held, that in proceedings in a county court to recover such expenses, where the person suing was described as "J. M., the inspector appointed by the local authority for the county of H. under the Contagious Diseases (Animals) Act, 1869," first, that the county court judge might, without the defendant's consent, amend the plaint by substituting the proper description of the person suing, and secondly that the plaint was rightly amended by describing the action as brought by "the local authority for the county of H.," as s. 57 enabled the local authority to sue for the expenses under that description, although not a corporation. Mills v. Scott, 42 L. J., Q. B., 234; L. R. 8 Q. B. 496; 29 L. T. 96; 21 W. R. 915.

iii. Jurisdiction of Justices.

Summary Conviction.]—By the Contagious Diseases (Animals) Act, 1870 (32 & 33 Vict. c. 70, s. 57, repealed), if any person exposes in a public place where animals are commonly exposed for sale, any animal affected with a contagious or infectious disease, he shall be deemed guilty of an offence against the act, unless he shews, to the satisfaction of the justices before whom he is charged, that he did not know of the same being so affected; and by s. 103, a penalty not exceeding 20*l.* is imposed on any person guilty of an offence against the act:—Held, that jurisdiction was implicitly given to justices to summarily convict in a penalty a person guilty of an offence under s. 57. Cullen v. Trimble, 41 L. J., M. C. 132; L. R. 7 Q. B. 416; 26 L. T. 691; 20 W. R. 691.

—— Continuing Offence.]—In a proceeding for a penalty under the Contagious Diseases (Animals) Act, 1869 (32 & 33 Vict. c. 70, repealed), before the justices for the county of Pembroke, against the master of a vessel for having carried sheep on board such vessel without having the places used for such sheep divided into pens, as required by the Animals Order of 1875, it was proved that the vessel brought the sheep from Ireland to New Milford, in Milford Haven, which is in the body of the county of Pembroke, and that the vessel arrived there without having the places on board for the sheep divided, as required by the said order. On these facts the justices determined that they had no jurisdiction to convict the master:—Held, that the justices had jurisdiction, as the offence continued, so as to be in Pembrokeshire within the jurisdiction of the justices, when the vessel arrived at New Milford with the sheep without pens, as required by the order. Muir v. Hore, 47 L. J., M. C. 17; 37 L. T. 315.

Stating Case on Appeal.]—Held, also, that though s. 108 of the 32 & 33 Vict. c. 70 (repealed), gives a power of appealing from the justices to the quarter sessions, it does not deprive a party of the right to have a case stated for the opinion of the superior court. Ib.

Held, also, that the justices having necessarily heard the case before they determined that they had no jurisdiction, the opinion of the court was properly applied for on a case under 20 & 21 Vict. c. 43, instead of on an application for a mandamus to the justices to hear. Ib.

b. Persons.

i. Offences.

Exposing Infectious Persons in Public Place—Liability.]—By the Public Health Act, 1875 (38 & 39 Vict. c. 55), s. 126, sub-s. 2, any person who, while suffering from an infectious disorder wilfully exposes himself, without proper precautions against spreading the disorder, in any street or public place, or who, being in charge of any person so suffering, so exposes such person, is subject to a penalty. A medical man in practice at Tunbridge Wells sent a patient who was suffering from scarlet fever to the fever hospital there with a certificate, directing him to walk in the middle of the road, and not to talk to any one, but, in consequence of an alleged informality in the certificate, the patient was refused admission; whereupon the medical man walked with him through the streets of the town to the residence of the chairman of the local board, from whom, after some delay, he obtained an order for the man's admission to the hospital. He then returned with the patient to the police-station to procure the ambulance to convey him thither. Upon an information against the medical man for an alleged infringement of the statute, the justices were of opinion that it was not proved before them that the medical man had charge of the patient, that he had not wilfully exposed the patient in any street or public place without proper precaution, and that he had made the best use of the means at his disposal to prevent the spread of the fever; and they refused to convict him:—Held, that their decision was right. Tunbridge Wells Local Board v. Bisshopp, 2 C. P. D. 187.

A person may be indicted for unlawfully and injuriously carrying a child infected with the small-pox along a public highway, in which persons are passing, and near to the habitations of the king's subjects. Rex v. Vantandillo, 4 M. & S. 73; 16 R. R. 389.

It is an indictable offence in an apothecary unlawfully and injuriously to inoculate children with the small-pox, and, while they are sick of it, unlawfully and injuriously to cause them to be carried along a public street. Rex v. Burnett, 4 M. & S. 272 ; 16 R. R. 468.

Neglect of Quarantine Laws.]—Disobeying the orders of the privy council with respect to the performance of quarantine is an offence at common law. Rex v. Harris, 2 Leach, C. C. 549 ; 4 Term Rep. 202 ; 2 R. R. 358.

ii. Actionable Nuisance.

Hospital established by Order of Local Government Board.]—The defendants, under the powers given them by the Metropolitan Poor Act, 1867, built a hospital which they used for patients suffering from infectious diseases. In an action by adjacent landowners the jury found that the hospital was a nuisance to such landowners :—Held, first, that the act did not make the defendants mere irresponsible agents to carry out the orders of the local government board so as to exempt them from liability. Secondly, that they were not exempt on the ground that they acted bonâ fide in the discharge of a duty cast upon them by the act. Metropolitan Asylum District Managers v. Hill, 50 L. J., Q. B. 353 ; 6 App. Cas. 193 ; 44 L. T. 653 ; 29 W. R. 617 ; 45 J. P. 664—H. L. (E.)

See NUISANCE.

15. DANGEROUS DOGS.

Orders to Destroy.]—Under 34 & 35 Vict. c. 56, s. 2, a court of summary jurisdiction may order a dangerous dog to be destroyed, without giving the owner the option of keeping it under proper control. Pickering v. Marsh, 43 L. J., M. C. 143 ; 22 W. R. 798.

Notice of Regulations.]—In the absence of any special provision for the mode of publication of an order under the Dogs Act, 1871 (34 & 35 Vict. c. 56), it is enough to shew that it has been posted up in five or six places within the borough. Reg. v. Huntingdon JJ., 4 Q. B. D. 522.

Proof of Ownership — Whether Dog under Control.]—An order was made in pursuance of 34 & 35 Vict. c. 56, s. 3, on owners to keep their dogs under the control of some person for a fixed period. A dog was seen in the road with W.'s governess and children, rushing backwards and forwards to them, sometimes being as much as twenty yards away. A constable swore the dog belonged to W., and that he had seen it in his yard within the previous fortnight. W., however, called evidence to contradict this. The justices convicted, but stated a case for the opinion of the court as to whether there was sufficient evidence of ownership, and whether the dog was under control :—Held, that there was reasonable evidence that the dog belonged to W., and was not under control, to support the conclusion arrived at by the justices. Wren v. Pocock, 34 L. T. 697.

The question whether or not a dog is under control within s. 3 is one of fact and not of law. Ib.

16. WATCHING AND LIGHTING UNDER 3 & 4 WILL. 4, C. 90.

Nature of the Act.]—The 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 90, is a public act. Pilkington v. Riley, 6 D. & L. 628 ; 3 Ex. 739.

Adoption of Act—Majority of Ratepayers.]—A majority of two-thirds of the ratepayers of a parish is required only at the original meeting to be held for determining as to the adoption of the act, and as to the amount which the inspectors shall have power to call for in any year ; but where the parish has adopted the provisions of the act, a majority of two-thirds is not necessary, in order to determine the amount to be raised for the purpose of the act in a subsequent year ; but the resolution of a simple majority of the ratepayers voting at the meeting called for that purpose, or, in case of a poll being demanded, of the ratepayers voting upon it, is sufficient. Beechey v. Quentery, 10 M. & W. 65 ; 11 L. J., Ex. 420.

Where thirty-seven ratepayers attended a meeting, twenty voted for adopting the act and the remainder abstained from voting, and took no part in the proceedings, the provisions were not legally adopted, and the original objection was not answered by the inspectors having acted for a year under the provisions. Eynsham, In re, 12 Q. B. 398, n. ; 3 New Sess. Cas. 507 ; 18 L. J., Q. B. 210 ; 13 Jur. 345.

—— Chairman not a Ratepayer.]—A majority of the ratepayers of a parish, at a meeting held for that purpose, had resolved to adopt the act, and at a subsequent meeting a rate was made for the purposes of the act, both these meetings being presided over by a chairman who was not a ratepayer of the parish :—Held, that, although by ss. 5 and 6 only ratepayers had a right to be present at the meetings, and consequently that the chairman should, in strictness, have been a ratepayer ; yet that the resolutions of the requisite majority of the ratepayers were not rendered inoperative by reason of the chairman of the meeting not being a ratepayer. Reg. v. Middlesex JJ., 1 B. C. C. 157 ; 22 L. J., M. C. 106 ; 17 Jur. 187.

—— Who may Vote.]—Held, also, that persons who had not paid the rate of the previous year were properly excluded from voting at the subsequent meeting. Ib.

—— Publication of Notice.]—A notice of adoption of the act for a district chapelry, held to be sufficiently published where it was affixed on the chapel of the district, but not on two dissenting and proprietary chapels within the district, nearly two months after the meeting at which it was adopted. Reg. v. Deverell, 3 El. & Bl. 372 ; 23 L. J., M. C. 121 ; 18 Jur. 494 ; 2 W. R. 231.

An ecclesiastical district was, by order in council, attached to the chapel of St. J., in a parish ; there were in the district also a proprietary chapel, called St. P., and two dissenting chapels ; in the other part of the parish there was only the parish church. The meeting for the adoption of the act in the district was held on the 18th of November, 1852. Notice of the adoption of the act was affixed to the outer doors of the parish church and the chapels of St. J. and St. P. on the 2nd of January, 1853. On the 6th of July, 1853, the inspectors made an order, requiring the overseers to pay 150*l.* to the treasurer out of the amount raised during the year. Upon default a summons was taken out before justices, for a distress warrant to levy the amount by sale of the goods of the overseers. The justices refused to issue their warrant:—Held, first, that it was not necessary to affix the notice of the adoption of the act on the outer doors of the dissenting chapels.

Held, secondly, by Lord Campbell, C.J., that notice of the adoption of the act was given in sufficient time. Ib.

Held, thirdly, that the justices not having decided the case, the application was within 11 & 12 Vict. c. 44, s. 5, and that it was sufficient if the affidavits shewed that the order of the inspectors was valid. Ib.

Proper Meeting of Churchwardens.]—When a district within a parish had been assigned to a chapel for ecclesiastical purposes under 1 & 2 Will. 4, c. 38, and the 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 90, had been adopted more than two years before the application at a meeting convened by the churchwardens of the district church; and these churchwardens were churchwardens for ecclesiastical purposes only, and never in the habit of calling meetings for secular purposes:—Held, that the meeting was improperly convened, the churchwardens of the district church not being such churchwardens as are contemplated by 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 90, s. 5; that consequently the act had never duly been adopted in the district, and an order of the inspectors for the payment of money was void. Reg. v. Kingswinford Overseers, 3 El. & Bl. 689; 23 L. J., Q. B. 337. S. C., nom. Reg. v. Staffordshire JJ., 18 Jur. 1073; 2 W. R. 453.

17. Fires.

Expenses of Extinguishing.]—By 10 & 11 Vict. c. 89 (The Towns Police Clauses Act, 1847), s. 33, the commissioners may send fire-engines for the purpose of extinguishing fires in the neighbourhood, and "the owner of the lands and building where such fire shall have happened shall, in such case, defray the actual expense." A. was the owner of a haystack which stood upon land in his occupation. Expenses were incurred in sending an engine and working the same in the endeavour to extinguish a fire in the haystack:—Held, that A. was the owner within s. 33, and was bound to defray the expenses. Lewis v. Arnold, 44 L. J., M. C. 68; L. R. 10 Q. B. 245; 32 L. T. 553; 23 W. R. 729.

—— Charges for.]—A local government board is not entitled, under 10 & 11 Vict. c. 89 (The Towns Police Clauses Act, 1847), s. 32, to charge for the use of apparatus employed and the value of water consumed on the occasion of a fire in premises situate within the district of such board. Drightlington Local Board v. Bower, 22 W. R. 165.

Right to Control of Premises—Exclusion of Public.]—Sect. 171 of the Public Health Act, 1875, incorporating s. 32 of the Towns Police Clauses Act, 1847, empowers a fire brigade established by an urban authority to exclude all persons whose presence would interfere with their operations from the premises on fire. Carter v. Thomas, 62 L. J., M. C. 104; [1893] 1 Q. B. 673; 5 R. 343; 69 L. T. 436; 41 W. R. 510; 57 J. P. 438.

18. Smoke.

Black Smoke—Furnace constructed to consume Smoke.]—By the 7th sub-s. of s. 91 of the Public Health Act, 1875, "Any fireplace or furnace which does not, so far as practicable, consume the smoke arising from the combustible used therein, and which is used for working engines by steam, or in any mill, factory, dyehouse, brewery, bakehouse, or gaswork, or in any manufacturing or trade process whatsoever; and any chimney (not being the chimney of a private dwelling-house) sending forth black smoke in such quantity as to be a nuisance, shall be deemed to be a nuisance liable to be dealt with summarily in manner provided by this act: provided that where a person is summoned before any court in respect of a nuisance arising from a fireplace or furnace which does not consume the smoke arising from the combustible used in such fireplace or furnace, the court shall hold that no nuisance is created within the meaning of this act, and dismiss the complaint if it is satisfied that such fireplace or furnace is constructed in such manner as to consume as far as practicable, having regard to the nature of the manufacture or trade, all smoke arising therefrom, and that such fireplace or furnace has been carefully attended to by the person having the charge thereof." An information was laid against the proprietor of a brewery, for that black smoke was from time to time sent forth from the chimney of his brewery in such quantities as to be a nuisance, and he was convicted and fined thereon:—Held, on case stated, that the proviso applied only to the first part of the sub-section, and not to the latter part, making it an offence to send forth black smoke in such a quantity as to be a nuisance, and that the defendant was not entitled to call evidence as to the construction of the furnace. Weekes v. King, 53 L. T. 51; 15 Cox, C. C. 723; 49 J. P. 709.

—— Coal Mines.]—Sect. 91 of the Public Health Act, 1875, applies to black smoke allowed to be sent forth out of chimneys of coal mines. Patterson v. Chamber Colliery Co., 56 J. P. 200.

—— Liability of Master.]—The chimney of a mill sent forth black smoke. The furnace was properly constructed and efficient foremen superintended; the stoker's own negligence being the sole cause of the smoke:—Held, that the owner of the mill was liable under s. 96 of the Public Health Act, 1875. Niven v. Greaves, 54 J. P. 548.

19. Water Supply.

Statute.]—60 & 61 Vict. c. 44 is the District Councils (Water Supply Facilities) Act, 1897.

"Water Company"—Own Profit.]—The undertaking of a waterworks company was transferred by statute to a borough. The profits of the waterworks were under a subsequent statute to be transferred to the borough improvement fund, or at the option of the corporation to be applied in reducing the price of water to consumers:—Held, that the corporation were supplying water for their own profit, and were a water company within the meaning of s. 52 of the Public Health Act, 1875. Wolverhampton Corporation v. Bilston Commissioners, [1891] 1 Ch. 315; 39 W. R. 394. See S. C. in C. A., W. N. (1891) 56.

Company able and willing to Supply.]—A waterworks company is not within the meaning of the Public Health Act, 1875, s. 52, "able and willing to supply water within the district of a local authority" unless it has both the necessary powers and the requisite supply of water. Richmond Waterworks Co. and Vauxhall Waterworks Co. v. Richmond Vestry, infra.

—— Action to restrain Local Board from constructing works and from proceeding to Arbitration—Costs.]—Under the plaintiff company's special act of 1891 (modifying s. 52 of the Public Health Act, 1875), it was, as the court construed the provision, unlawful for the defendant local board to construct waterworks within the plaintiffs' limits of supply during four years from the passing of the special act, so long as the plaintiffs were able and willing to supply water proper and sufficient. The plaintiffs made some unsuccessful attempts to find water, and before they succeeded in doing so the defendant board served them on the 20th May, 1893, with notice of the board's desire to supply water within their own district, and their intention of constructing waterworks under the provisions of the Public Health Act, 1875. The notice further stated that if not informed within a month of the plaintiffs' ability and willingness the board would construct works. The matter was referred to arbitration, but the company becoming aware that the board were still forwarding a scheme of water supply, moved in an action to restrain the board from commencing or threatening to construct works and from proceeding to arbitration. The motion stood over on terms to await the award. The arbitrators found that the company were "able and willing," and that the water was proper and sufficient:—Held, that the defendants must pay the costs of the action, setting off any costs incurred by the defendants by reason of the plaintiffs seeking an injunction to restrain the arbitration. Bognor Water Co. v. Bognor Local Board, 70 L. T. 402.

"Waterworks"—What are.]—Works erected and maintained by a local authority to provide the water necessary to carry out a scheme for the disposal of sewage of its district are not "waterworks" within the meaning of s. 52 as defined by s. 4 of the Public Health Act, 1875; nor can the local authority be said to be "supplying" water within the meaning of those sections. West Surrey Water Co. v. Chertsey Union, 63 L. J., Ch. 806; [1894] 3 Ch. 513; 8 R. 696; 71 L. T. 368; 43 W. R. 6; 59 J. P. 167.

There is no provision in the Waterworks Clauses Act, 1847, which compels a local authority to take water to "cleanse sewers" from a water company within whose limits of supply the sewers are situate. Ib.

"Construction of Waterworks."]—See Cleveland Water Co. v. Redcar Local Board, and Huddersfield Corporation v. Ravensthorpe Urban Council, infra.

Construction of Waterworks by Local Authority—Giving Notices as to.]—The Public Health Act, 1848 (11 & 12 Vict. c. 63), s. 75, is not materially extended by the Public Health Act, 1875 (38 & 39 Vict. c. 55), s. 52, and therefore a local authority, desiring to construct waterworks, and having, before the passing of the latter act, given the notices required by s. 75 of the former act, is not, in consequence of the passing of the latter act, required to give the notices under s. 52 of that act. Richmond Waterworks Co. and Vauxhall Waterworks Co. v. Richmond Vestry, 45 L. J., Ch. 441; 3 Ch. D. 82; 34 L. T. 480.

Where, prior to the incorporation of a local water company, the local authority had substantial waterworks in existence, additions to or alterations of such works can be made by the local authority without giving the water company notice under s. 52 of the Public Health Act, 1875. The words "before commencing to construct waterworks," in s. 52, mean new waterworks in a fair and reasonable sense of the term, and do not apply to improvements of or additions to existing waterworks. Cleveland Water Co. v. Redcar Local Board, 64 L. J., Ch. 64; [1895] 1 Ch. 168; 13 R. 18; 43 W. R. 90; 59 J. P. 7.

The extension by an urban district council of their existing waterworks into an area formerly part of an adjoining urban district, but added to their district by an order under s. 57 of the Local Government Act, 1888, amounts to a "construction of waterworks" within s. 52 of the Public Health Act, 1875, so as to make it necessary, before commencing to construct, to give notice to a water company whose limits of supply at the date of the order included the added area. Cleveland Water Co. v. Redcar Local Board (64 L. J., Ch. 64; [1895] 1 Ch. 168) distinguished. Huddersfield Corporation v. Ravensthorpe Urban Council, 66 L. J., Ch. 581; [1897] 2 Ch. 121; 76 L. T. 817; 45 W. R. 642; 61 J. P. 596—C. A.

Power to Lay Down Water-mains—"Surveyor," Report of.]—Sect. 54 of the Public Health Act, 1875, provides that where a local authority supply water they shall have the same powers for carrying water-mains as they have for carrying sewers. Sect. 16 provides that any local authority may carry any sewer, after giving reasonable notice in writing to the owner or occupier (if on the report of the surveyor it appears necessary), into, through, or under any lands within their district:—Held, that "the surveyor" is the person duly appointed surveyor under s. 189, and no other, not even an engineer of the greatest experience whom the local authority may think fit to consult; that the word "necessary" must be construed as meaning "necessary for the efficient discharge of the duty in the way most for the benefit of the public"; that as the report on which the proceedings of the defendant were founded was not the report of "the surveyor" the plaintiff was entitled to an interlocutory injunction; and further, that "the surveyor" is the person to determine on the necessity, and therefore if he exercise a bonâ fide judgment in the matter, the court will not interfere. Lewis v. Weston-super-Mare Local Board, 58 L. J., Ch. 39; 40 Ch. D. 55; 59 L. T. 769; 37 W. R. 121.

—— "Street"—Private Road—Local Authority having control of Streets generally.]—A private road is a "street" within the meanings of ss. 16 and 54 of the Public Health Act, 1875. The words "where the local authority have not the control of the streets," in s. 57 of the Public Health Act, 1875, are descriptive of and mean a local authority not having the control of the streets generally in its district, i.e. a local authority which is not the road authority. Hill v. Wallasey Local Board, 63 L. J., Ch. 1; [1894] 1 Ch. 133; 7 R. 51; 69 L. T. 641; 42 W. R. 81—C. A.

The defendants who had the powers of an urban sanitary authority with respect to the W. district, and the control of the streets generally in that district, and also the power of supplying the inhabitants with water, proceeded, without the plaintiff's consent, to break up a private road belonging to the plaintiff, which was situate within their district, for the purpose of laying down water-mains:—Held (A. L. Smith, L.J., dissenting), that s. 57 of the Public Health Act, 1875, incorporating s. 29 of the Waterworks Clauses Act, 1847, which forbids the laying down of any pipe in any private land without the consent of the owner, did not apply to the defendants, as they were a local authority having the control of the streets generally in their district; that, under ss. 16 and 54 of the Public Health Act, 1875, the defendants, as the local authority, had the power to carry the water-mains through the plaintiff's private road without his consent; and, consequently, that the plaintiff was not entitled to an injunction. Ib.

Entry on Land without District.]—A local authority that has obtained the consent of the local authority of an adjoining district to lay down water-mains in such adjoining district cannot enter upon the lands required unless the notices and advertisements mentioned in s. 32 of the Public Health Act, 1875, have been duly given. Jones v. Conway and Colwyn Bay Water Board, 62 L. J., Ch. 767; [1893] 2 Ch. 603; 2 R. 504; 69 L. T. 265; 41 W. R. 616; 57 J. P. 501—C. A.

—— Authority about to supply Water.]—Sect. 54 of the Public Health Act, 1875, applies not merely to an authority which is already a water supplying body, but also to one that has taken upon itself the burden of carrying out the sections of the act relating to water supply within their district. Ib.

Liability—Contamination of Water—Leaden Pipes.]—The defendants were empowered by a private act, which incorporated the Waterworks Clauses Acts, 1847 and 1863, to supply water for domestic purposes. The local act enabled the defendants to make by-laws, and provided that they should not be bound to lay down service-pipes, but might do so by agreement with and at the expense of the occupier of any house. The plaintiff was injured by using the water, which had become contaminated from passing through the leaden service-pipe laid down by the defendants at his request and expense:—Held, that the defendants were not liable. Milnes v. Huddersfield Corporation, 53 L. J., Q. B. 12; 12 Q. B. D. 443; 32 W. R. 265—C. A.

—— Defective Fire Plug.]—See Bayley v. Wolverhampton Waterworks Co., 6 H. & N. 241; 30 L. J., Ex. 57 (post, col. 531).

Public Well—Vesting in Local Authority.]—A trough or cistern receiving the overflow from a spring at some distance had been used by the public gratuitously for watering cattle and for domestic purposes for a period of over fifty years. The defendant erected a gate to prevent the access of cattle to the trough, and let a pipe into the bottom of the trough leading into his own house, where it terminated in a stopcock, and by means of this pipe and stopcock he could draw off as much water as he pleased:—Held, that the trough or cistern was a public well or work used for the gratuitous supply of water to the inhabitants of the district of the local authority in which it was situate, and that it was vested in and was under the control of the local authority by force of s. 64 of the Public Health Act, 1875, and that the local authority might maintain an action in their own name in the county court against the defendant for damages for the interference caused by the insertion of the pipe in the bottom of the trough. Holmfirth Local Board v. Shore, 59 J. P. 344.

Where at the time of the passing of the Public Health (Ireland) Act, 1878 (the provisions of which as to public wells correspond to those in the Public Health Act, 1875), a well was an existing public well used for the gratuitous supply of water to the inhabitants of the district, it becomes, by s. 74 of the act (s. 64 of the English act), vested in the local authority. To shew that the well was then a public well it need not be proved that the soil and freehold of the well itself was public property, for if the public had a servitude attached to the soil and freehold, by virtue of which they enjoyed the right of free access to the well to obtain water, it would be a public well within the meaning of the act. Smith v. Archibald (5 App. Cas. 489; see ante, col. 442), applied. Dungarvan Union v. Mansfield, [1897] 1 Ir. R. 420.

20. Vehicles.

Lights on—By-Law—Validity.]—A county council made a by-law that "a person driving any vehicle shall from the end of the first hour after sunset to two o'clock a.m., except during such part of that period as shall be between the rising and setting of the moon, carry attached to such vehicle a lighted lamp placed so as to exhibit a light in the direction he is proceeding, in order to signal the approach or position of the vehicle, and in case of a vehicle carrying timber such person shall also carry, attached to the end thereof, a lighted lamp, so as to exhibit a light to persons overtaking the vehicle":—Held, that this by-law was not bad, either (i.) by reason of its throwing on an alleged offender the onus of proving that the alleged offence occurred at a period between the rising and setting of the moon, for that could be proved by means of an almanack; or (ii.) by reason of the omission in the by-law of the words "in any street or public place," for those words were to be implied; or (iii.) by reason of the words "attached at the end thereof" being capable of being construed as applicable either to the vehicle itself or to the timber carried thereon, for those words reasonably construed must be taken as applicable only to the vehicle itself. Walker v. Stretton, 44 W. R. 525; 60 J. P. 313.

For Display of Advertisements—"Vehicle"—Bicycle.]—A bicycle is a vehicle within the meaning of s. 12 of the Liverpool Corporation Act, 1889, which provides that it shall not be lawful in any street in the city to use any vehicle exclusively or principally for the purpose of displaying advertisements without the consent of the corporation. Ellis v. Nott-Bower, 60 J. P. 760.

21. Indecent or Profane Language.

By-Law—Public Place—Land adjacent.]—For the good rule and government of a county, a county council made (inter alia) the following by-law, which had received the approval of a secretary of state: "No person shall in any street or public place, or on land adjacent thereto, sing or recite any profane or obscene song or ballad, or use any profane or obscene language":—Held, that the by-law was too wide, and could not be upheld. "On land adjacent thereto" imposed a prohibition beyond anything necessary for the better government of the county; and "sing or recite any profane or obscene song or ballad, or use any profane or obscene language," should have been guarded by the words "to the annoyance of the public":—Held, further, that by-laws relating to the better government of a county, and not to nuisance, do not require the confirmation of the local government board; the approval of a secretary of state is sufficient. Strickland v. Hayes, 65 L. J., M. C. 55; [1896] 1 Q. B. 290; 74 L. T. 137 44 W. R. 398; 18 Cox, C. C. 244; 60 J. P. 164.

—— Room opening on Street.]—A by-law made by a county council under s. 16 of the Local Government Act, 1888, that "no person shall in any house, building, garden, land, or other place abutting on or near to a street or public place, make use of any violent, abusive, profane, indecent, or obscene language, gesture, or conduct to the annoyance of any person, in such street or place," is neither repugnant nor ultra vires; and any one using such language in a room opening into a street with the door open is liable to be convicted of an offence against such by-law. Mantle v. Jordan, 66 L. J., Q. B. 224; [1897] 1 Q. B. 248; 75 L. T. 552; 61 J. P. 119; 18 Cox, C. C. 467.

22. By-Laws.

Construction.]—A by-law for the good rule and government of a locality, made by a local authority, ought to be construed so as to give reasonable effect to the object aimed at. Walker v. Stretton, 44 W. R. 525; 60 J. P. 313.

Publication.]—By a local act (passed in 1847) town improvement commissioners were empowered to make by-laws, which were to be published by being printed and a copy delivered to every person applying for the same, and by painting or placing on boards to be hung up on the front of the office of the commissioners, and also on some conspicuous part of the works or locality to which the same related. Under the Public Health Acts, 1848 and 1858, the prescribed mode of publication of by-laws is by "printing and hanging the same up in the office of the local board":—Held, that a publication in the manner prescribed by the last-mentioned acts was sufficient. Fielding v. Rhyl Improvement Commissioners, 3 C. P. D. 272; 38 L. T. 223; 26 W. R. 881.

Confirmation.]—By-laws relating to the better government of a county, and not to a nuisance, do not require the confirmation of the local government board; the approval of a secretary of state is sufficient. Strickland v. Hayes, 65 L. J., M. C. 55; [1896] 1 Q. B. 290; 74 L. T. 137; 44 W. R. 398; 18 Cox, C. C. 244; 60 J. P. 164.

As to particular matters, see specific headings.

IV. EXPENSES.

1. What Recoverable.

Road "made good" and afterwards Paved—"Theretofore."]—In 1857 a local act was passed which incorporated s. 53 of the Towns Improvement Clauses Act, 1847 (10 & 11 Vict. c. 34). In 1874 the appellants, in their capacity as the corporation of P., bought some land of the respondents abutting upon a country high road within the district to which the local act applied, and in pursuance of an agreement then made with the respondents, at their own expense widened and improved the road and laid out a footpath along the side, and gravelled, channelled and kerbed the footpath. In 1879 the appellants, in their capacity as the urban authority, paved and flagged the footpath and sought to recover the expense of so doing from the respondents as adjoining owners under the powers of s. 53. The jury found that before the paving and flagging in 1879 the road was not a street in the popular sense of the term, and that the footpath had been "made good" within s. 53:—Held, that the respondents were not liable, upon the ground that the footpath had been "theretofore made good" within the meaning of s. 53, but without deciding whether the road was a "street" within the meaning of that section. The word "theretofore" in s. 53 refers to the period before the work is done by the commissioners, not to the period before the passing of the special act. Portsmouth Corporation v. Smith, 54 L. J., Q. B. 473; 10 App. Cas. 364; 53 L. T. 394; 49 J. P. 676—H. L. (E.)

New Street—Approval and Acceptance of Ineffective Sewer—Subsequent Liability of Frontagers.]—A local authority has power to approve and accept a sewer made in accordance with a scheme by a landowner in land laid out as a new street, though the sewer may not be an effective sewer until the whole scheme has been carried out. When the local authority has accepted the work it cannot afterwards require the frontagers to do it again under s. 150 of the Public Health Act, 1875. Hornsey Local Board v. Davis, 62 L. J., Q. B. 427; [1893] 1 Q. B. 756; 4 R. 322; 68 L. T. 503; 57 J. P. 612—C. A.

Work done under Contract over £50 not under Seal.]—In an action by a local authority to recover from the defendant his proportion of the cost of sewering, paving, &c., a street under the powers of the Public Health Act, 1875, s. 150, it appeared that part of the work, to an amount exceeding 50*l.*, had been done by contractors employed by the local authority, but that no written contract under the common seal of the authority had been made with them as provided by s. 174:—Held, that the defendant was nevertheless liable. By A. L. Smith, J., that the objection, if valid, would have been an objection to the apportionment, which could only be raised in the time and manner provided by s. 257. Bournemouth Commissioners v. Watts, 54 L. J., Q. B. 93; 14 Q. B. D. 87; 51 L. T. 823; 33 W. R. 280; 49 J. P. 102.

Legal Expenses whether properly Included.]—A local board brought an action against a frontager to enforce a charge under s. 257 of the Public Health Act, 1875, for sewering and paving expenses incurred under s. 150. The charge included items for legal expenses and expenses of collection:—Held, that such items were properly included. Walthamstow Local Board v. Staines, 60 L. J., Ch. 738; [1891] 2 Ch. 606; 65 L. T. 430. See Jersey (Earl) v. Uxbridge Sanitary Authority, post, col. 538.

Defect in Exercise of Jurisdiction—Remedy.]—Where a question arises as to whether certain items are properly included or not, inasmuch as the matter relates, not to the jurisdiction of the local board, but to a defect in the exercise of their jurisdiction, the frontager ought to appeal to the local government board under s. 268, the high court having no jurisdiction in the matter. Ib.

Higher Rate of Interest than charged to Local Board.]—The H. urban authority, after giving notice to N. to pave a new street adjoining N.'s premises, did the work and borrowed money at 4 per cent. to defray the cost. Part of this sum was apportioned on N., and the local board by a resolution duly resolved to make the sum payable by N. by instalments at 5 per cent. interest. N. refused to pay an instalment:—Held, that the justices were right in enforcing payment, and were not bound to allow the objection that the interest charged was higher than the local board themselves paid. North British Railway v. Holme Cultram Local Board, 54 J. P. 86.

Interest on Debt.]—Interest under 21 & 22 Vict. c. 98, s. 62, upon expenses incurred by a local board under 11 & 12 Vict. c. 63, s. 69, runs from the time that the amount due is ascertained. Wallington v. Willes, 16 C. B. (N.S.) 797; 33 L. J., M. C. 233; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 906; 10 L. T. 784; 12 W. R. 917.

Re-paving and Re-channelling.]—Upon the true construction of s. 150 of the Public Health Act, 1875, the paving and channelling of streets not repairable by the inhabitants at large are not matters done once and for all, and do not fall within the category of sewers. Frontagers may be called upon by the local authority to pay the apportioned expenses of re-paving and re-chanelling. Barry and Cadoxton Local Board v. Parry, 64 L. J., Q. B. 512; [1895] 2 Q. B. 110; 15 R. 430; 72 L. T. 692; 43 W. R. 504; 59 J. P. 421.

Expenses of Making-up Street—Statute—Repeal—Right Acquired—Liability Incurred—Interpretation Act, 1889, s. 38.]—Proceedings duly taken by an urban authority under s. 150 of the Public Health Act, 1875, with a view to making good a private street under the powers of that section, which proceedings, though merely preliminary to the commencement of the actual work, are in active progress at the time the Private Street Works Act, 1892, comes into operation by voluntary adoption in the district, may, notwithstanding the provisions of s. 25 of the act of 1892, be continued, and the actual work may be done, and the expenses recovered, under s. 150 of the act of 1875. Heston and Isleworth Urban Council v. Grout, 66 L. J., Ch. 647; [1897] 2 Ch. 306; 77 L. T. 118; 45 W. R. 697—C. A. Affirming, 61 J. P. 454.

If s. 25 of the act of 1892 amounts to a local repeal of s. 150 of the act of 1875, such active proceedings, though only preliminary, give rise to "a right, privilege, obligation, or liability acquired, accrued, or incurred" under such repealed section, within the meaning of and preserved by s. 38 of the Interpretation Act, 1889. Ib.

If s. 25 of the act of 1892 does not amount to such a repeal, s. 24, which provides that the powers of the act of 1892 shall be "deemed to be in addition to and not in derogation of any other powers," has the effect of preserving the powers of s. 153 of the act of 1875. Ib.

2. Parties Liable.

a. Position of Premises.

Premises fronting and abutting on Streets.]—By the Public Health Act, 1848, s. 69, in case any present or future street, or any part thereof (not being a highway), be not sewered, levelled, paved, flagged and channelled to the satisfaction of the local board of health, such board may, by notice in writing to the respective owners or occupiers of the premises fronting, adjoining, or abutting upon such parts thereof as may require to be sewered, levelled, paved, flagged, or channelled, require them to sewer, level, pave, flag, or channel the same within a time to be specified in such notice. Premises were divided from D. Street by a small stream, but by two bridges over the stream the premises were connected with it; by means of gates they could effectually close all communication. One of the bridges had been moved and reinstated by the owners. The principal outlet from their premises led into W. Street:—Held, that the premises fronted and abutted upon D. Street within the meaning of the foregoing enactment. Wakefield Local Board v. Lee, 1 Ex. D. 336; 35 L. T. 481.

A. B. owned plots of land and cottages thereon, separated from a street by a wall five feet high, which belonged, with the land on which it stood, to another person. There was a public footway which went between the plots of land, and through an opening in the wall into the middle of the street. The backs only of the cottages fronted the street, and the only way for vehicles from the cottages to the street was by a small roadway, which, without touching that part of the street which had been paved, came into a highway which joined one end of such street. With the exception of the public footway this roadway was the only access from the cottages to the street:—Held, that A. B. was not the owner of premises "fronting, adjoining, or abutting" on the street within the meaning of s. 150 of the Public Health Act, 1875, and therefore was not liable to contribute to the expenses of sewering and paving the street under that section. Lightbound v. Higher Bebington Local Board, 55 L. J., M. C. 94; 16 Q. B. D. 577; 53 L. T. 812; 34 W. R. 219; 50 J. P. 500—C. A.

—— Under Special Acts.]—By a Birkenhead local act of 1838, commissioners are required to cause all such parts of the streets, ways, or places within the township, not being public or common highways, which are now in the estimation of the commissioners fully built upon, but not sufficiently paved or put in good condition, and all such streets, ways or places as are now making or may hereafter be made within the township, although not fully built upon, to be made, paved and cleansed, as to the commissioners shall seem necessary; the expenses to be paid by the frontagers. S. occupied a house in a street formed about seventeen years back, and ever since used by the public:—Held, that he was liable to contribute to the making and sewering of this street lately resolved upon by the commissioners. Birkenhead Improvement Commissioners v. Sanson, 34 L. T. 175.

Sect. 149 of the Public Health Act, 1875, which imposes upon urban authorities the duty of causing all streets repairable by the inhabitants at large to be levelled, paved, metalled, flagged, channelled, altered and repaired as occasion may require, has not the effect of repealing s. 20 of the Ashton-under-Lyne Improvement Act, 1849, which empowers the corporation to call upon the frontagers in any street which is not completed to their satisfaction, to complete it, and, in default of the frontagers doing the work, authorises the corporation to do the work and recover the expense from them. Ashton-under-Lyne Corporation v. Pugh, 67 L. J., Q. B. 32; [1898] 1 Q. B. 45; 46 W. R. 100; 61 J. P. 788—C. A.

—— Effect of General on previous Special Act.]—Sect. 340 of the Public Health Act, 1875, expressly reserves the powers given by local acts, and sub-s. 2 of that section, which provides that a local authority shall not be exempt from the performance of any duty under the act by reason of any local act, has not the effect of depriving the corporation of their right to call upon the frontagers to do the work under the local act. Hornsey Urban Council v. Smith, 66 L. J., Ch. 476; [1897] 1 Ch. 843; 76 L. T. 431; 45 W. R. 581—C. A. Reversing 61 J. P. 311.

—— Railway Company.] — The expense of each owner should be apportioned according to the frontage of the premises, irrespective of the width of the street. Reg. v. Newport Local Board, 3 B. & S. 341; 32 L. J., M. C. 97; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 746; 11 W. R. 263.

A railway and canal company, whose premises abut on a street, but with a fence between them and the street, is liable to be charged. Ib.

—— Without Access.]—A. was the owner of three houses fronting a street called York Place, and adjoining or abutting at the rear upon a footpath at the end of a street called St. Julian Street, which formed a cul-de-sac. The ground at the back of these houses was five feet above the level of St. Julian Street, and the wall, which was the property of A., was about twelve feet high on the outside. There was no access from A.'s premises to St. Julian Street:—Held, that his premises "adjoined or abutted on" St. Julian Street within the act, and consequently that he was chargeable with his proportion of the expenses of paving, &c., that street under the Public Health Act, 1875 (38 & 39 Vict. c. 55), s. 150. Newport Urban Sanitary Authority v. Graham, 9 Q. B. D. 183; 47 L. T. 98; 31 W. R. 121; 47 J. P. 133.

The Manchester Improvement Act, 1851, enacts, in s. 17, that the expenses incurred by the town council in sewering and flagging a street shall be borne by the owners "according to the extent of their respective houses and grounds lying alongside or adjoining to the said street":—Held, that the owner of ground at the end of a street forming a cul-de-sac was liable under this section, although a wall divided his property entirely from the street. Manchester Corporation v. Chapman, 37 L. J., M. C. 173; 18 L. T. 640; 16 W. R. 974.

—— New Street.]—When a street has been paved, flagged, or made good before the passing of the 10 & 11 Vict. c. 34, the commissioners under that act have no power to assess the occupiers of the adjoining property to a special improvement rate, under s. 53, which gives that power "if any street, although a public highway at the passing of the special act, have not theretofore been well and sufficiently paved and flagged, or otherwise made good." Reg. v. G. W. Ry., 1 El. & El. 806; 28 L. J., M. C. 246; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 1054; 7 W. R. 432.

—— Work done on one Side only.]—An urban authority, acting under 38 & 39 Vict. c. 55 (The Public Health Act, 1875), s. 150, repaired the footway on the south side of a street, and apportioned the whole cost among the owners and occupiers of premises on the south side only:—Held, that the apportionment was right. Wakefield Sanitary Authority v. Mander, 5 C. P. D. 248; 28 W. R. 922; 44 J. P. 522.

Where under the Private Street Works Act, 1892, an urban authority construct a new "street" with a footpath on one side of the road only, the expenses of making such footpath as well as the expenses of making the road must be apportioned among the owners of premises "fronting, adjoining or abutting" on both sides of the "street"; and the expenses of the footpath must not be apportioned only among those owners whose premises front, adjoin, or abut on such footpath. Wakefield Sanitary Authority v. Mander (5 C. P. D. 248) distinguished. Clacton Local Board v. Young, 64 L. J., M. C. 124; [1895] 1 Q. B. 395; 15 R. 92; 71 L. T. 877; 43 W. R. 219; 59 J. P. 581.

Houses using a Sewer.]—By 18 & 19 Vict. c. 121, s. 22, the local authority is empowered to lay down a sewer along any ditch or watercourse used for the conveyance of sewage from any house, and to keep the same in good repair, and "to assess every house, building, or premises then or any time thereafter using for the purposes aforesaid the said ditch, watercourse, or sewer, to such payment, either immediate or annual, or distributed over a term of years, as they shall think just and reasonable." Under this enactment a local authority assessed the houses then built and using a sewer in certain sums set opposite to their names in the assessment, and passed a resolution enabling the persons assessed to compound for the assessment:—Held, first, that the assessment was not bad, because it did not provide for houses which might thereafter be built and use the sewer. Reg. v. Middlesex JJ., 2 Jur. (N.S.) 1045; 4 W. R. 562.

Held, secondly, that the resolution enabling the persons to compound was no part of the assessment. Ib.

—— Amalgamation of Districts.]—A parish, H., was divided into districts, for the purpose of drainage works. In 1855 the local authority constructed a sewer at M. Street, and assessed the houses using that sewer, and B. was charged with an annual payment which was redeemed by him, in pursuance of a resolution of the local authority. In 1856 the local authority constructed another sewer at M. Hill. These sewers increased a nuisance which already existed in the village of H., which was a lower district. In 1859 the local authority laid down a sewer in the village, and it was resolved that the drainage of M. Street, M. Hill, and in the village should be considered as one system, and that the total cost of the works should be ascertained, and that all houses using the sewers so constructed should be assessed in such manner that each should pay an equal pound rate. The local authority assessed the houses in M. Street at a rate, making, with what was paid by that district for the work done in 1855, an amount equalling the amount to be paid by the houses in the village. Among others, B. was assessed:—Held, that the local authority had power to assess B., as his house used the sewer laid down in the village within the meaning of the 18 & 19 Vict. c. 121, s. 22. Reg. v. Bodkin, 3 El. & El. 271; 30 L. J., M. C. 38; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 1270.

Houses in Higher District — Liability of Owners for Abatement of Nuisance in Lower District.]—Under 18 & 19 Vict. c. 121, the local authority in a district, which has rendered innocuous a drain passing through its district, conveying away the filth of houses in a higher district has no power to assess the owners of those houses for payment of the expenses, though those houses use this drain. Reg. v. Tatham, 8 El. & Bl. 915. S. C., nom. Reg. v. Warner, 27 L. J., M. C. 144; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 609; 6 W. R. 256.

The power of assessment of a local authority is confined to property within the district for which they act. Ib.

b. Ownership of Premises.

Receipt of Rent.]—The definition of an owner of premises let at a rack-rent, in 11 & 12 Vict. c. 63, s. 2, is satisfied by a person who is de facto receiving the rack-rent. Peek v. Waterloo and Seaforth Local Board, 2 H. & C. 709; 33 L. J., M. C. 11; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 1343; 9 L. T. 338; 12 W. R. 252.

Therefore, where A., a person de facto receiving such a rent, was served by a local board of health with a notice to sewer under s. 69 (by which service is to be upon the owner or occupier), and on his failure to comply with the notice the local board executed the sewerage work and charged the expenses, under 21 & 22 Vict. c. 98, s. 62, to B., who was owner when the works were completed, B. (though his title to the premises had accrued prior to the service of the notice, and the notice had not been served on him, nor had he any knowledge of it till after the completion of the works) was liable for the expenses incurred. Ib.

—— Under a Power of Attorney.]—A person to whom an owner of premises resident abroad sent a power of attorney, authorising him to receive the rents, is not thereby constituted owner within 18 & 19 Vict. c. 121, s. 2, so as to render him personally liable for the costs and expenses of the abatement of a nuisance on the premises previously to the receipt of his authority. Blything Union v. Warton, 3 B. & S. 352; 32 L. J., M. C. 132; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 867; 7 L. T. 672; 11 W. R. 306.

—— By Agent for Collection of Rents.]—By ss. 98 & 99 of the St. Helens Improvement Act, 1869 (32 & 33 Vict. c. 120), the corporation of St. Helens are, upon failure of the owners of property fronting on a new street to drain, pave, &c., the roadway and paths pursuant to an order, empowered to do the work themselves, and to charge the expenses thereby incurred upon such owners in proportion to their respective frontages; and by the interpretation clause, s. 4, "owner" is declared to mean "the person for the time being receiving the rack-rent of the lands in connection with which the said word is used, whether on his own account or under or by virtue of any mortgage or charge, or as agent or trustee for any other person, . . . and shall include every successive owner from time to time of such land for any part of the time during which the enactment wherein that term is used operates in relation to such land":—Held, that an "agent" employed to collect the rents of the property charged by the apportionment is an "owner" within the act, and is liable to be called upon to pay, whether he has money of his principal in hand or not, at any time whilst the sum assessed upon the premises remains unpaid. St. Helens Corporation v. Kirkham, 16 Q. B. D. 403; 34 W. R. 440; 50 J. P. 647.

Owner of Rack-rent.]—J. held certain premises in the city of Dublin from B. as tenant from year to year, at the yearly rent of 65*l.* The premises were valued under the acts relating to the valuation of ratable property in Ireland at 72*l.* 10*s.* J. let the premises to weekly tenants at rents from which he had a profit out of the premises. The sanitary authority of the city of Dublin served on J. a notice under the Public Health Act (Ireland), 1878, addressed to the owner of the premises, or to J., requiring certain specific sanitary works to be done, and on the 3rd of September, 1879, the police magistrate made an order that the works should be done within seven days. J. alleged that B. was the owner under the Public Health Act (Ireland), 1878, on the ground that the rent payable by him, J., to B. was more than two-thirds of the valuation of the premises:—Held, that B. was not the owner of the premises within the meaning of the Public Health Act (Ireland), 1878. Bowen v. James, 10 L. R., Ir. 26.

The town council of the borough of St. Helens having under the St. Helens Improvement Act of 1869 incurred certain expenses in sewering, levelling, &c., a street, not being a highway repairable by the inhabitants at large, adjoining lands in the occupation of the defendant, brought the present action for their recovery. The local act contained provisions similar to those contained in s. 150 of the Public Health Act, 1875. The defendant was the lessee of the lands in question under a building lease for 999 years at a ground-rent of 26*l.*, and at the time the expenses were incurred there were no buildings erected upon the land. By the local act the expenses were to be charged upon the several owners of buildings or lands in the street in proportion to the extent of the frontage of their respective buildings and lands; the word "owner" being defined as meaning the person for the time being receiving the rack-rent of the land . . . or who would so receive the same if such lands or premises were let at a rack-rent, and the definition of rack-rent being the same as that contained in the Public Health Act of 1875:—Held, that the defendant was the owner of the lands in question within the meaning of the definition in the local act. St. Helens Corporation v. Riley, 47 J. P. 471.

The local act enacted that the proportion in which such expenses were to be apportioned was to be ascertained and settled by the corporation:—Held, that the fact that the apportionment had been corrected by the surveyor of the corporation after it had been approved by the corporation did not invalidate it. Ib.

—— Trustees of Settled Land.]—Where by a will, which was made and took effect in 1846, certain real estate was devised unto and to the use of trustees, their heirs and assigns, upon trust to permit certain persons to occupy and enjoy the same, and receive and take the rents thereof in succession, and after their decease in trust for other persons in tail with divers remainders over, and between the years 1861 and 1869, during the life of one of the persons beneficially entitled to the rents, the trustees expended capital moneys on drainage under the Public Health Act, 1848, such expenditure was held to have been rightly made, inasmuch as the trustees, being the persons to receive the rack-rents of the estate and hand them over to the beneficiaries, were "owners" within the meaning of that act. Barney, In re, Harrison v. Barney, 63 L. J., Ch. 676; [1894] 3 Ch. 562; 8 R. 459; 71 L. T. 180; 43 W. R. 105.

Trustees of Chapel—Building used partly as Chapel.]—The defendants were the trustees of a chapel consisting of two floors. The upper floor was the chapel itself, and the lower contained a lecture hall and several smaller rooms. The premises as a whole were registered as a place of religious worship. The lecture-hall was used for the purposes of a Sunday school and of an institute, the members of the latter paying a subscription, and lectures and concerts were from time to time given in the hall in connection with the institute, for which tickets were sold to persons who were not members; but the money received did not cover the cost of the entertainments. A bazaar and a sale of work had also been held in the lecture-hall, when a charge was made for admission. The money realised from the bazaar was handed to the defendant, Brewis, and appropriated by him to the chapel building fund, and the proceeds of the sale of work were devoted to the purchase of a piano for the institute. The defendants, who had no beneficial interest in the chapel, having failed to comply with a notice under s. 150 of the Public Health Act, 1875, requiring them to pave, &c., the portion of the street upon which the chapel abutted, the complainants executed the work themselves, and obtained an order of justices for the repayment by the defendants of the expenses thus incurred:—Held, that the defendants were the "owners" of the premises when the works were completed within the meaning of s. 257 of the Public Health Act, 1875, and that they did not come within s. 151, which exempts from liability "the incumbent or minister of any church, chapel, or place appropriated to public religious worship," and that the order of the justices was, therefore, rightly made. Hornsey Local Board v. Brewis, 60 L. J., M. C. 48; 64 L. T. 288; 55 J. P. 389.

Trustees of School.]—Land had been conveyed to three trustees under 4 & 5 Vict. c. 38, s. 2, for the purposes of the act, and to permit the premises and all buildings erected thereon to be for ever used as a school for the education of poor children, and for the residence of the master and mistress, and for no other purpose whatsoever. The school was built and used according to the trust, no rent whatever being received by the trustees. The local board gave the proper notices for paving the street along which the school fronted, to one of the trustees and the owners of other premises fronting the street, under 11 & 12 Vict. c. 63, s. 69; and they charged the trustee, as owner of the school, the proportion according to the frontage of the school:—Held, that the trustee was owner within s. 2, which enacts that "owner" "shall mean the person for the time being receiving the rack-rent of the lands or premises, whether on his own account or as agent or trustee for any other person, or who would so receive the same if such lands or premises were let at a rack-rent": and that he was therefore liable to pay the proportion of the expenses. Bowditch v. Wakefield Local Board, 40 L. J., M. C. 214; L. R. 6 Q. B. 567; 25 L. T. 88.

Trustees to whom land is conveyed in perpetuity under s. 6 of the School Sites Act, 1841, for the purposes of a school, and "for no other purpose whatever," are "owners" within the Public Health Act, 1875, s. 4, and a proportion of the expenses incurred by the urban authority in metalling a road abutting thereon will be declared to be a charge on the land and buildings under s. 257, notwithstanding that the charge cannot be enforced by a sale. Bowditch v. Wakefield Local Board (40 L. J., M. C. 214; L. R. 6 Q. B. 567) followed. Hornsey Urban District Council v. Smith, 66 L. J., Ch. 476; [1897] 1 Ch. 843; 76 L. T. 431; 45 W. R. 581—C. A. Reversing 61 J. P. 311.

Lord of Manor—Turf Common subject to Charitable Trust.]—Where by an inclosure act and by an award of the inclosure commissioners made thereunder, the soil of a turf common forming part of the waste of a manor is beneficially vested in the lord of the manor, subject as regards the surface to certain charitable trusts created by the act, so that the common cannot be let at a rack-rent, the lord of the manor is "owner" of the common within the meaning of the Public Health Act, 1875, and is consequently liable to contribute to the expenses of paving roads adjoining the common. Christchurch Inclosure Act, In re, Meyrick v. Att.-Gen., 63 L. J., Ch. 657; [1894] 3 Ch. 209; 8 R. 480; 71 L. T. 122; 42 W. R. 614; 58 J. P. 556.

Tenements Occupied or Unoccupied.]—By the Public Health Act, 1875 (38 & 39 Vict. c. 55), s. 211, the owner instead of the occupier may, at the option of the urban authority, be rated to general district rates, provided that in cases where the owner is rated instead of the occupier he shall be assessed on such reduced estimate as the urban authority deem reasonable of the net annual value, not being less than two-thirds nor more than four-fifths of the net annual value; and where such reduced estimate is in respect of tenements, whether occupied or unoccupied, then such assessment may be made on one-half of the amount at which such tenements would be liable to be rated if the same were occupied, and the rate were levied on the occupiers:—Held, that a discretionary power is given to the urban authority by that enactment to rate the owner in respect of premises whether occupied or unoccupied, but where the owner is so rated the assessment must only be upon one-half of the ratable value. Reg. v. Barclay, 51 L. J., M. C. 47; 8 Q. B. D. 486; 46 L. T. 335; 30 W. R. 672; 46 J. P. 693—C. A.

Change of Ownership before Completion of Works.]—Under the Public Health Act, 1875 (38 & 39 Vict. c. 55), s. 150, which enables the urban authority to give notice to the owners of premises abutting upon a street (not being a highway repairable by the inhabitants at large), to sewer, level, and pave it, and upon default to execute the works and recover the expenses from the owners in default, according to the frontage of their respective premises, such expenses cannot be recovered from anyone who, though the owner of premises when notice was given by the urban authority, has ceased to be owner before the completion of the works. Reg. v. Swindon Local Board, 48 L. J., M. C. 119; 4 Q. B. D. 305; 40 L. T. 424; 27 W. R. 732.

Vendor or Purchaser.]—Leasehold houses in an urban district, abutting partly on a private road, were sold on an open contract; at the date of the sale works had been done by the local board of the district on the road under s. 150 of the Public Health Act, 1875; the final demand for payment of the sum apportioned in respect of the premises was served after the purchase ought to have been completed:—Held, that the apportioned expenses became a charge on the premises at the date of completion, and as between the vendor and purchaser were payable by the vendor. Bettesworth and Richer, In re, 57 L. J., Ch. 749; 37 Ch. D. 535; 58 L. T. 796; 36 W. R. 544; 52 J. P. 740.

Subsequent Owners.]—The charge created by s. 257 of the Public Health Act, 1875, for expenses incurred by a local authority for paving, &c., for the payment whereof the owner of the premises at the time the works are completed is liable and against whom the local authority have, under s. 150, a summary remedy, is a charge on the premises in the hands of a subsequent owner, although the local authority have by negligence lost their summary remedy against the previous owner. Sunderland Corporation v. Alcock, 51 L. J., Ch. 546; 46 L. T. 377; 30 W. R. 655.

—— Mortgagee in Possession—"Successive Owners"—Concurrent Remedies.]—In 1879 the owner of premises abutting on H. Street and E. Street, Blackburn, mortgaged them to the defendant. In 1880 the plaintiffs, the Corporation of Blackburn, paved H. Street. In 1881 the mortgagor, in accordance with the provisions of the Blackburn Improvement Act, 1870, executed a charge on the premises in favour of the corporation, for the payment by instalments of his apportionment of the expenses thereof. In 1882, and prior to the commencement of the operation of the Blackburn Improvement Act, 1882, the corporation paved E. Street, and in 1883 the mortgagor further charged the premises, in accordance with the provisions of the Blackburn Improvement Act, 1882, with the payment by instalments of the expenses thereof. The mortgagor made default in payment of the instalments. On the death of the mortgagor in 1883 the defendant took possession of the premises under his mortgage. In an action by the corporation against the mortgagee to recover the unpaid instalments under s. 247 of the Blackburn Improvement Act, 1882, which entitles the corporation to institute an action at law against "successive owners" of premises, for the recovery of the expenses of paving streets abutting thereon:—Held, that the defendant being mortgagee in possession, was a "successive owner" within the meaning of s. 247; and that the execution of a charge in favour of the corporation did not preclude them from the remedy of action at law to recover the expenses; and that the act of 1882 was applicable to the recovery of expenses incurred prior to the commencement of the operation of that act. Blackburn Corporation v. Micklethwait, 54 L. T. 539; 50 J. P. 550.

—— Notice to "Owner."]—By their private act a local board were empowered to execute works of sewering and paving in streets, and to apportion among and demand from the owners of adjoining premises the estimated expenses. The defendant was a second mortgagee of houses abutting on a street, and from April, 1891, to June, 1892, was in possession, and collected the rents, which he applied in keeping down outgoings and the interest on the first mortgage. These payments being made, no surplus remained. In June, 1891, the local board apportioned sums in respect of estimated expenses of sewering and paving the street, and demanded 113*l.* from the defendant as his share. The first mortgagee entered into possession in June, 1892. The works were not completed till July or August following:—Held, that the defendant was "owner" of the houses, within the interpretation of s. 4 of the Public Health Act, 1875 (embodied in the private act), and liable for the estimated expenses apportioned in respect of them. Tottenham Local Board v. Williamson, 62 L. J., Q. B. 322; 69 L. T. 51; 57 J. P. 614.

c. Landlord or Tenant.

A lessee covenanted to pay the tithe or rent-charges in lieu of tithes and tax (if any), sewers' rates, main drainage rates, and all other taxes, rates and assessments, and impositions and outgoings whatsoever then or thereafter to be charged or imposed on or in respect of the said premises or any part thereof:—Held, that the lessee was not liable to pay the amount charged by the urban authority for sewering, levelling, and paving the road on which the demised premises abutted, under s. 150 of the Public Health Act, 1875. Hill v. Edward, 1 Cab. & E. 481.

See further LANDLORD AND TENANT.

3. Notice to do Works.

Sufficiency of.]—A notice to pave, given under 11 & 12 Vict. c. 63, s. 69, did not specify the breadth to be paved, or any of the particulars necessary to enable the party to do the work required, but contained a statement at the foot of it, that particulars of the necessary works might be obtained from the borough surveyor's office, and it appeared that plans and specifications were lodged at that office, and were seen there by the party on whom the notice had been served:—Held, that in the absence of evidence that such plans and specifications did not give ample information of the work to be done, the notice was sufficient. Bayley v. Wilkinson, 16

C. B. (N.S.) 161; 33 L. J., M. C. 161; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 726; 10 L. T. 543; 12 W. R. 797.

—— If not objected to.]—An owner on whom notice to level, &c., under the 11 & 12 Vict. c. 63, s. 69, and 26 & 27 Vict. c. 70, s. 3, has been served, and who has not given notice of objection, is estopped from shewing that the street in question is a highway repairable by the inhabitants at large. Reg. v. Livesey, 22 L. T. 470.

—— Waiver of Proof.]—An owner of premises abutting on a street having received from the urban authority notice under s. 150 of the Public Health Act, 1875, to pave, &c., such street, endorsed on the notice an authority to the urban sanitary authority to execute the works, and an undertaking to repay the costs on completion. On default of payment after demand made, the urban sanitary authority proceeded to recover the expenses in a summary manner before justices:—Held, that the owner having by the submission indorsed on the notice admitted the right of the sanitary authority to issue the notice, could not require proof to be given before the justices of the fulfilment of the conditions precedent to the existence of such right. The owner could not by such submission give jurisdiction to the sanitary authority, if in fact they had none, but he did thereby waive the proof by them of the preliminaries to the notice and make it incumbent on himself to disprove their original authority, if he wished to dispute it. Lewis v. Cardiff Urban Sanitary Authority, 47 L. J., M. C. 101.

—— Absence of Estimate and Report.]—A local board of health required the owners of property adjoining a street, not being a highway, to level it; and they, having made default, the local board caused the work to be done by contract. Before making the contract, no estimate was made of the annual expense of repairing the work when done, nor was any report obtained as to whether it would be more advantageous to contract only for the execution of the work, or for the execution and maintenance thereof. In other respects, the directions of 11 & 12 Vict. c. 63, s. 85, were followed:—Held, that, as the work when complete would not be repaired and maintained under the act or out of the rates, no such estimate or report was required; and that the local board might enforce payment of the expenses from the owners, notwithstanding the absence of the estimate and report. Cunningham v. Wolverhampton Local Board, 7 El. & Bl. 187; 26 L. J., M. C. 33; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 385; 5 W. R. 310.

—— Contents of Plans and Sections.]—A notice by a local board of health to the owner of houses abutting upon a street not being a highway, to sewer, level, pave, flag and channel the same, in pursuance of 11 & 12 Vict. c. 63, s. 69, is not invalid by reason of the plans and sections of the required works deposited under 24 & 25 Vict. c. 61, s. 16, including narrow strips of land in front of the houses, not open to or used by the public. Hall v. Potter, 39 L. J., M. C. 1; 21 L. T. 454.

—— Notice to Pave—Alteration in Work done.]—Under s. 150 of the Public Health Act, 1875 (38 & 39 Vict. c. 55), an urban sanitary authority gave notice to the owner of premises to pave part of a street upon which his premises abutted, specifying the materials and mode and (inter alia) requiring him to lay down concrete. The owner having failed to comply, the sanitary authority did the work themselves, but finding that the concrete would be an unnecessary expense, omitted it:—Held, that the omission to follow strictly the terms of their own notice did not prevent the sanitary authority from recovering from the owner his proportion of the expenses incurred. Acton Local Board v. Lewsey, 55 L. J., Q. B. 404; 11 App. Cas. 93; 54 L. T. 657; 34 W. R. 745; 50 J. P. 708—H. L. (E.)

The S. urban sanitary authority gave notice to K., an owner of land adjoining a new street, to sewer the road and lay an 18-inch pipe. K. having neglected to do so, the authority in course of carrying out the work, found a 12-inch pipe sufficient, and used it, and it saved expense to K. on the apportionment:—Held, that the magistrate was right in holding that the apportioned expenses of the altered work were recoverable under s. 150 of the Public Health Act, 1875, the alteration being not a material matter nor invalidating the notice. Kershaw v. Sheffield Corporation, 51 J. P. 759.

—— Waiver of — Charge on Lands.]—The plaintiffs incurred expenses in paving a street without having served on the defendants, who were frontagers, a notice under s. 69 of the Public Health Act, 1848 (to which s. 150 of the Public Health Act, 1875, now corresponds), requiring them to do the work themselves. The plaintiffs claimed in an action a declaration that the expenses were a charge on the defendant's property, under s. 62 of the Local Government Act, 1858 (to which s. 257 of the Public Health Act, 1875, corresponds). It was proved that B., a predecessor in title of the defendants, had taken from the plaintiffs a receipt for a payment in respect of the same expenses:—Held, that the plaintiffs were not entitled to a declaration, inasmuch as the service of the notice under s. 69 was a condition precedent to liability on the part of the defendants in respect of the expenses, and that the payment by B. could not operate as a waiver of the omission to give the notice. Farnworth Local Board v. Compton, 34 W. R. 334—C. A.

Service of.]—Service of a notice by delivering it to the clerk of an owner at his place of business is a sufficient notice to satisfy the requirements of 11 & 12 Vict. c. 63, s. 69, the 150th section being merely in aid of the service of notices. Mason v. Bibby, 2 H. & C. 881; 33 L. J., M. C. 105; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 519; 9 L. T. 692; 12 W. R. 382.

A place of business is a place of abode, and a clerk an inmate, within the meaning of the 150th section. Ib.

The service of a notice, under 11 & 12 Vict. c. 63, s. 69, on a person de facto receiving the rent, is a service on the owner, within the 2nd section. Peek v. Waterloo and Seaforth Local Board, 2 H. & C. 700; 33 L. J., M. C. 11; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 1344; 9 L. T. 338; 12 W. R. 252.

—— Proof of.]—On an information against a person for not paying the expenses apportioned upon him as owner of premises in a street upon which work had been done by a local board of health, it was proved that the work had been done, and an apportionment of the expenses made, and notice of it served upon him; he had not given notice within three months that he disputed it, under 21 & 22 Vict. c. 98, s. 63; but no evidence was given of any notice having been served under 11 & 12 Vict. c. 63, s. 69, previously to the board doing the work:—Held, that the justices could not make an order unless the preliminary notice was proved to have been given. Jarrow Local Board v. Kennedy, L. R. 6 Q. B. 128; 19 W. R. 275.

—— Evidence against subsequent Occupier.]—Notice to remove a nuisance, left at the premises, is evidence against a subsequent occupier. Johnson v. Bensley, R. & M. 189.

—— To Owner—What is.]—Notice to one who receives the rent of land de facto, without right thereto, satisfies the provision requiring notice to the owner, contained in 21 & 22 Vict. c. 98, s. 62. Peek v. Waterloo and Seaforth Local Board, 2 H. & C. 700; 33 L. J., M. C. 11; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 1344; 9 L. T. 338; 12 W. R. 252.

Notice to several Owners—Default by One.]—The appellant and five others were the owners of premises within the district of the respondents, an urban authority under the Public Health Act, 1875. These premises abutted upon a street (not being a highway), which street was not sewered, levelled, paved, flagged, and channelled to the satisfaction of the respondents. The respondents gave a separate notice to each of such owners requiring them to sewer, level, pave, flag, and channel the parts of the street in front of their premises, within a specified time. Five of the owners executed the works in front of their premises, but the appellant made default. The respondents thereupon executed the works required to be done in front of her premises, and their surveyor having made his apportionment, gave her a notice stating that the expenses had been apportioned by their surveyor, who had settled that 213*l.* 13*s.* 6*d.* was payable by her according to the frontage of her premises, and that they required payment of that sum:—Held, that the respondents were not bound before executing such works to give the appellant a fresh notice specifying the particular works which remained to be done by her. Simcox v. Handsworth Local Board, 51 L. J., Q. B. 168; 8 Q. B. D. 39; 30 W. R. 273; 46 J. P. 260.

—— Omission to serve One—Objection to Proceedings.]—The service of a notice to sewer upon all the frontagers of a street being a condition precedent under s. 150, the omission to serve one of the frontagers is a valid objection to the subsequent proceedings. But where the question of the apportioned expenses of sewering has been referred to arbitration under the act, such objection must be taken before the arbitrators, and it is too late to take it in an action to enforce payment of the amount found due by the award. Handsworth Urban Council v. Derrington, 66 L. J., Ch. 691; [1897] 2 Ch. 438; 77 L. T. 73; 61 J. P. 518.

4. CONCLUSIVENESS OF APPORTIONMENT.

Where the apportionment of street improvement expenses by the surveyor under s. 150 of the Public Health Act, 1875, has not been disputed by a frontager in the manner pointed out by s. 257 of the act, such apportionment is conclusive, and the frontager cannot set up, as a defence to proceedings for the recovery of the sum apportioned, that he has been charged in respect of a greater extent of frontage than he possesses. Midland Ry. v. Watton, 55 L. J., M. C. 99; 17 Q. B. D. 30; 54 L. T. 482; 34 W. R. 524; 50 J. P. 405—C. A.

Cross Notice to Dispute—Time for.]—Where an owner of premises has not given notice to dispute the apportionment, it becomes binding on her within the three months limited by s. 257, and summary proceedings may be taken under that section for the recovery of the amount due from her. Simcox v. Handsworth Local Board, 51 L. J., Q. B. 168; 8 Q. B. D. 39; 30 W. R. 273; 46 J. P. 260.

By 11 & 12 Vict. c. 63, s. 69, and 15 & 16 Vict. c. 42, s. 13, a local board may require the owners of the houses in a street, not being a highway repairable by the inhabitants at large, to sewer, level, and pave it, and in default of the owners the board may do the work, and the expenses are to be paid by the owners in proportion to their frontage, the proportion to be settled by the surveyor, and in case of dispute by arbitration; and by 21 & 22 Vict. c. 98, s. 63, the apportionment of the surveyor shall be binding and conclusive upon every owner, unless, within three months from the notice of the amount of the proportion, he shall by written notice dispute the same. A local board having duly proceeded under the act, and sewered, levelled, and paved a street, and no notice having been given by an owner that he disputed the apportionment, the board sought to enforce before justices the payment of the proportion charged:—Held, that it was still open to the owner to dispute his liability, and to shew that the street was a highway repairable by the inhabitants at large. Hesketh v. Atherton Local Board, 43 L. J., M. C. 37; L. R. 9 Q. B. 4; 29 L. T. 530; 22 W. R. 58.

—— Effect of.]—The 21 & 22 Vict. c. 98, s. 63, makes the apportionment after three months binding and conclusive only as to the various amounts settled by it, but not on the question of highway or no highway. Ib.

—— Deposit of Plans.]—An apportionment of street expenses, made under 38 & 39 Vict. c. 55 (The Public Health Act, 1875), s. 150, and not disputed within three months from notice of it to the owner of the premises in respect of which the expenses were incurred, is binding and conclusive upon him by s. 257, and, therefore, in an action against him for the amount apportioned, the apportionment cannot be treated as a nullity merely because it mixed up the expenses of more than one street, and, in the opinion of the judge, reasonable opportunities were not afforded of inspecting the plans and estimate deposited according to s. 150, before the expenses were incurred. The deposit of plans and an estimate is not a condition precedent to the recovery of such expenses. Shanklin Local Board v. Millar, 49 L. J., C. P. 512; 5 C. P. D. 272; 42 L. T. 788; 29 W. R. 63; 44 J. P. 635.

Dispute as to—Arbitration.]—See infra, 5.

Surveyor's Certificate.]—Under the Public Health Act, 1848, and the Local Government Act, 1858, the surveyor's certificate of apportionment on the owners of premises abutting on a street of the cost of paving, &c., such street, is conclusive only as to such apportionment, and not as to the original liability of the persons charged. Hesketh v. Atherton Local Board, 43 L. J., M. C. 37; L. R. 9 Q. B. 4; 29 L. T. 530.

Neither the arbitrators nor the justices in settling such proportions are entitled to inquire whether the amount alleged to have been expended by the surveyor has been actually so expended. Ib.

Erroneous Notice—Fresh Apportionment—Charge on Premises.]—An urban sanitary authority, acting under s. 150 of the Public Health Act, 1875, served the defendant and other frontagers of a new street with notices requiring them to execute certain works, including a particular work which could not legally be included in such notices. The notices not being complied with, the urban authority did the works and apportioned the expenses incurred by them in so doing on the frontagers. A summons to recover from the defendant the sum of 650*l.*, the amount charged to him under the apportionment, having been dismissed by the magistrates, the urban authority made a second apportionment, deducting the expense of the work which had been wrongly included, the amount charged to the defendant therein being 579*l.* They then brought an action under s. 257 of the Public Health Act to establish a charge on the defendant's premises for 579*l.*, or in the alternative, for 650*l.*:—Held, that the urban authority had power to make a second apportionment; and that, notwithstanding the dismissal of the summons, they were entitled to a charge on the premises for 579*l.* Manchester Corporation v. Hampson, 35 W. R. 334. See S. C. in C. A., 35 W. R. 591.

The surveyor of a local board, having made one apportionment upon a wrong principle, has a right to make a fresh apportionment under 21 & 22 Vict. c. 98, s. 64. Cook v. Ipswich Local Board, 40 L. J., M. C. 169; L. R. 6 Q. B. 451; 24 L. T. 579; 19 W. R. 1079.

—— Jurisdiction of Justices.] — Upon the hearing of a complaint preferred before a police magistrate by the urban authority of the district, acting under s. 150 of the Public Health Act, 1875, to recover the amount apportioned upon a frontager in respect of expenses incurred by the urban authority in sewering, &c., a street, the frontager objected that the plans referred to in the notice requiring him to execute the work, shewed that part of the work in respect of which, upon his failure to comply with the notice, the expenses were incurred, was executed upon land belonging to private owners:—Held, that as part of the work was executed on a street, the urban authority had power to fix the sum to be apportioned, and the magistrate had jurisdiction to entertain the complaint, and could only make an order for payment of the apportioned sum, and if the frontager was aggrieved by what the urban authority had done, his only remedy was to appeal to the Local Government Board under s. 268 of the Public Health Act, 1875. Wake v. Sheffield Corporation, or Reg. v. Sheffield Recorder, 53 L. J., M. C. 1; 12 Q. B. D. 142; 50 L. T. 76; 32 W. R. 82; 48 J. P. 197—C. A.

A local authority, acting under s. 150 of the Public Health Act, 1875, served a frontager with a notice to execute works of sewering, paving, &c., a part only of the works specified being rightly included in the notice; the frontager not having complied with such notice, the work was done by the local authority:—Held, that unless the frontager disputes the apportionment upon him of the expenses incurred by the local authority in executing the works within the time limited by s. 257, he cannot do so by way of defence to proceedings to recover the amount in a court of summary jurisdiction, as such defence does not relate to the whole of his legal liability; and the justices have jurisdiction to make, and must make, an order upon him for payment of the whole amount. Wake v. Sheffield Corporation (12 Q. B. D. 142) followed; Cook v. Ipswich Local Board (L. R. 6 Q. B. 451) explained and distinguished. Derby Corporation v. Grudgings, 63 L. J., M. C. 170; [1894] 2 Q. B. 496; 10 R. 565; 72 L. T. 594; 43 W. R. 74.

5. Arbitration.

When Allowed.]—The 11 & 12 Vict. c. 63, s. 69, only authorises an arbitration in respect of the proportion to be borne by a defaulting owner, and not in respect of any question as to the expenses being reasonable or properly incurred by the board. Bayley v. Wilkinson, 16 C. B. (N.S.) 161; 33 L. J., M. C. 161; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 726; 10 L. T. 543; 12 W. R. 797.

Where a notice, served by a board of health upon an owner, calling upon him to pay an apportionment of expenses incurred in the sewering and paving of roads, is met by a counter-notice disputing the amount alone, such demand may be the subject of arbitration; but where the counter-notice disputes the liability to pay, such a demand must be tried by justices, who, if the counter-notice also disputes the amount, may exercise their jurisdiction as to the amount also. West v. Downman, 14 Ch. D. 111; 42 L. T. 340; 29 W. R. 6—C. A.

Where an urban authority gives notice to the owners and occupiers of premises fronting, adjoining, or abutting on a street, that requires to be sewered or otherwise dealt with under s. 150 of the Public Health Act, 1875, and in default executes the work, and the expense is apportioned by the surveyor, any dispute arising on the apportionment, whether as to amount or otherwise, must be dealt with by arbitration in the manner provided by the act, and the urban authority cannot proceed to recover the amount apportioned from any owner who has given notice that he disputes the apportionment. West v. Downman (14 Ch. D. 111) disapproved. Sandgate Local Board v. Keene, 61 L. J., Q. B. 775; [1892] 1 Q. B. 831; 66 L. T. 741; 56 J. P. 484—C. A.

An urban authority executed certain works under s. 150 of the Public Health Act, 1875, which empowers them to recover the expenses from the owners in default "according to the frontage of their respective premises and in such proportion as is settled by the surveyor of the urban authority, and in case of dispute by arbitration." The surveyor apportioned the expenses and sent notices of apportionment to the several owners in default, one of whom wrote in reply, objecting to the account rendered and complaining that the cost per foot was too high. The urban authority treated this as a notice disputing the apportionment, and passed a resolution to appoint an arbitrator, but the appointment was never carried into effect. They then sued the owner for the apportioned amount:—Held, by Wright, J., that the owner's letter was an objection to the prime cost of the work and not to the mode of apportioning the cost, and that the urban authority were not bound to proceed to arbitration before commencing their action. Sandgate Local Board v. Keene ([1892] 1 Q. B. 831), distinguished:—Held, by the court of appeal, that the urban authority had by their conduct precluded themselves from denying that there was a dispute as to the apportionment, and that they were bound to proceed to arbitration. Folkestone Corporation v. Brooks, 62 L. J., Ch. 863; [1893] 3 Ch. 22; 69 L. T. 403; 58 J. P. 53—C. A.

Another owner disputed the claim of the urban authority in general terms:—Held, by Wright, J., that this was a dispute as to the apportionment. Ib.

See also West Hartlepool Corporation v. Robinson, 75 L. T. 677; 45 W. R. 312; 61 J. P. 200. Affirmed, 77 L. T. 387 (ante, col. 379).

Enforcing Award—Summary Proceedings.]—Notices to sewer and pave roads having been, in 1872, served by a board of health on an owner, he took no notice during his lifetime, and the works having been executed by the board, notices to pay apportionments were on the 30th of July, 1875, served on the tenant for life under the will of the owner, and on the executors, who within the statutory three months served counter-notices on the board, disputing the amount of the apportionments, and alleging that the roads were public roads. The board then commenced proceedings by arbitration, which the owners refused to attend, and in their absence an award was made in favour of the board on the 9th of August, 1877. On the 19th of January, 1878, the award was made a rule of the Queen's Bench Division. On the 12th of February notices of demand were served by the board on the owners, and on the 9th of July, 1878, proceedings in the Queen's Bench Division to enforce the award were commenced and subsequently abandoned. On the 1st of August, 1878, proceedings were taken in the Queen's Bench with reference to the costs of the award, and these, on the 23rd of January, 1879, were transferred to the Chancery Division, in which an administration action was pending:—Held, by the vice-chancellor, and by the court of appeal, that a summons by the board for leave to prove in the administration action for the amount awarded must be refused, on the ground that the remedy of the board was by a summary proceeding before justices, and had become barred by the operation of Jervis's Act (11 & 12 Vict. c. 43), s. 11. West v. Downman, 14 Ch. D. 111; 42 L. T. 340; 29 W. R. 6—C. A.

Where a local authority gives notice under s. 150 of the Public Health Act, 1875, to the owners and occupiers of premises adjoining a street to level and pave the same, and in default executes the work, and, a dispute arising, the amount of the expenses apportionable to the premises of one of the persons served with notice is settled by arbitration under the act, the award made in the arbitration cannot be enforced under s. 12 of the Arbitration Act, 1889, the only remedy of the local authority against the person served being by summary proceedings before justices pursuant to s. 150 of the act of 1875, except where the amount is below 50*l.*, when, by s. 261, proceedings for its recovery may at the option of the local authority be taken in the county court. Willesden Local Board and Wright, In re, 65 L. J., Q. B. 567; [1896] 2 Q. B. 412; 75 L. T. 13; 44 W. R. 676; 60 J. P. 708—C. A.

Award—On whom Binding.]—By the Public Health Act, 1875, s. 150, an urban authority are empowered under certain circumstances to pave and repair highways, and to apportion through their surveyor, or in case of dispute by arbitration, the amounts so expended to be paid by the owners of premises abutting on such highway in proportion to their respective frontages. By s. 257 such apportionment is binding and conclusive on such owner unless he shall dispute the same within three months. By s. 180, sub-s. 15, the award of the arbitrator shall be binding and final on all parties to the reference. The plaintiffs, a local authority, required the defendant and other owners of land adjoining a road within the above section to pave that road, and on their failing to do so executed the work themselves, and had the amount apportioned; and claimed and received from the defendant, who did not dispute the apportionment, his share of the expenses so incurred. Certain of the other owners disputed the apportionment, and an arbitration was held, of which the defendant had no notice, and to which he was not a party. The arbitrator reapportioned the whole sum expended amongst the owners, including the defendant, and fixed the amount to be paid by the defendant at a higher sum than had been fixed by the surveyor. In an action to recover the additional amount so charged to the defendant:—Held, that the plaintiffs could not recover the sum claimed on the footing of the assessment made by the arbitrator, and that the award was not binding on the defendant. Tunbridge Wells Local Board v. Akroyd, 49 L. J., Ex. 403; 5 Ex. D. 199; 42 L. T. 640; 28 W. R. 450; 44 J. P. 504—C. A.

6. Proceedings for Recovery.

a. Summary before Justices.

Nature of Jurisdiction.]—Under 11 & 12 Vict. c. 63, s. 54, a discretion is vested in a local board of health to determine what works are necessary to be done, and justices at petty sessions, on a proceeding before them for a penalty under s. 129, have no jurisdiction to review the determination of the local board upon such a subject. Hargreaves v. Taylor, 3 B. & S. 613; 32 L. J., M. C. 111; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 1053; 8 L. T. 149; 11 W. R. 562.

Where under the provisions of ss. 52, 53 and 54 of the Sheffield Corporation Act, 1890 (or under ss. 6, 7 and 8 of the Private Street Works Act, 1892, which are to the same effect), the corporation has resolved to make a sewer in a street within their jurisdiction, and has approved the specifications, plans, &c., prepared by their surveyor, the court of summary jurisdiction, on objection made by a frontager, is entitled to say that it is unreasonable to make the proposed sewer at the expense of the frontagers, and in arriving at that conclusion, is entitled to take into consideration the existing state of the drainage of the street in question. Sheffield Corporation v. Alexander, 64 L. J., M. C. 44; 14 R. 275; 72 L. T. 242—C. A.

At what Sessions.]—The 11 & 12 Vict. c. 63, s. 2, defines a justice to be "a justice acting for the place in which the matter requiring the cognisance of the justice arises" :—Held, that this, in a county, meant a justice acting within the petty sessional division in which the matter arose ; and, therefore, that justices of the county, not acting within the petty sessional division of it in which the offence under s. 148 had been committed, had no jurisdiction to convict under s. 129. Reg. v. Brodhurst, 32 L. J., M. C. 168 ; 11 W. R. 425.

Notice to Treat as Private Improvement Expenses.]—By s. 213, et seq., of the Public Health Act, 1875, a private improvement rate may be levied for expenses declared to be private improvement expenses, and certain advantages are given to owners. A notice under s. 150 given to the appellants, who were owners of premises fronting a street within the meaning of the latter section, requiring them to do certain sewering works within a prescribed period, and stating that if such works were not executed the urban authority would execute the same themselves at the appellant's expense, thus concluded : "And the said urban authority will thereupon also proceed to declare all costs, charges, and expenses paid, expended, or incurred by them in consequence of such neglect or default, to be private improvement expenses, and to enforce payment according to law" :—Held, that even assuming the notice to have been good, the concluding portion could not be treated as surplusage, and that it was not, therefore, competent for the urban authority, after their declared intention to treat the expenses incurred as private improvement expenses, to proceed against the appellants summarily for the recovery of such expenses. Gould v. Bacup Local Board, 50 L. J., M. C. 44 ; 44 L. T. 103 ; 29 W. R. 471 ; 45 J. P. 325.

Election to Treat as Private Improvement Expenses.]—The election of a board to declare expenses to be private improvement expenses did not prevent them from enforcing a charge on the land, but they could only enforce it in respect of the instalments that were for the time being in arrear. Tottenham Local Board v. Rowell, 50 L. J., Ch. 99 ; 15 Ch. D. 378 ; 43 L. T. 616 ; 29 W. R. 36—C. A.

In 1858, a local board of health served upon W., an owner of premises within the meaning of 11 & 12 Vict. c. 63, s. 69, a notice to execute certain specified works in paving, &c. The works not having been executed by him, the local board completed them on the 30th of November, 1860, and on the 21st of January, 1861, apportioned the expense among W. and the other owners, giving notice on the same day to him that "unless the amount of this account is paid within fourteen days after delivery, interest at the rate of 5*l.* per cent. per annum will be charged thereon until fully liquidated. To proportion of sewering, levelling, paving, flagging, channelling, &c., namely, fifty feet frontage, at 5*s.* 4*d.*, 13*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.*" The amount was not paid, and the local board, on the 25th of August, 1870, resolved and declared that the amount should be "private improvement expenses," and subsequently that the amount should be paid by two instalments. W. refused to pay, and an information was laid against him :—Held, that the local board having elected in 1861 to treat the amount as a debt, due from W., could not treat it as a private improvement expense. Wilson v. Bolton Corporation, 41 L. J., M. C. 4 ; L. R. 7 Q. B. 105 ; 25 L. T. 597 ; 20 W. R. 246.

Disqualification of Justice.]—By a local act for the improvement of a borough, the corporation was made the authority for the execution of the act, with power to direct prosecutions for this purpose. An information for an offence under the act having been preferred by an officer on behalf of the corporation, a summons was issued upon it by a justice, who was also an alderman and member of the corporation, but came on for hearing before justices, none of whom were connected with the corporation :—Held, notwithstanding, that such justices could not proceed with the hearing of the summons, for it had been issued by one who was virtually prosecutor. Reg. v. Gibbon, 6 Q. B. D. 168 ; 29 W. R. 442.

Adjudication that Street is a Highway—Res Judicata.]—An application to justices by a local board under the Public Health Act, 1875, for the recovery of a proportion of the expenses of sewering a street from the owner of premises abutting thereon, was dismissed by the justices, on the ground that the street was a highway repairable by the inhabitants at large. The local board some years afterwards made an application against the same person for the recovery of a proportion of paving expenses subsequently incurred in respect of the same street, and a stipendiary magistrate made an order for the payment of such expenses :—Held, that the adjudication of the justices that the street was a highway repairable by the inhabitants at large on the first application was beyond the jurisdiction of such justices, which was only to make or refuse the order for the expenses claimed, and that, therefore, such adjudication on the first application did not estop the local board from claiming the expenses they claimed on the second application, and consequently that the magistrate might make the order which he made for their payment. Reg. v. Hutchins, 50 L. J., M. C. 35 ; 6 Q. B. D. 300 ; 44 L. T. 364 ; 29 W. R. 724 ; 45 J. P. 504—C. A.

Right to dispute Liability before Justices.]—In proceedings before justices under the Public Health Act, 1875 (38 & 39 Vict. c. 55), s. 150, to recover from an owner of premises fronting a road his proportion of expenses incurred by the local authority in sewering, levelling, and paving it, the owner may dispute his liability by shewing that the road is not a "street," or that it is a "highway repairable by the inhabitants at large." Eccles v. Wirral Union, 55 L. J., M. C. 106 ; 17 Q. B. D. 107 ; 34 W. R. 412 ; 50 J. P. 596.

b. In other Courts.

Jurisdiction of County Court.]—The county court, or two justices, have exclusive jurisdiction to try an action for the recovery of money paid by parish authorities for the abatement of a nuisance, and the costs thereof, under 11 & 12 Vict. c. 123, s. 3, although the title to land may be in question. Hertford Union v. Kimpton, 11 Ex. 225 ; 25 L. J., M. C. 41. And see Willesden Local Board and Wright, In re, supra, cols. 497, 498.

Right of Action when no Special Remedy provided.]—The urban sanitary authority of the borough of Portsmouth (who represented the commissioners mentioned in ss. 53, 149, and 156 of the Towns Improvement Clauses Act, 1847 (10 & 11 Vict. c. 34)), having incurred certain expenses within s. 53 of the Towns Improvement Clauses Act, 1847, sought to recover the same by action from the owners of the abutting lands. The defendant alleged that the expenses in question could not be recovered directly by action, but that a rate must be made in respect of them, as in the case of private improvement expenses:—Held, on demurrer to the defence, that, by the repeal of s. 156 and the succeeding sections relating to private improvement expenses by a local act for the borough passed in 1857, the last words of s. 53 were in effect repealed; and, consequently, no special remedy being provided for the recovery of expenses under s. 53, an action would lie to recover them, independently of s. 149. Portsmouth Corporation v. Smith, 46 L. T. 552—C. A. Affirming 46 J. P. 23.

Action of Debt, whether available — Construction of Acts.]—A local board may recover from occupiers in streets, being highways not repairable by the public at large, their share of the expenses incurred by the board in repairing such streets under 11 & 12 Vict. c. 63, ss. 68 and 69, and may recover such money paid by action of debt under a local act incorporating the above act. The word "highway" in these sections means a highway not repairable by the public at large since the 15 & 16 Vict. c. 42, s. 13. Sunderland Corporation v. Herring, 2 W. R. 42.

By s. 34 of a local improvement act, a corporation might require owners of premises fronting a street to pave the same, and in default the corporation might execute the works, and recover the expenses as damages. The 10 & 11 Vict. c. 34 was incorporated; and by s. 149 of the latter act the expenses incurred in default of payment by the owner may be recovered "in the same manner as damages, or in an action of debt." Sect. 210 of the latter act incorporates the clauses of the Railways Clauses Act, 8 & 9 Vict. c. 20, which relate to the recovery of damages, and by s. 140, "in all cases where any damages, costs or expenses are by this act or the special act, or any act incorporated therewith, directed to be paid, and the method of ascertaining the amount, or enforcing payment thereof, is not provided for, such amount, in case of dispute, shall be ascertained and determined by two justices:"—Held, that the mode of recovering expenses incurred in works executed by the corporation upon the default of the owner, under s. 34 of the local act, was by proceeding before justices, and not by action. Blackburn Corporation v. Parkinson, 1 El. & El. 71; 28 L. J., M. C. 7; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 572; 7 W. R. 11.

c. Time for.

Under 21 & 22 Vict. c. 98.]—The provision in the 21 & 22 Vict. c. 98, s. 62, as to the time for taking proceedings by a local board for the recovery of expenses incurred under 11 & 12 Vict. c. 63, is prospective only. Eddleston v. Francis, 7 C. B. (N.S.) 568; 3 L. T. 270.

When not specially Limited.]—By 11 & 12 Vict. c. 63, s. 51, the local board is empowered, on the owner's default, after notice, to provide certain necessary house accommodations, the expense of which is to be recoverable in a summary manner from the owner, the amount to be ascertained by and recovered before two justices. And by 11 & 12 Vict. c. 43, s. 11, in all cases where no time is specially limited for making or laying the complaint or information, it must be done within six calendar months from the time when the matter of complaint or information arose:—Held, that a complaint under 11 & 12 Vict. c. 63, must be made within six calendar months of the work being done, and notice of the amount due being given to the party, and not within six months of the demand of payment. Ib. See also West v. Downman, supra, col. 497.

How Calculated.]—A street being out of repair, a local board of health gave notice to the owners of the adjoining houses to repair it; and, on this not being complied with, executed the works, and gave notice of the expenses and apportionment to each of the owners. The owners gave no notice of disputing the apportionment, and, at the end of the three months limited by 21 & 22 Vict. c. 98, s. 63, the board made a demand of the amount. The owners having refused to pay, and the expenses not having been declared to be private improvement expenses:—Held, that the board had, under 11 & 12 Vict. c. 43, s. 11, six months from the expiration of the three months during which the apportionment might have been disputed, to take proceedings before justices of the peace for the recovery of the amount. Jacomb v. Dodgson, 3 B. & S. 461; 32 L. J., M. C. 113; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 848; 7 L. T. 764; 11 W. R. 308.

When works are executed by a local authority for the improvement of a street under 11 & 12 Vict. c. 63, s. 69, and 21 & 22 Vict. c. 98, s. 63, and the expenses charged upon the owners of the premises fronting the street, it is necessary, before summary proceedings can be taken for the recovery of the amount apportioned upon any such owner that a demand of payment of the sum so apportioned should be served upon him, and the six months within which the summary proceedings must be taken, under 11 & 12 Vict. c. 43, s. 11, are to be reckoned from such notice of demand, and not from the notice of apportionment, which is not a sufficient demand. Greee v. Hunt, 46 L. J., M. C. 202; 2 Q. B. D. 389; 36 L. T. 404; 26 W. R. 543.

—— Commencement of Proceedings.]—Held, also, that in order to recover the amount from W., proceedings must have been taken within nine months from the service of the notice of the 21st of January, 1861, which must be considered as a demand. Ib.

In summary proceedings it is no objection to the validity of a summons that it was issued more than a year after the complaint upon which it was founded. Simcox v. Handsworth Local Board, 51 L. J., Q. B. 168; 8 Q. B. D. 39; 30 W. R. 273; 46 J. P. 260.

Held, also, that the notice of apportionment, which concluded with a demand of payment of the amount apportioned, was not a "notice of demand," within s. 257, and that the six months within which, under s. 252, summary proceedings must be taken, were not to be reckoned from it, but from a subsequent notice of demand. Ib.

Limitation—When Applicable.]—A local board, in the year 1864, determined to do certain works in a street adjoining the defendant's house, for the expenses of which the defendant, among others, was made liable under s. 69 of the Public Health Act, 1848, and for which, consequently, there was a charge on the property under the 62nd section of the Local Government Act, 1858. Before the works were done they resolved that the expenses were private improvement expenses under the 90th section of the Public Health Act, 1848, and should be recovered from the owners and occupiers by annual instalments. In 1872 they revoked the resolution, and made a fresh rate for the whole amount then remaining unpaid, to be paid by the owners and occupiers. This rate being unpaid in 1875, they brought an action against the defendant to enforce the charge on his land under the 62nd section of the act of 1858 :—Held, that the limitation of six months, within which summary proceedings must be taken under the Local Government Act, 1861, does not apply to the enforcing of the charge created by the 62nd section of the Local Government Act, 1858. Tottenham Local Board v. Rowell, 50 L. J., Ch. 99 ; 15 Ch. D. 378 ; 43 L. T. 616 ; 29 W. R. 36—C. A. Cp. West v. Downman, supra, col. 497.

—— Proceedings in County Courts.]—By the Public Health Act, 1848, s. 69, the local board might require the owners of premises fronting or abutting upon any street to sewer and pave the same, and upon default might themselves execute the work ; and the expenses incurred by them were to be paid by the owners in default, and might be recovered in a summary manner. By s. 129, summary proceedings were to be taken before two justices. By the Local Government Act (1858) Amendment Act, 1861 (24 & 25 Vict. c. 61), s. 24, proceedings for the recovery of demands below 20*l.*, which local boards were empowered to recover in a summary manner, might at the option of the local board be taken in the county court. By 11 & 12 Vict. c. 43, s. 11, in all cases where no time is specially limited for making a complaint before justices, it must be made within six months from the time when the matter thereof arose. A local board under the Public Health Act, 1848, s. 69, incurred expenses in sewering and paving a street, upon which premises belonging to R. abutted ; his proportion of the expenses amounted to 13*l.* 5*s.* 5*d.* On the 18th of February, 1873, notice was served by the board on him that the foregoing amount was apportioned upon him, and that the same would become payable by him, unless within three months he disputed it. R. did not dispute the apportionment. The money not having been paid, on the 8th of June, 1875, a plaint was issued by the local board in a county court to recover it from R.'s executor :—Held, that the limitation of time mentioned in 11 & 12 Vict. c. 43, s. 11, applied as well to proceedings in county courts as to proceedings before justices, and that the action could not be sustained, it having been brought more than six months after the expiration of the three months allowed for disputing the amount apportioned upon R. Tottenham Local Board v. Rowell, 46 L. J., Q. B. 432 ; 1 Ex. D. 514 ; 35 L. T. 887 ; 25 W. R. 135—C. A. S. P., West Ham Local Board v. Maddams, 1 Ex. D. 516, n.; 33 L. T. 809 ; Wilson v. Bolton Corporation, ante, cols. 499, 500.

—— Alternative Remedy in County Court.]—The Leeds Improvement Act, 1877, s. 96, provided that summary proceedings before justices for the recovery of expenses must be brought within one year. Sect. 109 provided that when any person neglected to pay any sum due to the corporation, such sum might be recovered in any court of competent jurisdiction for the recovery of debts of the like amount. Other remedies were given for the recovery of these sums, one by an act of 1842, by way of distress, in which there was no limit of time, and another by an act of 1866, by way of action at law :—Held, that the limitation of one year did not apply to proceedings by way of action of debt in the county court. Tottenham Local Board v. Rowell (1 Ex. D. 514), distinguished. Leeds Corporation v. Robshaw, 51 J. P. 441.

—— Real Property Limitation Act, 1874—When Time begins to Run.]—The expenses incurred by a local board under the Public Health Act, 1848, s. 69, charged on the premises in respect of which they are incurred by the Local Government Act, 1858, s. 62, now repealed, but corresponding to s. 257 of the Public Health Act, 1875, are a sum of money charged upon land within the meaning of s. 8 of the Real Property Act, 1874 ; and the present right to receive it, accruing to a person capable of giving a discharge, twelve years next after which no proceeding can be brought for its recovery, dates from the completion of the work, and not from the service of the demand for payment under the Local Government Act. Hornsey Local Board v. Monarch Investment Building Society, 59 L. J., Q. B. 105 ; 24 Q. B. D. 1 ; 61 L. T. 867 ; 38 W. R. 85 ; 54 J. P. 391—C. A.

d. Appeals.

To Quarter Sessions—Notice of.]—The Public Health Act, 1875 (38 & 39 Vict. c. 55), gives an appeal to quarter sessions in respect of any order, conviction, judgment, or determination of any court of summary jurisdiction, subject to the condition that the appellant shall, within fourteen days after the cause of appeal has arisen, give notice to the other party of his intention to appeal. An order was made upon the appellants under s. 48, which order was eighteen days afterwards served upon them ; and they within eight days from the receipt of the service, gave notice of appeal :—Held, that the notice of appeal was too late. The words, "cause of appeal," in s. 269, sub-s. 2, have the same meaning as "decision of the court" in s. 269, sub-s. 1 ; and a notice of an appeal against an order made under s. 48 must be given within fourteen days from the time when the court pronounces its decision. Reg. v. Barnet Rural Sanitary Authority, 45 L. J., M. C. 105 ; 1 Q. B. D. 558 ; 35 L. T. 362.

By 18 & 19 Vict. c. 121, s. 22, the local authority is in certain cases required to make a sewer, and is empowered to assess every house using it, and after fourteen days' notice left on the premises assessed to levy the sum assessed in the same manner as highway rates are leviable, with the same right of appeal against the assessment as shall be given by the law for the time being relating to highways. By the Highway Act (5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 50), s. 105, notice of appeal is to be given within fourteen days after the rate has been made :—Held, that the fourteen days for appealing were to be reckoned from the notice of the assessment being left on the premises. Reg. v. Middleton Nuisances Removal Committee, 1 El. & El. 98 ; 28 L. J., M. C. 41 ; 5 Jur (N.S.) 622 ; 7 W. R. 37.

—— Neglect of—Costs.]—Where an appeal against an order for payment of money is duly entered at the sessions, and afterwards dismissed, after hearing counsel, on the ground that notice of the appeal has not been given to the magistrates making the order, though it has been given to the inspectors, the sessions cannot award costs to the respondent, the matter of the appeal not having been heard and determined. Reg. v. Wilkinson, 2 M. & Rob. 461.

Certiorari—Criminal Matter.]—An order was made by justices directing the defendant to fill up an ash-pit, so as to be no longer a nuisance. The Q. B. D. made absolute an order for a certiorari to quash this order as not warranted by the Public Health Act, 1875, ss. 94, 96:—Held, that the order was "a criminal cause or matter," and that an appeal from the Q. B. D. could not be entertained by the court of appeal. Reg. v. Whitchurch or Whitchurch, Ex parte, 50 L. J., M. C. 99; 7 Q. B. D. 534; 45 L. T. 379; 29 W. R. 922; 45 J. P. 617—C. A.

—— Costs.]—A rule for a certiorari to bring up and quash an order of justices made under s. 158 of the Public Health Act, 1875, is a civil proceeding on the crown side of the Queen's Bench Division within Ord. LXII. r. 2; and the costs are in the discretion of the court under Ord. LV. Reg. v. Morris, 31 W. R. 609.

Power to State a Case—Reference to Local Government Board under Local Act.]—The West Kent Sewerage Board is incorporated by a local act of 38 & 39 Vict. c. 163, and by s. 93 it is enacted that, if any difference arises between the board on the one hand and any constituted authority or person on the other hand, or between any two or more constituted authorities, or between any constituted authority and any parish or person, respecting any assessment of a main sewer rate, or any determination of the board, or any controversy or other matter under the act, the same shall by virtue of the act stand referred for decision to the local government board, whose decision thereon and respecting the costs of the reference shall be final and binding. A dispute having arisen between the West Kent Sewerage Board and the Bexley Local Board representing a claim made by the local board against the sewerage board for compensation for damage done to the highways, &c., of the district, the disputants, with the consent of the local government board, stated a case for the opinion of the court:—Held, that it was not competent to them to do so, the local government board being by s. 93 constituted the tribunal whose decision on the matter was to be final and binding, and this not being a submission to arbitration within s. 5 of the Common Law Procedure Act, 1854. Bexley Local Board v. West Kent Main Sewerage Board, 51 L. J., Q. B. 456; 9 Q. B. D. 518; 47 L. T. 192; 31 W. R. 119; 46 J. P. 519.

Case Reserved by Quarter Sessions—Leave to Appeal.]—The Public Health Act provides in certain cases for an appeal from petty sessions to quarter sessions, and provides that the quarter sessions may state the facts specially for the determination of a superior court. On a case under this act an appeal was brought to quarter sessions, which quashed the order appealed from, subject to a case reserved. A certiorari issued, and a rule calling on the prosecutor to shew cause was granted, and was argued in and discharged by the Queen's Bench Division. Leave to appeal was not given:—Held, that the case so reserved fell within the provisions of s. 45 of the Judicature Act, 1873, and that no appeal could be brought from the decision of the divisional court upon it unless special leave to appeal were granted. Reg. v. Swindon New Town Local Board, 49 L. J., Q. B. 522; 42 L. T. 614; 28 W. R. 80; 44 J. P. 505—C. A.

To Local Government Board—Prohibition.]—Under 38 & 39 Vict. c. 55, s. 150, notice was given by an urban authority to the owner of premises fronting a street to pave part of it, and on his default, the authority executed the work, and their surveyor gave him notice of apportionment of the expenses for which the owner was liable, and demand was made on him for the amount. Under s. 268 he, deeming himself aggrieved by the "decision" of the authority, addressed a memorial by way of appeal to the local government board stating the grounds of his complaint. On a rule for a prohibition to the local government board:—Held, that the notice to pave and the notice of apportionment were not, but the demand of payment was, within the terms of s. 268, a "decision" from which an appeal lay by memorial to the local government board, and the owner having some right of appeal, although the memorial did not accurately state the ground of complaint, the court would not, even if it could, prohibit the local government board from entertaining the appeal. Reg. v. Local Government Board, 51 L. J., M. C. 121; 9 Q. B. D. 600; 46 J. P. 820. Affirmed, 52 L. J., M. C. 4; 10 Q. B. D. 309; 48 L. T. 173; 31 W. R. 72; 47 J. P. 228—C. A.

To Secretary of State.]—The decision of a secretary of state upon an appeal to him under 21 & 22 Vict. c. 98, s. 65, is final as to the amount due for expenses and interest thereon. Wallington v. Willes, 16 C. B. (N.S.) 797; 33 L. J., M. C. 233; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 906; 10 L. T. 784; 12 W. R. 917.

Stay of Execution.]—In July, 1877, justices of the peace made orders against the plaintiff and others, one of whom was L., for payment to the local board of the expense of repairing a street. It was agreed that the order should not be enforced for three months, in order to abide the decision on a case to be presented by L. to the queen's bench upon a point of law. L. appealed to the quarter sessions, and, the order against him having been quashed on the ground of a technical error, he did not take a case to the queen's bench. The plaintiff was not told of what had taken place, and in November, her time for appealing having gone by, an order to levy the amount against her was obtained from the justices. On motion by the plaintiff, and on her undertaking to assent to the statement of a case to the queen's bench on the point of law, and on her bringing the amount claimed into the court, the court considering the plaintiff had been misled by the board, restrained them from levying, unless or until she should have an opportunity of stating a case to the queen's bench. Ashworth v. Hebden Bridge Local Board, 47 L. J., Ch. 195; 37 L. T. 496.

Stay of Criminal Proceedings.]—A court of equity has no jurisdiction to restrain criminal proceedings for the recovery of a penalty imposed by an act of parliament for a breach of its enactments. Kerr v. Preston Corporation, 46 L. J., Ch. 409; 6 Ch. D. 463; 25 W. R. 265.

e. Charge on Premises.

Time for Enforcing.]—A local board, in the year 1864, determined to do certain works in a street adjoining the defendant's house, for the expenses of which the defendant, among others, was made liable under s. 69 of the Public Health Act, 1848, and for which, consequently, there was a charge on the property under the 62nd section of the Local Government Act, 1858. Before the works were done they resolved that the expenses were private improvement expenses under the 90th section of the Public Health Act, 1848, and should be recovered from the owners and occupiers by annual instalments. In 1872 they revoked the resolution, and made a fresh rate for the whole amount then remaining unpaid, to be paid by the owners and occupiers. This rate being unpaid in 1875, they brought an action against the defendant to enforce the charge on his land under the 62nd section of the act of 1858:—Held, that the limitation of six months, within which summary proceedings must be taken before the justices or in the county court under the Local Government Act, 1861, does not apply to the enforcing of the charge created by the 62nd section of the Local Government Act, 1858. Tottenham Local Board v. Rowell, 50 L. J., Ch. 99; 15 Ch. D. 378; 43 L. T. 616; 29 W. R. 36—C. A.

On Total Ownership.]—The charge created by s. 257 of the Public Health Act, 1875, for expenses incurred by a local authority for sewering and other works, and for the payment whereof the owner of the premises in respect of which the same are incurred is liable under that act, is a charge upon the "premises" as defined by s. 4: accordingly, it is a charge, not on the interest of any particular owner of the premises, but on the total ownership, that is to say, on the respective interest of every owner for the time being in proportion to the value of his interest. Birmingham Corporation v. Baker, 17 Ch. D. 782; 46 J. P. 52.

Expenses of Paving.]—Trustees to whom land is conveyed in perpetuity under s. 6 of the School Sites Act, 1841, for the purposes of a school, and for "no other purpose whatever," are "owners" of the land within s. 4 of the Public Health Act, 1875; and a proportion of the expenses incurred by the urban authority in metalling a road abutting thereon will be a charge on the land and the buildings on it under s. 257 of the act. Bowditch v. Wakefield Local Board (40 L. J., M. C. 214; L. R. 6 Q. B. 257) approved. Hornsey Urban Council v. Smith, 66 L. J., Ch. 476; [1897] 1 Ch. 843; 76 L. T. 431; 45 W. R. 581—C. A. Reversing 61 J. P. 311.

—— Enforcing by Sale.]—The charge so arising cannot be enforced by a sale of such land and buildings so long as they are used for the purpose of a school under the act of 1841; but the urban authority may recover the amounts they claim from the trustees personally. Ib.

—— Estimated Expenses.]—By a special act which was to be read together with the Public Health Act, 1875, as one act, a local authority were empowered to apportion the "estimated expenses" of sewering, paving and other works in a street among frontagers, and recover the expenses so apportioned either before the work was commenced, during its progress, or after its completion, by action at law or summary proceedings, and if the actual expenses were less than the estimated sum the difference was to be paid to the frontagers who had paid such sum or whose property might have been "charged therewith":—Held, that the right conferred by s. 257 of the Public Health Act, 1875, to charge the property of frontagers with expenses incurred was not, by virtue of the above provisions of the special act, extended to estimated expenses. West Ham Corporation v. Grant, 58 L. J., Ch. 121; 40 Ch. D. 331; 60 L. T. 17.

—— Land subject to Restrictive Covenant.]—The charge created by s. 257 of the Public Health Act, 1875 (38 & 39 Vict. c. 55), for expenses incurred by a local authority in paving and metalling a road, does not override restrictive covenants affecting the land charged; and a sale to satisfy the charge can only be made subject to any such covenants. Tendring Union v. Dowton, 61 L. J., Ch. 82; [1891] 3 Ch. 265; 65 L. T. 434; 40 W. R. 145—C. A.

—— Land laid out for Building—Agreement by Adjoining Owner to throw Land into Roads—Liability.]—By a local act commissioners were created having duties with regard to streets and buildings within a certain area. In 1878 it was proposed to lay out an estate within such area for building, and plans were submitted to and approved by the commissioners. By an agreement between them and the defendant, the defendant was, on completion of the roads in question, to throw eighteen feet of his land into the said roads (which was done), but not to make the roads. In 1887 the powers of the commissioners passed to the council on incorporation. In 1892 the council by an order required the defendant to sewer, drain, level, flag, and metal the said roads so far as his premises fronted, adjoined, or abutted thereon. The order not having been complied with, the council did the work themselves, and on making request for payment the defendant's agent disputed that the property was liable. On a summons taken out by the council to have the sums expended declared a charge on the property:—Held, that the plaintiffs must succeed, but, following Walthamstow Local Board v. Staines (60 L. J., Ch. 738; [1891] 2 Ch. 606), decided on s. 278 of the Public Health Act, 1875, which was substantially in the same words, that having regard to s. 349 of the local act it appeared to be a case where a memorial to the secretary of state for relief would lie. West Hartlepool Corporation v. Robinson, 75 L. T. 677; 45 W. R. 312; 61 J. P. 200. Affirmed, 77 L. T. 387—C. A.

Land Registry — Registration.] — A local authority having carried out certain drainage improvements in different streets in a town, instead of levying a private improvement rate, declared that the expenses so incurred should become charges upon the property under s. 257 of the Public Health Act, 1875, and created various charges upon the different properties which formed the streets in which the improvements had been effected:—Held, that such charges as these were not within the contemplation of the Lands Charges Registration and Searches Act, 1888, and consequently did not require registration. Reg. v. Holt or Vice-Registrar of Land Registry, 59 L. J., Q. B. 113; 24 Q. B. D. 178; 62 L. T. 117; 38 W. R. 236; 54 J. P. 120.

Assessment—Apportionment of Expenses—"Charge," when it Commences.]—By the leases in 1875 and 1877, of two houses abutting on a private road, the lessee covenanted to pay all rates and taxes and to keep up the road. In 1882 the lessee executed a deed of gift of the two houses to his son upon trust for the father for life, he paying "all outgoings and performing the covenants in the leases," and after his death upon trust for the son absolutely. In July, 1884, the local board served notices on the father under s. 150 of the Public Health Act, 1875, requiring him to make up the portions of the road on which the houses abutted; but the notice was not complied with, and the board themselves did the work, which was completed in February, 1885. In June, 1885, the father died and the son entered into possession of the houses. In September, 1886, the son was served by the board with notices assessing a sum on each house for the proportion of expenses of making up the road, and in February, 1887, he was served with demands and orders for payment of the assessed amounts by instalments, with interest:—Held, in an action by the son claiming payment of the assessed expenses out of the father's estate, (1) that the expenses were not a debt due from the father's estate, inasmuch as the relation of debtor and creditor was not created by the Public Health Act, 1875, between the board and an owner of property for expenses incurred by the board; and (2) that the charge of the expenses under s. 257 could not be recovered by the son against the estate of the tenant for life. Boor, In re, Boor v. Hopkins, 58 L. J., Ch. 285; 40 Ch. D. 572; 60 L. T. 412; 37 W. R. 349; 53 J. P. 467.

Notice—Service by Post.]—Sect. 267 of the Public Health Act, 1875, provides for the service of notices thereunder "by post by a prepaid letter." An affidavit by the sender of a particular notice by letter stating that he wrote and addressed the letter and put it into the post himself, but omitting to say that it was a "prepaid letter," is therefore not sufficient evidence of service under the act. Walthamstow Urban District Council v. Henwood, 66 L. J., Ch. 31; [1897] 1 Ch. 41; 75 L. T. 375; 45 W. R. 124; 61 J. P. 23.

V. RATES.

1. How Made.

Seal and Signatures.]—The absence in the rate-book of the seal of the local board of health, and the signature of five of its members, as required by 11 & 12 Vict. c. 63, s. 149, in the case of a non-corporate district, is a fatal objection to the validity of a district rate under that act. Reg. v. Worksop Local Board, 5 B. & S. 951; 34 L. J., M. C. 220; 11 Jur. (N.S.) 1015; 10 L. T. 297; 13 W. R. 253. And see S. C., 12 W. R. 710.

Mode of Estimate.]—The estimate for a rate, required by s. 98, may be both for prospective and retrospective expenses; at least, if the latter are within the six months limited by s. 89. Ib.

A rate may be made retrospectively by a local board, in order to raise money for the payment of charges and expenses that may have been incurred more than six months, notwithstanding the 11 & 12 Vict. c. 63, s. 89, provided that, under the circumstances, the delay is excusable, and shewn not to be undue. Worthington v. Hulton, 6 B. & S. 943; 35 L. J., Q. B. 61; L. R. 1 Q. B. 63; 12 Jur. (N.S.) 73; 13 L. T. 463; 14 W. R. 632.

Under Local or General Acts.]—By the Walsall Improvement and Market Act, 1848, commissioners had power to levy an improvement rate within a district not comprising the whole municipal borough as afterwards constituted, but the act contained a proviso that the occupiers of land used as a railway should be assessed in proportion only of one-fourth part of the net value. The Public Health Acts, 1872 and 1875, formed the whole municipal borough of Walsall into an urban sanitary district:—Held, that the assessment ought to be made under the local act and not under the Public Health Acts. L. & N. W. Ry. v. Walsall Overseers, 48 L. J., M. C. 166; 4 App. Cas. 467; 41 L. T. 106; 28 W. R. 52—H. L. (E.)

The effect of the order of the general board of health and of the 11 & 12 Vict. c. 63, is to repeal the rating powers given by local acts. Elmer v. Norwich Local Board, 3 El. & Bl. 517; 2 C. L. R. 886; 23 L. J., Q. B. 203; 18 Jur. 870; 2 W. R. 306.

Joint Board—Component Districts—Special Expenses—Apportionment.]—A provisional order of the local government board, confirmed by a local act, provided that the expenses incurred by the joint board for the district should be defrayed out of a common fund, to be contributed by the component districts in manner provided by s. 283 of the Public Health Act, 1875, and that the contributions of certain of the component districts should be contributed and raised as if they were required to defray "special expenses" within the meaning of the Public Health Act, 1875:—Held, on a special case, that the joint board should apportion the contributions of the component districts according to the ratable values of the properties in such districts, to be ascertained according to the valuation list, and that the ratable values of tithes, tithe commutation rent-charges, land used as arable, meadow or pasture ground only, or as woodlands, market gardens, or nursery grounds, or covered with water, or used as a canal or towing path, or as a railway, should be taken at the full value appearing in the valuation list, and not at one-fourth thereof. Darenth Main Valley Sewerage Board v. Dartford Union, 56 L. J., Q. B. 615; 19 Q. B. D. 270; 57 L. T. 233; 36 W. R. 43.

2. Validity Generally.

Effect of Repeal of Act on.]—Notice was given by a local board of health of an intention to make a rate under the Public Health Act, 1848, and amending acts. Before the notice had expired these acts were repealed by the Public Health Act, 1875 (38 & 39 Vict. c. 55), which contained a saving of "anything duly done" under the repealed enactments, and gave power to make a similar rate upon giving a similar notice. The board, in ignorance of the repeal, made a rate purporting to be made under the repealed acts:—Held, that the rate was valid, the notice being a "thing duly done," and the accidental reference in the rate to the repealed acts being immaterial to its validity. Reg. v. West Riding of Yorkshire JJ., 45 L. J., M. C. 97; 1 Q. B. D. 220; 35 L. T. 358.

When Transfer of Powers to Corporation Invalid.]—By a provisional order of the general board of health, in pursuance of 11 & 12 Vict. c. 63, a local board of health was constituted for a parish, the parish consisting partly of a town and partly of a rural district without the town. Under the order the rating powers of the board were, in the first instance, confined to an area conterminous with the town, but with power to the local board from time to time to extend the area, so as to bring into it other portions of the outlying district. The town was subsequently incorporated, whereupon the local board, under 20 & 21 Vict. c. 50, s. 2, transferred their powers to the borough corporation, which afterwards sought to extend its powers to the rural parts of the district, and made a general district rate over the entire parish. To this rate a person was assessed as owner and occupier of property in the parish, but out of the limits of the borough:—Held, that the local board, not being trustees for executing an act for lighting and paving under 20 & 21 Vict. c. 50, s. 2, the transfer by them to the corporation was invalid, and that the corporation, therefore, had no power to make the rate. Swinford v. Keble, 7 B. & S. 573; 35 L. J., Q. B. 185; L. R. 1 Q. B. 549; 12 Jur. (N.S.) 783; 14 L. T. 770; 14 W. R. 858.

Provisional Order conflicting with Special Act.]—The general board of health made a provisional order extending the 11 & 12 Vict. c. 63, to Tynemouth, a district within which were parts of the North Shields turnpike roads, made under local turnpike acts. A local sanitary act also applied to the district. The provisional order altered the local sanitary act, and directed, that, from and after the passing of any act of parliament confirming that order, s. 50 of the Towns Clauses Act, 1847, should be incorporated with the local sanitary act. The order was confirmed by statute, so far as authorised by the Public Health Act. The Towns Clauses Act, s. 50, forbids trustees of any turnpike road from levying toll within the limits of the special act. The surveyor of the local board of Tynemouth, by their order, removed the North Shields turnpike gates within the district. The clerk of the turnpike trustees sued him in trespass for so doing:—Held, by Coleridge, Erle, and Crompton, JJ., that the fact of the order incorporating the Towns Improvement Clauses Act, s. 50, was not authorised by 11 & 12 Vict. c. 63, and was void; and the plaintiff had judgment. Lord Campbell, C.J., dissentiente. Clayton v. Fenwick, 6 El. & Bl. 114; 25 L. J., Q. B. 226; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 635.

Retrospective Rate—Balance of past Debt.]—A retrospective rate is, as a rule, bad, whether made to meet expenses incurred in constructing and cleaning sewers, or in the relief of the poor. A rate made in 1885 for sewerage work done under the Public Health Act of 1872 held bad. Saul v. Wigton Sanitary Authority, 56 L. T. 438; 35 W. R. 252; 51 J. P. 406.

3. Lighting and Watching.

Lighting—Special District Rate—Discretion.]—A local board of health laid out sums of money in permanent improvements, and, for defraying the expense, borrowed money on mortgage of the special district rates. The permanent improvement consisted in works for lighting a town within the district, for supplying it with water, and for sewerage. A large part of the district, owing to the inclination of the ground and the character of the occupation, derived no direct or immediate benefit from these works. To defray the expenses, and to raise the interest and instalments of the debt, the local board laid a special district rate on the whole district, under 11 & 12 Vict. c. 63, s. 86:—Held, upon an appeal against the rate, that the rate was valid; for that it was discretionary with the local board whether they would divide the district under s. 89, and, they not having done so, the rate under s. 86 was to be laid on the whole district. Dorling v. Epsom Local Board, 5 El. & Bl. 471; 24 L. J., M. C. 152; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 956; 3 W. R. 576.

Lighting and Watching under 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 90—Validity—New Appointment of Inspectors.]—Where, under the powers conferred by 5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 76, s. 88, a council of a borough had taken upon themselves the office of inspectors, and afterwards abandoned it, and inspectors were again appointed under 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 90:—Held, that this appointment was invalid; that the town council, having once elected to act as inspectors, could not afterwards abandon that office; and that a rate made by the inspectors last appointed was therefore void. Quick v. St. Ives Churchwardens, 2 L. T. 214; 8 W. R. 414.

—— Act adopted by part of Parish—Rate on Whole.]—The 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 90, so far as related to lighting, was adopted by part of a parish only, and a rate was made which in its heading purported to be a rate on the whole of the parish; but the names only of persons liable to be rated were inserted in the rate:—Held, that the rate purported to be a rate for the whole of the parish, and as there was no power to make such a rate, it was a nullity; and that a fresh rate could be made for the same purpose the first was intended for without quashing the first. Potton Churchwardens v. Brown, 10 L. T. 525.

—— Validity of Meeting.]—A meeting of the rated inhabitants of a parish was held to determine whether the provisions of the act should be applied to the parish. The assent of as much as two-thirds of the voters was not given. Within a year a meeting was held of the inhabitants of a district of the parish to determine whether the act should be applied to that district, when two-thirds of the voters assembled. A rate was laid upon the district in conformity with this. S., one of the parties so rated, having refused to pay the rate, was summoned before the justices, when he objected that, the latter meeting having been held within a year of the former, the proceedings were void, and the rate invalid. The parties agreed that the question was whether the two meetings were substantially the same. The justices decided in the affirmative, and refused a warrant for levying:—Held, that the question was properly put before the magistrates, and that, they having determined it, the court could not, on a rule to order the justices to issue a distress warrant, review their decision, although S. had, before he was aware of the objection, paid a rate. Reg. v. Dunn, 7 El. & Bl. 220; 26 L. J., M. C. 74; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 341.

—— Issue of Distress Warrant—Evidence.]—Where a local authority has made a rate under the Lighting and Watching Act, 1833, and application is made to justices for a distress warrant, the overseers need not prove that the formalities prescribed by the act for its adoption have been complied with. Reg. v. Reynolds, or Frodsham JJ., 62 L. J., M. C. 120; [1893] 2 Q. B. 75; 5 R. 423; 69 L. T. 321; 42 W. R. 32.

Upon an appeal to quarter sessions from an order of justices issuing a distress warrant for nonpayment of a rate raised under the Lighting and Watching Act, 1833—which rate had been allowed and not appealed from—the quarter sessions, on the appellant shewing that certain formalities required by the act had not been complied with, allowed the appeal:—Held, that the quarter sessions were wrong in allowing the appellant to go behind the rate. Clown Overseers v. Roberts, 61 J. P. 7.

Appeal.]—An order for a rate under 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 90, s. 32, can only be questioned by appeal under s. 66. Reg. v. Rye JJ., 10 L. T. 525; 13 W. R. 142.

—— Recognizances.]—The 66th section of 3 & 4 Wm. 4, c. 90 (the Lighting and Watching Act) requires recognizances to be entered into by parties appealing against the appointment of inspectors, but no such requirement is made by the 67th section, which gives the right of appeal against a rate:—Held, that when an appeal is brought against a rate, on the ground that the appointment of inspectors is bad, the party appealing need not enter into recognizances. Reg. v. Brecon JJ., 4 W. R. 117.

4. Highway.

Liability—When Road not a Highway—Conditions.]—A landowner in a district gave notice to the local board of health of his intention to dedicate a road as a highway; to which the local board replied that they would not adopt the road, as it had not been sewered, levelled, paved, flagged and channeled to their satisfaction. The landowner, however, obtained and enrolled the certificate of two justices, under 5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 50, s. 23, and the public then used the road, which was kept in repair by the landowner for twelve months; after which, it being out of repair, an indictment was preferred against the inhabitants:—Held, that the inhabitants were not liable, inasmuch as the road had not become a highway; for that, assuming s. 23 of 5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 50, to apply to the case, the road had not been made to the satisfaction of the local board, who were the surveyors. Reg. v. Dukinfield, 4 B. & S. 158; 32 L. J., M. C. 230.

Sects. 150 and 152 of the Public Health Act, 1875, are not correlative: in order that a local authority may declare a street, not repairable by the inhabitants at large of their district, to be a highway so that it may become repairable by such inhabitants, it is necessary that each of the works specified in s. 152 of the Public Health Act, 1875, shall, at the time of declaration, have been executed upon the street to the satisfaction of such authority. Local authorities have not under s. 152 any discretion as to which of the works mentioned in the section they will require to be executed. Their discretion is limited to their being satisfied with the efficiency of each description of work then done. Att-Gen. v. Bidder, 47 J. P. 263.

Semble, that kerbing a road does not answer the requirement in s. 152 that the road must be flagged—"flagged" meaning paved with flagged stones; and that wooden paving does not come within the meaning of any of the requirements of the section. Ib.

Where a local act required the consent of commissioners to new streets becoming highways to make the inhabitants liable to repair them, an order of the local board on owners to repair a street in respect of which such consent had not been given, is lawful, inasmuch as such street was not a highway repairable by the inhabitants at large. Willes v. Wallington, 13 C. B. (N.S.) 865: 1 N. R. 129: 32 L. J., C. P. 86—Ex. Ch.

And see Austerberry v. Oldham Corporation, ante, col. 379.

In District under Public Health Act.]—See Cases, sub 5, infra.

Ambit of Township—Mutual Rights of Commissioners and Surveyors within.]—Commissioners under a local act had power from time to time to ascertain and fix the limits of a township for the purposes of the act, and were authorised to levy rates not exceeding a certain amount for, among other objects, paving and repairing, the streets within such limits:—Held, that the commissioners could from time to time diminish as well as enlarge the ambit of the township for the purposes of the act; and that their powers of rating within the ambit so fixed were not exclusive of those of the highway surveyors, under the General Highway Act, 5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 50. Villers v. Hargreaves, 5 W. R. 595.

See further, sub tit. Way.

5. General District.

For what Purposes justifiable.]—A general district rate under Public Health Act, 1848, was made for the purposes, first, of defending a suit in chancery, instituted to restrain the local board from emptying a sewer into a certain canal; secondly, of defending a quo warranto against certain members of the local board, the validity of whose election was disputed; and, thirdly, of opposing (without the previous consent of the ratepayers) a bill in parliament for extending the powers of a gas company, within the district, which bill, notwithstanding such opposition, became law:—Held, that the rate was bad, as, although semble the defence to the bill in chancery was justifiable, the other two objects of the rate could not be supported. Reg. v. Marris, 5 W. R. 254.

For Maintenance of Highways.]—Although, by 11 & 12 Vict. c. 63, s. 117, the local board of health is invested with all the powers of surveyors of the highways, the money for the repairs of the highways in a district is to be raised by a general district rate under 11 & 12 Vict. c. 63, and not by a rate under the Highway Act, 5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 50. Elmer v. Norwich Local Board, 3 El. & Bl. 517; 2 C. L. R. 886; 23 L. J., Q. B. 203; 18 Jur. 870; 2 W. R. 306.

The expense of repairing the highways within a district, under the Public Health Act, 1848, must in all cases be defrayed by a district rate, a local board having no power to impose a highway rate. A wharf in possession of a railway company, with rails placed thereon, for the purpose of loading and unloading goods carried on the railway, and in respect of which the company charges wharfage as distinct from carriage is properly rated under the above act at the full nett annual value as a wharf, and not at the reduced rate as a railway. South Wales Ry. v. Cardiff Local Board, 6 W. R. 58.

A local board of health having made a general highway rate instead of a district rate, for the repair of the highways in a parish, an action was brought against the clerk of the board to try the validity of the rate, and a verdict taken, subject to a special case, with liberty to the parties to treat the decision as the ruling at nisi prius, before the passing of the 17 & 18 Vict. c. 69; the case was stated after the passing of that act:—Held, that the court was bound to direct a verdict for the plaintiff, for the amount of the highway rate, notwithstanding that act. Barber v. Jessopp, 1 H. & N. 578; 26 L. J., Ex. 186; 5 W. R. 366.

—— Several Parishes in One District.]—Where several parishes or places separately maintaining their own highways, are comprised in the district assigned to a local board of health, the highways throughout the district were, under 11 & 12 Vict. c. 63, s. 87, to be maintained by a general district rate, and not by separate highway rates on the ancient divisions. Moseley v. Ely Local Board, 6 El. & Bl. 518; 26 L. J., M. C. 23; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 42; 4 W. R. 607.

—— Where District Conterminous with a Parish.]—Where a district constituted under 11 & 12 Vict. c. 63, is conterminous with a parish, the local board has power by s. 117 to make a highway rate, under 5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 50, s. 27, for the expenses of repairing and maintaining the highways within the limits of the district, and are not bound to raise money for that purpose by a general district rate, under 11 & 12 Vict. c. 63. Hansom v. Epsom Local Board, 5 El. & Bl. 599; 25 L. J., M. C. 27; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 38; 4 W. R. 45.

The maintenance of the highways within the district of a local board must be provided for by a district rate, and not by a highway rate, whether the district is or is not conterminous with an ancient parochial division. Taff Vale Ry. v. Cardiff Local Board, 8 El. & Bl. 535; 6 W. R. 58.

—— No Public Works of Paving, &c.]—By s. 216, sub-s. 3, of the Public Health Act, 1875, it is provided that "where no public works of paving, water supply and sewerage are established in the district the cost of repair of highways in the district shall be defrayed out of a highway rate to be levied throughout the whole district by the urban authority as surveyor of highways." The appellants, a local district board, made a general district rate and a highway rate, and demanded the same from the respondents, who had constructed two compensation reservoirs in connection with the supply of water for the town of B. The respondents contended that the local board had no power to levy a highway rate, because in 1880 they laid down in their district a curbstone (about 300 yards long) as a coping to a cinder pathway of a carriage road:—Held, that putting down the curbstone did not constitute the establishment of public works of paving within the meaning of s. 216, sub-s. 3, of the Public Health Act, 1875, and therefore the appellants were entitled to levy a highway rate. Ovenhope District Local Board v. Bradford Corporation, 47 L. T. 344; 31 W. R. 322; 47 J. P. 21.

When an urban sanitary district was formed, and when the local board began in 1877 to take charge of the repairs of highways, there were some stone drains or culverts into which some houses sent their sewage, and into which storm water entered through gratings; but the board had not added to them, nor made any new works themselves. The board made a highway rate, and assessed occupiers thereto:—Held, that the existing drains sufficiently answered the description of public works within the 38 & 39 Vict. c. 55, s. 216, sub-s. 3, and therefore the expense of highway repairs should have been levied not by a highway rate, but by a general district rate. Reg. v. Belper Local Board, 46 J. P. 166.

—— Parish comprising Three Townships.]—A local board of health for a district consisting of a parish comprising three townships came within the description set out in the 3rd subsection of s. 37 of 21 & 22 Vict. c. 98, "where no public works of paving, water supply and sewerage are established," and the local board levied a district highway rate for one of the townships:—Held, that they had no authority to do so, for that the highway rate could alone be levied over the whole district. Broughton Local Board, In re, 12 L. T. 310.

Repair of Turnpike Road—Local Act.]—Where a portion of a parish constitutes a district under the 11 & 12 Vict. c. 63:—Held, that the board of health might be ordered to contribute to the repair of a turnpike road, within the district, under 4 & 5 Vict. c. 59, and might make a highway rate in the district for that purpose, notwithstanding a clause in a local turnpike act discharging the district from the expense of maintaining so much of the road as was situate within it. Reg. v. Worthing and Lancing Roads Trustees, 3 El. & Bl. 989; 2 C. L. R. 1678; 23 L. J., M. C. 187; 18 Jur. 907; 2 W. R. 478.

Dedication of Road to Public—Setting out Proposed Road.]—H., a lessee for a term of seventy-five years of a plot of building land, laid out, in 1865, a proposed road across part of the land, and built six houses on one side of it, but subsequently abandoned her intention of making the road, and, in 1874, demised the remainder of the land, including the site of the abandoned road, for use as a timber yard. The public had occasionally used the road from 1865 up to 1880, when the urban authority required H., as the owner of the houses abutting on the road, to sewer, flag and pave the same, and on the lessee declining to comply with this request, the urban authority executed the works:—Held, that the mere setting out of an intended road was not such an irrevocable act as that the person who did it, and allowed the public to traverse and use the road, was to be taken to have dedicated the same to the public; and that the urban authority had no right to cast upon the lessee the whole of the expense of sewering and paving the road. Hall v. Bootle Corporation, 44 L. T. 873; 29 W. R. 862.

Nuisances Removal.]—A nuisances removal committee, acting for any place under 18 & 19 Vict. c. 121, and entitled to be repaid their costs and charges in executing the act out of the poor rates, may call on the overseers to pay them the amount of such costs and charges, without justifying the item to such overseers. Reg. v. Ewell, 9 W. R. 127.

Amount of Assessment.]—General district rates, made under the Local Government Act, are not required within the Union Assessment Act, 25 & 26 Vict. c. 103, s. 28, to be based on the poor-rate by reason of the option given to the local board by 21 & 22 Vict. c. 98, s. 56; and, therefore, they may still be based on a valuation made by order of the local board, if in their judgment the poor law valuation list under the union assessment act is an unfit criterion for making them. North-Eastern Ry. v. Scarborough Local Board, 38 L. J., M. C. 65; L. R. 4 Q. B. 163; 17 W. R. 574.

By 18 & 19 Vict. c. 121, s. 22, it is provided that the assessment shall in no case exceed 1*s.* in the pound on the assessment to the highway rate:—Held, that the assessment might exceed 1*s.* in the pound on the ratable value as assessed to the highway rate, if distributed over a term of years, but must not exceed 1*s.* in the pound on such ratable value for the current year. Reg. v. Middleton Nuisances Removal Committee, 1 El. & El. 98; 28 L. J., M. C. 41; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 622; 7 W. R. 37.

Service of Demand Notice—Part of District not benefited by Works.]—L. was owner of a dry dock which, in 1889, was included in the borough of N. It was one-and-a-half mile from the nearest highway, and three miles from any drainage, lighting, or paving. A general district rate on L. being made, and the district not having been divided under the Public Health Act, 1875, s. 211:—Held, (1) that the written demand of rate was sufficiently served by being delivered at L.'s chief place of business, though it was not part of the premises rated, and the notice was not proved to be served personally on L.; (2) that the mere fact that the dock was three miles from any paving, lighting, or drainage was no sufficient cause for nonpayment within s. 256. Newport Corporation v. Lang, 57 J. P. 199.

6. Liability.

a. Of Persons and Property Generally.

Owner or Occupier.]—The drainage board for a district incurred expenses in making surveys and plans for certain proposed works. The estimates for the proposed works amounted to more than 1,000*l.* The proprietors of one-half of the land dissented from the execution of these works, which were never carried out. The board made a general rate on the occupiers of land in the district, in order to pay for the expenses of the surveys and plans:—Held, that the occupiers, and not the owners, were chargeable under the 24 & 25 Vict. c. 133, ss. 31, 38, with these expenses; and that the rate was properly made on the present value of the land. Griffiths v. Longdon and Eldersfield Drainage Board, 41 L. J., Q. B. 25; L. R. 6 Q. B. 738; 25 L. T. 126; 19 W. R. 1162.

The owners of small tenements are liable to be assessed in respect of them to rates for lighting and watching in parishes where the owners of such tenements are assessed to the poor rate under 13 & 14 Vict. c. 99, but only on the reduced scale prescribed by that act. Reg. v. Lambert, 2 C. L. R. 883.

Landlord or Tenant.]—See Landlord and Tenant (Covenants).

Real Property.]—Real property within the district of a local board of health cannot be assessed to a district rate, unless there is some person having such an occupation as would make him liable to the poor rate in respect thereof. Hodgson v. Carlisle Local Board, 8 El. &. Bl. 116; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 160.

Churchwardens.]—Under a local act for more effectually lighting and paving certain parts of Westminster, commissioners were empowered to make rates and assessments in respect of any cathedral, church, chapel, &c., according to the number of square yards of pavement or ground belonging to such cathedral, or church, &c., and to determine the same, and the rates and assessments to be levied or assessed upon or in respect of any other church, or any chapel, place of worship, hospital, school or other public building, wall or void space of ground, shall be paid by the churchwardens, chapelwardens, trustees, or owners or proprietors:—Held, that the churchwardens were personally liable to the commissioners for the rates, and the want of parochial funds did not exempt them from that liability. Hopkinson v. Puncher, 3 Ex. 95; 18 L. J., Ex. 6.

Guardians.]—By 21 & 22 Vict. c. 98, s. 55, it is provided that general district rates shall be made and levied upon the occupier of all such kinds of property as by the laws in force for the time being are or may be assessable for the relief of the poor. The guardians of the poor of an extra-parochial place, maintaining its own poor, situated partly within and partly without a borough, erected a workhouse in the part without the borough for the whole of the poor of the extra-parochial place. A local board of health constructed permanent works in the part without the borough, and made several general district rates to defray the cost of the works:—Held, that the guardians of the poor were ratable to the relief of the poor in respect of their workhouse, and consequently to the general district rate for defraying the expenses of the works. Toxteth Park Guardians v. Toxteth Park Local Board, 1 B. & S. 167; 30 L. J., M. C. 154; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 860; 4 L. T. 283; 9 W. R. 691.

Premises outside District—Evidence.]—Where a person is summoned for the nonpayment of a general district rate in respect of premises in his occupation, he is entitled to call evidence to shew that the premises are not situated within the area for which the rate is made. Baglan Bay Tin Plate Co. v. John, 72 L. T. 805.

b. Property Liable to Lower Rate.

Railway — What included in.]—The word railway in the proviso in 11 & 12 Vict. c. 66, s. 88, meant the way on which carriages actually go, including the line itself, the turntables and the sidings, and land used only for the purpose of supporting this way, as for embankments, &c., is within the proviso and to be assessed at the lower rate. But the adjuncts, such as stations and warehouses, though necessary for the working of the railway, did not form part of it within the proviso, and land used for these latter purposes was assessable at its full nett annual value. South Wales Ry., v. Swansea Local Board, 4 El. & Bl. 189; 3 C. L. R. 18; 24 L. J., M. C. 30; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 326; 3 W. R. 23.

The word "railway" in a statute for rating purposes includes not only the physical rails and the land upon which they rest, but also those things without which the railway could not be used as a highway. It does not, however, include those adjuncts which are necessary merely for the convenience of passengers, the question in each case being one of degree. L. & N. W. Ry. v. Llandudno Improvement Commissioners, 66 L. J., Q. B. 232: [1897] 1 Q. B. 287; 75 L. T. 659; 45 W. R. 350; 61 J. P. 55.

—— Railway Wharf.]—See South Wales Ry. v. Cardiff Local Board, ante, col. 515.

—— Power of Local Board to alter Local Act.]—A portion of a borough, consisting of the township of N. S. and parts of the townships of T., P. and C., were under the management of commissioners constituted under a local act. In 1849, the townships comprising the parliamentary borough of T. were incorporated, and the powers of the commissioners transferred to the corporation pursuant to 5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 76, s. 75. In 1851, the general board of health made a provisional order under 11 & 12 Vict. c. 63, which repealed the rating clauses of the local act, enlarged the area of that act, and extended its unrepealed provisions over the whole of the municipal borough. Also it applied s. 88 of 11 & 12 Vict. c. 63, except so much of it as provided that a railway and certain other property should be rated on one-fourth only of its annual value, the effect of which was to subject those parts of the line of railway which were not in the township of N. S. to a rating at full value. The order was confirmed by 14 & 15 Vict. c. 103, so far as it was authorised by 11 & 12 Vict. c. 63: —Held, first, that it was within the power of the board to repeal the rating clauses of the local act, enlarge its area, and extend its unrepealed provisions over the whole of the borough. N. E. Ry. v. Tynemouth Corporation, 9 B. & S. 616; 37 L. J., M. C. 183; L. R. 3 Q. B. 723.

Held, secondly, that the order was not authorised by 11 & 12 Vict. c. 63, s. 10, as it altered the provisions of that act with respect to rating different descriptions of property. Ib.

—— Powers for lighting District—General and Special Expenses.]—The local government board, acting under s. 276 of the Public Health Act, 1875, made an order that the provisions of s. 161 (relating to lighting streets, &c.) should be in force within part of the district of a rural sanitary authority, and that the said authority should be invested with all the powers, rights, duties, capacities, liabilities and obligations of an urban sanitary authority "under those provisions":—Held, that the effect of the order was to invest the said authority with the power of an urban authority to incur expenses under s. 161, but not to apply to it the conditions as to rating applicable under ss. 207–211 to an urban authority, and that inasmuch as the order did not declare the expenses incurred thereunder to be special expenses within s. 229, they were to be treated as general expenses:—Held, therefore, that a railway company was liable to be assessed to any rate made for meeting such expenses on the whole, not on one-fourth part only, of the nett value of land occupied as a railway. Lancashire and Yorkshire Ry. v. Bolton Union, 60 L. J., Q. B. 118; 15 App. Cas. 323; 63 L. T. 358; 54 J. P. 532—H. L. (E.)

—— Rate in the Nature of General District Rate.]—By 28 Geo. 3, c. 64, and 34 Geo. 3, c. 104, commissioners appointed under those acts, called improvement commissioners, were empowered to levy a rate not exceeding one shilling in the pound on the annual value of all houses, buildings and hereditaments within the town of Cambridge, for the purpose of carrying into execution certain specified improvements mentioned in those acts. At the time of the passing of those acts, and until 1856, the colleges and halls of the university, and also the corporation, were extra-parochial and not assessable to the above-mentioned rate. The respondents, acting as improvement commissioners, and as the urban sanitary authority, assessed the appellants, who were owners of land and property used as a railway within the district of the respondents, at the full nett annual value of such land and property, for the purposes of carrying into execution the provisions of the Cambridge improvement acts and of the Public Health Act, 1875: —Held, that the rate leviable by virtue of the Cambridge improvement acts was not "a rate in the nature of a general district rate leviable throughout the whole of the district," within the meaning of s. 207 of the Public Health Act, 1875: and that as regards so much of the rate levied on the appellants as was necessarily applicable to the purposes of the public health act, the appellants were liable to be assessed in the proportion of one-fourth only of the nett annual value of their land and property used as a railway within the district of the respondents. G. E. Ry. v. Cambridge Improvement Commissioners, 61 L. T. 243.

—— "Land used only as a Railway"—Tramway.]—The appellants occupied and worked certain tramways which ran through the streets of Swansea and communicated with a railway also worked by them:—Held, that the land occupied by the tramway was not land "used only as a railway" within the meaning of s. 211, sub-s. 1 (b), of the Public Health Act, 1875, so as to be entitled to be rated in the proportion of one-fourth part only of its nett annual value in respect of a rate levied under s. 210 of the above act. Swansea Improvement Co. v. Swansea Sanitary Authority, 61 L. J., M. C. 124: [1892] 1 Q. B. 357; 66 L. T. 119; 40 W. R. 283; 56 J. P. 248.

—— Railway constructed under Act of Parliament.]—By 21 & 22 Vict. c. 98, s. 55, the occupiers of land covered by water, or a railway constructed under the powers of any act of parliament for public conveyance, shall be assessed, in respect of the same, in the proportion of one-fourth part only of such nett annual value thereof:—Held, that a dock came under the description of "land covered by water," and that a railway constructed, under an act of parliament, for the transportation of traffic, and as accessory to the dock, but free to the public upon payment of certain rates and tolls, was a railway within the meaning of the proviso, although neither used nor intended for the conveyance of passengers. Reg. v. Newport

Dock Company, 2 B. & S. 708; 31 L. J., M. C. 266; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 73; 6 L. T. 456.

Dock—Whether Ejusdem Generis with Land and Buildings.]—The appellants were occupiers of docks, covering an area of 165 acres, of which ninety-five formed a wet dock or tidal basin, in a parish in which the provisions of the 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 90, had been adopted. In a lighting rate the appellants were rated as "occupiers of houses, buildings and property other than land," within s. 33, at a rate three times greater than that at which the occupiers of land were rated:—Held, that the dock or basin was property ejusdem generis with houses and buildings, and therefore that the appellants were ratable at the higher rate. Reg. v. Peto, 5 Jur. (N.S.) 1209. S. C., nom. Peto v. West Ham, 2 El. & El. 144; 28 L. J., M. C. 240; 7 W. R. 586.

—— Land Covered by Water.]—See Reg. v. Newport Dock Co., supra.

—— Railway Wharf.]—See South Wales Ry. v. Cardiff Local Board, ante, col. 515.

Land with Buildings thereon.]—The question whether land with buildings upon it should be rated as "land," or as "buildings," or as "property other than land," under s. 33 of the Lighting and Watching Act, 1833, depends upon whether the buildings are to be considered as accessory to the land or the land to the buildings. Crayford Overseers v. Rutter, 66 L. J., Q. B. 506; [1897] 1 Q. B. 650; 76 L. T. 392; 45 W. R. 542; 61 J. P. 134.

Where buildings are erected upon land merely for the more convenient occupation and use of the land as a brickfield, the buildings are to be treated as accessory to the land, and the property should be rated as "land" at the lower rate mentioned in s. 33, unless it is shewn that the buildings are capable of separate assessment. Ib.

"Land used as Market Gardens or Nursery Grounds."]—By the Public Health Act, 1875 (38 & 39 Vict. c. 55), s. 211, sub-s. 1 (b), "the occupier of any land used as . . . market gardens or nursery grounds . . . shall be assessed in respect of the same in the proportion of one-fourth part only of the nett annual value thereof." The appellant, a market-gardener and nurseryman, was the occupier of a piece of land upon which were built sixteen greenhouses or glasshouses, which practically covered the surface of the land; they were built on brick foundations, and were used by the appellant for the purpose of growing fruit and vegetables for sale in the course of his business:—Held, that the land with the greenhouses upon it constituted a market garden or nursery ground within the meaning of the act, and that the appellant was liable to be rated to the general district rate in the proportion of one-fourth part only of the nett annual value of the property. Purser v. Worthing Local Board, 56 L. J., M. C. 78; 18 Q. B. D. 818; 35 W. R. 682; 51 J. P. 596—C. A.

c. Exemptions.

Expenses for Sanitary Purposes.]—By the Public Health Act, 1872 (35 & 36 Vict. c. 79), s. 43, any limit imposed on or in respect of any rate by any local act of parliament shall not apply to any rate required to be levied for the purpose of defraying any expenses incurred by a sanitary authority for sanitary purposes:—Held, that this provision does not make ratable any premises which, under the local act, were altogether exempt from rates. Walton Commissioners v. Walford, 44 L. J., Q. B. 74; L. R. 10 Q. B. 180; 31 L. T. 825; 23 W. R. 292.

Under 11 & 12 Vict. c. 63, s. 88.]—The proviso contained in 11 & 12 Vict. c. 63, s. 88, as to the exemption of property, extended only to property exempted by a local act in respect of its kind, and not to property exempted by a local act in respect of its locality, as where the property was in an extra-parochial district. Tait v. Carlisle Local Board, 2 El. & Bl. 492; 18 Jur. 374. S. P., Chelmsford Union v. Chelmsford Local Board, 18 Jur. 376, n.

The proviso of s. 88 of Public Health Act, 1848, applied only where the exemption in the local act was in respect of the kind of property, and not where it was only in respect of its locality. Luscombe v. Plymouth Local Board, El. Bl. & El. 691; 27 L. J., M. C. 299; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 1234; 6 W. R. 745.

"Public Charity," House used for Purposes of.]—By a local improvement act, 6 Geo. 4, c. 132, s. 103, the commissioners of a town were authorised to make district rates for defraying the expenses of the act, provided that none of the rates or assessments which should be made by virtue of this act should be laid upon or in respect of "any houses or buildings used and occupied exclusively for the purposes of public charity":—Held, that an orphanage founded and used for the purpose of boarding, lodging, clothing and educating the children of deceased railway servants, and supported partly by subscriptions from railway servants, but mainly by donations from the public, was open to such an extensive class of the community of the kingdom that the premises were used and occupied exclusively for the purposes of "public charity," within the proviso of the act, and therefore exempt from ratability under it. Hall v. Derby Sanitary Authority, 55 L. J., M. C. 21; 16 Q. B. D. 163; 54 L. T. 175; 50 J. P. 278.

Borough Rates—Limitation of Amount by Local Act.]—By the St. Helens improvement act, it is provided that no borough rate levied thereunder shall exceed in any year the sum of 1*s.* in the pound, provided that, with the consent of a majority of the persons liable to be rated thereto, the corporation may increase such rate above the amount by the act limited. The act further provides that no such increase shall be leviable upon the owner or occupier of any coal mine in respect thereof, or upon any person assessable in the proportion of one-fourth only of any rate, other than the highway rate, in respect of his property or of premises occupied by him:—Held, that this was not an exemption of property from ratability, but a limit imposed upon the borough rate leviable upon colliery, &c., property; and that, though the limit still exists so far as any rate leviable by the corporation for borough purposes is concerned, s. 227 of the Public Health Act, 1875, prevents its applying to rates leviable by the corporation for the purposes of the act, and that the corporation are unrestricted in the amount of any rate leviable by them thereunder. St. Helens Corporation v. St. Helens Colliery Co. 48 J. P. 39.

7. Publication.

Necessity for.]—The 11 & 12 Vict. c. 63, s. 103, enacts that all rates made or collected under it shall be published in the same manner as poor-rates:—Held, that a rate made under the act was not null and void by reason of not having been so published; that, in a summons before justices to enforce it, the rate not having been appealed against, they were justified in refusing, as immaterial, evidence of non-publication, and that therefore the officer executing their distress warrant was protected by it. Le Feuvre v. Miller, 8 El. & Bl. 321; 26 L. J., M. C. 175; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 1255.

Sufficiency of.]—A lighting and watching rate for a township was made and published by affixing a notice to the door of the church or parochial chapel in the township, which was the only church where poor-rates had theretofore been published. There were two other churches of the established church in the township, one of which had been open about three years, and the other had been open just before the publication of the rate. There were also various dissenting chapels in the township:—Held, that the publication was insufficient under 7 Will. 4 and 1 Vict. c. 45. Reg. v. Whipp, 3 G. & D. 372; 4 Q. B. 141; 12 L. J., M. C. 64; 7 Jur. 194. See Reg. v. Royds, 1 New Sess. Cas. 456; 8 Jur. 1096.

8. Mandatory Proceedings to Enforce.

Nature of—Judgment against Board—Charge within the Act.]—Mandamus commanding a local board of health to make a rate for defraying a debt due to the prosecutors. On the record it appeared that the debt was due to the prosecutors, who commenced an action against the local board. The local board consented to a judge's order, under which judgment was signed with a stay of execution for several months. The prosecutors not having obtained satisfaction, the writ of mandamus was issued more than six months after judgment had been signed, but within six months of the time to which execution had been stayed. The local board resisted, on the ground that by 11 & 12 Vict. c. 63, s. 89, they had not power to levy retrospective rates, save for charges and expenses incurred within six months before the making of the rate:—Held, that a judgment obtained against a local board was a charge within the meaning of the act, and that a rate might be made to defray it within six months of that charge. Reg. v. Rotherham Local Board, 8 El. & Bl. 906; 27 L. J., Q. B. 156; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 261; 6 W. R. 248.

Held, also, that it was not beyond the authority of the local board to agree that execution should be stayed for a time, and that this having been done, the period within which the rate might be made was six months from the time when execution might first have been issued. Ib.

Within what Time.]—A mandamus lies to a local board of health to make a rate in aid of a judgment within six months after the judgment is obtained, though the action in which it was obtained is commenced more than six months after the claim accrued, if the delay in bringing the action is excused, and shewn not to have been undue delay. Worthington v. Hulton, 6 B. & S. 943; 35 L. J., Q. B. 61; 1 L. R. Q. B. 63; 12 Jur. (N.S.) 73; 13 L. T. 463; 14 W. R. 632.

Commissioners Personally Liable — Statute of Limitations.] — Commissioners under an improvement act were empowered to appoint a clerk and other officers, and to pay them reasonable salaries out of the moneys to be collected under the act, and power was given to levy rates for the purpose of paying the salaries of officers. The executors of B. sued the commissioners, the declaration alleging that the commissioners were indebted to B. for his agreed salary for his services as the clerk to the commissioners, and upon their retainer, and for other work and labour of B., as the attorney and solicitor of, and otherwise for, the commissioners, at their request, in and about the business of the commissioners, and for money paid by him for their use and on accounts stated; and that the debts and moneys were a charge upon any moneys and funds in the hands of the commissioners collected under the act; and if they should not have in their hands any such moneys and funds, then the debts became and were a charge upon a rate and assessment leviable under the act; and the executors demanded of the commissioners to pay the moneys due out of the funds in their hands, or to levy a rate under the act; and alleging a neglect and refusal, and claiming a writ of mandamus commanding the commissioners to pay or assess a rate:—Held, that the declaration was bad, it being consistent with the allegations that to part, at least, of the claim, the commissioners were personally liable, and the remedy by mandamus being therefore inapplicable. Bush v. Beavan, 1 H. & C. 500; 32 L. J., Ex. 54; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 1015; 7 L. T. 106; 10 W. R. 845.

Held, also, that pleas of the statute of limitations and of the attorneys act, to so much of the debts and moneys as became due upon simple contract, were good. Ib.

Cause of Action accruing within Six Years.] — Commissioners under an improvement act became indebted to the plaintiffs for work done between 1848 and 1853. By a provisional order of the board of health, confirmed by a supplemental act, the 11 & 12 Vict. c. 63, was applied to the place, the powers of the commissioners under the local act were determined, and all the property of the commissioners was transferred to the local board of health, to be held on the same trusts and for the same purposes as by the commissioners. The order also declared that all debts contracted or payable by the commissioners should be satisfied by the local board out of such of the transferred property as would originally have been chargeable: provided that, if such property were insufficient, the deficiency should be charged upon the rates leviable under 11 & 12 Vict. c. 63, in the parts which would have been chargeable but for the order. Declaration by the plaintiffs against the local board, claiming a mandamus for the levying of a rate by the local board (the transferred property being insufficient) for the payment of the debt contracted by the commissioners under the local act: a plea, that the causes of action did not accrue within six years is bad. Ward v. Lowndes, 1 El. & El. 340; 29 L. J., Q. B. 40; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 247; 1 L. T. 268; 8 W. R. 81—Ex. Ch.

Cause of Claim within Six Months.]—A plea that the cause of claim, exclusive of the demand of a rate, did not accrue within six calendar months before suit, is bad, for s. 89 of the 11 & 12 Vict. c. 63, which gives the local board power to levy retrospective rates for the payment of charges and expenses which may have been incurred at any time within six months before the making of the rate, does not apply to rates for the payment of any of the debts contracted by the commissioners and by the provisional order, transferred to the local board. Ib.

A local board of health having erroneously made a special rate, B. paid his quota before the error was discovered; five years afterwards he commenced an action against the board to recover the money back, and obtained a judgment, and afterwards sued them on the judgment, demanding in his declaration a mandamus to them to make and levy a rate, for the purpose of satisfying the judgment:—Held, that, assuming the debt so contracted by the board was a charge within 11 & 12 Vict. c. 63, s. 89, B. was not entitled to a mandamus to levy a rate, as the original action was not commenced within six months after the charge was incurred. Burland v. Kingston-upon-Hull Local Board, 3 B. & S. 271; 32 L. J., Q. B. 17; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 275; 7 L. T. 316; 11 W. R. 33.

Award of Compensation within Six Months.]—A plaintiff in his declaration prayed a writ of mandamus to compel a board of health to levy a rate and pay him the amount awarded. The damage for which compensation was claimed occurred more than six months before the application, but the award was made within six months. The board resisted this, on the ground that the expenses for which it was sought to compel them to levy the rate had not been incurred within six months, within 11 & 12 Vict. c. 63, s. 89:—Held, that he was entitled to the writ, for that the six months must be reckoned from the time that the award was made. Ringland v. Lowndes, 15 C. B. (N.S.) 173; 33 L. J., C. P. 25; 9 L. T. 479; 12 W. R. 168. S. C. in Ex. Ch., post, col. 553.

Possibility of Funds.]—It is no answer to an application for a mandamus to levy a rate in such a case that the board may possibly have funds to pay the amount required, and that a fresh rate may not be necessary. Ib.

9. Misapplication of Rates.

Injunction — Personal Liability.] — When a local board of health misapplied the rates towards defraying the expenses of a bill in parliament, the court granted an injunction to restrain the further prosecution of the bill, which, however, had been abandoned before the hearing. The auditor had surcharged some of the members of the board with the amount paid for such expenses, and no order was therefore made on that part of the prayer of the information which sought to make them personally liable; but costs were decreed against them. Att.-Gen. v. Tottenham Local Board, 27 L. T. 440.

A member of the board, who proved that he had opposed the scheme embodied in the bill, was held not to be personally liable, and the information was dismissed as against him, with costs against the relator. Ib.

10. Appeal against Rates, and Proceedings.

To Quarter Sessions—Claim to Prohibition.]—The 11 & 12 Vict. c. 63, having been put in force within a borough, the local board made three several distinct rates, and assessed R. in sums amounting to 4*l.* 5*s.* 6*d.* in respect of premises occupied by him. He refused to pay the rates, on the ground that the greater portion of the premises occupied was not within the borough; he was thereupon summoned before two justices, who made an order whereby, after reciting the refusal to pay the rates, that the parties appeared before them, and having heard the matter of complaint, they adjudged him to pay the several rates with costs, and that if the several sums be not forthwith paid, that the same be levied by distress. He appealed against this order to the quarter sessions, who quashed the order, with costs, to be paid by the local board, who thereupon appealed to the queen's bench for a prohibition, on the ground that the appeal to the sessions would not lie:—Held, that as the matter was not free from doubt, the court ought not to grant a prohibition. Ricardo, In re, 2 H. & N. 257.

—— Sum Adjudged exceeding 20s.]—Semble, that the sum adjudged in s. 135 of 11 & 12 Vict. c. 63, means the sum in respect of which the adjudication was made, and therefore that the order of the justices was a matter or thing done by them, in which the sum adjudged exceeded 20*s.* within the meaning of that section. Ib.

Jurisdiction of Justices—Rate on Mortgagor—Mortgagee in Possession.]—The R. improvement commissioners made a rate in 1876 on P., the owner, for improvement expenses, and he paid part thereof and died, having, at the date of the rate, executed a mortgage to B. B. entered into possession in 1882, and in 1885 the justices issued a distress warrant against B. for the unpaid rate made on P.:—Held, that the justices had no power to issue a distress warrant against B., who was not named in the rate. Rochdale Building Society v. Rochdale Corporation, 51 J. P. 134.

—— Sufficient Cause for Nonpayment.]—A district rate, based on a new valuation list duly approved by the assessment committee, was levied on the property of the appellants by the respondents, under the powers of s. 211 of the Public Health Act, 1875. Subsequently the appellants obtained from the assessment committee a reduction in the valuation; but being still dissatisfied with the amount, they gave notice of appeal to quarter sessions. Pending the hearing of the appeal the respondents took out a summons under s. 256 of the Public Health Act, 1875, calling on the appellants to shew cause why the rate should not be paid:—Held, that the rate being based on a valuation which had been admitted by the assessment committee to be excessive, there was sufficient cause for nonpayment of the rate within the meaning of s. 256. Sheffield Waterworks Co. v. Sheffield Corporation, 55 L. J., M. C. 40; 54 L. T. 179; 34 W. R. 153; 50 J. P. 6.

On an application before justices for an order for payment of a rate under s. 265 of the Public Health Act, 1875, the rate being good on the face of it, and the property in respect of which the occupier is rated being within the district of the rating authority, the justices' duty is merely ministerial, and they have no jurisdiction to inquire into the validity of the rate. Reg. v. Hannam, 34 W. R. 355—C. A.

On an application under s. 256 of the Public Health Act, 1875, to enforce a general district rate, good on the face of it, the justices may not refuse to make an order for payment of the rate on the ground that there is a concurrent rate made for the same purpose. Sandgate Local Board v. Pledge, 14 Q. B. D. 730; 52 L. T. 546; 33 W. R. 565; 49 J. P. 342.

—— Stating Special Case.]—A special case may be stated by justices under the 33rd section of the Summary Jurisdiction Act, 1879, upon an application to enforce payment of a general district rate under the 256th section of the Public Health Act, 1875. Ib.

A. was assessed to a sewer's rate, made under a local act, incorporating 11 & 12 Vict. c. 63. He refused to pay the sum at which he was assessed; and upon the hearing of a complaint against him for such refusal, he objected that he was improperly rated, inasmuch as he derived no benefit from the sewers made under the local act. The justices ordered him to pay the rate; whereupon he required them to state a case:—Held, that they had no jurisdiction to do so; for that the proper course to be pursued by A., if he objected to the validity of the rate, was to appeal to the sessions. Reg. v. Newman, 29 L. J., M. C. 117; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 293.

Objection forming Ground of Appeal.]—A special district rate, good on the face of it, was duly made and published under 11 & 12 Vict. c. 63. On a summons before justices to enforce payment of it, it was objected that it was made for the purpose of paying off money advanced for works which were not permanent, for which alone a special district rate could be made, and the rate was therefore void:—Held, that the objection was ground only of appeal to the quarter sessions; and that the rate being unappealed against, the justices were bound to issue a warrant of distress. Luton Local Board v. Davis, 2 El. & El. 678; 29 L. J., M. C. 173; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 580; 2 L. T. 172; 8 W. R. 411.

Order for Costs—Form of.]—By a local act, commissioners were empowered to levy rates for the improvement of a town, payment of which might be enforced by distress under the warrant of a justice. The commissioners might sue and be sued by their clerk. Appeal to the sessions was given against any rate or order made, and the sessions had power to give costs to either party. No order, rate or judgment was to be quashed for want of form, or removed by certiorari. A justice made an order upon B. for payment of a rate which had been made, and B. appealed to the sessions; the sessions by judgment given after 12 & 13 Vict. c. 45, dismissed the appeal, and directed the appellant to pay costs to the clerk of the commissioners; semble, that this was right, and that it was not necessary that the order should be to pay the costs to the clerk of the court, under 11 & 12 Vict. c. 43, s. 27, and 12 & 13 Vict. c. 45, s. 5. Reg. v. Binney, 1 El. & Bl. 810; 22 L. J., M. C. 127; 17 Jur. 854.

—— Effect of Error.]—But held that, supposing the order erroneous in this respect, it was a mere defect in form, and there was no want of jurisdiction, so as to bring the case out of the operation of the clause taking away the certiorari. Ib.

Application for Warrant—Formal Order.]—Upon an application for a warrant under s. 103 of 11 & 12 Vict. c. 63, the justices are not required to draw up any formal order. Reg. v. Tottenham Local Board, 1 L. T. 413.

Bankruptcy—Preferential Claim.]—On 12th Jan., 1887, at the time of filing his petition the bankrupt was tenant of a house under a lease for twenty-one years. The trustee in bankruptcy did not disclaim, but on the 1st Feb., 1887, he sold his interest in the lease, the bankrupt remaining in occupation as tenant under the purchaser. There was due from the bankrupt at the date of the receiving order a local board rate made on 8th October, 1886, for the half-year from the 30th September, 1886, to 25th March, 1887, and payable in advance:—Held, that the estate of the bankrupt was liable to pay the rate for the whole half-year. Ystradfodwg Local Board, Ex parte, Thomas, In re, 57 L. J., Q. B. 39; 58 L. T. 113; 36 W. R. 143; 4 Morrell, 295.

Distress Warrant—Action in County Court—Bill of Sale—Priority.]—The 14th section of the Bills of Sale Act (1878) Amendment Act, 1882, is confined in its operation to cases in which taxes or poor or parochial rates are being recovered by warrant of distress, and does not apply to cases in which execution is levied upon a judgment in an action brought for their recovery, so as to displace in such cases the prior right of the holder of a bill of sale to the goods taken in execution. Wimbledon Local Board v. Underwood, 61 L. J., Q. B. 484; [1892] 1 Q. B. 836; 67 L. T. 55; 40 W. R. 640; 56 J. P. 633.

VI. LIABILITY OF AUTHORITIES.

1. ACTIONS.

a. Negligence.

Nonrepair—Of Highway.]—The combined effect of 10 & 11 Vict. c. 34, ss. 47, 48, is to vest the management of highways in commissioners, and to clothe them with the powers and liabilities of surveyors of highways; and commissioners neglecting to repair highways are to be deemed guilty of a misdemeanour, and liable to be indicted. Commissioners having obtained a special act incorporating the act:—Held, that an action lay against them in their corporate capacity, at the suit of a person who met with an injury in consequence of the nonrepair of a highway, within the limits of a special act. Hartnall v. Ryde Commissioners, 4 B. & S. 361; 33 L. J., Q. B. 39; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 257; 8 L. T. 574; 11 W. R. 963.

A local board, being the highway authority of the district, are not liable for damages caused to a person in consequence of the highway being out of repair, where such nonrepair is a mere nonfeasance. Gibson v. Preston Corporation (L. R. 5 Q. B. 218) followed and approved. Cowley v. Newmarket Local Board, 62 L. J., Q. B. 65; [1892] A. C. 345; 1 R. 45; 67 L. T. 486; 56 J. P. 805—H. L. (E.)

C., who was the owner of certain cottages in a public highway, received a notice from the defendants under the Public Health Act, 1875, requiring him to connect the drains of his cottages with the main sewer, and in compliance therewith he dug a trench in the road and made the connection to the satisfaction of the defendants' surveyor, and he then filled up the trench. The soil afterwards subsided, and the subsidence was the cause of an accident to the plaintiff while driving in a pony cart. The defendants were the sewer authority and the highway authority of the district. In an action for damages for personal injuries:—Held, that the defendants were not liable as the sewer authority, on the ground that the notice did not constitute C. their agent; nor as the highway authority, on the ground that no action would lie against a local board for personal injuries arising from the non-repair of a highway. Steel v. Dartford Local Board, 60 L. J., Q. B. 256—C. A.

—— Of Footway.]—A local board of health is not liable to an action for permitting a public footway in their district to be out of repair, whereby the plaintiff was injured. Gibson v. Preston Corporation, 10 B. & S. 942; 39 L. J., Q. B. 131; L. R. 5 Q. B. 218; 22 L. T. 293; 18 W. R. 689.

—— Of Fencing near Public Path.]—A local board left unfenced a goit adjoining a public footpath within their district, by reason of which the plaintiff's husband, while using the footpath, fell into the goit and was drowned:—Held, that the local board was not liable under s. 83 of the Towns Improvement Clauses Act, 1847, as the goit was not a hole within the meaning of that section (which refers to holes caused in the construction and repair of houses); nor under s. 68 of the Public Health Act, 1848, since that section only gives a discretionary power to the local board to place and keep in repair fences, and does not impose upon them an absolute duty to do so. Wilson v. Halifax Corporation, 37 L. J., Ex. 44; L. R. 3 Ex. 114; 17 L. T. 666; 16 W. R. 707.

Held, also, that under s. 139 of the Public Health Act, 1848, the local board was entitled to notice of action; the alleged cause of action being the continued nonperformance of a duty imposed upon them by the act, and therefore a thing "done or intended to be done" under the provisions of the act, within the meaning of that section. Ib.

The 10 & 11 Vict. c. 34, s. 52, imposes on the commissioners under that act an obligation to place fences on the footways for the protection of foot passengers. Ohrby v. Ryde Commissioners, 5 B. & S. 743; 33 L. J., Q. B. 296; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 1048; 12 W. R. 1079.

In Repairing Highways.]—A local board of health which was both the highway authority and the sewer authority of the district, employed a contractor to construct a pipe-sewer under a highway within the district. The contractor in the laying the pipes dug a trench, which he afterwards filled in with earth, and the roadway was apparently made good. The work was done under the directions and to the satisfaction of the surveyor of the local board. Some months after it was finished a subsidence of the soil in the trench took place without any assignable cause, leaving the road apparently sound. The plaintiff's horse, in consequence of the surface giving way, fell into the trench, and was injured:—Held, that there was evidence that the work of filling in the trench had been negligently and improperly done, and that the local board, either as the sewer or the highway authority, or as both, was responsible. Smith v. West Derby Local Board, 47 L. J., C. P. 607; 3 C. P. D. 423; 38 L. T. 716; 27 W. R. 137—C. A.

—— Stones on Highway — Negligence of Servant.]—A local board, being surveyors of highways, are liable to an action at the suit of a person who, when passing along the highway, is injured by reason of the servants of the local board negligently leaving a heap of stones upon the highway. Foreman v. Canterbury Corporation, 40 L. J., Q. B. 138; L. R. 6 Q. B. 214; 24 L. T. 385; 19 W. R. 719.

A man driving his cart along a highway on a dark night, and using due care, came in contact with a heap of stones placed on and at the side of the carriage road, without any light to enable the obstruction to be seen. The heap had been so left by the negligence of the persons employed to repair the road by the corporation of the town, under the superintendence of the surveyor appointed by them in their capacity as constituting the local board of health of the borough:—Held, that he had a right of action against the corporation, so constituting such local board of health, as the persons by whose negligence the stones were left on the highway were their servants, and that, although the corporation would not be liable merely in their capacity of surveyors of highways under 11 & 12 Vict. c. 63, s. 117, they were not relieved by that section from their ordinary common law liability for the negligence of the servants whom they employed. Ib.

Non-repair of Drain under Highway.]—The municipality of B., incorporated under New South Wales Acts No. 13 of 1858 and No. 12 of 1867, and having thereunder the care, construction and management of the roads and streets within their municipality, constructed therein a barrel drain into which ran an open drain, the brickwork of which having broken away, and not having been repaired, a hole was caused, into which the plaintiff's horse fell. In an action claiming damages against the municipality, (a) for negligence in constructing the street, (b) for negligence in keeping and maintaining the street, and not repairing the drain, gutter, or sewer in the said street (plea the general issue), the chief justice directed the jury that the defendants under their act of incorporation were not liable for the result of any mere nonfeasance; that if they thought fit to construct a sewer, and they did the work in so negligent a manner as to bring about the accident, they were liable for that misfeasance; but if they constructed the sewer properly in the first instance, and it became defective afterwards, they were not bound to repair it; and, further, that if the defective state in which the drain was arose from the operation of the weather, or wear and tear, it having been properly constructed originally, they were not liable. Verdict for defendants:—Held, on motion for a new trial, that as regards (b) there was misdirection. The barrel drain was not only made by the defendants, but the sole control and management of it were by the statute vested in them. By reason of their construction of that drain and their neglect to repair it, whereby, as an indirect but natural consequence, the dangerous hole was formed, which was left open and unfenced, they caused a nuisance in the highway for which, whatever their statutory obligation to repair may have been, they were liable to an indictment, and also to an action by the plaintiff, who sustained direct and particular damage from their breach of duty. Bathurst (Borough) v. Macpherson, 48 L. J., P. C. 61; 4 App. Cas. 256—P. C.

In Management of Highway—Limitation of Action.]—An urban authority constituted the surveyor of highways by s. 144 of the Public Health Act, 1875, is not liable to be sued for negligence in the management of highways, unless the action be commenced within three months; the limitation under s. 109 of the Highways Act, 1835, and not that under s. 264 of the Public Health Act, 1875, being applicable. Taylor v. Meltham Local Board (47 L. J., C. P. 12) and Kay v. Atherton Local Board (42 J. P. 792) overruled. Burton v. Salford Corporation (11 Q. B. D. 286), followed. Graham v. Newcastle-upon-Tyne Corporation, 62 L. J., Q. B. 315; [1893] 1 Q. B. 643; 4 R. 358; 69 L. T. 6; 41 W. R. 424; 57 J. P. 596—C. A.

Negligent Work—Projection of Cover of Water Valve.]—The iron cover of a valve connected with a water main was properly fixed in a highway by the defendants, but in consequence of the ordinary wearing away of the highway, the valve cover projected an inch above it. The plaintiff's horse using the highway stumbled over the valve cover and was hurt. In an action against the defendants, who were both the water authority and the highway authority, for the injury to the horse:—Held, that it was the duty of the defendants to make such arrangements that works under their care should not become a nuisance to the highway, and that the plaintiff was entitled to recover. Kent v. Worthing Local Board, 52 L. J., Q. B. 77; 10 Q. B. D. 118; 48 L. T. 362; 31 W. R. 583; 47 J. P. 23.

—— Projection of Sewer Gratings.]—A local authority which, under the Public Health Act, 1875, has vested in it both the highways and the sewers of the district, and the control and management of the same, is not civilly liable for an injury caused by a sewer grating that projects beyond the road surface if the grating is in proper repair and condition, and the accident is attributable solely to the non-repair of the highway. The fact that the local authority has the control of the sewers as well as of the highways does not render the local authority liable. Kent v. Worthing Local Board (10 Q. B. D. 118) overruled; Moore v. Lambeth Waterworks (17 Q. B. D. 462) discussed; Cowley v. Newmarket Local Board (1 R. 45) followed. Oliver v. Horsham Local Board, 63 L. J., Q. B. 181; [1894] 1 Q. B. 332; 9 R. 111; 70 L. T. 206; 42 W. R. 161; 58 J. P. 297—C. A.

—— Defect in Fire-plugs—Act of Contractors.]—By a local act a waterworks company, at the request of the commissioners, under an act for improving the town, was required to fix proper fire-plugs in the main and other pipes belonging to the company. By a section contained in the act, "the company shall, at the costs and charges of the commissioners, from time to time repair, renew, and keep in proper order every such fire-plug; and the costs of such fire-plugs, and the expense of fixing, placing, and maintaining the same in repair, shall be defrayed by the commissioners": The company having put down plugs in the streets, the commissioners paid for them, and by subsequent acts the plugs became the property of the local board of health. A horse was injured by getting its foot into one of the plugs, the cap of which was broken:—Held, that the company, and not the local board, was liable to an action for the neglect to repair. Bayley v. Wolverhampton Waterworks Co., 6 H. & N. 241; 30 L. J., Ex. 57.

—— Defect in Sewer Gratings.]—As a person was riding along a highway, under which was a sewer, his horse trod on a grid, or grating, put there to drain the surface water off the road into the sewer. The grid, being in a defective state, gave way, and the horse's leg was injured. He brought an action against the local board of health of the district, who are the surveyors of the highway by 11 & 12 Vict. c. 63, ss. 68, 117, and in whom also the sewers are vested under ss. 43, 45:—Held, that, though the local board might not be liable as surveyors of the highway, they were liable as owners of the sewer, of which the grid formed part, for negligence in not keeping the grid in a proper state. White v. Hindley Local Board, 44 L. J., Q. B. 114; L. R. 10 Q. B. 219; 32 L. T. 460; 23 W. R. 651.

—— Liability to Owner of Premises for Improper Construction of Drain.]—When a local authority by agreement with the owner of premises constructs, so as to communicate with their sewer, a drain from his premises which they could have required him to make under s. 23 of the Public Health Act, 1875, such agreement is not ultrà vires, and they are responsible to him for any damage caused to his premises by the negligent construction of the drain. Hall v. Batley Corporation, 47 L. J., Q. B. 148; 37 L. T. 710.

—— Action within Six Months.]—The plaintiff's house was built in 1874. The defendants in 1883, acting under statutory powers, constructed a sewer under a road near the plaintiff's house, which, owing to the defendants' negligence in the construction of the sewer, was cracked and damaged. The cracks became gradually worse, and continued so doing till December, 1888, when the plaintiff brought an action to recover damages for the injury to his house:—Held, that the action had been commenced within six months after the accruing of the cause of action, and that the defendants were not protected by s. 264 of the Public Health Act, 1875:—Held, also, that although the plaintiff was not entitled to any right of support for his house by way of easement, yet the defendants were bound to use due care in the exercise of their powers, and were, therefore, liable for negligence. Fairbrother v. Bury Sanitary Authority, 37 W. R. 544.

Neglecting to Provide Sewer.]—See Robinson v. Workington Corporation, post, col. 543.

Non-repair of Sewer—Overflow.]—A local act (11 Geo. 4, c. 47, s. 58) empowered the Manchester Improvement Commissioners to cause such sewers as they should think necessary to be made, and when made to be repaired and cleansed. By a subsequent act (6 Vict. c. 17) the powers and property of the commissioners were transferred to and vested in the defendants. Sect. 36 of 14 & 15 Vict. c. 119, made it lawful for the defendants from time to time to cause to be constructed such sewers as they might think necessary, and also to cause such sewers to be repaired or cleansed as often as they might deem proper. A sewer, some forty years after it had been constructed by the commissioners under the powers conferred by the local act, and during a violent thunderstorm, burst under a cellar which communicated with a house of which the plaintiff was owner, and, flooding the lower rooms, finally caused the whole of the house to fall down. In an action against the defendants for the injury so caused, the jury found that the bursting of the sewer was caused by defects in its original construction, and by the omission of the defendants to take reasonable means to discover such defects; also that the ignorance of the defendants as to any defect in the sewer was due to the omission on their part to take reasonable means to discover it:—Held, that the defendants were under a legal duty to use the powers given them by statute to keep the sewer in proper order, and from time to time to inform themselves as to its condition. Fleming v. Manchester Corporation, 44 L. T. 517; 45 J. P. 423. Reversed in C. A.

Held, also, that their private acts gave them power to cause the sewer to be cleansed and repaired, and that the common law superinduced upon that power a duty to use it, and to use all reasonable means to inform themselves whether there was occasion to do so. Ib.

Held, also, that the findings of the jury shewed that the defendants omitted to perform this duty, and so were negligent. Ib.

In consequence of several overflows of sewage from a defective sewer belonging to the defendants, the plaintiff was compelled to leave his house, which he had taken for three years, five quarters before the expiry of his lease:—Held, that he was entitled to recover from the defendants as damages—(i.) the expense of moving, (ii.) rent for the five quarters for which he was liable to his landlord, (iii.) an amount in respect of physical discomfort caused to him during the whole of his tenancy, and (iv.) the actual expense caused in connection with illness in his family arising from the overflows of sewage. Touzeau v. Slough Urban District Council, 60 J. P. 103.

—— When no Negligence.]—Where works are made and maintained under statutory powers by a public body for the benefit of the public or of a section of the public, and a member of the public in exercise of the statutory rights given to him uses those works and suffers damage thereby, the liability arising therefrom must be determined by reference to the statute, and not as if the parties were strangers. A local authority is not liable for a nuisance caused by the overflow of a sewer under s. 19 of the Public Health Act, 1875, in the absence of negligence. Stretton's Derby Brewery Co. v. Derby Corporation, 63 L. J., Ch. 135; [1894] 1 Ch. 431; 8 R. 608; 69 L. T. 791; 42 W. R. 583.

Diversion of Sewage into Surcharged Sewer.]—The diversion by a local authority, in the execution of their statutory powers, of sewage from one drain or sewer into another already surcharged with sewage, whereby damage is occasioned to an individual occupier of premises, is not a mere act of omission in the performance of duties imposed by the Public Health Act, 1875, and therefore only a subject for compensation under s. 308, but is the commission of a legal wrong, in respect of which the occupier can maintain an action for the damage sustained. Dent v. Bournemouth Corporation, 66 L. J., Q. B. 395.

Compulsory Purchase — Omission to take Lands.]—When a local authority, in exercise of their powers, serve on the owner of land intended to be taken by them for the purposes of the Public Health Act, 1875, the notice required by s. 176 of that act, they are not bound to proceed with such notice. Their omission, therefore, to take the lands specified in such notice gives the owner of the lands no right of action against them, notwithstanding the confirmation of a provisional order empowering them to take such lands. Burges v. Bristol Sanitary Authority, 50 J. P. 455.

See NEGLIGENCE.

b. Nuisance.

In performing Duties.]—Boards of health, in performing their statutory duties, cannot create a nuisance affecting a neighbour, or cast upon him a greater burden than he is bound to bear. Att.-Gen. v. Acton Local Board, 52 L. J., Ch. 108; 22 Ch. D. 221; 47 L. T. 510; 31 W. R. 153.

The proviso in the Towns Improvement Act, 1847, restraining the creation of nuisances, qualifies all the powers given by such act, and such a power incorporated in a subsequent act not mentioning the proviso is nevertheless subject thereto. Att.-Gen. v. Leeds Corporation, 39 L. J., Ch. 711; L. R. 5 Ch. 583; 19 W. R. 19.

Acting in Excess of Powers.]—A local board of health constructed a sewer along the bank of a river, with trap-doors in it, communicating with the river. When the river was full, and water abundant, the board, by means of the trap-doors, drew the water off from the river, and let it into the sewer, for the purpose of flushing it. The place where the trap-doors were placed was at a part of the river above that on which a mill, occupied, was situated. On one occasion the board made a hole in the bottom of the river, and so let the stream run into the sewer for nearly two days continuously, during that time abstracting the water of the river in such quantities that the mill ceased working for want of water:—Held, that the acts of the board were in excess of the powers given them by statute; that they had injuriously affected the river; and that the owner of the mill might have brought an action for the wrong, and also, in such action, obtained an injunction against the continuance of it; that he was therefore an individual entitled by law to prevent or be relieved against the injuriously affecting the river, within 21 & 22 Vict. c. 98, s. 73; and, consequently, that he could not sustain a mandamus against the board to summon a jury to assess him compensation. Reg. v. Darlington Local Board, 6 B. & S. 562;

35 L. J., Q. B. 45 ; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 1196 ; 10 L. T. 603 ; 13 W. R. 789—Ex. Ch.

Sending Sewage into Adjoining Districts.]—Notwithstanding the obligation imposed on a local board by the Public Health Act, 1875, to drain their district, their right to send the sewage of their district, directly or indirectly, into the sewers belonging to the sanitary authority of an adjoining district is, in the absence of express enactment or agreement, no higher than the right of a landowner to send sewage from his land on to the land or into the drains of a neighbouring landowner. If, therefore, a prescriptive right has been acquired to send some sewage from one district into the sewers of another, the burden cannot be increased without the consent of the sanitary authority of the latter district. The ratio decidendi of Metropolitan Board of Works v. L. & N. W. Ry. (17 Ch. D. 246) applies to a local board just as it does to an ordinary landowner. Att.-Gen. v. Acton Local Board, 52 L. J., Ch. 108 ; 22 Ch. D. 221 ; 47 L. T. 510 ; 31 W. R. 153.

Injunction granted in the absence of proof of substantial damage, on the ground that the defendants by their pleading claimed a right to continue doing that which the court held they were not entitled to do. Ib.

In an action by a sanitary authority to restrain the sanitary authority of a neighbouring district from authorising or directing sewage from their district to flow into the sewers of the plaintiffs, the court granted an injunction as to the future, but refused to grant a mandatory injunction to compel the stopping up of existing drains—(1) Because to do so would cause serious inconvenience to the district ; and (2) because it is doubtful whether a local board have power to stop up drains which they have once authorised to be connected with their sewers. And, inasmuch as the injunction granted applied only to the future, the court refused to suspend its operation. Ib.

Improper Construction—Act of God.]—In an action against a local board of health for damages sustained by an irruption of sewage caused by the sewers being improperly constructed, former applications by the plaintiff to the board for compensation on similar occasions, with their answers, awarding compensation, are admissible on his part, although the fact will not settle the question of responsibility for a particular sewer, coupled with the fact that on the occasion in question the board appeared only to dispute their liability on the ground that the occurrence was occasioned by an extraordinary storm, and with some (even though slight) evidence that it was caused by defective construction of the sewers, there will be sufficient evidence of liability. Nor will there be sufficient evidence that a storm was so extraordinary as to excuse the parties responsible for the sewers, unless the evidence extends over a considerable range of years, during which the sewers have been in existence. Brown v. Sargent, 1 F. & F. 112.

Unauthorised Construction.]—L., the owner of a meadow, received notice from the rural sanitary authority that they intended to enter and make a sewer under the meadow, and this being objected to, they entered forcibly. An action of trespass and injunction being brought by L., on the ground that the sewer would create a nuisance :—Held, that the order of justices mentioned in s. 305 of the Public Health Act does not apply when proceedings are taken under s. 16. Lamacraft v. St. Thomas Sanitary Authority, 42 L. T. 365 ; 44 J. P. 441.

Held, also, that the statute does not authorise a sewer which would cause a nuisance, and the injunction was granted accordingly, the jury having found that a nuisance would be created. Ib.

Right to compel an Action against Third Party—Power of Local Board to stop Nuisance.]—On a motion for an injunction to restrain a local board from allowing sewage to flow into a brook opposite the plaintiff's house, whereby a nuisance was occasioned, it appeared that the nuisance was in fact caused by C. P., not a party to the action, who had passed the sewage of his house into the brook through a pipe, which, by agreement with the defendants, he was only entitled to use for surface or rain water :—Held, that although the local board could not be compelled to construct an improved system of drainage except by mandamus, nor to bring an action for an injunction against a third party, particularly in cases where the legal right was doubtful, still where the third party was acting in violation of an agreement entered into with the local board to pass surface water only through the pipe, and where no special inconvenience would be caused to other neighbours, the plaintiff was entitled to an injunction against the defendants on the ground that they could themselves prevent any nuisance being caused, by stopping up the pipe which was being used in contravention of the agreement, under the powers given them by the public health act, and this, notwithstanding that they would be preventing the third party from exercising his right of passing surface water only through the pipe. Att.-Gen. v. Dorking Guardians (20 Ch. D. 595), distinguished. Charles v. Finchley Local Board, 52 L. J., Ch. 554 ; 23 Ch. D. 767 ; 48 L. T. 569 ; 31 W. R. 717 ; 47 J. P. 791.

Pollution of Stream—Injunction.]—An action was brought against a sanitary authority to restrain the pollution of a ditch running through the main street of a town past the plaintiff's lands into the sea. The ditch was covered over as it passed through the town, but was afterwards an open stream, and had been for many years seriously polluted. The plaintiff claimed an injunction to restrain the defendants, as the owners of the covered part of the ditch and as the sanitary authority of the district, from permitting any sewage or other noxious matter to come on to her lands or into her part of the ditch. In 1877 the attention of the defendants was called to the condition of the houses in two new streets, and they required the owners of those houses to improve their drains. The owners accordingly ran two drains down the two streets and made communications with the main sewer. These drains were made for the purpose of carrying off surface water, and were not connected with any privies, but in addition to the surface water the slops of the houses were allowed to be thrown down the drains. In 1885, in consequence of a complaint made to the defendants, notices were directed to be served upon the occupiers to divert all polluting matter from the sewer, and the inspector of nuisances was ordered to inspect all drains entering into the main sewer. The notices so served were all effective in causing an abatement of the nuisance except four. Subsequent directions of the defendants as to cleansing the sewer were duly carried out, the effect of which was to diminish the pollution of it to some extent. The defence was, that the defendants had done everything in their power to prevent any nuisance from being occasioned to the plaintiff or her property; and that they were not responsible for the nuisance:—Held, that the defendants had done all they could to abate the nuisance of which the plaintiff complained, and were not responsible for it; but that the plaintiff's remedy, if any, was against the person who actually caused the nuisance:—Held, therefore, that the action could not be maintained. Ogilvie v. Blything Sanitary Authority, 67 L. T. 18—C. A.

Cesspit "Sewer"—Vesting in Local Authority.]—The plaintiff drained ten houses into a common cesspit, which was insufficient for the purpose, and by an act of trespass he carried the overflow across the land of a neighbouring proprietor into a river. The landowner having blocked up the overflow, which caused the sewage to flow back into the cesspit and create a nuisance, the plaintiff in March, 1891, sued the defendants, as the urban sanitary authority for the district, in respect of the nuisance:—Held, that the cesspit was not a sewer, or a work belonging thereto, so as to vest in the defendants, under s. 13 of the Public Health Act, 1875, and consequently that the defendants were under no liability to prevent the nuisance. Meader v. West Cowes Local Board, 61 L. J., Ch. 561; [1892] 3 Ch. 18; 67 L. T. 454; 40 W. R. 676—C. A.

Supply of Water—Liability for, when Impure.]—The defendants were empowered by a special act (32 & 33 Vict. c. 110), incorporating the Waterworks Clauses Act of 1847 (10 & 11 Vict. c. 17), with the exception of certain provisions, to supply water for domestic use within the limits and from the sources described in their act. By s. 66 of the special act the defendants were entitled to prescribe the material to be used for service-pipes by persons supplied with water, and by by-laws the defendants prescribed that the material might either be lead or cast-iron. Leaden service-pipes were, upon the application of the landlord of the plaintiff's house and of the plaintiff, laid down by the defendants, from their mains to the house at the expense of the landlord and the plaintiff. The service-pipes when laid belonged to the consumer of the water supplied through them. By the Waterworks Clauses Act, 1847, s. 35, "the undertakers shall provide and keep in the pipes to be laid down by them a supply of pure and wholesome water, sufficient for the domestic use of all the inhabitants of the town or district within the limits of the special act, who shall be entitled to demand a supply, and shall be willing to pay water-rate for the same." Water which was pure and wholesome in the mains of the defendants was supplied by them to the plaintiff, but in its passage from the mains through the service-pipes it was contaminated by the lead, and he, using the water, suffered from lead poisoning. He sued the defendants for injuries sustained from impure and unwholesome water:—Held, that he had no cause of action. Milnes v. Huddersfield Corporation, 52 L. J., Q. B. 64: 10 Q. B. D. 124; 47 L. T. 697; 31 W. R. 568. Affirmed, 53 L. J., Q. B. 12; 12 Q. B. D. 443; 50 L. T. 73; 32 W. R. 265—C. A.

Local Authority acting under Direction of Local Government Board.]—A hospital for small-pox was erected by the defendants, a body created under the Metropolitan Poor Act, 1867, and the plan pursued by them was sanctioned by the local government board. In an action by neighbouring occupiers for damages for a nuisance, the jury found that the hospital was a nuisance, and that the defendants had not exercised all proper and reasonable care in carrying it on:—Held, that the defendants would not be protected by the sanction of the local government board if what was sanctioned was not legal; and that the statute under which the defendants acted did not authorise the creation of a nuisance or interference with private rights. Hill v. Metropolitan Asylums District Managers, 50 L. J., Q. B. 353; 6 App. Cas. 193; 44 L. T. 653; 29 W. R. 607; 45 J. P. 664—H. L. (E.). See also Lamcraft v. St. Thomas Sanitary Authority, supra, col. 536.

Erection of Post.]—The defendants as the highway and lighting authority had erected a post in the centre of a footpath, and near the post a lamp was placed, which was lighted at night. The plaintiff was injured by running against the post when the light was out or unlighted:—Held, that the defendants were liable. Lumley v. East Retford Corporation, 55 J. P. 133—C. A.

Judgment for Costs against Authority—Execution—Land held on Trust for Contributory Place.]—The plaintiff brought an action against the defendants, who were a rural sanitary authority, to restrain them from fouling a stream, and in 1885 recovered judgment against them with costs. The costs were not taxed until 1890. In 1891, the costs not having been paid, the plaintiff sued out a writ of elegit, under which an inquisition was taken, and the sheriff delivered in execution to the plaintiff certain lands which had been acquired by the defendants for the purpose of sewage works for the parish of N., a contributory place within their district, by means of money borrowed on the security of the separate rates of that parish. Upon motion by the defendants to set aside the writ and inquisition:—Held, that the lands in question were held by the defendants on trust for the parish of N., and could only be taken in execution for judgment debts exclusively chargeable against that place; that the costs of the action were "general expenses" not chargeable against that place or the separate rates levied within it, but against the common fund of the district; and that the judgment could only be enforced against property which had been acquired by means of that common fund. Jersey (Earl) v. Uxbridge Sanitary Authority, 60 L. J., Ch. 833; [1891] 3 Ch. 183; 64 L. T. 858.

Encampment of Gipsies.]—A piece of land was permitted by the owner to be occupied by gipsies and others in such numbers and in such a manner as to cause a nuisance to the neighbourhood:—Held, that an injunction should be granted to restrain the owner from allowing the land to be occupied in such a manner by such persons. Att.-Gen. v. Stone, 60 J. P. 168.

c. Trespass.

A local board employed B. to manage its sewage farm. He had general powers of management, and was not interfered with by the board. Thinking to do good, he cut the plaintiff's land on the bank of a stream to widen the stream :—Held, that the board was not liable for the trespass, inasmuch as B.'s authority was confined to the farm, and he acted beyond the scope of it. Bolingbroke (Lord) v. Swindon New Town Local Board, 43 L. J., C. P. 287 ; L. R. 9 C. P. 575 ; 30 L. T. 723 ; 23 W. R. 47.

And see West Hartlepool Corporation v. Robinson, ante, col. 379.

By Engineer of Board.]—Works were executed by the contractor of a drainage board, pursuant to contract with them and by their authority, under the superintendence of their engineer and his assistants, and according to plans and specifications prepared by the engineer, who directed and instructed the contractor, and was frequently present on the ground and saw the works in progress, but did not further interfere. Some of the works were admittedly acts of trespass to lands of the plaintiff, as the board had not obtained an assessment of compensation, or paid such compensation before entry :—Held, that the engineer was liable to the plaintiff for the trespass so committed. Stone v. Cartwright (6 Term Rep. 411) distinguished. Monks v. Dillon, 12 L. R., Ir. 321—C. A.

d. Contract.

e. Liability of Successors.

Sanitary Authority succeeded by District Board.]—A decree was made in 1875 against the corporation of B., as the sanitary authority of B., granting a perpetual injunction to restrain them from allowing sewage to flow into a river so as to be injurious to health or a nuisance to the plaintiffs ; but the injunction was suspended for five years, to give the corporation an opportunity to execute certain works. After the expiration of that period the plaintiffs desired to enforce the injunction, but in the meantime the B., T. and R. District Board had been constituted under the Public Health Act, 1875 (38 & 39 Vict. c. 55), as the sanitary authority of the district in the place of the corporation of B. The plaintiffs brought an action against the B., T. and R. Board, claiming a declaration that they were entitled to the same benefit of the decree as against the defendants in the present action as if they had been defendants in the former suit. The defendants demurred :—Held, that the B., T. and R. Board were not made by the public health act subject to any liabilities of their predecessors except those attaching under the act, and were therefore not bound by the decree against them ; and that, there being no allegation of any nuisance committed by the B., T. and R. Board, the plaintiffs had no cause of action, and the demurrer must be allowed. Att.-Gen. v. Birmingham Drainage Board, 50 L. J., Ch. 786 ; 17 Ch. D. 685 ; 44 L. T. 906 ; 29 W. R. 793 ; 46 J. P. 36—C. A.

—— Action to enforce Judgment.] — The defendants were a local board constituted in November, 1875, under the Public Health Act, 1875. The plaintiff complained that for some time before and since the defendants became the sanitary authority, sewage was allowed to fall into a stream passing near his residence so as to pollute it and cause a nuisance to him. He complained to the defendants in May, 1876, and nothing having been done he brought an action against them in July, 1876, for damages and an injunction : — Held, that, assuming that an actionable nuisance existed, as the defendants had themselves done no act to create or increase it, the plaintiff had no cause of action. Glossop v. Heston and Isleworth Local Board, 49 L. J., Ch. 89 ; 12 Ch. D. 102 ; 40 L. T. 736 ; 28 W. R. 111—C. A.

f. Notice of.

Act done under Provisions of Statute.]—When injury was sustained by the insufficient buoying of a sunken anchor, which was part of certain works authorised by a local act, and which were to be executed subject to the provisions of the Public Health Act, 1848 : —Held, that notice of action under that act was necessary before bringing an action for such injury. Jolliffe v. Wallasey Local Board, 43 L. J., C. P. 41 ; L. R. 9 C. P. 62 ; 29 L. T. 582.

A local board left unfenced a goit adjoining a public footpath within their district, by reason of which the plaintiff's husband, while using the footpath, fell into the goit and was drowned :—Held, that under s. 139 of the Public Health Act, 1848, the local board was entitled to notice of action ; the alleged cause of action being the continued non-performance of a duty imposed upon them by the act, and thereupon a thing "done or intended to be done" under the provisions of the act within the meaning of that section. Wilson v. Halifax Corporation, 37 L. J., Ex. 44 ; L. R. 3 Ex. 114 ; 17 L. T. 666 ; 16 W. R. 707.

—— Contractors.]—The defendant contracted with a local board of health to dig wells for them according to a specification prepared by the surveyor, and the digging to be done entirely under his direction ; the surveyor to have power, if he considered the materials or works improper, of making the contractor remove them, or of removing them at the contractor's expense, and of ordering the dismissal of workmen with whom he should be dissatisfied, or of dismissing them himself ; the board to have the power of making alterations and additions. The defendant was sued for having left a hole excavated in working one of the wells, in a highway, without light, by night, whereby the plaintiff, who was driving a carriage along the way, fell into the hole, and was bruised, and his carriage injured :—Held, that the defendant was entitled to notice of action under 11 & 12 Vict. c. 63, s. 139. Newton v. Ellis, 5 El. & Bl. 115 ; 24 L. J., Q. B. 337 ; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 850 ; 3 W. R. 476.

Action for Recovery of Land.]—Sect. 264 of the Public Health Act, 1875 (38 & 39 Vict. c. 55), which enacts that no writ or process shall be sued out against any local authority for anything done or intended to be done under the provisions of the act until one month after written notice of action, &c., and that any person to whom any such notice of action is given may tender amends to the plaintiff within one month after the service of such notice—does not apply to an action for the recovery of land. Foat or Holder v. Margate Corporation, 52 L. J., Q. B. 711 ; 11 Q. B. D. 299 ; 47 J. P. 535.

Action for Injunction—Damages in Substitution for.]—Where an action against a sanitary authority was bonâ fide and in substance brought for an injunction to prevent them from causing a nuisance in the future by continuing to discharge sewage into a stream, but the judge at the trial thought that under the circumstances an injunction was not then needed, because, though a nuisance was caused by such discharge of sewage in an exceptionally dry season, which at the time of the trial had passed away, it was not likely to recur except in such a season, and he accordingly refused an injunction, but gave 25*l.* damages :—Held, that he had power to give such damages in substitution for an injunction in accordance with the chancery practice under Lord Cairns' act, though no notice of action had been given as required by s. 264 of the Public Health Act, 1875. Chapman v. Auckland Union, 58 L. J., Q. B. 504 ; 23 Q. B. D. 294 ; 61 L. T. 446 ; 53 J. P. 820—C. A.

Mandatory Injunction—Nuisance by Erection of Urinal.]—See Sellors v. Matlock Bath Local Board, infra, col. 544.

Sufficiency of.]—The notice of action under 11 & 12 Vict. c. 63, s. 139, stated that the plaintiff intended to enter a plaint against the defendants for the injury and damage caused to him through the defendants by matters or things done or omitted by them and their labourers and servants, to wit, that they did, by themselves, their labourers and servants, "negligently, carelessly, and improperly leave a certain portion of the highway in an insufficient and improper state of repair, whereby," &c. :—Held, that this was a sufficient intimation to the defendants that they were to be charged with an act of misfeasance, and not merely with a neglect of duty to repair the road. Smith v. West Derby Local Board, 47 L. J., C. P. 607 ; 3 C. P. D. 423 ; 38 L. T. 716 ; 27 W. R. 137—C. A.

Several Documents.] — The notice of action mentioned in s. 264 of the Public Health Act, 1875, need not be contained in one document : a series of letters will suffice if the cause of action is clearly stated, and the other requirements of the section are complied with. Lamley v. East Retford Corporation, 55 J. P. 133—C. A.

See PRACTICE.

g. Limitation of Time.

Accrual of Cause of Action.] —The defendants, an urban sanitary authority, believing that a certain lane was not a highway repairable by the inhabitants at large, required the plaintiffs, as owners of land abutting on it, to execute certain works upon it, pursuant to the provisions of the Public Health Act, 1875 ; and on the plaintiffs failing to comply with the notice, the defendants did the work themselves, pursuant to s. 150 of the act, and charged the plaintiffs with their proportion of the expense thus incurred. The plaintiffs also believed that the lane was not a highway repairable by the inhabitants at large, and they therefore paid to the defendants the sum so claimed ; but on discovering afterwards that the lane was such a highway, and that the defendants were not entitled to require them to execute the works specified, they brought an action to recover the amount so paid by them. They gave notice of action a month before issuing the writ, but this notice was given and the action was begun more than six months after the payment made by them :—Held, that the plaintiffs could not recover the money thus paid, inasmuch as they were suing the defendants in respect of something "done or intended to be done or omitted to be done" under the public health act ; that the provisions of s. 264 of that act applied, and therefore that the action could not be brought more than six months next after the accruing of the cause of action. Midland Ry. v. Withington Local Board, 52 L. J., Q. B. 689 ; 11 Q. B. D. 788 ; 49 L. T. 489 ; 47 J. P. 789—C. A.

And see Fairbrother v. Bury Sanitary Authority, ante, col. 532.

—— Continuous Subsidence caused by one Excavation.]—The foundations of the plaintiff's houses, which fronted a street within the district of the defendants, an urban authority under the Public Health Act, 1875, rested upon an old ditch which crossed the street. The defendants, in excavating the street for the purpose of constructing a sewer along it, cut across the ditch, and, the excavations being lightly filled up, the oozy matter from the ditch, gradually escaping, carried away with it the sandy soil on which the foundations of the houses rested, and thereby set up a constant cause of subsidence. The defendants' works, which were negligently done, were completed in March, 1886. Cracks in the walls of the houses first appeared in March, 1886, and thenceforward continued to increase. The plaintiff having commenced an action in August, 1889, the defendants contended that his claim was barred by s. 264 of the Public Health Act, 1875, inasmuch as the action was not commenced within six months next after "the accruing of the cause of action" : —Held, that the cause of action in respect of damage sustained by the houses within six months prior to the commencement of the action did not accrue until that damage had occurred, and that in respect of such damage the plaintiff was entitled to recover, notwithstanding the lapse of six months from the completion of their works by the defendants. Darley Main Colliery v. Mitchell (11 App. Cas. 127) explained. Crumbie v. Wallsend Local Board, 60 L. J., Q. B. 392 ; [1891] 1 Q. B. 503 ; 64 L. T. 490 ; 55 J. P. 421—C. A.

Laches.]—As soon as certain drainage works were completed in 1854, a landowner complained of injury and called upon the town council to abate the nuisance. He was assured that steps were about to be taken to remedy the nuisance :—Held, that upon an application in 1858, the landowner had not precluded himself by laches from obtaining relief. Att.-Gen. v. Birmingham Corporation, 6 W. R. 811.

Guardians of the Poor acting as Rural Sanitary Authority.]—Sect. 1 of the act 22 & 23 Vict. c. 49, enacts that any debt, claim, or demand which may be lawfully incurred by or become due from the guardians of any union or parish shall be paid within the half-year in which the same shall have been incurred or become due, or within three months after the expiration of such half-year, but not afterwards. By s. 9 of the Public Health Act, 1875, the guardians of a rural union shall form the rural sanitary authority of that district, and "all statutes, orders, and legal provisions applicable to any board of guardians shall apply to them in their capacity of rural authority under this act for the purposes of this act" :—Held, that s. 9 of the Public Health Act, 1875, does not extend the limitation of time imposed by s. 1 of the previous act to debts contracted by guardians in their capacity of rural authority, but that that limitation still remains applicable only to debts contracted by guardians as such. Dearle v. Petersfield Union, 57 L. J., Q. B. 640; 21 Q. B. D. 447; 60 L. T. 85; 37 W. R. 113; 53 J. P. 102—C. A.

See also Cases sub tit. ACTION.

h. Venue.

Effect of Old Statutes.]—Where in an action brought against a local board of health for a thing done under 11 & 12 Vict. c. 63, the cause of action occurred within a town and county, and a judge's order was obtained to change the venue to the adjoining county under 38 Geo. 3, c. 52, s. 1:—Held, that such order was properly made, for that the power of the court to make such order is not abrogated by 11 & 12 Vict. c. 63, s. 139. Itchen Bridge Co. v. Southampton Local Board, 8 El. & Bl. 803; 27 L. J., Q. B. 128; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 1261; 6 W. R. 75. But see Rules of Supreme Court, 1883, Ord. XXXVI. r. 1.

2. MANDAMUS AND INJUNCTION.

a. When Applicable.

Mandamus, and not Injunction, the Remedy for Neglect of Public Duty.]—A local board, under the Public Health Act, 1875, causing a nuisance by any act which, independently of the statute, would have given a cause of action to any person, may be made liable in damages, or be restrained by injunction, unless they can shew a justification under the powers of the statute. But if a local board do not act themselves to cause a nuisance, but neglect to perform their duty of providing a satisfactory and healthy system of drainage, it is no ground of action by an individual for damages or an injunction, but the remedy is by prerogative writ of mandamus, and, semble, this jurisdiction, notwithstanding the 25th section of the Judicature Act, 1873, ought not to be exercised except by the queen's bench division. Glossop v. Heston and Isleworth Local Board, 49 L. J., Ch. 89; 12 Ch. D. 102; 40 L. T. 736; 28 W. R. 111—C. A.

No action will lie against a local authority at the suit of an individual for mere nonfeasance in neglecting to perform the duty imposed upon them by s. 15 of the Public Health Act, 1875, to cause to be made such sewers as may be necessary for effectually draining their district, even though special damage may have been sustained in consequence of such nonfeasance. Glossop v. Heston and Isleworth Local Board (49 L. J., Ch. 89; 12 Ch. D. 102) and Cowley v. Newmarket Local Board (62 L. J., Q. B. 65; [1892] A. C. 345) followed. Robinson v. Workington Corporation, 66 L. J., Q. B. 388; [1897] 1 Q. B. 619; 75 L. T. 674; 45 W. R. 453; 61 J. P. 164—C. A.

Mandamus—Neglect to enforce Orders.]—Under 18 & 19 Vict. c. 121, the sanitary inspector for the local authority of a district obtained an order of justices for the abatement of a nuisance. The local authority was requested by the party aggrieved by the nuisance to take steps for enforcing the order, but did not do so. The court refused an application by the party aggrieved for a mandamus to compel the local authority to enforce the order. Bassett, Ex parte, Ham Local Board, In re, 7 El. & Bl. 280; 26 L. J., M. C. 64; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 136; 5 W. R. 290.

—— Construction of Sewers.]—The court will not grant a mandamus to compel a local board, established under the Public Health Act, 1848, to make such sewers as may be necessary for the purposes of that act, it being in the province of the court only to compel them to take the matter into consideration. Reg. v. Maidenhead Local Board, 4 W. R. 117.

—— Complaint to Local Government Board—Inquiry.]—The local government board had, under s. 299 of the Public Health Act, 1875, made orders calling upon two local sanitary authorities to perform their duty within six months in the matter of complaint in each order mentioned by executing works for the proper drainage of their respective districts. Inquiries had been held by an inspector of the board, who found default had been made, but had declined to admit evidence either as to the great difficulties and expenses attending any scheme of drainage for either district, or as to the probable cost of an efficient system of drainage if carried out. The local government board neither proposed nor suggested any definite scheme:—Held, that a mandamus must go calling upon the local authority to perform their duty in the terms of the orders. So long as there had been no legal error or omission of legal form it was not for the court to entertain questions as to whether there had been a due inquiry or whether the findings of the local government board were sufficient or not. Reg. v. Staines Union, 62 L. J., Q. B. 540; 10 R. 292; 69 L. T. 714; 58 J. P. 182.

An action for a mandamus to compel a local authority to provide necessary sewers for effectually draining their district in accordance with s. 15 of the Public Health Act, 1875, will not lie, the exclusive remedy for the default by the local authority in the performance of their duty being by complaint to the local government board under s. 299 of the act. Peebles v. Oswaldtwistle Urban District Council, 66 L. J., Q. B. 392; [1897] 1 Q. B. 625; 76 L. T. 315; 45 W. R. 454; 61 J. P. 308—C. A.

Mandatory Injunction—Nuisance by erecting Urinal—Compensation—Notice of Action.]—A local board, assuming to act under the authority of s. 39 of the Public Health Act, 1875 (38 & 39 Vict. c. 55), erected a public urinal partly upon a highway and partly upon a strip of land belonging to the plaintiff, and so near to other adjoining land of the plaintiff as to be a nuisance to her and her tenants, and to depreciate the value of her property:—Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to a mandatory injunction to restrain the board from continuing the urinal upon her land or so near thereto as to cause injury or annoyance to her or her tenants:—Held also, that it was not a matter in respect of which the plaintiff's remedy was by compensation under s. 308 of the act. In such a case notice of action under s. 264 is not required. Sellors v. Matlock Bath Local Board, 14 Q. B. D. 928; 52 L. T. 762.

—— Erection of Kerb-Stones—Access to Land—Compensation.]—The plaintiff owned land abutting upon the highway, upon which an inn and some stabling were erected. These stood back from the highway, and in front of them was an open space (forming part of the same land) which had been left open to and on a level with the highway until the defendants, in exercise of their powers under s. 149 of the Public Health Act, 1875 (38 & 39 Vict. c. 55), and for the convenience of the public, placed kerb-stones and a raised footpath at the side of the highway, leaving openings so that carriages could still pass at convenient places to and from the plaintiff's land and premises:—Held, that the plaintiff was not entitled to a mandatory injunction directing the defendants to remove the kerb-stones, and that in the absence of any unreasonable conduct the remedy for any injury caused by the kerb-stones would be by compensation under s. 308 of the act. Ib.

Execution of Works so as to be a Nuisance.]—The sewerage and drainage works of a town, authorised under a local act, in which the Public Health Act, 1848, is incorporated, must, however beneficial to the inhabitants of the town, be executed in such a manner as not to be a nuisance to neighbouring landowners; nor are such landowners to be put to a series of actions at common law in respect of the nuisance, the jurisdiction of this court being interposed to afford a single and complete remedy. In such a case the court will not balance the convenience of the inhabitants of a town, however numerous, against the strict legal rights of the individual complaining. Att.-Gen. v. Birmingham Corporation, 6 W. R. 811.

Liability for not stopping up Sewers creating a Nuisance—Pollution of Stream.]—A sanitary authority in whom the sewers are vested have only a limited ownership in them; they are not in the same position as to responsibility for fouling a stream as a private individual, because they cannot stop the sewers on account of the damage to the inhabitants of the neighbourhood. And although, perhaps, the sanitary authority might obtain an injunction to restrain persons from using the sewers who had no right to do so, a landowner complaining of the nuisance cannot bring an action against them for not doing so; because an action cannot be maintained either at law or in equity to compel a person to bring an action for the purpose of restraining a nuisance which he cannot himself prevent. Where a sanitary authority have not themselves constructed sewers which are a nuisance, but only permitted them to be used as formerly by the inhabitants, they are not doing an act which can be restrained under the Public Health Acts or the Rivers Pollution Act, 1876. Att.-Gen. v. Dorking Guardians, 51 L. J., Ch. 585; 20 Ch. D. 595; 46 L. T. 573; 30 W. R. 579—C. A.

—— No sufficient Scheme provided.]—But if they are neglecting their duty in providing a sufficient sanitary scheme for the neighbourhood the remedy of an aggrieved landowner is by mandamus. Ib.

Per Jessel, M.R.: The court will not make an order against a public body or against individuals to do an act unless it is satisfied that it is within their power to do it. Ib.

Per Jessel, M.R.: In dealing with the question of restraining a public body from continuing a state of things which existed before the commencement of their powers, the court must take into consideration the balance of convenience. Ib.

Glossop v. Heston and Isleworth Local Board (12 Ch. D. 102) approved and followed. Ib.

A corporation, which became the sanitary authority in their town in 1873, suffered sewage to continue to run from a drain in the town into a canal, by a culvert running through the plaintiff's property, which created some nuisance and some damage to the plaintiff:—Held, that an information would lie, and that the corporation was liable to be restrained by injunction from continuing such nuisance and damage, though they derived no profit from the works causing the nuisance. Att.-Gen. v. Basingstoke Corporation, 45 L. J., Ch. 726; 24 W. R. 817.

Interference with Water-courses.]—When a local board of health is interfering with a watercourse in a manner not authorised by the Local Government Act (21 & 22 Vict. c. 98), s. 68. art. 3, it will be restrained from so doing, and the person injured will not be left to his remedy under the compensation clause of the 11 & 12 Vict. c. 63, s. 144. Grand Junction Canal Co. v. Shugar, L. R. 6 Ch. 483; 24 L. T. 402; 19 W. R. 569.

See also SEWERS (POWER TO CREATE A NUISANCE), ante, cols. 416 et seq.

Decree against Local Board—Adding Parties after Decree.]—In 1875 an injunction was granted restraining the defendants, the corporation of Birmingham, from polluting by sewage the river Tame; but its operation was suspended for five years, so as to give the defendants time to carry out works for the prevention of the nuisance complained of. After the passing of the Public Health Act, 1875, a new local government district for Birmingham was created, upon whom devolved all the duties and liabilities of the old local authority. On a summons by the plaintiffs at the expiration of the five years for leave to amend the information and bill by adding the new district as defendants:—Held, that no amendment in the pleadings could be made after final judgment, and that the new district could only be brought before the court by action. Att.-Gen. v. Birmingham Corporation, 15 Ch. D. 423; 43 L. T. 77; 29 W. R. 127—C. A.

Injunction—Wrongful Exercise of Statutory Powers.] — Where a local board of works attempted to exercise their arbitrary powers without leaving to a person affected thereby the right of appeal given by the act, the Court of Chancery restrained them by injunction from so doing, until the question should be determined by the proper tribunal. Tinkler v. Wandsworth District Board of Works, 1 Giff. 412; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 1292; 6 W. R. 50. Affirmed on appeal, 2 De G. & J. 261; 27 L. J., Ch. 342; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 293; 6 W. R. 390.

Where there is a doubt whether the arbitrary powers given to local boards are properly exercised, it is the duty of the court to take care that the checks appointed by the legislature have due operation in favour of the persons affected. Ib.

Road Authority—Sprinkling Salt on Snow—Interdict.]—Although road authorities are invested with large discretionary powers in regard to the cleaning of streets and the regulation of traffic, and a court of law would decline to interfere with a due exercise of that discretion, they have no power or discretion in the case of a nuisance, which the legislature has not expressly or by necessary implication sanctioned, either to commit it themselves or to authorise its commission by others. Ogston v. Aberdeen District Tramways, 66 L. J., P. C. 1; [1897] A. C. 111; 75 L. T. 633; 61 J. P. 436—H. L. (Sc.)

According to the law of Scotland, any private person, whether a ratepayer or municipal elector or not, is entitled to sue for an interdict in respect of a nuisance caused in a highway. Ib.

The appellant sued for an interdict to prevent the respondents from continuing the practice of sweeping away the snow from their tramway-rails, and sprinkling salt on the snow in order to melt it, in such a way as to cause a nuisance. The Court of Session refused the note of suspension and interdict on the ground that the local authority, to which was intrusted the duty of seeing that the streets were cleared in such an emergency as a snowstorm, had approved the method adopted by the respondents. The House, reversing the decision, remitted the case to the Second Division of the Court of Sessions to pronounce decree of interdict. Ib.

b. Notice of Proceedings.

When Necessary.]—It is unnecessary, before instituting proceedings in the Court of Chancery for an injunction to restrain a local board of health from continuing a nuisance, to serve the notice required by 25 & 26 Vict. c. 102, s. 106; such notice refers only to proceedings at law. Att.-Gen. v. Hackney Local Board, 44 L. J., Ch. 545; L. R. 20 Eq. 626; 33 L. T. 244.

Sect. 264 of the Public Health Act, 1875 (38 & 39 Vict. c. 55), requiring a month's notice to be served on a local authority before commencing an action for anything done under the provisions of the act, does not apply where the object of the action is to restrain the commission of a nuisance; and this notwithstanding the plaintiff also claims compensation for past damage. Flower v. Low Leyton Local Board, 46 L. J., Ch. 621; 5 Ch. D. 347; 36 L. T. 760; 25 W. R. 545—C. A.

3. Certiorari.

"Misapplication" of Funds.]—By the Public Health Act, 1875 (38 & 39 Vict. c. 53), s. 174, every contract made by an urban authority whereof the value or amount exceeds 50*l.*, shall be in writing and sealed with the common seal of such authority. 1 Vict. c. 78, s. 44, after reciting that "it is expedient to give all persons interested in the borough fund of every borough a more direct and easy remedy for any misapplication of such fund," enacts that any order of the council of any borough for the payment of money out of the borough fund may be removed into the court by certiorari. A resolution was passed by a corporation ordering the payment of certain sums, each exceeding 50*l.*, to contractors for costs incurred in paving a street, no contracts having been entered into under the seal of the corporation. On an application for a certiorari to bring up and quash such resolution on the ground that it was a "misapplication" of the borough funds within 1 Vict. c. 78, s. 44:—Held, that as the work was useful and done at a reasonable cost, and there was no suggestion of corruption or partiality, there had been no "misapplication," and the court in its discretion refused to grant the certiorari. Reg. v. Norwich Corporation, 30 W. R. 752.

4. Sequestration and Elegit.

For Enforcing Orders.]—The Court of Chancery will issue a sequestration against a board of health for disobeying an order of court, if it has any property on which the sequestration can operate. Spokes v. Banbury Local Board, 35 L. J., Ch. 105; L. R. 1 Eq. 42; 13 L. T. 428; 14 W. R. 128. Affirmed, 35 L. J., Ch. 105; 11 Jur. (N.S.) 1010; 13 L. T. 453; 14 W. R. 169—L.JJ.

It is immaterial that the order is made for the protection of an individual and has been disobeyed in the interest of a large body of persons. Ib.

On appeal, the superior court will not suspend the execution of the writ; any application for such purpose must be made to the court below. Ib.

Land conveyed to a board of health for the purposes of the Public Health Acts, and used as a reservoir for supplying water to the district, can be taken under a writ of elegit on a judgment obtained against the board in the name of its clerk. Worral Waterworks Co. v. Lloyd, L. R. 1 C. P. 719.

5. Indictment.

Non-repair of Highway — Urban Sanitary Authority.]—An indictment will lie, under s. 10 of the Highway and Locomotives (Amendment) Act, 1878, against an urban sanitary authority, acting as the highway authority of the district, for nonrepair of a highway. Reg. v. Wakefield Corporation, 57 L. J., M. C. 52; 20 Q. B. D. 810; 36 W. R. 911; 16 Cox, C. C. 439; 52 J. P. 422.

An indictment against a municipal corporation for nonrepair of a highway alleged that the highway was in decay, and that the corporation, "acting by the council as the sanitary authority for the urban district," ought to repair and amend the same, &c.; but there was no allegation to shew how the defendants were liable, nor did the indictment conclude with the words "against the form of the statute." At the trial the judge intimated his willingness to make any amendment within his power, but no amendment was in fact made. A verdict having been found for the crown:—Held, that the indictment was bad, but that, even assuming the necessary amendments to be made, the defendants were entitled to judgment, there being nothing in the Public Health Act, 1875, to make the urban sanitary authority liable to indictment for nonrepair, in the same sense as that in which the parish or other persons liable ratione tenuræ were liable. Reg. v. Poole Corporation, 56 L. J., M. C. 131; 19 Q. B. D. 602, 683; 57 L. T. 485; 36 W. R. 239; 16 Cox, C. C. 323; 52 J. P. 84.

6. Compensation for Damages.

a. In what Cases.

Execution of Works.] — When, under the 11 & 12 Vict. c. 63, s. 69, a local board require the owner or occupier of premises fronting a street (not being a highway) to sewer, level, &c., the same, and the requisition not being complied with they execute the works, the owner or occupier is entitled to compensation for damage sustained by him through the execution of the works. Reg. v. Wallasey Local Board, 10 B. & S. 428; 38 L. J., Q. B. 217; L. R. 4 Q. B. 351; 21 L. T. 90; 17 W. R. 766.

A local board of health, in the execution of certain works under the Public Health Act, 1848, occasioned some damage to property belonging to A. Compensation was claimed by A. for the damage thus occasioned to him, or to have the same ascertained by arbitration. The court refused to grant an injunction restraining A. from proceeding by arbitration under s. 123 of the Public Health Act, 1848, holding that this section could not be distinguished from the compensation clauses in the Lands Clauses Consolidation Act, 1845. Bradford Local Board v. Hopwood, 6 W. R. 818.

The defendants, a local board of health, prior to 1875 constructed a sewer under a public footpath, the soil of which belonged to the plaintiff, and they made a shaft thirty feet deep into the sewer, with an entrance or manhole upon the footpath, at a point where there was a junction of two sewers. The defendants also gave the plaintiff notice after 1875 of their intention to make similar manholes into their sewers upon other parts of the plaintiff's property:—Held, that they were parts of the sewer within the meaning of 11 & 12 Vict. c. 63, s. 45, and could be made without purchasing land for the purpose; and that the plaintiff was only entitled to compensation for the damage arising from making them. Swanston v. Twickenham Local Board, 48 L. J., Ch. 623; 11 Ch. D. 838; 40 L. T. 734; 27 W. R. 924.

When Liability in Dispute.]—A person who claims compensation for damage sustained by reason of the exercise of the powers of the Public Health Act, 1875, is entitled, under s. 308, to have the amount of compensation determined by arbitration in the manner provided by that act, even though a dispute exists as to the liability of those from whom he seeks to recover compensation; and the prior determination of that question of liability is not a condition precedent to the claimant's right to go to arbitration to settle the question of amount. Pearsall v. Brierley Hill Local Board, 52 L. J., Q. B. 529; 11 Q. B. D. 735; 49 L. T. 486; 32 W. R. 141; 47 J. P. 628—C. A. Affirmed, 54 L. J., Q. B. 25; 9 App. Cas. 595; 51 L. T. 577; 33 W. R. 56; 49 J. P. 84—H. L. (E.)

Actionable Damage.]—A board of public health is not bound to give compensation under 11 & 12 Vict. c. 63, s. 144, for any damage which it may cause, which would not have been actionable if it had not been acting under the authority of the statute. Hall v. Bristol Corporation, 36 L. J., C. P. 110; L. R. 2 C. P. 322; 15 L. T. 572; 15 W. R. 404.

Alteration of Level of Road.]—A local board having been constituted in a district through which a turnpike road and footpath passed, an agreement was entered into between the board and the turnpike trustees that the former should take upon themselves the repair of the footpath within their district. Afterwards a further agreement was entered into, by which the trustees undertook to raise a part of the carriage-way and the board the corresponding part of the footpath. The necessary result of raising the footpath was to occasion damage to the plaintiff's house, who thereupon claimed to be entitled to compensation from the board under the Public Health Act, 1848, s. 144. That act, which by s. 68 vests other highways in local boards, and authorises them to alter such highways as and when occasion may require, and by s. 144 directs that they "shall make compensation to all persons sustaining any damage by reason of the exercise of any of the powers of the act," excludes by s. 2 turnpike roads from their jurisdiction. The Local Government Act, 1858, however, authorised a local board, by agreement with the trustees of any turnpike road, to take upon itself the maintenance, repair, cleansing or watering of any such road, or of any part of the road. By 15 & 16 Vict. c. 42, highway in s. 68 of the principal act shall mean "any highway repairable by the inhabitants." The question whether the plaintiff was entitled to compensation under s. 144 of the Public Health Act, 1848, as a person sustaining damage by the exercise by the local board of the powers of the act, having been raised by special case setting out these facts:—Held, that a street which is also a turnpike road is not excluded by s. 2 from the operation of ss. 68 and 144, and that the plaintiff was therefore entitled to recover compensation from the board in the manner prescribed by s. 144. Nutter v. Accrington Local Board, 48 L. J., Q. B. 487; 4 Q. B. D. 375; 40 L. T. 802—C. A. Affirmed, 43 L. T. 710—H. L. (E.)

For Cost of Raising Houses by Owners.]—The plaintiffs were owners of houses abutting on a highway which was vested in the defendants, a local board acting under 38 & 39 Vict. c. 55 (Public Health Act, 1875), and having the powers and liabilities of surveyors of highways. The abstraction of salt from a bed beneath them caused from time to time a subsidence of the ground upon which the houses and highway were situate. The houses were rebuilt in 1870 on timber, so that they might be raised by screw-jacks. In 1876 the surface of the highway in front of the houses had subsided considerably, and the houses had subsided with it. The surface of the roadway remained continuous, so that traffic could pass along it as before; but the roadway was in a curved hollow, and at the level to which it had subsided was liable to be flooded, and in fact was flooded at times, so as to render traffic impossible. The defendants put materials on the roadway, so as to make the surface immediately above the point of the lowest subsidence about four feet three inches higher than it was at the commencement of the work. The plaintiffs, having had notice from the defendants, raised their houses simultaneously with the works to the roadway, and then claimed under s. 308 of the act, and were awarded compensation for the cost of raising the houses. Having regard to the obstruction to traffic caused by floods, the raising of the road was reasonably necessary to put it in a proper state for traffic; but, excluding the consideration of floods, the raising of the road to the extent described, though a reasonable and prudent act, was not necessary to put the road into a proper state for traffic:—Held, that as the highway was vested in the defendants, no action of trespass could have been maintained by the plaintiffs, even if more materials had been placed on the road than a surveyor of highways could justify, and that the plaintiffs had no right to have the road maintained at the level to which it accidentally and recently sank; and that the works of the defendants were not done "in exercise of any of the powers" of the act within the terms of s. 308—which mean powers created by the act, and not simply powers transferred by s. 144 from the surveyor to the local board—but were done, if not strictly in pursuance of their duty as surveyors of highways, at all events in exercise of such powers as surveyors of highways have, and, consequently, that the plaintiffs were not entitled to compensation. Burgess v. Northwich Local Board, 50 L. J., Q. B. 219; 6 Q. B. D. 264; 44 L. T. 154; 29 W. R. 931; 45 J. P. 256.

b. Arbitration for.

i. Nature of.

As to Amount only.]—The 11 & 12 Vict. c. 63, s. 144, after enacting that compensation shall be made out of the rates to be levied, to all persons sustaining damage by the exercise of the powers of the act, provides, that in case of dispute as to amount, the same shall be settled by arbitration in the manner provided by the act; or, if the compensation claimed do not exceed 20*l*., the same may be ascertained by, and recovered before, justices in a summary manner. And by s. 123, arbitrators are to be appointed in case of dispute as to the amount of any compensation to be made under the provisions of the act:—Held, that, under the act, only disputes as to the amount of compensation are to be settled by arbitration, or by justices; not disputes as to the liability to make compensation at all. Reg. v. Burslem Local Board, 1 El. & El. 1077; 29 L. J., Q. B. 242; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 696; 8 W. R. 584—Ex. Ch.

A local board of health having, under 11 & 12 Vict. c. 63, s. 145, made a sewer through the land of A., he claimed compensation for the damage sustained thereby, and proceeded to appoint an arbitrator. The local board of health declined to appoint an arbitrator, on the ground that A. had not sustained any damage, because his property was benefited by the making of the sewer, and the arbitrator appointed by A. made his award ex parte:—Held, that this was a case in which the amount of damage was disputed, and not a case in which the liability to make any compensation was denied; and therefore the award was valid under s. 123. Bradby, In re, 4 El. & Bl. 1014; 3 C. L. R. 771; 24 L. J., Q. B. 239; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 778; 3 W. R. 413.

Jurisdiction of Arbitrator when Liability is disputed.]—When a claim for compensation is made against a local authority for damage caused by the exercise of the powers conferred upon them by the Public Health Act, 1875, the arbitrator has jurisdiction to hold the arbitration and make his award as to the fact of damage, and the amount of compensation under ss. 179, 180, 308, although the local authority bonâ fide dispute their liability to make compensation at all under the act. Their proper course is to raise the question of liability in their defence to an action upon the award. Brierley Hill Local Board v. Pearsall, 54 L. J., Q. B. 25; 9 App. Cas. 595; 51 L. T. 577; 33 W. R. 56; 49 J. P. 84—H. L. (E.)

ii. Appointment of Arbitrators and Umpire.

Refusal by one Party to Appoint Arbitrator.]—When an arbitrator has been appointed by one party under the provisions of the Public Health Act, 1875, ss. 179, 180, his jurisdiction is not ousted by the other party denying his liability and refusing to appear. Burgess v. Norwich Local Board, 37 L. T. 355; 26 W. R. 19.

Appointment of Arbitrators invalid—Their Appointment of Umpire.]—The Public Health Act, 1875 (38 & 39 Vict. c. 55), s. 180, enacts that "With respect to arbitrations under this act the following regulations shall be observed: (1) Every appointment of an arbitrator under this act when made on behalf of the local authority shall be under their common seal, and on behalf of any other party under his hand . . ." "(2) Every such appointment shall be delivered to the arbitrators, and shall be deemed a submission to arbitration by the parties making the same." In an arbitration under the act one arbitrator was appointed by the local authority under their common seal, and another arbitrator was appointed by the claimant, but not in writing under his hand. The arbitrators disagreed and appointed an umpire, who made an award in favour of the claimant:—Held, that the provisions of the statute not having been complied with, the appointment of the arbitrators and consequently their appointment of the umpire, and his award were invalid, and neither the original submission nor the appointment of the umpire nor the award could be made an order of court. Gifford and Bury Town Council, In re, 57 L. J., Q. B. 181; 20 Q. B. D. 368; 58 L. T. 522; 36 W. R. 468; 52 J. P. 119.

Umpire—Appointment of.]—Under 11 & 12 Vict. c. 63, s. 125, arbitrators who have failed to make their award within twenty-one days after the day upon which the last of them was appointed, may nevertheless, after the expiration of that period, appoint an umpire. Holdsworth, v. Wilson, 31 L. J., Q. B. 145; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 672; 10 W. R. 646. Affirmed on appeal, 4 B. & S. 1; 32 L. J., Q. B. 289; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 171; 8 L. T. 434; 11 W. R. 733—Ex. Ch.

iii. Award.

Time for Making—Umpire.]—Although no original limit of time is specially mentioned in the Public Health Act, 1875, within which an umpire must make his award, yet by analogy to the original limit fixed in the case of arbitrators, an original limit of twenty-one days from the date of reference to him must be inferred to have been fixed in the case of an umpire; which, under s. 180, sub-s. 9, may not be extended beyond two months. Yeadon Local Board and Yeadon Waterworks Co., In re, 58 L. J., Ch. 563; 41 Ch. D. 52; 60 L. T. 550; 37 W. R. 360—C. A.

Two arbitrators appointed under the Public Health Act, 1875, met on the 3rd of January, and extended the time for making their award till the 20th of February. On the 10th of January they appointed an umpire. On the 1st of February the arbitrators and umpire met, and were attended by the parties, but one of the arbitrators retired and refused to proceed any further, and the meeting was adjourned sine die. On the 19th of April the umpire made his award:—Held, that the award was made too late, and must be set aside:—and also, that the date from which the twenty-one days must be reckoned was the 1st of February, when the arbitrators finally disagreed, and not the 20th of February, when their powers expired. Ib.

The 11 & 12 Vict. c. 63, s. 125, places an umpire with respect to the time for making his award, in the same position as a single arbitrator; and by s. 124, a single arbitrator is required to make his award within twenty-one days after his appointment, or within such extended time as shall have been appointed by him. When therefore an umpire without extending the time for making his award, made his award after the twenty-one days from the time when he was appointed by the arbitrators had elapsed:—Held, that the award was bad. Kellett and Tranmere Local Board, In re, 34 L. J., Q. B. 87; 11 L. T. 457; 13 W. R. 207.

The 11 & 12 Vict. c. 63, s. 126, enacts that the time for making an award under the act, in the case of an umpire, shall not be extended beyond three months from the date of the day on which he shall have been appointed umpire:—Held, that the provisions of the 17 & 18 Vict. c. 125, s. 15, relating to the power of the court to enlarge the time for making an award, have no application to the case; and that, after the time limited had elapsed, the court has no power to enlarge. Ib.

Power to enlarge Time for making.]—The court cannot enlarge the time for making an award under the Public Health Act, 1875 (38 & 39 Vict. c. 55) beyond the period limited in s. 180. Mackenzie and Ascot Gas Co., In re, 55 L. J., Q. B. 309; 17 Q. B. D. 114; 34 W. R. 487.

Enforcing.]—An award of an umpire appointed under the 180th section of the Public Health Act, 1875 (38 & 39 Vict. c. 55), awarding compensation for damage to land under the 308th section of the act, cannot, although duly made a rule of court under the 180th section, be enforced by motion in the manner in which awards are ordinarily enforced. Walker and Beckenham Local Board, In re, 50 L. T. 207; 48 J. P. 264.

Right to dispute Jurisdiction—Estoppel.]—An umpire did not extend the time, nor did he make his award within twenty-one days, but he appointed a day for the reference, when both the parties attended, but the local board of health, by their clerk, protested against the proceedings. The umpire, however, proceeded with the reference. Both the claimant and the local board went into their cases, examined witnesses, and addressed the umpire:—Held, that the local board was not, by its conduct before the umpire, in going into the case and examining witnesses, and addressing the umpire, estopped from afterwards disputing the umpire's jurisdiction. Ringland v. Lowndes, 17 C. B. (N.S.) 514; 33 L. J., C. P. 337; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 850; 12 W. R. 1010—Ex. Ch.

Action on—What a Defence.]—Declaration upon an award by an umpire under the Public Health Act, 1848, ss. 123, 144, determining that there was due from the local board of health to the plaintiff 1,735*l.*, as compensation for the entry by the board on land of the plaintiff, and for surface and other damage occasioned by reason of the construction by the board of a sewer through a part of the plaintiff's land. Third plea, that the umpire proceeded on the assumption that the plaintiff would be prevented by the board from building on the land over the sewer. Fourth plea, that the umpire proceeded on the assumption that the plaintiff was entitled to compensation by reason of the sewer having been constructed in a defective manner. Sixth plea, that the umpire proceeded on the assumption that the plaintiff was entitled to compensation by reason of stenches proceeding from the sewer:—Held, that all the pleas were bad. Uttley v. Todmorden Local Board, 44 L. J., C. P. 19; 31 L. T. 445.

iv. Costs.

Action for, before Taxation.]—An award for costs generally, without ascertaining the amount, is good under 11 & 12 Vict. c. 63, s. 127, and the party to receive, after delivering his bill for the amount, may maintain an action to recover them. The party to pay may have the costs taxed, but the taxation is not a condition precedent to the other party's right to bring an action to recover them. Holdsworth v. Wilson, 4 B. & S. 1; 32 L. J., Q. B. 289; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 171; 8 L. T. 434; 11 W. R. 733—Ex. Ch. S. P., Metropolitan District Ry. v. Sharpe, 50 L. J., Q. B. 14; 5 App. Cas. 425; 43 L. T. 130; 29 W. R. 617.

Taxation where Award made a rule of Court.]—Two local authorities, whose districts were adjacent, agreed to carry out a joint sewerage scheme by an agreement, in which it was stipulated that all disputes as to the matters comprised therein should be settled by arbitration in the manner provided by ss. 179 and 180 of the Public Health Act, 1875. An award was made which provided that one of the authorities should pay to the other the costs of the reference and award, without stating the amount of such costs. Upon motion for an order directing the taxation of the costs:—Held, that as the submission to arbitration had been made a rule of court, the taxing-master was bound to tax the costs upon the application of the successful party, and that it was not obligatory to bring an action upon the award in order to enable him to do so. Chesterfield Corporation and Brampton Local Board, In re, 50 J. P. 824.

Award referred back to Deal with.]—An arbitrator or umpire appointed to determine a dispute under ss. 179 and 180 of the Public Health Act, 1875, must in his award deal with the costs of and consequent upon the reference, which are placed in his discretion by sub-s. 13 of the latter section, and if he fails to do so the court will remit the award to him for the purpose of determining the question of costs. Peake v. Finchley Local Board, 57 L. T. 882.

When Lands Compulsorily taken.] — When land has been taken compulsorily by a local board under the powers of the Lands Clauses Acts, incorporated by the Public Health Act, 1875, and an arbitration takes place to determine the amount of compensation to be paid to the owner of the land so taken, the procedure with regard to such arbitration and the right to costs are wholly governed by the provisions of the Lands Clauses Acts, and not by those of the Public Health Act with regard to arbitrations under that act. Rayner, Ex parte, 47 L. J., Q. B. 660; 3 Q. B. D. 446; 39 L. T. 232; 26 W. R. 812.

I. DEFINITION.

There are no degrees of defect of understanding, save idiotcy and lunacy. Hume v. Burton, 1 Ridgw. 211.

There is no such thing as equitable insanity, for it must be understood according to a legal sense, a deprivation of sense, and a total want of understanding to contract, or as Lord Hale describes it, a deprivation of a man's reason. 1 H. P. C. 29, 30. Non compos is the genus, and includes both idiotcy and lunacy. Rochfort v. Ely, 1 Ridgw. 532.

Accidental or adventitious insanity, as Lord Hale calls it (1 H. P. C. 29, 30), is the only other species of insanity which the law regards on inquiries of this nature, as where a person having had a competent use of reason, loses it by some distemper in the humours of the body, or by the violence of disease, as a fever, or the palsy, or the like; and this is subdivided into that which is periodical, and has lucid intervals, and that which is permanent, without intermission. This adventitious insanity was at the common law called lunacy, and it is generally called so at this day. But the words "unsound mind" and "unsound memory" having been adopted in the reign of Edward I., the one by the statute West. 2, and the other by the statute De modo levandi fines, they have been since sometimes indiscriminately used in our law to signify not only lunacy, which is a periodical madness, but also a permanent adventitious insanity, as distinguished from idiotcy. Ely's (Lord) Case, 1 Ridgw. 517, n.

As to who are lunatics, see Barnsley's Case, 2 Eq. Abr. 580; 3 Atk. 173.

Non compos mentis is now a technical term and legitimated by divers statutes. Ib.

The rules of judging here and at law, in cases of insanity, are the same. Bennet v. Vade, 2 Atk. 327; 9 Mod. 312.

Persons reduced to a state of extreme mental imbecility or dotage, whether from decay of the faculties consequential on extreme old age, intemperance, or any other cause, are persons of "unsound mind" within the meaning of 8 & 9 Vict. c. 100, and are entitled to the same protection as lunatics under that act. Reg. v. Shaw, 37 L. J., M. C. 112; 16 W. R. 913.

The term "lunatic" in general implies a person suffering from some aberration of mind—frenzy or delusion, and does not properly include one who is in an unsound state of mind arising from intemperate habits or decay of the faculties. Per Cockburn, C.J. Ib.

Semble, a man labouring under a delusion, which may at any time be brought forth if the subject of it be alluded to, though in other respects he is perfectly rational, is in law insane, and a jury would not be justified in finding that he enjoyed a lucid interval, though at the time he is not under the influence of the delusion, if there be a tendency to its recurrence. It is not necessary to constitute a lucid interval that the subject thereof should be restored to as vigorous and active a state of intellect as he might have enjoyed previously to the visitation of the lunacy. Creagh v. Blood, 2 Jo. & Lat. 509; 8 Ir. Eq. R. 434.

The existence of a delusion is the symptom or result of a diseased mind, and therefore so long as it continues, whether exhibiting itself more or less distinctly, there must still be unsoundness. Dyce Sombre, In re, 1 Mac. & G. 116; 1 Hall & Tw. 285; 13 Jur. 857.

The most satisfactory proof of recovery from an unsound state of mind is the conviction of the non-reality of the delusions which arose from the disease. Ib.

Where a testator is not shewn to be subject to frenzy or fatuity, it is necessary, for the purpose of establishing his insanity, to shew that, upon some particular subject, he was under a delusion, as to facts within his own observation; and that he actually believed in the existence of facts which a rational man, from the use of his senses under the same circumstances, would have known not to exist. Ditchburn v. Fearn, 6 Jur. 201.

And a gross exaggeration of slight circumstances may amount to insane delusion, as falling within the above proposition of delusion as to facts. But a testator is not to be considered insane from entertaining any opinions, however unfounded or absurd: as, where he speaks of his kept mistress, who had died before him, as having been a person of "deep religious feeling." Nor from a pretended belief in non-existing facts, assumed for the purpose of deception: as, where the testator had, in October, 1832, acknowledged a child by his second wife to be his child; and yet, in a codicil to his will, dated in the same year, disowned any daughter born of his second wife; the court thinking that the testator never really believed that such child was illegitimate, but that he only threw doubts on her legitimacy for sinister purposes. Ib.

Distinction between lunacy with lucid intervals, and a state of sound mind, subject to occasional unsoundness, arising from accidental and temporary causes. J. B., In re, 1 Myl. & Cr. 538.

Distinction between unsoundness of mind and mere dulness of intellect. Harrod v. Harrod, 1 K. & J. 4; 18 Jur. 853; 2 W. R. 612.

A weak man gives a bond; if it be attended with no fraud of breach of trust, equity will not set aside the bond only for the weakness of the obligor; if he be compos mentis, equity will not measure people's understanding or capacities; no such thing as an equitable non compos, if compos at law. Osmond v. Fitzroy, 3 P. W. 130.

Difference between imbecility or idiotcy and delusion in respect of acts of business observed upon. Bannatyne v. Bannatyne, 2 Rob. Ecc. Rep. 472; 16 Jur. 864.

Person found lunatic by Foreign Jurisdiction.]—A person found a lunatic by a competent jurisdiction abroad, may be considered a lunatic here. Gillam, Ex parte, 2 Ves. J. 588; 2 Cox, 193.

Person lawfully detained as a Lunatic—Person out of the Jurisdiction.]—A "person lawfully detained as a lunatic" in s. 116 sub-s. 1 (c), of the Lunacy Act, 1890, means a person lawfully detained under the provisions of that act, and consequently within the jurisdiction, and does not include a person lawfully detained in a foreign country under the laws of that country. There is therefore no jurisdiction to appoint a receiver of the income of any such person under sub-s. 2 of that section. Watkins, In re, 65 L. J., Ch. 636; [1896] 2 Ch. 336; 74 L. T. 504; 44 W. R. 609; 60 J. P. 500—C. A.

II. LUNATIC SO FOUND.

a. Jurisdiction of Court of Lunacy.

The law relating to the jurisdiction over lunatics, their treatment, and the administration of their property is now regulated by the Lunacy Acts, 1890 & 1891 (53 Vict. c. 5; 54 & 55 Vict. c. 65), and the rules made thereunder (Rules in Lunacy, 1892–93).

Crown.]—The custody of the persons and estate of idiots and lunatics was a power not originally in the crown, but was given to it by the statute, for the benefit of the subject. Hume v. Burton, 1 Ridgw. 224. And see 2 Inst. 14.

The foundation on which commissions of lunacy, out of chancery, are grounded, are these: by the common law, the king, as parens patriæ, shall have the care of the persons and personal estates of those who, from their want of understanding, are incapable of taking care of themselves; and for this reason, the king's committee shall, by the common law, have the custody of the persons and personal estates of all idiots and lunatics, to the end that provision may be made against their wasting their properties, or their injuring their own persons, or those of their fellow-subjects. And by statute De Prerog. Reg. 17 Ed. 2, cc. 9 & 10, the king shall have the real estates of idiots to his own use, only finding them necessaries, and he shall provide for the safe keeping of the real estates of lunatics, so that they shall have a competent maintenance, and the residue shall be kept for their use, to be delivered to them when they have recovered their memory, and the king shall take nothing to his own use. Ely's (Lord) Case, 1 Ridgw. 518.

Every person who has attained the usual age of discretion, is presumed in law to be of sound mind, until the contrary is proved, 1 H. P. C. 33; and in order to come at this proof the practice formerly was, on a petition to the Lord Chancellor, suggesting idiotcy or lunacy in a particular person of a competent age, and verified by affidavit of facts, to issue a writ to the sheriff or escheater of the county where his residence was, to try by a jury, on personal examination of the party, whether that suggestion was true or not; but now the practice is, to try these matters under a special commission of inquiry. Ib., 521.

Great seal hath care of lunatics under special appointment, and acts as commissioner. Wigg v. Tiler, 2 Dick. 552.

Distinction between the jurisdiction of the Court of Chancery, and in lunacy under a special warrant from the crown usually intrusted to the keeper of the great seal. Sherwood v. Sanderson, 19 Ves. 280; G. Coop. 108; 13 R. R. 193.

Under the statute the crown commits the care of lunatics to some great officer, not of necessity the chancellor. The warrant confers no jurisdiction, but only a power of administration.

Oxenden v. Compton (Lord), 2 Ves. 72; 2 R. R. 131.

The jurisdiction the court exercises as to idiots and lunatics is a particular one. Whitfield, Ex parte, 2 Atk. 315.

After the court of wards was taken away, the jurisdiction over lunatics and idiots reverted back to the Court of Chancery, to whom it originally belonged. Burford Corporation v. Lenthall, 2 Atk. 553.

Jurisdiction of magistrates over lunatics only extends to poor and vagrant ones. Anon., 2 Atk. 52.

An order for payment made by the Master of the Rolls on the committee of a trustee become lunatic discharged, as such order ought to be made in the lunacy; a party in such a character being responsible only to the jurisdiction of the great seal. Ames v. Parkinson, 2 Ph. 388.

Settled Land—Lunatic Tenant for Life—Bill in Parliament—Costs of Opposition—Payment out of Corpus.]—The lords justices sitting in lunacy have jurisdiction to order the costs, charges and expenses incurred in relation to an unsuccessful opposition to a bill in parliament, affecting the estate of a lunatic tenant for life of settled land, to be paid out of the corpus of the property subject to the settlement. Blake, In re, 72 L. T. 280—C. A.

Jurisdiction of Judges of Appeal Court to make Orders in Chancery Division.]—The letter of the Lord Chancellor requesting the judges of the Court of Appeal sitting in lunacy to act as additional judges of the Chancery Division is not limited to petitions under the Trustee Acts, but applies to all applications in lunacy which require also an exercise of the jurisdiction of the Chancery Division. Platt, In re, 57 L. J., Ch. 152; 36 Ch. D. 410; 57 L. T. 857; 36 W. R. 273—C. A.

Power of Court to Bar where Tenant is Lunatic.]—The court, under its lunacy jurisdiction, has power to bar the estate tail of a lunatic tenant in tail; but it is the duty of the court so to exercise it as not to affect the rights of the persons entitled in remainder to the estate. Where a lunatic was tenant in tail of an undivided share of an estate, and an action was brought for the partition of the estate, the court, under the 6th section of the Partition Act, 1868, authorised the committee of the lunatic to request a sale and to join in conveying the estate to the purchaser, but directed that the proceeds of the sale should be subject to the same uses as the lunatic's estate was subject to before the sale. Pares, In re, Lillingston v. Pares, 12 Ch. D. 333; 41 L. T. 574; 28 W. R. 193—C. A.

Transfer of Fund paid in under Trustee Relief Act.]—Where a person who has been found lunatic is entitled to a fund which has been paid into court under the Trustee Relief Act, a petition may be presented in chancery under the Trustee Relief Act and in lunacy, and the court has jurisdiction to make an immediate order for the transfer of the fund to the account of the lunatic. Tate, In re, 20 Ch. D. 135; 47 L. T. 2—C. A.

Charging Order—Validity of—Fund in Court.]—A charging order obtained by a judgment creditor of a lunatic does not deprive the lords justices of their power to dispose of the funds for the benefit of the lunatic, which were under their control when the charging orders were obtained. The charging orders, though not discharged, cannot be acted upon until after the lunatic's death or recovery. Plenderleith, In re, 62 L. J., Ch. 993; [1893] 3 Ch. 332; 2 R. 625; 69 L. T. 325; 42 W. R. 224; 58 J. P. 164—C. A.

Appointment of New Trustees—Order authorising Execution of Power on behalf of Lunatic by appointing two named Persons — Vesting Order.]—Where a person entitled to a life interest under a settlement of stock who has the power to appoint new trustees of such settlement in the event of the death of any trustee, becomes of unsound mind, there is jurisdiction on the death of the trustees to make an order authorising another person to exercise such power on behalf of such person by appointing two named persons as new trustees and vesting in them when appointed the right to call for a transfer of the stock. Such orders should in future be accompanied by a certificate of the master that the deed of appointment had been duly executed. The jurisdiction to make such an order is given by the Lunacy Acts, the power to appoint being a fiduciary one. Bowmer, In re (3 De G. & J. 658) and Sheat's Settlement, In re (42 Ch. D. 522), approved. Shortridge, In re, 64 L. J., Ch. 191; [1895] 1 Ch. 278; 12 R. 81; 71 L. T. 799; 43 W. R. 257; 63 J. P. 38—C. A.

Bankruptcy — Property of Lunatic.]—The court in lunacy has no power to deal with funds which are under the control of the bankruptcy court. Farnham, In re, 65 L. J., Ch. 456; [1896] 1 Ch. 836; 74 L. T. 214; 44 W. R. 465; 3 Manson, 123; 60 J. P. 389—C. A.

—— Inquisition—Subsequent Adjudication in Bankruptcy—Void Gift by Lunatic—Title of Trustee in Bankruptcy — Maintenance of Lunatic.]—Quære, whether a person found lunatic by inquisition can be adjudicated a bankrupt, otherwise than under the direction of the committee acting under the order of the judge in lunacy. Where a lunatic so found by inquisition was subsequently adjudicated a bankrupt, the lords justices, assuming that the adjudication was valid, and in exercise of the power given by ss. 117, 120 of the Lunacy Act, 1890, to dispose of the lunatic's property for his maintenance and otherwise, refused to hand over to the trustee in bankruptcy certain property of the lunatic in court which had been originally claimed by the committee, the wife of the lunatic, as a gift to her prior to the inquisition, but which gift was void under s. 47 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1883, by reason of its having been made within two years of the adjudication in bankruptcy. The gift being void, the property reverted to the donor, i.e. the lunatic, and as such it vested in the trustee subject to the jurisdiction of the judge in lunacy. Sanguinetti v. Stuckey's Banking Co. ([1895)] 1 Ch. 176) approved. Farnham, In re, 64 L. J., Ch. 717; [1895] 2 Ch. 799; 12 R. 554; 73 L. T. 231; 3 Manson, 109—C. A.

—— Sufficiency of—Grant of Lands in Ireland.]—Inquisition taken in England not sufficient to found grant of lands in Ireland. Re Chandos (Duke), 1 Sch. & Lef. 301.

Order of Reference.]—The vice-chancellor may direct the reference to the master, in the first instance, in the case of a lunatic trustee or mortgagee. But the order upon the master's report should be made by the Lord Chancellor. Anon., 5 Sim. 322; 3 L. J., Ch. 240.

The vice-chancellor has no authority of reference under 1 Will. 4, c. 60, with respect to a lunatic trustee. Shorrocks, In re, Wallis, Ex parte, 1 Myl. & Cr. 31.

Committal for Contempt.]—Commitment in the jurisdiction of lunacy for a contempt, by the publication of a pamphlet; ignorance of the contents will not excuse the printer. Jones, Ex parte, 13 Ves. 237.

Petition—1 Will. 4, c. 65, s. 27.]—Petition under the 1 Will. 4, c. 65, s. 27, must be entitled in the lunacy as well as in the cause. Unett v. Unett, 1 Jur. 620.

Receiver—Order for Payment by—Interest.]—Orders in lunacy, giving the receiver liberty to pay money are not within the meaning of s. 27 of 3 & 4 Vict. c. 105, so as to bear interest. Hoops v. Kingston (Lord), 11 Ir. Eq. R. 469.

Costs of Partition Action — Mortgage.]—A decree for partition was made of an estate, one share of which belonged to a lunatic as tenant in tail. It was directed that the lunatic's costs should be raised by mortgage out of the land allotted to her. The lunatic's share was, however, conveyed to her in tail, without any provision for costs. On a petition in lunacy:—Held, that the court has no jurisdiction in lunacy to authorise the committee to raise the lunatic's costs by mortgage. Bloomar, In re, 2 De G. F. & J. 154.

Practice—Foreign Affidavits.]—Foreign affidavits must be either filed or made exhibits. Hewitson, Ex parte, 1 W. R. 58.

39 & 40 Geo. 3.]—The statute 39 & 40 Geo. 3 (Lord Eldon's Act), does not apply to money paid into court in the matter of a lunatic. Verney, Ex parte, Jacob. 234.

Appeals in Lunacy.] — No appeal from a decision of the Lord Chancellor touching idiots or lunatics, except to the king in council. Sheldon v. Fortescue Aland, 3 P. Wms. 108, n.

No appeal to the house of lords lies against an order in lunacy. Rochfort v. Ely (Earl), 1 Bro. P. C. 450; 1 Ridgw. 541; 2 Ves. 72.

An appeal from orders in lunacy lies to the sovereign in council, and not to the house of lords. Lanesborough (Earl), In re, Ll. & G. 503.

The appeal in lunacy is to the king in council. Oxenden v. Compton (Lord), 2 Ves. 69, 261; 4 Bro. C. C. 231; 2 R. R. 131.

b. Commission.

1. Petition for.

9 Geo. 4, c. 41, ss. 39 & 42.]—The Lord Chancellor cannot act under the 9 Geo. 4, c. 41, ss. 39 & 42, on petition. Knight, In re, 9 L. J. (o.s.) Ch. 230.

Service.]—Where the next of kin of a lunatic are unknown, a petition in lunacy ought to be served, not on the solicitor to the treasury, but on the attorney-general. Bourke, In re, 2 De G. J. & S. 426.

In a case where there are no next of kin of the alleged lunatic, it is not necessary to serve the attorney-general on behalf of the crown before the inquisition is returned. Earl, In re, 1 Jur. 524.

Petitions in the matter of a person found an idiot must be served on the attorney-general. Watson, Ex parte, Jacob. 161.

Hearing—Right of Pre-audience.]—Petition in lunacy may be heard out of its turn when it relates to the person of the lunatic, or to his estate, if his estate be in danger. Otherwise it forms no exception to the regular course of proceedings. Anon., 1 Moll. 160.

Where two petitions in the same matter are answered on the same day, that which is first presented is entitled to pre-audience. Brookman, In re, 1 Mac. & G. 199; 1 Hall & Tw. 435.

Where two petitions are presented in the same matter, and answered by the Lord Chancellor on the same day, that which is first lodged in the secretary's office is entitled to be first opened. Ib.

Amendment.]—In lunacy, any order, which the circumstances shewn by the evidence render expedient, may be made without an amendment of the petition. Stair, In re, 1 Coop. t. Cott. 227.

When Pending—Restraining Lunatic—Protecting Property.]—Between the presentation of a petition for an inquiry in the case of an alleged lunatic and the official finding, he may be restrained by the court from leaving the jurisdiction, and his property may be protected from any disposition or misuse by which the purpose of the inquiry might be frustrated, but this interference, being provisional and only allowed as subservient to the investigation, cannot co-exist with an order prohibiting the prosecution of the latter. Lawler, In re, Walsh, Ex parte, Ir. R. 8 Eq. 506.

The court will protect the property of a supposed lunatic, in the interval between the presenting of a petition for a commission of lunacy and the finding of the jury; but it will at the same time take care that ample means for resisting the commission be furnished to those who act in the inquiry on the alleged lunatic's behalf. Holmes, In re, 4 Russ. 186; 28 R. R. 42.

—— Protection to Person of alleged Lunatic.]—Protection will be granted to the person of the alleged lunatic pending inquiry. Naylor, In re, 1 N. R. 173—L.JJ.

Order for Visitors in Lunacy to see the Lunatic.]—A petition for an inquiry into the state of mind of an alleged lunatic having been presented, and disputes having arisen as to the terms under which access of medical witnesses should be allowed, the court made an order that two of the visitors in lunacy should see the alleged lunatic and report to the court. ——, In re, or X. Y. Z., In re, 18 Ch. D. 26; 45 L. T. 97—C. A.

Medical Witnesses.] — When the medical witnesses for the alleged lunatic had seen her alone, it was held that they were not entitled to be present when the medical witnesses for the petitioner saw her. Ib.

—— Keeper of Private Asylum.]—A certificate of lunacy will not be received, if given by a physician who keeps a private lunatic asylum. Anon., Dr. 286 ; 6 Ir. Eq. R. 389.

Issue directed to be tried before Judge of High Court.]—When an issue is directed by an order in lunacy to try the question of the insanity of an alleged lunatic before a judge of the High Court of Justice under the Lunacy Regulation Act, 1862, s. 4, it is not necessary to commence the proceedings by a writ of summons, the order for the issue being sufficient to give jurisdiction to the judge. Scott, In re, 54 L. J., Ch. 194 ; 27 Ch. D. 116 ; 32 W. R. 801.

Administration Action—Reference to Chambers to Inquire into Sanity of Defendant.]—A testator left certain property to trustees for the benefit of the defendant, an infant, who from evidence appeared to be of weak intellect. The trustees filed a bill to carry the trusts of the will into execution, and moved under the 16th section of the 15 & 16 Vict. c. 86, for a reference to chambers to inquire into the state of defendant's mind, the object being to save expense of a commission of lunacy. The court, in exercising a discretion given by the 16th section of the act, refused the motion. Adams v. Smyth, 22 L. J., Ch. 968.

Issue established by two Verdicts.] — Issue directed as to lunacy is established by two verdicts. Holyland, Ex parte, 11 Ves. 10 ; 8 R. R. 67.

Sale of Stock pending Inquiry.]—Method by which an alleged lunatic residing abroad may obtain a sale of stock standing in his name pending an inquiry as to his sanity. Naylor, In re, 1 N. R. 173—L.JJ.

2. Issue of.

When Directed—Primâ facie Case of Insanity.] —On a petition for a commission of lunacy, Lord Chancellor requires all the facts and evidence to be laid before him, and a case to be made amounting at least to a probability of insanity. The mere issuing a commission may produce consequences highly detrimental, and it is not to issue without great circumspection, Lord Chancellor interposing to give directions personally to physicians to visit the supposed lunatic, and afterwards to consult with them apart, it being almost the only case in which the judge is justified and bound to use private means of obtaining information ; the expenses to be borne by the fund if it comes into the possession of the crown, by the person who is the subject of inquiry being found a lunatic. Persse, Ex parte, 1 Moll. 219.

—— Imbecility.] — The jurisdiction of the chancellor to grant a commission in the nature of a writ de lunatico inquirendo, is not confined to cases of mere lunacy. The court will extend its protection where, through imbecility of mind, the party is incapable of managing his own affairs. Monaghan, In re, 3 Jo. & Lat. 258 ; 9 Ir. Eq. R. 253.

The commission of lunacy is not confined to strict insanity, but is applied to cases of imbecility of mind, to the extent of incapacity from any cause, as disease, age, or habitual intoxication. Ridgeway v. Darwin, 6 Ves. 65 ; 6 R. R. 227.

—— Old Age.]—The commission of lunacy is applicable to incapacity from cause distinct from lunacy, as old age ; but the return, if not in the words of the commission, must have equivalent words, and in such a case the proper return is, that the party is of unsound mind, so that he is not sufficient for the government of himself, &c. Ogle, Ex parte, 15 Ves. 112.

One, through great age, being deprived of his memory, and become almost non compos mentis, was admitted to answer by his guardian, in regard the matter in question being small ; but had the value been considerable, the regular way would have been to have taken out a commission of lunacy, and have got a committee assigned, by Lord Talbot. Anon., cited in Sheldon v. Aland, 3 P. Wms. 11, n.

—— Incapacity to manage Affairs.] — To support a commission in nature of writ de lunatico inquirendo, it is sufficient that party is incapable of managing his own affairs. Gibson v. Jeyes, 6 Ves. 273 ; 5 R. R. 295.

—— Discretion—Benefit of Lunatic.]—Commission of lunacy the subject of discretion, regulated solely by the benefit of the lunatic, with reference to the care of his person and property ; not of course, therefore, upon the mere fact of lunacy. Tomlinson, Ex parte, Broadhurst, Ex parte, 1 V. & B. 57 ; 12 R. R. 191.

—— Protection of Person or Estate.] — In determining whether it is proper that a commission of lunacy should issue, the court is governed solely by the consideration of what is necessary for the protection of the person and property of the party, and has no regard to the possible result of the commission upon the validity of his antecedent acts, or to the motives which have actuated the proceedings. J. B., In re, 1 Myl. & Cr. 538.

A commission of lunacy refused where the lunatic did not require the protection of the court either for himself or his property ; the object of the petitioner being to obtain a maintenance out of the estate. Clare, In re, 3 Jo. & Lat. 571.

—— On Application of Stranger.] — Commission of lunacy in a proper case, granted upon the application of a stranger, and without regard to his motive ; the lunatic being a natural child, and his mother opposing it. Ogle, Ex parte, 15 Ves. 112.

This court will, on the application of a stranger, issue a commission of lunacy, where the particular circumstances of the case are such as to warrant its interference for the protection of the alleged lunatic's person or property. ——, In re, 23 L. T. (o.s.) 123.

Ill-treatment by the nearest relatives is a ground for granting a commission to strangers —and the former will be compelled to pay the costs occasioned by their opposition. Smith, In re, 1 Russ. 348.

Principle on which Commission Issued.]—Upon a petition presented for an inquiry into the state of mind of an alleged lunatic, the well-being and happiness of the lunatic, as well as the security of his property, are taken into consideration; and when these points are left in obscurity the court will direct further inquiries before issuing a commission. Holbyn, In re, Peter, Ex parte, 29 L. T. 305.

Against whom — Non-resident Owners.] — Commission of lunacy against a person who was at St. Venant in France, ordered to be executed in Essex, where his mansion-house is. Southcote, Ex parte, Ambl. 109; 2 Ves. 401.

Upon a petition for inquiry into the alleged lunacy of S., who was resident in Australia, but whose property was wholly situate in England, the court ordered an inquiry before a jury in Middlesex, and gave permission to the petitioners to take proper steps to bring him to England. Scott, In re, 22 W. R. 748.

—— Service out of Jurisdiction.]—Where an inquiry was directed concerning the lunacy of an alleged lunatic resident abroad, and whose presence was dispensed with, service of the order to that effect was directed to be made upon her and upon her stepfather with whom she was living, by registered letter. Lanwarne, In re, 46 L. T. 668; 30 W. R. 759—C. A.

—— Aliens.]—A commission of lunacy may issue against an alien. The domicile of the party against whom a commission of lunacy is applied for, is not material to the question of jurisdiction, though it may be material to the question of discretion; if, for instance, the party has come here for a short time or for a particular purpose. Bariatinski (Princess), In re, 1 Ph. 374; 13 L. J., Ch. 69; 8 Jur. 157.

A person found a lunatic in Jamaica, where his property is situated, comes to England, accompanied by one of his committees; a commission of lunacy ought to issue against him here. Houstoun, In re, 1 Russ. 312.

A Portuguese gentleman whose domicile was in Portugal, whose property, with a very trifling exception, was in Portugal, and whose wife and only child were residing there, became lunatic in England, and had been so for some years. A petition was presented by his relations in England for an inquiry as to his state of mind. Proceedings in lunacy were at the same time taken in Portugal by his wife, and the Portuguese court issued a request to the English courts to inquire into his state of mind. The wife applied here to have an inquiry as to the time when the lunacy commenced, it being desired by the Portuguese court that such inquiry should be made in England:—Held, that the 25 & 26 Vict. c. 86, s. 3, does not take away the power of the court to direct such an inquiry where special circumstances render it desirable. Sottomaior, In re, L. R. 9 Ch. 677.

Held, that under the circumstances of the case, such an inquiry ought not to be directed, as it was not required for any purpose of the proceedings in England, and the finding might affect other parties who could not effectually intervene in the inquiry, and yet would probably be treated in Portugal as concluded by it. Ib.

—— Person Acquitted on Criminal Charge on ground of Insanity.]—When a person has been tried upon a criminal charge, and acquitted on the ground of his insanity, and was thereupon confined in a lunatic asylum under 39 & 40 Geo. 3, c. 94, the chancellor upon the application of a creditor, issued a commission of lunacy, the party being entitled to property of the value of 600*l.* Pearce, In re, 8 Jur. 89.

Notice of Issue.]—Where notice should be given of the issuing a commission for an inquest. Rex v. Daly, 1 Ves. Sen. 269.

Form of Commission.]—The form of commissions of idiotcy is now settled as arising out of the form of the writs, and they cannot be altered or adopted to any particular case, for the law only enables the judge to inquire as to the genus and species of insanity. Rochfort v. Ely (Lord), 1 Ridgw. 539.

Ita quod, &c., in commission of lunacy, are not so material as to render their omission fatal, for these words are not descriptive of unsoundness of mind, but expressive of the effect, and they are not to be found in all commissions of this sort.

Commissions of idiotcy are now settled, and cannot be altered. Ib.

Removal of Lunatic out of Jurisdiction.]—Where a lunatic had been taken out of the jurisdiction before the commission issued, an order was made that she should be brought back to England. Wykeham, In re, Turn. & R. 537.

3. Carriage of.

Claim of Wife to Preference.]—The wife of a lunatic has no preference over his children in the carriage of a commission. Each case must stand on its own circumstances; but the petition which is first presented has primâ facie the best claim. Wood, In re, 29 L. J., Ch. 54; 1 L. T. 119; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 113; 8 W. R. 70.

Person most likely to bring out Truth.]—On a contest for the carriage of a commission of lunacy that party is selected who is most likely to bring out the whole truth, subject to which a preference is given to the nearest of kin. Applications by other parties for leave to attend the execution of the commission are in the discretion of the court, and mere relations are not generally allowed to do so unless they have an interest. A suggestion that a party who applied for such leave on the ground of interest, should, as the condition of its being granted, be concluded by the verdict, overruled. Nesbitt, In re, 2 Ph. 245.

Where there is a contest between several parties for the carriage of a commission of lunacy, the court considers only which of them is most likely to bring out the truth, and no regard is paid to proximity of relationship or other considerations of that kind, though these are of importance when the question is as to the appointment of a committee. In a contest for the committeeship of a lunatic, the party who has had the carriage of the commission is not on that ground entitled to any preference. When the issuing of a commission of lunacy is opposed, or the carriage of it contested, the court will not prospectively give leave to any party to propose himself as committee, in the event of the subject of the commission being found of unsound mind; but in issuing the commission will direct that no proceedings be taken for the appointment of a committee until further order. Webb, In re, 2 Ph. 10.

Nearest Relations preferred.]—The nearest relations, though opposing a commission of lunacy, shall have the carriage of it, if granted, unless some reason to the contrary. Tomlinson, Ex parte, 1 V. & B. 57; 12 R. R. 191.

Brother preferred to Wife.]—In a competition between the brother and the wife of an alleged lunatic for the carriage of the commission, the Lord Chancellor gave a preference to the brother, on the ground that, in the particular case, the wife had an interest in preventing the proof of the lunacy being carried back beyond a certain period. Whittaker, In re, 4 Myl. & Cr. 441; 8 L. J., Ch. 313; 3 Jur. 693.

Maternal Aunt preferred to Alien Half-brother.]—Where a commission of lunacy issued against a lady, who was the daughter of a Russian nobleman by an English lady, and who had always resided in England, the carriage of the commission was given to the maternal aunt of the lunatic in preference to her half-brother who was an alien, although, if the lunacy was not shewn to have begun before a particular time, the aunt would be benefited by a will made by the lunatic; but leave was given for the brother to attend the execution of the commission, and to produce and cross-examine witnesses. Bariatinski, In re, 13 L. J., Ch. 69.

Secretary of Lunatics' Friend Society preferred to Next of Kin.]—The carriage of a commission of lunacy given to the secretary of the Lunatics' Friend Society in preference to the next of kin of the lunatic. Anstie, In re, 1 Mac. & G. 200; 1 Hall & Tw. 313.

Priority of Petition.]—The priority of petition for a commission de lunatico inquirendo gives a primâ facie right to the carriage of it when issued. Wood, In re, 1 De G. F. & J. 142; 29 L. J., Ch. 54; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 113; 1 L. T. 119; 8 W. R. 70.

Where two petitions are presented for a commission of lunacy, and the only question between the parties is, which should have the carriage of the commission, those who first presented their petition will be entitled to it; and the fact that a power of attorney was given by the lunatic to one of such last-named petitioners will not militate against him. Ib.

Two petitions for a commission of lunacy were presented, one by the wife of a lunatic, the other by a nephew jointly with his wife, who was the daughter of the lunatic by a former marriage. The petition of the nephew and his wife was the earlier in date:—Held, that a wife is not entitled to any preference over a child of the alleged lunatic, as to the conduct of proceedings under a commission of lunacy, and that it not being shewn that there was any impropriety on the part of the nephew and daughter, or that the petition of the wife was preferable, the conduct of the proceedings ought to be given to the nephew and daughter as having presented the earlier petition. Ib.

4. Execution of.

Procedure prior to Inquiry—Commission not acted upon.]—Lunacy commission kept back for several years, and not acted upon, is a contempt, and will be dismissed with costs. Anon., 2 Atk. 52.

—— Order for Medical Examination.]—A master in lunacy has jurisdiction, under s. 26 of the Lunacy Act, 1891, to issue a writ of attachment to enforce an order requiring the attendance of an alleged lunatic for medical examination; but in ordinary cases it is better to refer the matter to the court. Bathe, In re, or B., In re, 61 L. J., Ch. 446; [1892] 1 Ch. 459; 66 L. T. 38; 40 W. R. 369—C. A.

—— Report—Right of alleged Lunatic to see.]—The medical examination of an alleged lunatic, which the master has power to order under s. 26, sub-s. 2, of the Lunacy Act, 1891, may be made by a medical practitioner appointed to report to the court, or by one who will see the alleged lunatic in the interest of the petitioner, and with a view to being called as a witness by him at the inquisition. In the former case the medical practitioner would have to make a report to the court; in the latter, he is not obliged to make any written report at all, and if he does make one, and send it to the petitioner's solicitor, it is in the nature of a proof of the evidence that he is to give, and the alleged lunatic has no right to see it before the inquisition. Bathe, In re, or B., In re, 61 L. J., Ch. 487; [1892] 3 Ch. 194; 67 L. T. 62—C. A.

—— Power of Commissioners to summon Witnesses.]—Commissioners of lunacy have power of summoning witnesses as incident to their office. Lund, Ex parte, 6 Ves. 783; 6 R. R. 45.

Production of Lunatic.]—Where the husband was a lunatic, the wife, though an Irish peeress, committed for not producing him. Wenman's (Lord) Case, 1 P. Wms. 701.

Prosecution of Inquiry.]—An alleged lunatic is entitled of right to have an inquiry which has been ordered prosecuted at once, or to have the order for such inquiry discharged. Naylor, In re, 1 N. R. 173—L.JJ.

An inquiry ordered before the above act came into force ought to be prosecuted before a master in lunacy—not before a judge of a common law court. Ib.

Place at which Commission should be executed.]—The rule is not inflexible that an inquiry by a jury as to the state of mind of an alleged lunatic must take place near his place of residence, and there being reason to believe that a strong local feeling as to the proceedings existed in the neighbourhood where the alleged lunatic resided, the inquiry was directed to be held in London. ——, In re, or X. Y. Z., In re, 18 Ch. D. 26; 48 L. T. 97.

A commission of lunacy against a person who was at St. Venant in France, ordered to be executed in Essex, where his mansion-house is. Southcote, Ex parte, Ambl. 109; 2 Ves. 401.

A commission of lunacy is properly directed to the place where the alleged lunatic has generally resided, although a great many witnesses, to be produced and examined in the inquiry, reside at another place, of which the lunatic is a native. Jephson, In re, 2 Jur. 200.

Place at which Commission should be executed.]—To avoid inconvenience and expense, a commission was directed to issue into Middlesex, although the supposed lunatic was residing in Herts. Waters, In re, 2 Myl. & Cr. 38.

Commission of lunacy, to ascertain when lunacy commenced, directed to be executed in the neighbourhood in which the lunatic resided prior to his lunacy, and as alleged by one party, not in that to which he had been since conveyed; although evidence was given of his inability to bear removal. Smith, Ex parte, 1 Swanst. 4.

When lunatic is unfit to go before jury, and the whole of jury cannot go to lunatic, one or two go and examine, and report to the rest his state and condition. Ib. 7.

Commission of lunacy uniformly executed at the residence of the party; for that purpose his mansion-house, if none, his last place of abode; no instance of exception where he was within the realm; convenience of witnesses, &c., no ground for exception. Baker, Ex parte, 19 Ves. 340; G. Cooper, 205.

Application as to.]—A fair and reasonable application as to the execution of a commission of lunacy is not discouraged, but otherwise it will be dismissed with costs. Ward, Ex parte, 6 Ves. 579.

Order for Inquiry before Judge of the High Court.]—When an issue is directed by an order in lunacy to try the question of the insanity of an alleged lunatic before a judge of the High Court of Justice under the Lunacy Regulation Act, 1862, s. 4, it is not necessary to commence the proceedings by a writ of summons, the order for the issue being sufficient to give jurisdiction to the judge. Scott, In re, 54 L. J., Ch. 194; 27 Ch. D. 116; 51 L. T. 735; 32 W. R. 801—C. A.

An inquisition of lunacy is primâ facie evidence of lunacy; but where the question of sanity is raised in a cause, the parties disputing the lunacy are ordinarily as of right entitled to an issue. Elliott v. Inse, 5 W. R. 482.

Right to Jury.] — The right of an alleged lunatic to demand a jury is confined to the original inquiry. Talbot, In re, 51 L. J., Ch. 360; 20 Ch. D. 269; 45 L. T. 730; 30 W. R. 386—C. A.

Compromise of Commission.]—The plaintiff being confined in a lunatic asylum, and an inquisition under a commission of lunacy being held upon her, and attended by her counsel, before any verdict was given an agreement was signed by her counsel, and counsel attending for the promoters of the commission, that she should be released from confinement, that certain arrangements should be made as to property which she claimed, that the title-deeds relating thereto, which had been taken from her when she was confined, and now were in the hands of the promoters, should be given up, and placed in the hands of H., and that the commission should be superseded. Accordingly the plaintiff was released, and the deeds handed over to H. The plaintiff then brought detinue against H. for the deeds; an interpleader rule was obtained on the claim of the promoters, by which the proceedings were stayed, and a feigned issue brought by the plaintiff against the promoters, to try whether she was entitled to the deeds notwithstanding the arrangement:—Held, first, that on the trial of such issue it was not necessary that the plaintiff should prove her title to the deeds, the question being only whether the agreement prevented her from insisting on her title. Cummings v. Ince, 11 Q. B. 112; 17 L. J., Q. B. 105; 12 Jur. 331.

Held, secondly, that it was rightly left to the jury, on evidence of the state of the plaintiff's mind and health at the time of the agreement being made, to say whether the consent of her counsel was obtained by constraint, and without her free will, and the jury having so found that the plaintiff was entitled to the verdict, and that the legality of the restraint, assuming it to have been legal, and the consent of counsel, furnished no conclusive proof that the agreement was not void by duress. Ib.

5. Supersedeas.

Indulgence to Lunatic.] — In the case of infants, it is the habit of the court very much to disregard form in order better to protect their interests, and in some respects lunatics are entitled to a similar privilege. This indulgence, however, is not to be granted to the same extent to a lunatic applying for a supersedeas, for he cannot at the same time assert his soundness of mind and claim the benefit of any relaxation of practice conceded to those of unsound mind. Dyce Sombre, In re, 1 Mac. & G. 116; 1 Hall & Tw. 285; 13 L. J., Ch. 335; 13 Jur. 857.

Improper Applications.]—Semble, that for the purpose of discouraging improper applications for a supersedeas, the Lord Chancellor will not adjudicate upon a case in favour of the petitioner, where it clearly appears that improper means have been used in getting up the petition. Ib.

Although the great seal may withhold a commission, if not required for the protection of person or property, where the circumstances of the case create great difficulty in ascertaining whether there exists unsoundness of mind of a character to subject the party to the operation of a commission, yet very different considerations will regulate the discretion of the court in deciding upon an application for superseding a commission which has once regularly issued. Ib.

Existence of Declared Illusion.]—Semble, a commission will not be superseded when any declared illusion continues to exist. Ib.

Costs of Unsuccessful Application.]—A petition for supersedeas having failed, the court, under the circumstances, refused to make any order as to costs, but directed the matter on this point to stand over, by way of affording a security against the repetition of the application except on proper grounds. Ib.

Where a petition for a supersedeas was presented in the name of a lunatic and was dismissed, the court refused to make any order as to costs, although it was apparent that the petition originated with third parties, the court considering that it had no power to make those parties pay the costs. Ib.

Necessity for Presence in Court of Lunatic.]—Semble, a petition to supersede a commission of lunacy will not be entertained, unless the lunatic be either personally present in court, or at least in such a situation as that he may be personally examined by the Lord Chancellor, or some one under his authority. S. C., 1 Ph. 436; 13 L. J., Ch. 335; 8 Jur. 817.

Lunatic declared Sane by Foreign Court.]—Whether, if a party who has been found lunatic escapes to a foreign country, and while resident there is pronounced by a competent tribunal to be of sound mind, the Lord Chancellor will give such credit to that decision as to entertain a petition by the party to supersede the commission, without requiring him first to return to the jurisdiction for the purpose of being personally examined, quære. Ib.

Petition—In whose Name presented.]—Petition to supersede commission of lunacy should be in the quondam lunatic's name. Stanley, Ex parte, 2 Ves. 25.

Recovery or Pressing Circumstances.]—Commission superseded on the ground of the recovery of the party, or the existence of pressing circumstances. Logan, In re, 1 Jur. 509.

After Verdict personal Interview required.]—The Lord Chancellor will not in general supersede a commission of lunacy after verdict, without seeing the lunatic. A commission cannot be superseded as to the person of the lunatic, and at the same time continued in force against the parties accountable for the lunatic's estate. But a lunatic who has recovered will be allowed, without superseding the commission, to have the control of his fortune, and to superintend the prosecution of accounts against accounting parties, without the intervention of the committee. Gordon, In re, 2 Ph. 242.

Sufficiency of Mental Recovery.]—To supersede commission, it is not necessary that the mind should be restored to its original state: competence to common purposes, as to make will of personal estate, is sufficient. But the absence of the disorder, especially if of a dangerous tendency, must be satisfactorily proved by evidence of persons having competent knowledge of the whole subject, not only as to the present state of the party, but with reference to all the former evidence. Holyland, Ex parte, 11 Ves. 10; 8 R. R. 67.

An application of a lunatic for a supersedeas of the commission of lunacy, on the ground of his recovery, will not at once be granted on evidence of the lunatic no longer exhibiting unsoundness of mind, but will be ordered to stand over until it can be seen what will be the effect of removing the restraint imposed by the existence of the commission. Blackmore, In re, 1 De G. J. & S. 84; 1 N. R. 187; 32 L. J., Ch. 436; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 90; 8 L. T. 264, 476.

Costs of superseded Commission.]—After the finding of a jury upon a traverse of an inquisition of lunacy, that the alleged lunatic was of a sound mind, the court acting in the jurisdiction in lunacy has no authority, under the 6 Geo. 4, c. 53, or otherwise, to direct payment out of the property of the alleged lunatic of any costs incurred with reference to the commission, although the verdict upon the traverse does not negative the lunacy at the time of the original inquisition. Loveday, Ex parte, 1 De G. M. & G. 275; 21 L. J., Ch. 231; 16 Jur. 95.

Nor does a petition of the alleged lunatic for a supersedeas and the delivery up of his papers and other property by the committee and the petitioners for the commission, entitle them to their costs as part of the terms on which such an order should be made, even where the court has, by an order in the lunacy made before the verdict on the traverse, directed the costs to be taxed. Ib.

After a person has been found lunatic by inquisition, but before any committees had been appointed or any report as to his property made, he recovered his reason, and obtained an order for a supersedeas:—Held, that the court had no jurisdiction to make any order against him for payment of certain expenses incurred by his father in relation to the lunacy; but that the father must bear his own costs, or bring his action. ——, In re, 5 Jur. (N.S.) 662; 7 W. R. 471.

Where a lunatic who had recovered, petitioned for a supersedeas of the commission:—Held, that the court could not order him to pay the expenses incurred with reference to it. Anon., 4 De G. & J. 103.

Irish Inquisition—Transcript of Record—Jurisdiction of English Court.]—Where an order in lunacy has been made in Ireland by the court having jurisdiction for that purpose, and a transcript of the record has, under the provisions of s. 25 of the Lunacy Regulation Act, 1853, been transmitted to this country, the English court must treat the order as a binding order, and has no jurisdiction to entertain an application either for the purpose of setting aside the proceedings in Ireland, or for a supersedeas. Any such application must be made to the court which originally made the order. Talbot, In re, 51 L. J., Ch. 360; 20 Ch. D. 269; 45 L. T. 730; 30 W. R. 386—C. A.

c. Inquisition.

1. Procedure upon.

Liberty to attend Proceedings—Alleged Lunatic.]—Privilege of the party who is the subject of commission of lunacy, to be present at the execution. Ogle, Ex parte, 15 Ves. 112.

—— Persons entitled under Settlement executed by alleged Lunatic.]—Upon an undertaking to abide by any order the court might make, both as to the costs of the petitioners and the costs as far as they might be increased by their attendance at the inquisition, the court allowed an application by persons interested under a settlement executed ten years back by an alleged lunatic, for leave to attend by counsel at the inquisition, the object of the commission being to carry the lunacy back over a period of thirty-five years. Richards, In re, 1 De G. M. & G. 715; 21 L. J., Ch. 739; 16 Jur. 508.

—— Mortgagee.]—Where a mortgagee presented a petition against the issuing of a commission of lunacy, praying, in the alternative, that if the commission issued, she might be at liberty to attend it, the court refused the prayer of the petition, unless she consented to be bound by the result of the inquiry. Watts, In re, 1 Ph. 512; 14 L. J., Ch. 241.

An application by a mortgagee of an alleged lunatic's estate to be allowed to attend by counsel at the inquisition refused, the applicant declining to be bound by the result of the proceedings. Snook, Ex parte, 1 Ph. 512.

—— Wife.]—Liberty given to the wife to attend by counsel the execution of a commission of lunacy against her husband. Parkinson, In re, 5 Jur. 547.

—— Person interested under Will.]—A stranger in blood to a lunatic, who is interested under a will made by the lunatic before the commencement of the lunacy, will not be allowed to attend the proceedings in the lunacy. Scarlett, In re, L. R. 8 Ch. 739; 29 L. T. 232; 21 W. R. 717.

—— Attorney-General — Lunatic Illegitimate.]—A lunatic, who was illegitimate and unmarried, was resident in Lancashire, and part of her property consisted of copyholds held of the duchy of Lancaster:—Held, that the attorney-general of the duchy of Lancaster was not entitled to attend the proceedings in the lunacy, the Queen's rights being sufficiently represented by the Queen's attorney-general, who had leave to attend. Kershaw, In re, 21 Ch. D. 613; 48 L. T. 51; 31 W. R. 130—C. A.

—— Next of Kin.]—The question as to whether or not next of kin shall have liberty to attend the proceedings upon such an inquiry is a matter of general practice, and is therefore left to the discretion of the master. Lanwarne, In re, 46 L. T. 668; 30 W. R. 759.

Where an inquiry was directed concerning the lunacy of an alleged lunatic resident abroad, and whose presence was dispensed with, service of the order to that effect was directed to be made upon her and upon her stepfather, with whom she was living, by registered letter. Ib.

Inquiry when Lunacy commenced.] — The Lunacy Regulation Act, 1862, s. 3, takes away the power existing under the Lunacy Regulation Act, 1853, s. 47, of directing an inquiry from what time an alleged lunatic has been of unsound mind. Opinion expressed by James, L.J., in Sottomaior, In re (L. R. 9 Ch. 677), dissented from. Danby, In re, 55 L. J., Ch. 583; 30 Ch. D. 320; 53 L. T. 850; 34 W. R. 125—C. A.

Inquiry to be prosecuted with Despatch.]—An alleged lunatic is entitled of right to have an inquiry which has been ordered prosecuted at once, or to have the order for such inquiry discharged. Sect. 4 of the Lunacy Regulation Act, 1862 (25 & 26 Vict. c. 86), s. 4, is prospective only. Naylor, In re, 1 N. R. 173—L.JJ.

An inquiry ordered before this act came into force ought to be prosecuted before the master in lunacy, not before a judge of a common law court. Ib.

Return to Inquisition — Irregularity.] — Omission of the date in the commissioner's return of an inquisition in lunacy remedied. Langham, In re, 1 Jur. 281.

Upon a search of precedents, it was held no objection to the return to an inquisition finding a person lunatic, that it does not state that the lunatic has or has not lucid intervals. Wragg, Ex parte, 5 Ves. 450.

Loss of Commission after Inquisition found.]—On the accidental loss of a commission of lunacy after inquisition found, order for a duplicate commission, and the inquisition (which was recovered) to be annexed to it. Rain, Ex parte, 19 Ves. 589.

Pending Inquisition—Lunatic restrained from leaving Jurisdiction.]—Between the presentation of a petition for an inquiry in the case of an alleged lunatic and the official finding, he may be restrained by the court from leaving the jurisdiction, and his property may be protected from any disposition or misuse by which the purpose of the inquiry might be frustrated, but this interference, being provisional and only allowed as subservient to the investigation, cannot co-exist with an order prohibiting the prosecution of the latter. Marsh, Ex parte, Lawler, In re, Ir. R. 8 Eq. 506.

2. Quashing.

Commission improperly executed.]—If a commission is improperly executed, the court will grant a new commission, as a melius inquirendum does not issue in lunacy. Roberts, Ex parte, 3 Atk. 6.

Return to a commission of lunacy, that the party is so far debilitated in his mind as to be incapable of the general management of his affairs, quashed, and a new commission issued, a melius inquirendum not issuing in lunacy. Cranmer, Ex parte, 12 Ves. 445.

Under a commission of lunacy, the jury found "that the party is not a lunatic, but that partly from paralysis, and partly from old age, his memory is so much impaired, as to render him incompetent to the management of his affairs, and consequently of unsound mind, and that he has been so for the term of two years last passed." The inquisition was quashed, and a new commission was ordered to issue. Holmes, In re, 4 Rus. 182; 28 R. R. 42.

—— Misbehaviour of Commissioners.]—If the commissioners, or the jury, upon a commission of inquiry misbehave themselves, their proceedings may be set aside by the chancellor. Rochfort v. Ely (Lord), 1 Ridgw. 541.

Return to commission of lunacy, that the party is a lunatic enjoying lucid intervals, and that during such intervals he is competent to the government of himself and his affairs, quashed, and a new commission issued. Atkinson, Ex parte, Jacob. 333.

Order made for a new commission in lunacy on quashing the return on a previous commission, without presenting a second petition to the court. Bennett, In re, 1 Jur. 469.

An inquisition in lunacy having found that a person was a lunatic, and had been in the same state of lunacy from the time of her birth, the inquisition was quashed, and a new commission issued. Bruges, In re, 1 Myl. & Cr. 278.

In a case where a female was found lunatic under the christian name of Jane Eliza, and there afterwards appeared strong reason to believe that her true christian name was Elizabeth Jane, but there were no means of ascertaining the fact, the Lord Chancellor directed, there being no doubt as to the identity of the person, that an order for the transfer of stock held by trustees for the lunatic under the name of Elizabeth Jane C., and the orders upon all future proceedings should be entitled, "In the matter of Elizabeth Jane C., in the commission called Jane Eliza C." Crawford, In re, 1 Myl. & Cr. 240.

Finding on Inquisition not Conclusive.]—There is no analogy between motions for new trials and new inquiries upon commissions of idiotcy; but the finding upon the inquisition is not conclusive, for it may be executed either in law or equity. Rochfort v. Ely (Lord), 1 Ridgw. 546, 549.

So, if there has been a finding against the king, and a melius inquirendum granted, there must be an insufficient office. Ib. 547.

3. Traverse of.

Leave to Traverse a Matter of Right.]—The Lord Chancellor has no discretion as to the granting of a writ of traverse, but only a right to use due care and caution in ascertaining that it is the wish of the lunatic that it should issue, or that the party applying, when a stranger, has an interest in the question, and if he is satisfied in this respect the right to traverse the inquisition is of course, but the exercise of that right is subject to the control of the court; as where upon an examination of the lunatic it is apparent he is in a raving madness, in such case the court would not permit the traverse to issue, as it would not be apparent there had been no untrue finding, and consequently the writ would be unnecessary. The court would, under such circumstances, exercise its jurisdiction by throwing protection round the lunatic's person and property, and refuse the writ. Cumming, In re, 1 De G. M. & G. 537; 21 L. J., Ch. 753; 16 Jur. (N.S.) 483.

Whether, if the Lord Chancellor should not be otherwise able to satisfy himself on the points above mentioned, he would allow any and what evidence to be gone into respecting them, quære. Ib.

Traverse to an inquisition, finding a person lunatic, is de jure, not matter of favour. Ferne, Ex parte, 5 Ves. 833.

A traverse to the return to an inquisition finding a person lunatic is a right by law, though the Lord Chancellor is not dissatisfied with the return upon the evidence. The order was suspended for the purpose of taking the traverse. Wragg, Ex parte, 5 Ves. 450.

Traverse of a verdict of unsound mind, under a commission, being the right of the party, cannot be refused, and prevents the Crown taking the custody, and consequently allowing the costs of the proceedings, however meritorious; but they were given out of a fund of the lunatic's in court, in a cause; on the principle on which the court protects persons in a state of incapacity, though adult, and not objects of a commission, assigning guardians, &c. Sherwood v. Sanderson, 19 Ves. 280; G. Cooper, 108; 13 R. R. 193.

Persons entitled to Traverse—Lunatic.]—Leave to traverse an inquisition of lunacy if applied for by the party himself, who has been found a lunatic, is matter of right. Bridge, In re, Cr. & Ph. 338; 10 L. J., Ch. 404; 6 Jur. 69.

But, semble, the allowance of a sum of money out of the estate of the party so found lunatic towards defraying the expense of the traverse is subject to the Lord Chancellor's discretion. Ib.

The party against whom a commission of lunacy issued, on the different appearance he made upon a second inspection was allowed to traverse the inquisition. Roberts, Ex parte, 3 Atk. 7.

A man found idiot or lunatic may traverse the finding; but a finding of sanity is peremptory in the first instance. Hume v. Burton, 1 Ridgw. 213.

The Lord Chancellor refused to allow a party who had been found a lunatic under two inquisitions to traverse the second. Barnsley, Ex parte, 3 Atk. 184.

—— Husband.]—It is in the discretion of the Lord Chancellor to grant leave to any person grieved, &c., to traverse an inquisition of lunacy. Refused to the husband of the lunatic, under circumstances which made the validity of the marriage doubtful. Fust, In re, 1 Cox, 418.

—— Alienee.]—Right of alienee of lunatic to traverse. Sherwood v. Sanderson, 19 Ves. 287.

—— Person who has entered into Contract.]—Person having entered under a contract with a lunatic, permitted to traverse. Chancellor was inclined to quash the inquisition, the commission not having been executed near the place of abode, and an order that the lunatic should have due notice having been disobeyed. Hall, Ex parte, 7 Ves. 261.

—— Heir.]—Not only the lunatic but his heir also is bound upon the traverse of the inquisition. Roberts, In re, 3 Atk. 308.

—— Stranger.]—Quære, if a stranger can traverse an inquisition in lunacy. Ward, Ex parte, 6 Ves. 579.

Pending Traverse—Appointment of Committees and Execution of Grant Stayed.]—Where the court considered it expedient in the circumstances of the case that, pending a traverse, the system of personal care of the supposed lunatic should not be disturbed, and that she should continue to receive her income, the appointment of committees and the execution of the grant were not stayed on that account; but the order for the appointment and grant was qualified by the introduction of directions to the above effect. Cumming, In re, 1 De G. M. & G. 537; 21 L. J., Ch. 753, 758; 16 Jur. 483.

Procedure on Traverse—Pleading.]—Manner of pleading a traverse to an inquisition finding a person lunatic. Wragg, Ex parte, 5 Ves. 452.

—— Appearance.]—In case the commission is opposed or traversed, the person must appear coram rege concilio, which means in chancery. Southcote, Ex parte, Ambl. 109; 2 Ves. Sen. 401.

—— Cross Petitions—Right to begin.]—At the hearing of a petition and counter-petition in lunacy, the one praying the confirmation of the commissioner's report, and the other simply opposing it, the counsel for the first petition is entitled to begin. Bariatinski, In re, 1 Ph. 442; 13 L. J., Ch. 386.

A party cannot be heard against the confirmation of the master's report in lunacy, without presenting a cross petition in the nature of exceptions to the master's report. Saunders, In re, 3 Mac. & G. 219 ; 20 L. J., Ch. 618.

On a petition to confirm the report in lunacy, and a cross petition in the nature of exceptions to it, the counsel for the cross petition is to begin. Townshend, In re, 1 Ph. 804 ; 16 L. J., Ch. 266.

—— Appointment of Interim Committee.]—A lady who had been found lunatic obtained leave to traverse, and no committee was appointed. Her husband, who had petitioned for the inquisition, having, before the trial of the traverse, become incapable of attending to business, the court appointed interim committees of the lady's person, with liberty to take such proceedings as to the traverse as they should think fit. Armstrong, In re, 2 De G. & J. 123.

—— Private Examination, Object of.]—The private examination for the purpose of a traverse of a verdict of lunacy under a commission, is merely to ascertain the wish of the party to exercise the right to traverse. Sherwood v. Sanderson, 19 Ves. 284 ; G. Cooper, 108 ; 13 R. R. 193.

—— Place of Trial.]—Traverse of inquisition of lunacy directed under circumstances, to be tried in a different country from that in which the subject of the inquiry had been found a lunatic. Nugent, In re, 2 Moll. 517.

Return of Traverse—Commission Superseded—Costs of Commission.]—Upon the return of the traverse to the inquisition of lunacy, finding that the party was a lunatic at the time of her marriage and at the time of taking the inquisition, but at that time (the verdict) was not a lunatic, the commission was superseded, but the Lord Chancellor doubted the propriety of such a double issue. No costs to the party taking out a commission of lunacy which is traversed with success, however meritorious the case ; the property never coming to the Crown, there is no fund. Ferne, Ex parte, 5 Ves. 832.

4. Debts and Liabilities of Lunatic.

Execution—Restraining Sale.]—Every person who intermeddles in the matter of a lunatic is intended to be interested for his advantage. Therefore, where a solicitor who had acted in some of the proceedings under a commission of lunacy, afterwards acted as attorney for a creditor of the lunatic, and issued an execution, and took his household furniture, Lord Chancellor had jurisdiction to restrain the sale ; the committee entering into security for the value of the goods, to be paid by instalments out of the saving of the income. Ball, In re, 2 Moll. 145.

Debts under £10.]—Money for the discharge of the debts of a lunatic under 10*l.* will not be directed to be paid to the solicitor, but to the committee of the lunatic. Iredale, In re, 1 H. & Tw. 254.

Lien of Solicitors.]—Where the committees of a lunatic had been authorised by the court to raise money by mortgage of his estate, but were unable to do so in consequence of some of the title deeds being in the hands of solicitors who claimed a lien upon them, but the items of their accounts were disputed, the court ordered that the mortgagee should be at liberty to pay to the committees a sufficient sum to discharge the lien on the title deeds, without prejudice to their right to have the accounts investigated. Davies, In re, 12 L. J., Ch. 456 ; 7 Jur. 589.

Restraining Action.]—Order made to restrain an action brought by an auctioneer against the solicitor in a lunacy for the amount of his bill, for appraising and selling property belonging to the lunatic, such sale having been made under the authority of the court, and the auctioneer having acted on the instructions of the solicitor, and with the sanction of the master before whom he had at first carried in his claim ; and a reference was directed for the purpose of ascertaining what would be a proper sum to be allowed him on that account. Weaver, In re, 2 Myl. & Cr. 441.

Petition by Medical Man for Payment of Balance due for Maintenance.] — A medical gentleman, in whose care a lunatic had been placed, presented a petition during her life for payment out of her estate of the balance claimed to be due to him for her maintenance :—Held, that an order for that purpose could not be made on his application ; but the committee appearing, and asking for an inquiry what was due to the petitioner, such inquiry was directed. Townshend, In re, 2 De G. J. & S. 519.

Rights of Creditors—Insolvent Estate.]—In managing the estates of lunatics the court will have regard to the maintenance and comfort of the lunatic in preference to the claims of his creditors, although the estate be insolvent. Pink, In re, 52 L. J., Ch. 674 ; 23 Ch. D. 577 ; 49 L. T. 418 ; 31 W. R. 728—C. A.

The master in lunacy made a certificate finding that the property of a lunatic produced an income of 163*l.*, and that his debts amounted to 7,000*l.*, including 250*l.* for his past maintenance in an asylum, and 374*l.* for the past maintenance of his wife and children expended by the committee :—Held, on a summons taken out under Ord. XLV. of the Lunacy Orders, 1883, on which some of the ordinary creditors appeared and claimed payment of their debts, that the expenses of past maintenance of the lunatic, his wife and children must be paid in full, that capital producing 110*l.* a year should be set aside for the lunatic's future maintenance, and that the residue should be divided among the ordinary creditors pro ratâ, who were to have a charge on the reserved capital, with liberty to apply on the lunatic's death. Ib.

No order for satisfaction of a liability of a lunatic, until information furnished shewing that enough will still be left for his maintenance. Adey, In re, 1 Coop. t. Cott. 225.

The Lord Chancellor will not aid creditors of a lunatic in obtaining payment of their debts, if such a proceeding will place the lunatic or his family in a state of want. Railton, In re, 1 Jur. 574.

Charging Order—Fund in Court—Judgment Debt.]—A charging order obtained by a judgment creditor under 1 & 2 Vict. c. 110, s. 14, and 3 & 4 Vict. c. 82, s. 1, upon stock in court in which his debtor is interested, has the same effect as if the debtor had power to charge, and had agreed to charge, the stock; the order affects the beneficial interest of the debtor in the property, and his capacity to charge ceases to be material when judgment has been properly obtained against him. Leavesley, In re, 60 L. J., Ch. 385; [1891] 2 Ch. 1; 64 L. T. 269; 39 W. R. 276—C. A.

Charging orders obtained by judgment creditors of a lunatic upon a sum of stock in court to the credit of the matter of the lunatic:—Held, to be valid and effective, and that the court in lunacy would order payment to the judgment creditors out of the stock. Ib.

—— —— Form of Order.]—Plaintiff, having obtained judgment against a defendant, a lunatic, applied for a charging order for the amount of his debt upon a sum of consols standing in the name of the postmaster-general to the credit of the lunatic. The judge in chambers made an order, charging with the payment of the debt so much of the defendant's interest in the fund "as the lords justices sitting in lunacy may deem applicable to the payment of the said judgment debt":—Held, that there was no jurisdiction to make a charging order leaving the amount to be charged to the discretion of the lords justices, and that the order must be varied by inserting the amount of the fund charged. Horne v. Fountain, 58 L. J., Q. B. 413; 23 Q. B. D. 264; 61 L. T. 510; 38 W. R. 240; 54 J. P. 37.

Payment out of Estate by way of Bounty—Moral Obligation—Promissory Note.]—The payee of a promissory note given without consideration is not, even in the administration of a solvent estate, in the same position as the payee of a voluntary bond, so as to be entitled to claim against the estate after creditors for value. A lunatic, while sane, had given a promissory note for 50,000*l.* payable in instalments of 5,000*l.* each, in discharge of what he considered was a moral obligation, and had paid three of such instalments. Upon a claim made against his estate, which was a very large one, after he had been found lunatic, by the holder of the note for the sum of 35,000*l.*, being the amount of the unpaid instalments thereon, to which claim the next of kin consented:—Held, that although, as the gift was voluntary, the payee of the note was not entitled to claim as a creditor against the lunatic's estate, the court in the exercise of its discretion would order the payment to be made thereout, by way of bounty and as in discharge of a debt of honour on the part of the lunatic, which, under the circumstances, it ought to recognise:—Held, that the application should have been made by the committee, and that he must be joined as a co-petitioner. Dawson v. Kearton (3 Sm. & G. 186), Lloyd v. Chune (2 Giff. 441), Arthur v. Clarkson (35 Beav. 458), and Richards, In re (36 Ch. D. 541), criticised. Whitaker, In re, 58 L. J., Ch. 487; 42 Ch. D. 119; 61 L. T. 102; 37 W. R. 673—C. A.

Lunacy Proceedings binding on Heir-at-law.]—Upon a reference in lunacy, it was found and reported that the sum of 413*l.* 14*s.* was due to A. B. for maintenance of the lunatic and necessaries supplied by him to the lunatic during his lunacy. The heir-at-law and next of kin of the lunatic had notice and was present at the proceedings under the reference. Before A. B received payment of the sum of 413*l.* 14*s.*, or any part of it, the lunatic died intestate, and it having been ascertained that his personal estate had been exhausted, A. B. instituted a creditors' suit against the heir-at-law for payment of his debt out of the real estate of the lunatic:—Held, that the heir-at-law was bound by the proceedings in lunacy, and that A. B. had established a sufficient primâ facie case to entitle him to a reference to the master to inquire and find whether any debt was due to him from the estate of the lunatic. Wentworth v. Tubb, 12 L. J., Ch. 61; 6 Jur. 980. Affirming, S. C., 1 Y. & C. C. C. 171; 5 Jur. 1150.

Committee of Lunatic's Business—Personal Liability.]—A committee appointed by the court to carry on the business of a lunatic cannot be made personally liable on contracts entered into in course of trading, unless it can be shewn that the goods were supplied on his credit. He is, therefore, in a different position as regards personal liability to that of a manager and receiver appointed by the court, being, in fact, merely a bailiff or trustee of the business. In the event of the assets of the business not being for a time available to pay the creditors, the committee cannot be compelled to pay them out of his own pocket, repaying himself at a later time from the funds of the business when the assets come to hand. Isaacs v. Chinery, 74 L. T. 320.

5. Assignees of Next of Kin.

Stop Order.—Order in the nature of a stop order granted on the application of the assignee of the sole next of kin of a lunatic. Moore, In re, 1 Mac. & G. 103.

Order in the nature of a stop order granted on the application of the assignees of the interest of the sole next of kin of a lunatic, but dispensing with notice to the assignees of any applications in the matter except those respecting payments to the next of kin. Pigott, In re, 3 Mac. & G. 268.

The court will not make an order in the nature of a stop order on the estate of a lunatic in favour of an assignee of the next of kin. Wilkinson, In re, 44 L. J., Ch. 328; L. R. 10 Ch. 73; 23 W. R. 51.

An application by one of the next of kin of a lunatic, and the mortgagee of his presumptive share of the lunatic's estate, for an order directing the paymaster-general not to transfer the mortgagor's presumptive share of certain funds in court to anyone claiming under him without notice to the mortgagee, was refused. Ib.

6. Death of Lunatic, Effect of.

Lunacy Jurisdiction terminated on Death.]—The jurisdiction in lunacy terminates with the life of the person found a lunatic, and no order can be made afterwards, except orders incidental to the authority to make the receiver account and take the fund into safe custody. Barry, In re, Moll. 414.

Real Estate—Interference between Adverse Claimants.]—After the death of a lunatic there is no jurisdiction in lunacy to interfere between adverse claimants to the real estate of the lunatic, although there is jurisdiction to restrain the committee of the estate from taking advantage of his position to assert his own claims as heir-at-law, or to prejudice the rights of adverse claimants. Carrow v. Ferrior, Ferrior, In re, 37 L. J., Ch. 571, n.; L. R. 3 Ch. 175; 18 L. T. 65; 16 W. R. 298.

Therefore, where two rival claimants filed bills praying for a receiver of the real estates pending the decision of their rights, and then presented petitions in lunacy for the appointment of a receiver, the court refused the application in lunacy and also declined to exercise its original jurisdiction in chancery for that purpose, upon an interlocutory application in the suits. Ib.

—— Appointment of Receiver pending Litigation.]—The court will not grant a receiver of real estate pending litigation between adverse claimants where the claims are merely legal, notwithstanding the possession at the time of filing the bill is vacant. Carrow v. Ferrior, 37 L. J., Ch. 569; L. R. 3 Ch. 719; 18 L. T. 806; 16 W. R. 454, 922.

—— Heir—Order for Possession.]—On the application of the heir after the death of the lunatic, the court will order the committee to give up the possession, and not put the heir to his ejectment, supposing his title as heir admitted. Fitzgerald, In re, 2 Sch. & Lef. 439; 1 Ll. & G. 20.

A lunatic was so found by the court to be seised in fee of certain real estate, and certain persons were found to be his heirs. On his death intestate:—Held, that the committee of the person who had been put by the court into possession of certain parts of the real estate must deliver possession thereof to the heirs so found, but without prejudice to any question of title, and could not retain possession as an adverse claimant:—Held, that the court could not order the committee of the person and estate to deliver possession of other part of the estate which the committee of the person had taken possession of claiming adversely to the heirs, and that the committees were not accountable in lunacy for rents accrued since the death of the lunatic. Held, also, that the court could not, under its general jurisdiction, order a solicitor to account for rents so accrued and received by him as solicitor for the committee of the estate. Butler, In re, L. R. 1 Ch. 607.

—— Payment off of Mortgage.]—Lord Chancellor may make an order in lunatic's affairs after the death of the lunatic; mortgage on his estate paid off, and the mortgage term ordered to be assigned to attend the inheritance, and not in trust for the next of kin. Grimstone, Ex parte, Ambl. 706.

—— Contract of Sale entered into by Lunatic.]—The court will not carry into effect, after a lunatic's decease, a sale of his estate previously made by private contract, there having been only an order to sell by public auction. Loft, In re, 8 Jur. 206.

—— Disputed Heirship.]—No jurisdiction in lunacy, after the death of the lunatic, to try the question of heirship; the possession was, under the circumstances, given to parties reported by the master to be the heirs-at-law. Clarke, Ex parte, Jacob, 589; 23 R. R. 150.

—— Death of Lunatic after Order Pronounced.]—An order made in a lunacy matter may be carried into effect though the lunatic dies after the order pronounced. After the death of the lunatic, being tenant for life, an order made in his lifetime affecting the rights of the remainderman, who has entered since the death of the lunatic, cannot be enforced; therefore, when the tenant for life, having a leasing power, makes an agreement for a lease, and afterwards becomes lunatic, by an order in the lunacy matter the contract for a lease ordered to be executed; lunatic dies; petition in the lunacy praying to carry the order into effect refused, the court's jurisdiction being at an end. Kingston (Earl), In re, 2 Ir. Eq. R. 169.

—— Claim of Committee—Notice—Application of Purchase-money.]—After the death of a lunatic, the claim of the committee does not constitute a specific charge upon the estate, nor is the purchaser from the heir of the lunatic's real estates bound to see to the application of the purchase-money in satisfaction of the committee's claim, of which he has had notice. Jones v. Noyes, 28 L. J., Ch. 47; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 1033; 7 W. R. 21.

—— Claim of Executor to all Documents belonging to Lunatic's Estate—Discovery—Affidavit—Exhibit.]—The committee of a lunatic jointly interested with the lunatic in certain property under a will, being desirous of having the trusts of the will administered, obtained leave to add the lunatic as a co-plaintiff in the action on affidavit evidence with certain exhibits, which, according to the present practice, are not filed with the affidavit but retained by the deponent. The lunatic died, and her executor, disapproving of the action, and desiring to impeach the proceedings of the committee, demanded all the documents in the possession of the committee, including the exhibits to the above-mentioned affidavit and her draft and copy accounts. The committee refused to produce them:—Held (1), that the exhibits being described in the affidavit as "hereto annexed," were part of the evidence, and that the committee was bound to produce them; (2) that as to the draft and copy accounts, they could not be demanded until the committee had obtained her final discharge. Hincheliffe, In re, 64 L. J., Ch. 76; [1895] 1 Ch. 117; 12 R. 33; 71 L. T. 532; 43 W. R. 82—C. A.

Personal Estate—Payment into Court by Committee—Service on Him of Petition for Payment out.]—Where, after the death of the lunatic, the committee of his estate had duly passed his accounts, paid the balance certified to be due from him into court, and had his security discharged under the 44th of the new orders in lunacy, it was held that a petition for payment out of court of the lunatic's estate to the executors of the lunatic must nevertheless be served upon the committee. Wylde, In re, 5 De G. M. & G. 25; 23 L. J., Ch. 464; 18 Jur. 115.

—— Payment of Debt.]—Order after the death of a lunatic for payment of a debt, viz. the —— Claim for Money expended—Statute of Limitations.]—A petition in lunacy, after the death of the lunatic, by his committee, and a reference to the master thereon, followed by a report, finding that a sum of money had been expended by the committee in the maintenance of the lunatic, is not a proceeding which will take the claim of the committee out of the Statute of Limitations, 21 Jac. 1, c. 16, as against the heir-at-law of the lunatic, who was not a party to the application. Wilkinson v. Wilkinson, 9 Hare, 204.

Petition by Committee—Irregularity.]—Petition presented on behalf of the committee, after the lunatic's death, which did not contain a statement of that fact, dismissed for irregularity. Briscoe, In re, 2 Dr. & War. 501.

Injunction obtained by Lunatic and Committee Dissolved.]—A bill was filed by a lunatic, and his committee, and an injunction granted, and a decree made directing an issue. The lunatic died, and no further proceedings had been taken by the committee. The court ordered that the injunction should be dissolved and all proceedings stayed, unless the suit should be revived within a limited time. Price v. Berrington, 11 Beav. 90.

Master's Report.]—Where there is a reference to a master in the case of lunacy, he shall make his report although the lunatic be dead. Armstrong, Ex parte, 3 Bro. C. C. 238.

Where a person found to be a lunatic has died after the reference to ascertain the nature and amount of his property, but before the master's report had been made up, the Lord Chancellor has jurisdiction to direct that the reference be proceeded with notwithstanding the death of the lunatic. Singleton, In re, 8 Ir. Ch. R. 263.

A report made by the master after the death of a lunatic cannot be acted on, but the costs incurred after the death may be ordered to be taxed. Way, In re, 3 De G. F. & J. 175; 30 L. J., Ch. 815; 5 L. T. 510; 9 W. R. 563.

—— Death before Petition to Confirm—Costs.]—After presentation, but before the hearing of a petition to confirm the master's report in the matter of a lunatic, the lunatic died. T. 323; 29 W. R. 403.

Proceedings against Committee for Account.]—Personal representatives of a lunatic cannot obtain from committee of his person an account of expenditure of allowance for maintenance by petition to Lord Chancellor, in lunacy. Semble, an account may, under circumstances, be obtained by bill in chancery. Grosvenor v. Drax, 2 Knapp, 82.

Death before Appointment of Committee—Costs of Inquisition.]—A person was found to be a lunatic by inquisition, but died before a committee of her estate had been appointed. On an application under the Lunacy Regulation Act the court made a declaration that the costs of the inquisition had been properly incurred, and ought to be paid out of the deceased lunatic's estate in the due course of administration. Meares, In re, 48 L. J., Ch. 190; 10 Ch. D. 552; 40 L. T. 111; 27 W. R. 369—C. A. And see Popham, In re, 44 L. T. 323; 29 W. R. 403.

Funeral Expenses of Lunatic.]—A lunatic died without leaving ready money to pay the expenses of his funeral, and of whose person or of whose estate there was no committee. The heir-at-law, who was one of the next of kin, petitioned that a sufficient sum belonging to the lunatic should be paid out of court for such purpose; but the court directed the persons with whom the lunatic had resided to proceed with the funeral, and ordered the petition to stand over. Townsend, In re, 21 L. J., Ch. 747.

A petition for this purpose is necessary; a warrant from the lunatic office is not sufficient. Ib.

—— Fund in Court—Payment out to Trustees.]—Where the will of a lunatic had been admitted to probate, the court, upon the petition of the executrix, ordered a fund in court belonging to the lunatic's estate to be transferred to trustees to be approved by the commissioner, and to be held by them upon the trusts of the will, although such will was made after the time from which the testator had been found by inquisition to have been of unsound mind. Garden, In re, 13 L. J., Ch. 439.

of the estate, into which it was asserted that C. B. had entered in her private capacity as well as in that of committee, a summons for production of documents was issued against her, asking that she might be ordered to produce, among other documents, counsel's briefs upon, and the shorthand writer's notes of, the proceedings in lunacy:—Held, that these documents were not privileged, and must be produced. Brown, In re, Tyas v. Brown, 42 L. T. 501; 28 W. R. 575.

d. COMMITTEE.

1. Appointment of.

Generally.]—An idiot is presumed in law to be incapable of ever attaining a competent degree of understanding to govern either himself or his estate. (Beverley's Case, 4 Co. 126; 2 Inst. 14; Reg. Brev. 267; F. N. B. 532.) Therefore the king may grant the custody of the person, and the profit of the estate during the life of the idiot without account except for necessaries, and all acts ever done by the idiot to bind his estate shall be avoided. However, since the revolution, the Crown has always granted the surplus profits of the estate of an idiot to some of his family. Ely's (Lord) Case, 1 Ridgw. 519. App. n.

But a lunatic is presumed in law capable of recovering that understanding which he has lost, therefore the custody of his person and estate shall be granted to the committee only during pleasure. And this committee, deducting a suitable maintenance for the lunatic and his family, shall account in chancery for the surplus profits, and shall pay them over, either to the lunatic, if he recover his understanding, or to his legal representative after his death. But all acts done by him during his lunacy to bind his estate shall be avoided. Ib.

Committee of Person—Appointment—Property small—Reference dispensed with.]—A committee of the person and estate of a lunatic appointed without a reference, where the property was small. Farrow, Ex parte, 1 Russ. & M. 112.

Appointment of committee of a lunatic without a reference; and the balances to be paid on an affidavit, without annual account before the master, the property being very small. Pickard, Ex parte, 3 V. & B. 127.

—— Maintenance refused until Appointment.]—Until a committee of lunatic's person be first appointed, the court will not pay out any sum, even for the present maintenance of lunatic's wife and children. B——, In re, 1 Ir. Eq. R. 181.

—— Payment to surviving Committee ordered without fresh Reference.]—Where one of two committees of a lunatic's estate had died, and the property was very small, the court, without a fresh reference to the master, ordered the income to be paid to the surviving committee on evidence of his solvency. Noble, In re, 2 De G. M. & G. 280; 21 L. J., Ch. 748.

—— New Committee—Fund in Court—Payment of Dividends.]—The dividends arising from a sum of stock in court to the credit of H. D. R., a lunatic, ex parte the metropolitan board, which represented the purchase-money of land belonging to the lunatic taken by the board under the Lands Clauses Act, 1845, were ordered to be paid to the joint committees of the estate of the lunatic. Upon the death of one of the joint committees the survivor was appointed sole committee; but the master declined to order the dividends to be paid to him, and a petition intituled in lunacy and in the chancery division was presented for that purpose:—Held, that the dividends ought to be transferred to the lunacy and paid to the committee, and that upon the appointment of a new committee the order appointing him ought to direct payment to him of the dividends, and that the metropolitan board need not be served with the application, and that the board ought to pay the costs of the petition. Ryder, In re, 57 L. J., Ch. 459; 37 Ch. D. 595; 58 L. T. 783—C. A.

—— Wishes of Lunatic Consulted.]—In the appointment of the committee of the person of a lunatic, the court will attend as far as possible to the wishes and inclinations of the lunatic. Leacocke, In re, Ll. & G. 498.

—— Right of Husband to be appointed.]—Where a married woman is found lunatic the husband is not entitled to be appointed committee of her person, either solely or jointly, if the court is of opinion that it will not be for the benefit of the lunatic. Davy, In re, 61 L. J., Ch. 578; [1892] 3 Ch. 38; 67 L. T. 180; 41 W. R. 96—C. A.

—— Non-residents.]—Persons whose places of residence admit of their frequently visiting the lunatic, and inspecting the management of his concerns, to be preferred as committees. Fermor, Ex parte, Jacob, 405.

—— Person out of Jurisdiction.]—It being proposed to appoint as committee a person resident out of the jurisdiction, the master in lunacy reported that as the proposed committee was resident out of the jurisdiction he could not approve of him. The court, though satisfied of the expediency of appointing him, declined to do so until the master had certified that the proposed committee was a person whom, if resident within the jurisdiction, he should have approved. Bruère, In re, 17 Ch. D. 775; 45 L. T. 290; 30 W. R. 223.

—— —— Property Situate Abroad—Security.]—Where a lunatic was a widow and interested in property of considerable value situate in Russia, the court appointed her eldest son, who resided in Russia, and her daughter, who resided in England, joint committees of her estate, and accepted as security the bond of the committees and of their brothers and sisters. Hopper, In re, 66 L. J., Ch. 569; 77 L. T. 154—C. A.

—— Relations.]—In the appointment of committee of a lunatic, relations, unless some specific objection, preferred to strangers. The wife appointed committee of the person not alone, but jointly with a relation. Le Heup, Ex parte, 18 Ves. 222.

Reluctance with which a stranger is appointed committee of a lunatic who has relations. Watkins, In re, 1 Coop. t. Cott. 225.

The old rule that next of kin of a lunatic, who is entitled to his estate upon his death, should not be appointed committee of his person is not now adhered to. Cockayne, Ex parte, 7 Ves. 591.

No objection that the committee of the lunatic's person is the next of kin to lunatic, and will come in for a share by the Statute of Distribution, it being for the interest of the next of kin to prolong the lunatic's life, whereby his personal estate will be increased. Neale's Case, 2 P. Wms. 544. See 7 Ves. 591.

—— Heir.]—The court will not grant the custody of the lunatic's person to the next heir; but his being entitled to a share of the personal estate by the Statute of Distribution is no objection. Ludlow, Ex parte, 2 P. Wms. 638.

—— Heir and Next of Kin.]—The heir and next of kin of a person found a lunatic are entitled of right to propose themselves to the master for the charge of committee of the person, any other must obtain an order to be at liberty to do so, and his petition, which must be speedy, must state the objections to the heir and next of kin, and set out particularly the facts on which he grounds his claim to be preferred. Persse, In re, 1 Moll. 439.

—— Refusal of Court to appoint.]—Court refused to appoint person committee of lunatic upon circumstances; particularly that he had agreed to give part of profits to another. Fletcher, Ex parte, 6 Ves. 427.

—— Property in Ireland.]—Where an individual is found lunatic under an inquisition taken in England, the appointment of committees of his person rests with the Lord Chancellor of Great Britain, notwithstanding that the property of the lunatic is situated in Ireland, and that a transcript of the record of the inquisition has been transmitted to the chancery of the country, with a view to the appointment of committees of his estate by the Lord Chancellor of Ireland. Tottenham, In re, 2 Myl. & Cr. 39; 2 Mont. & C. 39; 1 Jur. 653.

Though a lunatic's lands be in Ireland, yet if the lunatic be resident at an asylum in England the Chancellor of Ireland cannot appoint a committee of his person. B ——, In re, Ir. R. 1 Eq. 181.

Order made for payment of lunatic's maintenance to a married woman (committee of the person) on her separate receipt, her solicitor undertaking that the money should be duly applied. Edwards, In re, 12 Mac. & G. 134.

—— Custody of Lunatic—Grant to Person, his Executors, Administrators and Assigns.]—The custody of an idiot cannot be granted to a man, his executors, administrators and assigns. Rodgers v. Phrazier, 1 Vern. 9; 2 Shower P. C. 171; 2 Ch. Ca. 70.

Committee of Estate—Mother of Infant tenant-in-tail.]—The mother and guardian of an infant tenant-in-tail in remainder (become lunatic) preferred to the nominee of a party interested in the personal estate as committee. Webb, In re, 2 Ph. 532; 17 L. J., Ch. 276.

—— Natural Daughter of Bastard Lunatic.]—A bastard tenant for life of real estates being found lunatic leave was given to his natural daughter, who had resided with him up to the time of his confinement, to carry in proposals for a committee of the estate as well as of the person, a check upon the remainderman. Webb, In re, 2 Ph. 116.

—— Master of Court.]—The practice of appointing a master of the court committee of the estates of lunatics is objectionable, for he can have no direct knowledge, and the purpose of the office is to acquire direct knowledge, and interfere actively in the management, warrant payments, and generally guard the safe exercise of the jurisdiction. Whenever a person connected with the family can be found eligible and willing to give security, and undertake it, he ought to be appointed committee of the estate, and not a master. Hussey, In re, 1 Moll. 226.

—— Partner.]—A person who was entitled to a share in a business in partnership with a lunatic, and who was an accounting party in respect of such business, may, under special circumstances, be appointed committee of the lunatic's estate. Millington, In re, 2 Eq. R. 158—L.JJ.

—— Separate Committees.]—In a case where a lunatic had two estates, situate at a distance from each other, and of considerable value, the court, under the circumstances, appointed a separate committee for each. Robins, In re, 2 Russ. & M. 449.

2. Remuneration of.

General Practice—Salary not allowed.]—It is not the practice, either in England or Ireland, to allow any salary to the committee of the estate of a lunatic. Therefore, where A., who was the heir-at-law of the lunatic, had been appointed committee of his estates, which were very extensive, and appeared to have been much neglected, procured an order in the Court of Chancery in Ireland, for a reference to the master to inquire and report whether it would be for the benefit of the lunatic that he (A.) should be appointed joint-committee of the person of the lunatic; and if so, whether any and what increase should be made to the allowance for maintenance, with a view to the better care of the estate; and the master made a report approving of A. being appointed a joint-committee of the person with C., already a committee of the person of the lunatic, and on the increase of 600*l.* a year to the allowance of 1,500*l.* allowed for the maintenance of the lunatic, the said A. having undertaken the management and superintendence of the estates of the lunatic, and for that purpose to reside near to said estates:—Held, that the orders directing such reference, and confirming the master's report should be set aside, inasmuch as it was an indirect mode of compensation to the committee of the estate in that character. Lanesborough (Earl), In re, Ll. & G. 503.

Observations as to paying for the management of a lunatic's estate and the impropriety of appointing his devisee committee. The decision of the privy council reversing the orders of the Lord Chancellor (Rep. Ll. & G. 503) observed on. S. C., Beat. 639.

Where a lunatic's property consisted simply of public stock and moneys due in respect of half-pay, an allowance to the committee for receiving it was refused. Powell v. Bonner, 9 L. J., Ch. 139.

Salary allowed—Circumstances peculiar.]—A salary allowed to the committee of the estate of a lunatic under peculiar circumstances. Fermor, Ex parte, Jacob, 402.

Expenses in visiting Lunatic.]—The committee of a lunatic ought to be resident within the jurisdiction of the court, and therefore an allowance made him for expenses in visiting the lunatic discontinued on his going to live in Scotland. Ord, Ex parte, Jacob, 94.

Care and Trouble.]—No allowance to committee of lunatic's estate for care and trouble. Anon., 10 Ves. 103. S. P., Annesley, In re, Ambl. 78.

The committee of the estate of a lunatic is not entitled to any remuneration for his trouble. Where any allowance at all is made to him it is not for his sake but for the benefit of the estate, as where rents cannot be effectually collected by the committee without assistance. Walker, In re, 2 Ph. 630.

Out of Pocket Expenses—Interest.]—Allowance, not exceeding 5 per cent. on receipts, to committee of lunatic's estate for expenses out of pocket in collecting rents. Westbrooke, In re, 2 Ph. 631.

Employment of Agent at Salary.]—Order made without a reference to the master, that the committee of a lunatic should be at liberty to employ a particular person for inspecting the lunatic's property at a fixed salary, to be paid out of the rents. Errington, In re, 2 Russ. 567.

3. Security by.

Heir-at-law required to give Security on Appointment.]—Even the eldest son and heir-at-law of a lunatic will not be appointed one of the committees of his estate without giving security, unless the master reports that no person can be found to act as committee who will give security. Frank, In re, 2 Russ. 450; 26 R. R. 148.

Appointment without Security.]—The court may, if it see fit, appoint a committee of a lunatic's estate without requiring the usual security. Burroughs, In re, 2 Dr. & War. 207; 1 Con. & L. 309.

Reduction of Security.]—The bond of the committee delivered up and less security taken. Northleigh, Ex parte, 2 Ves. 673.

Securities belonging to a lunatic's estate ordered to be deposited with the master for the purpose of reducing the amount of the committee's recognizances. Eagle, In re, 2 Ph. 201.

Change of Securities.]—Securities changed on giving greater; but this not encouraged, as if lunatic recovers he may have no remedy on a concealment of part of estate. Pereira, Ex parte, 2 Ves. Sen. 674.

Authority to act before Security perfected.]—Where the income of a lunatic consisted of rents payable weekly, the committee was allowed to receive them before perfecting his securities, he undertaking to perfect them within a given time. Rutter, In re, 22 L. J., Ch. 178; 20 L. T. 266; 1 W. R. 27.

Property situate abroad—Appointment of Committee out of Jurisdiction.]—Where a lunatic was a widow and interested in property of considerable value situate in Russia, the court appointed her eldest son, who resided in Russia, and her daughter, who resided in England, joint committees of her estate, and accepted as security the bond of the committees and of their brothers and sisters. Hopper, In re, 66 L. J., Ch. 569; 77 L. T. 154—C. A.

Surety—Heir-at-law.]—The heir-at-law of a lunatic, who with one other person was the next of kin of the lunatic, was appointed committee of the person. Another party being proposed, was approved of by the master in lunacy as committee of the estate. The committee of the person proposed himself as one surety for the committee of the estate. The attorney-general was willing to accept the security, but declined to do so without the sanction of the court. An order was made that, upon the allowance to the lunatic being paid direct to the committee of the person, instead of passing intermediately through the hands of the committee of the estate, the committee of the person be accepted as one of the sureties for the committee of the estate; the general rule, however, to remain unaltered. Mount, Ex parte, Burton, In re, 21 L. J., Ch. 221.

—— Extent of Liability.]—The sureties of a committee of a lunatic are liable to pay not only any balance found due from him, but also the costs and expenses incurred in consequence of his neglecting to obey the orders of the court for the payment of such balance, and that, although they may not be informed till afterwards of the default on the part of the committee. Lockey, In re, 14 L. J., Ch. 164.

—— Enforcement of Bond.]—Where it is desired to enforce against the committee of the estate of a deceased lunatic and his sureties the usual bond required of the committee of the estate, the proper course is to petition the court that the bond may be deposited by the master in lunacy with the queen's remembrancer; this court will not transfer the bond to the administrators of the estate of the deceased lunatic. Hill, In re, 1 De G. J. & S. 487; 7 L. T. 702; 11 W. R. 296; 1 N. R. 250.

Where it has been found that a displaced committee is indebted to his lunatic's estate, and proceedings upon the bond by him and his sureties have been ordered, and the lunatic dies before they are taken, the court will order a delivery of the bond by the master in lunacy to the queen's remembrancer, who is the proper person to enforce it, and not to the lunatic's legal personal representative. Ib.

Form of order enabling an administrator of a deceased lunatic's estate to enforce against a defaulting committee of the estate and his sureties the bond to the Crown, entered into by them on his appointment. Ib.

4. Termination of Office.

Committee of Person—Removal.]—Committee of lunatic refusing to answer, new committee appointed on application to Great Seal. Lloyd v. ——, Dick. 460.

On a petition to remove the committee of the person, the court not being prevented by the form of the petition from granting relief according to the nature of the case, directed an inquiry whether the comfort of the lunatic was sufficiently provided for, regard being had to the sum allowed. Proctor, Ex parte, 1 Swanst. 531. S. P., Evelyn, Ex parte, T. Vac. 1829.

A petition was presented for removal of committee. The petition was so drawn as to be in a great measure unintelligible, yet chancellor exercised his jurisdiction and inquired into truth of affidavits. Ib.

—— —— Bankruptcy.]—The committee of the person of a lunatic not removed in consequence of his bankruptcy. Ib.

Bankruptcy of the committee of the person of a lunatic is a sufficient cause for removing him on account of the fund for maintenance; but the custody of the person will not be changed, if the master finds it proper with regard to the comfort of the lunatic that it should continue. Mildmay, Ex parte, 3 Ves. 2.

Committee of Estate—Discharge—Residence at a Distance.]—The circumstance that a committee of a lunatic's estate resides at a distance from the property is not a ground per se for discharging such committee, although it may raise a case for inquiry before the master, as to the propriety of his being discharged. Brown, In re, 1 Mac. & G. 201; 1 Hall & Tw. 348; 19 L. J., Ch. 96.

—— Irregular Proceedings — Sanction of Master.]—Where committees of a lunatic's estate had expended large sums in draining and other improvements, and had contracted with a railway company for sale of a part of the estate, and done other acts which were not within the scope of their authority, but had as to all of them acted under the sanction of the master in lunacy:—Held, on a petition by the heir-at-law of the lunatic, that although the proceedings were irregular they formed no ground for dismissing the committees from their office. Ib.

—— Termination on Death.]—A custody of a lunatic's estate granted to baron and feme (the feme being next of kin) determines on her death. Lyne, Ex parte, Cas. t. Talb. 142.

—— Objection to Person appointed.]—The person whom the master has approved for the office of receiver of lunatic's estate must, to be rejected, be shewn incompetent, not merely another person more eligible. Bangor (Lord), In re, 2 Moll. 518.

Report approving of a person as temporary committee of the person of a lunatic not sent back to be reviewed on the application of sister and some of the next of kin of lunatic, no disqualification in the person approved of being shewn. Ib. 519.

—— Property not exceeding £1,000—25 & 26 Vict. c. 86.]—Under 25 & 26 Vict. c. 86, the Lord Chancellor has power to appoint persons to recover and receive funds of a lunatic without inquisition, and in a summary manner, in the alternative either of his income being under 50*l.*, or his property not exceeding 1,000*l.* in value. Harvey v. Trenchard, 34 Beav. 240.

The court cannot entertain an objection that an order was made by the lords justices in lunacy in the absence of proper parties. Ib.

The lords justices made an order under 25 & 26 Vict. c. 86, which appointed two persons to receive from the trustees, and apply for his benefit, the property of a prisoner acquitted on the ground of his lunacy. The court decreed execution of the order. Ib.

—— Interim Receiver—Appointment Ex parte—Pending Application for Inquisition.]—In a proper case the court will, pending an application for an inquisition, appoint an interim receiver of the estate of the supposed lunatic, and if the case is urgent will do so upon an ex parte application. Fountain, In re, 57 L. Cooper, 54.

When a lunatic, who had been so found after he had been committed to prison for a breach of the peace, upon being so found, had been transferred, by virtue of the warrant of the lord-lieutenant, to a lunatic asylum pursuant to 1 & 2 Vict. c. 27, and the period of his imprisonment had expired: —Held, that the Lord Chancellor had jurisdiction to order the lunatic to be placed in such asylum as the committee, with the approbation of a master, should appoint. M'Dermott, In re, 2 Con. & L. 293; 3 Dr. & War. 480.

Where a person has been tried upon a criminal charge, and acquitted on the ground of his insanity, and was thereupon confined in a lunatic asylum under the provisions of 39 & 40 Geo. 3, c. 94, the chancellor, upon the application of a creditor, issued a commission of lunacy, the party being entitled to property of the value of 600*l*. In such case, the chancellor has no jurisdiction to interfere in any way except by a commission, and has no power over the person of the individual. Clark, Ex parte, Pearce, In re, 8 Jur. 82.

Residence of Lunatic.]—Where a person has been declared a lunatic on petition, the Lord Chancellor will not, in the absence of special circumstances, send him to reside out of Ireland. The nature of the Lord Chancellor's jurisdiction in lunacy explained. Birch, In re, 29 L. R., Ir. 274—L. C.

Leave given for a lunatic, under particular circumstances, to reside in Scotland, his committee, who resided in England, undertaking to bring him within the jurisdiction whenever it should be required. Jones, In re, 1 Price, 461.

Security for the return of a lunatic permitted to go out of the jurisdiction must be of a kind available in the courts of this country. Stair, In re, 1 Coop. t. Cott. 227.

Access to Lunatic.]—Access to a lunatic by a person entitled upon the death of the lunatic, in default of appointment by her, to see whether she was in a state to exercise the power refused. Lyttleton, Ex parte, 6 Ves. 7; 5 R. R. 202.

g. MAINTENANCE AND ALLOWANCES.

1. Principles Regulating.

Comfort of Lunatic.]—The court will, without application to it for that purpose, where the estate of a lunatic has been increased, direct the master in lunacy to inquire whether, by an additional expenditure, any increase of comfort can be procured for the lunatic. Melhuish, In re, and Haran, In re, 1 W. R. 236.

Lunatic's comfort considered in exclusion of the presumptive right of his next of kin, etc. Lunatic not stripped of support by act of the Lord Chancellor, even for creditors. Wright, Ex parte, 2 Ves. Sen. 25.

The Lord Chancellor will not, even for creditors, make an order in lunacy the effect of which must be to put the lunatic in a state of absolute want. Dikes, Ex parte, 8 Ves. 79.

No order upon petition in lunacy for payment of the lunatic's debts out of the funds, not within the reach of the creditors; except for his accommodation, and it clearly appears that he will have a sufficient maintenance. Hastings, Ex parte, 14 Ves. 182; 9 R. R. 272.

A lunatic is never to be looked upon as irrecoverable. The lunatic's comfort to be regarded, and not the benefit of his administrators or next of kin. Dormer's Case, 1 P. Wms. 265.

A liberal application of the property of a lunatic is to be made to secure every comfort his situation will admit. Baker, Ex parte, 6 Ves. 8; G. Cooper, 205.

Lunatic is to have every comfort his situation and fortune will admit of, without any regard to expectants. Chumley, Ex parte, 1 Ves. 296.

Not limited to Income.] — Maintenance of lunatic is not limited, like infant's, to amount of income. Persse, In re, 3 Moll. 94.

Income Tax not deducted.]—The allowance for the maintenance of a lunatic previously directed to be paid, ordered to be continued by the accountant-general without any deduction in respect of income tax. Liebenrood, In re, 6 Jur. 721.

Amount of Allowance.]—The king's grant of a lunatic's estate without account is void; but the king or Lord Chancellor may allow such a yearly maintenance to a lunatic as amounts to the yearly value of the lunatic's estate. Sheldon v. Aland, 3 P. Wms. 110.

Increase of Allowance.] — Under circumstances, the court will increase the allowance for maintenance which will answer the allowance for trouble. Annesley, In re, Ambl. 78.

—— Near Relations.]—The court, on a proper case being made, will grant an increased maintenance to the lunatic in order that the same may be applied for the support of the near relations of the lunatic. Creagh, In re, 1 Dr. & Wal. 323.

Illegitimate Children of Deceased Brother.] —The court will not increase the allowance of a lunatic, on the ground of there being illegitimate children of a deceased brother of the lunatic, to whose support the lunatic would probably have contributed if not in a state of incapacity. Grace, In re, 13 L. J., Ch. 262.

Allowance — Father.]—A fund in court to which a lunatic was entitled, paid to the father in part discharge of moneys expended in the lunatic's maintenance. Law, In re, 30 L. J., Ch. 512; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 410.

—— Wife.]—Interest ordered to be paid to wife, husband being in a state of imbecility of mind. Bird v. Lefevre, 4 Bro. C. C. 100.

The trustees under a will, in which a life annuity of 6,000*l.* a year, and other considerable benefits, were given to a person who at the death of the testator was confined in a lunatic asylum, filed a bill for the directions of the court in executing the trusts of the will relative to the lunatic. The wife of a lunatic presented a petition, praying an allowance out of the income given to the lunatic, and the court thereupon referred it to the master to inquire into his state of mind; and the master having reported that he was of unsound mind, and not competent to the management of his affairs, the court, upon the petition of the wife to confirm the report, directed the trustees to apply to the Great Seal for a commission of lunacy, and referred it to the master, to inquire what, in the meantime, would be a proper allowance to be made to the wife. Exeter (Bishop) v. Ward (Lord), 2 Myl. & K. 54.

—— Wife as against Creditors.]—In sanctioning a scheme for the maintenance of a lunatic under ss. 116 and 117 of the Lunacy Act, 1890, the lords justices will not allow the lunatic's wife maintenance out of his property as against his creditors. Winkle, In re, 63 L. J., Ch. 541; [1894] 2 Ch. 519; 7 R. 255; 70 L. T. 710; 42 W. R. 513—C. A.

An action was brought against a person of unsound mind not so found, and judgment was on March 16th, 1894, obtained. On March 17th, the judgment creditor lodged a writ of fi. fa. with the sheriff, and he, on the morning of March 19th, executed the writ and seized the lunatic's goods. The lunatic's wife, on the afternoon of the same day, obtained an order appointing her interim receiver pending the hearing of a summons in lunacy, which had been taken out by her on March 12th, asking for leave to sell the lunatic's property and to retain out of the proceeds of sale a certain sum weekly for the maintenance of herself and the lunatic. The sheriff thereupon gave up possession of the goods to his wife. On the hearing of the summons the scheme for maintenance was approved of by the master in lunacy. The lords justices confirmed this scheme so far as the maintenance of the lunatic was concerned, but refused to include the maintenance of the wife in the scheme, and made the order without prejudice to any priority or charge the executors might have acquired by lodging the writ of fi. fa. with the sheriff. Ib.

—— Wife and Son.]—An annuity of 100*l.* directed to be paid to the wife and son of a supposed lunatic, without reference to the master. Conduit v. Soane, Gandy, In re, 5 Myl. & Cr. 111.

—— Son.]—Application for a reference as to the propriety of advancing a large sum of money out of the capital of a lunatic's estate, to enable his eldest son to purchase an estate, refused. Thomas, In re, 2 Ph. 169.

Master to see what was fit to be allowed for maintenance of lunatic's son. Foster v. Marchant, 1 Vern. 263.

—— Daughter for Outfit.]—The allowance made out of a lunatic's estate for the maintenance of himself and his daughters was increased in consideration of the intended marriage of one of the daughters, and a portion of such increased allowance was appropriated to the joint establishment of her and her husband, and was directed to be settled to her separate use: and a sum of money, approved by the master, was also ordered to be paid to her out of her father's estate by way of outfit on her marriage. Drummond, In re, 1 Myl. & Cr. 627; 6 L. J., Ch. 58.

Semble, that the court will not direct an advancement by way of outfit and additional annual allowance to be made out of a lunatic's property to his daughter upon her marriage, except upon the terms of the daughter making a settlement, to be approved by the master, of all the property that may eventually come to her as next of kin and heir-at-law of the lunatic. Fowler, Ex parte, 6 Jur. 431.

—— Tenant in Tail in Remainder—16 & 17 Vict. c. 70, s. 116.]—Application to charge settled estates with the maintenance of a lunatic, tenant in tail in remainder, by the father, tenant for life, refused: no proper case having been made for it. Pugh, In re, 3 De G. M. & G. 416; 17 Jur. 979; 2 W. R. 22.

—— Children entitled in Remainder.]—An allowance out of an estate belonging to a lunatic, to assist in educating children entitled to the estate in remainder after the lunatic, and whose mother (the petitioner) was entitled to a jointure which would, under a covenant, be chargeable on the estate, refused. Laneshorough (Earl), In re, 7 Ir. Eq. R. 606.

—— Next of Kin.]—Payments out of a female lunatic's income, for the better maintenance and support of her nephews, ordered, under the circumstances. The court, however, makes such orders with great jealousy and caution. Blair, In re and Ex parte, 1 Myl. & Cr. 300; 5 L. J., Ch. 150.

Under special circumstances the court made an allowance out of a lunatic's estate to one of the next of kin (a first cousin) of the lunatic, the other next of kin consenting. Croft, In re, 1 N. R. 185; 32 L. J., Ch. 481—L.JJ.

The modern practice of making allowances out of lunatics' estates for their collateral relations disapproved and to be kept within narrow limits. A comparatively small sum, which the master had approved as proper to be allowed out of the surplus income of the lunatic, which was very considerable, for drainage of an estate of which the lunatic was tenant for life, with remainder to his brother, was disallowed by the Lord Chancellor, though no one objected to it. Clarke, In re, 2 Ph. 282.

—— Bankruptcy of Next of Kin—Petition for Increased Allowance—Service on Assignee.]—One of the next of kin of a lunatic having become bankrupt, it was held, that on a petition for increased allowance, it was unnecessary to serve the assignees. Chambers, Ex parte, 4 L. J., Ch. 175.

—— Collaterals — Surplus Income.]— The court will not make an allowance out of the surplus income of a lunatic to collaterals unless the evidence shews that the lunatic, if sane, would in all probability have made the proposed allowance himself. Different considerations apply when the lunatic is entitled to landed property and the collateral is also the heir-at-law of the lunatic. Darling, In re, 57 L. J., Ch. 891; 39 Ch. D. 208; 59 L. T. 761—C. A.

The court refused to make an allowance to some of the next of kin of a lunatic, first cousins, who were in indigent circumstances, although the lunatic was aged eighty-two, and there was a large surplus income beyond the proposed allowance and the application was not opposed. Ib.

Practice of making an allowance to the immediate relations of a lunatic, other than those whom the lunatic would be bound to provide for by law, extended to the case of brothers and sisters and their children, and founded not on any supposed interest in the property, which cannot exist during the lunatic's lifetime, but upon the principle that the court will act with reference to the lunatic, and for his benefit, as it is probable the lunatic himself would have acted, if of sound mind. The amount and proportions of such an allowance are therefore entirely in the discretion of the court. Whitbread, Ex parte, 2 Mer. 99; 16 R. R. 148.

—— Needy Relative.]— Weekly allowances ordered out of the surplus income of a wealthy lunatic to needy collateral relatives who were supposed to be her next of kin, though their title as such had not been established, and for whom the lunatic, while sane, had expressed an intention to make some provision. Frost, In re, 39 L. J., Ch. 808; L. R. 5 Ch. 699; 23 L. T. 233; 18 W. R. 986.

—— From what Time made.]—Allowances were ordered to be paid out of the surplus income of a lunatic to certain poor members of her family and to certain other persons, the husband of the lunatic, and after his death the lunatic herself, having been accustomed to make them, though the surplus income after payment of them amounted to about 50*l.* only. Such allowances, however, were ordered to commence at the date when the lunatic was so found, and not when they stopped in consequence of her becoming of unsound mind. Mackenzie, In re, 43 L. T. 681.

—— When Granted.]—The court will not sanction the making of allowances out of the lunatic's surplus income to his relatives, or other persons, unless the lunatic was, prior to his lunacy, under some legal or moral obligation to contribute to their support, and the principle involved in making allowances ought to be narrowed rather than extended in its operation. Evans, In re, 21 Ch. D. 297; 46 L. T. 785; 30 W. R. 645—C. A.

—— Nearest Relatives—Cousins.]— The income of a lunatic being much more than was required for his maintenance, a respectable aged clergyman, a first cousin, and one of the next of kin of the lunatic, who had been reduced to indigence by unavoidable misfortune, applied for an allowance out of the surplus income. It was not shewn that the lunatic had even known of the existence of the applicant, and it was not suggested that any evidence could be obtained that the lunatic, when sane, had ever done anything for him or expressed any intention in his favour:—Held, that the application must be refused. Ib.

—— Upon Terms.]—A lunatic, aged sixty-four, was tenant for life of certain real estates, producing a considerable yearly income, of which his nephew, aged twenty-eight, was tenant in tail in remainder. The nephew had been found heir-at-law and one of the next of kin of the lunatic. The court, upon the nephew's petition, directed an allowance of 500*l.* per annum to be made to him out of the surplus income of the lunatic, after providing for a yearly sum for the lunatic's maintenance, in spite of the opposition of some of the next of kin, upon the terms of the petitioner charging the estate with the repayment of the sums received in respect of such allowance, the lords justices consenting as protectors of the settlement to the petitioner barring his estate tail, but only so far as to let in the charge. Sparrow, In re, 51 L. J., Ch. 497; 20 Ch. D. 320; 46 L. T. 785; 30 W. R. 373—C. A.

—— Collateral Tenant in Tail in Remainder—Increase of Allowance.]—A lunatic bachelor, who was incurable and aged sixty-four, was tenant for life, there being a large surplus income after providing for his maintenance. In 1882 the court made an allowance of 500*l.* per annum to his nephew, the tenant in tail in remainder, who was then unmarried and in possession of an income of 220*l.* per annum, and, as protector of the settlement, consented to the entail being barred to secure the allowance. The remainderman having married and had a son who would take as tenant in tail in remainder if he survived his father, and having an income of 300*l.* per annum without the allowance of 500*l.*:—Held, that the allowance ought to be increased by 200*l.* to be charged in the same way as the 500*l.* Beridge, In re, 50 L. T. 653—C. A.

—— Heir-at-law and Sole Next of Kin on Application of Creditor.]—The Lord Chancellor has not jurisdiction in lunacy, upon the application of a creditor of the heir-at-law, and sole next of kin of the lunatic, to order an allowance made to him (the heir-at-law) out of the lunatic's estate, for the support and maintenance of the lunatic, to be applied in payment of the debts of the heir-at-law. Linehan, Ex parte, Hennessy, In re, 1 Jo. & Lat. 29.

—— Illegitimate Children.]— An allowance will be made out of a lunatic's estate for his illegitimate children, but not for their mother. The court will not direct property to be sold which the lunatic, by a will made when he was of sound mind, has bequeathed specifically, though the master has reported that the sale of it will be beneficial to the estate. Haycock, Ex parte, 5 Russ. 154; 29 R. R. 16.

The court will not increase the allowance of a lunatic, on the ground of there being illegitimate children of a deceased brother of the lunatic, to whose support the lunatic would probably have contributed if not in a state of incapacity. Grove, In re, 13 L. J., Ch. 262.

Pension to Servant.]—Annuity of 60*l.* given to old servant of lunatic, who retired on account of age, the next of kin consenting. Carysfort (Earl), In re, Cr. & Ph. 76.

Subscription to Charity by Committee.]—A lunatic was tenant for life of seventy houses in London, situate in the same neighbourhood, and producing a gross rental of 2,440*l.* His surplus income, after providing him with every comfort, was about 900*l.* a year. Three of the houses were sold to a church building committee as a site for a church to a new district parish, and the incumbent and the church committee solicited subscriptions for building the church and parochial schools in connection with it. Leave was given to the committee of the estate, who was also heiress-at-law and sole next of kin, to contribute out of the lunatic's income 250*l.* towards building the church, and a like sum for the schools. Strickland, In re, L. R. 6 Ch. 226; 24 L. T. 530; 19 W. R. 515.

2. Out of What Property.

Fund for Maintenance—Discretion of Trustees.] — A mother, whose only daughter, a lunatic, was entitled to a large real and personal estate under her father's will, bequeathed the residue of her estate and effects to trustees, upon trust to apply the interest amounting to about 1,600*l.* a year towards the maintenance and support of her daughter, and otherwise for her comfort and advantage, as they should think proper, without being liable to account: and after her decease to pay the principal, and also such interest as should not have been actually so applied, to the testatrix's nieces: —Held, that the allowance of the lunatic ought to be borne exclusively by the maternal estate, as the arrangement, in the event of her recovery, would be most beneficial to her. Ashley, In re, 1 Russ. & M. 371.

A testator gave a fund to trustees in trust to pay the income to his sister for her life or "apply the same, or so much as may be necessary for her support and maintenance, in such manner as may be most to her comfort and advantage." He then directed the surplus, if any, to be accumulated and added to the capital of the fund, which was given over after her death. The sister, who was of unsound mind, was entitled to a life interest under a settlement of which the testator was a trustee. After the testator's death she was found lunatic, and the allowance for her maintenance was fixed at a sum exceeding the income of the bequeathed fund:—Held, that this income was the primary fund for her maintenance, and that, therefore, the whole of it must be applied. Rudland v. Crozier, 2 De G. & J. 143; 27 L. J., Ch. 261; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 675; 30 L. T. (O.S.) 330; 6 W. R. 305.

Where there are two funds, both of them applicable to the maintenance of a lunatic, under the management of the Court of Chancery, to one of which the lunatic would be absolutely entitled as her own property, the other of which, so far as she might not benefit by it, would pass away to different persons, the court might direct her maintenance to be provided for out of the latter fund. But where such latter fund is provided by a will which vests the fund in trustees, and gives them an absolute discretion and "uncontrollable authority" over its application, the court will not exercise its ordinary power. The fund so specially provided will be left to the exercise, bonâ fide, of the discretion of the trustees. Gisborne v. Gisborne, 46 L. J., Ch. 556; 2 App. Cas. 300; 36 L. T. 564; 25 W. R. 516.

A testator (whose wife had, in her own right property which was not referred to in his will) devised his real and personal estates to trustees upon various trusts, one of which was that "my trustees in their discretion, and of their uncontrollable authority, pay and apply the whole, or such portion only of the annual income, of my real and personal estate and investments, as they shall think expedient, to or for the clothing, board, &c., for the personal and peculiar benefit and comfort of my dear wife." One of the trustees was the testator's brother, and he was made the residuary legatee:—Held, that the trustees were entitled to exercise an absolute discretion in the application of the fund thus provided by the will. Ib.

Where a lunatic has property to which he is entitled for life under a settlement as well as property to which he is absolutely entitled, the court will apply the life interest in the first place towards his maintenance; unless the trustees of the settled property have an absolute discretion whether to employ the whole or any part of the income for the lunatic's benefit. Therefore where property was held upon trust to pay the income in such way, at such time, and in such manner as the trustees should think fit towards the maintenance of a lunatic during her life, with power to invest any surplus not required for the purpose as capital, it was held that the trustees had no such discretion as would oust the jurisdiction of the court to apply the whole of the income in the lunatic's maintenance in exoneration of her absolute property. Gisborne v. Gisborne (2 App. Cas. 300) distinguished. Weaver, In re, 21 Ch. D. 615; 48 L. T. 93; 31 W. R. 224; 47 J. P. 68.

Property in Ireland—Money transmitted for Maintenance to England.]—Where, in the case of a lunatic so found in England, whose property is in Ireland, the record of the inquisition is transmitted to and enrolled in Ireland, and lunacy percentage is paid on the clear annual income there, no further percentage is payable in England on a portion of such income when transmitted by order of the court to this country for the maintenance of the lunatic here. Grehan, In re, 64 L. J., Ch. 505; [1895] 2 Ch. 12; 12 R. 210; 72 L. T. 383; 43 W. R. 433; 59 J. P. 325; —C. A.

Separate Income of Feme Covert.]—A wife was insane before and during the time of her being entitled to a separate maintenance, left by the will of a testator who knew her to be insane; no commission had issued; she had an only child, an infant, entitled to the capital in the event of surviving his mother. Upon the husband's application for an allowance out of the wife's separate maintenance for her support, a reference was directed to the master to inquire who had maintained the wife, at what expense, how far the husband was able and willing to maintain her, and if any part of this fund was to be advanced to anyone, what securities should be taken for its due application. Brodie v. Barry, 2 V. & B. 36; 13 R. R. 37.

A wife, being of unsound mind and in confinement, and her husband being poor and unable to maintain her, the court ordered that the surplus income of her separate property, after providing for her maintenance, should be paid to the husband; but refused to apply any part of the principal fund to reimburse the husband what he had actually paid for her past maintenance. Whether, if the expenses of her past maintenance had been still unpaid, that circumstance would have made any difference, quære. Edwards v. Abrey, 2 Ph. 37; 15 L. J., Ch. 404; 10 Jur. 650.

Charging Estate of Lunatic Tenant in Tail.]—On the petition of the lunatic's father, tenant for life of large landed estates, the Lord Chancellor declined to make an order under the act 16 & 17 Vict. c. 70, charging the estate of the lunatic tenant in tail in remainder with a sum found by the master to be proper for the lunatic's maintenance, there being no special circumstances, nor any evidence that the state of the petitioner's family was such as to make the charge just or reasonable. Pugh, In re, 7 De G. M. & G. 416; 17 Jur. 979; 2 W. R. 22.

3. Income Insufficient.

Maintenance out of Capital.]—A person of unsound mind was entitled to a life interest under a settlement in certain funds. The income being insufficient for her maintenance, a summons was taken out by her son, who was absolutely entitled to the funds in default of appointment by the person of unsound mind to remoter issue, asking that sums should be raised out of income and capital for her maintenance:—The court made the order, and charged her interest in the trust funds with the recouping to the trustees of all sums raised and paid under the order out of the capital. Hirst, In re, 2 R. 409; 67 L. T. 702; 68 L. T. 557—C. A.

Refusal of the Lord Chancellor to order a lunatic to be maintained out of principal, upon the probability of the lunatic being admitted into an hospital within six years. Fisher, In re, 19 L. J., Ch. 521; 14 Jur. 233.

—— Purchase of Annuity.] — Where the whole income of the lunatic amounted to only 21*l.* 16*s.* 11*d.*, being the dividends arising out of a sum of stock to which the lunatic was entitled, the court allowed an annuity of 30*l.* for the life of the lunatic, to be purchased and paid for out of the fund. S. C., 2 H. & Tw. 449.

—— Intestacy—Lunatic Sole Next of Kin—Debts of Intestate.]—Stock of an intestate dead nearly twenty years being brought into court, an order for selling part thereof, for costs in the lunacy of the sole next of kin, and for applying the dividends for such lunatic's maintenance, before any report of the debts of the intestate, was refused. Radcliffe v. Carter, C. P. Cooper, 250.

Residue of a lunatic's property beyond his debts invested in a government annuity for his maintenance upon the master's report that it was for his benefit. Stonard, Ex parte, 18 Ves. 285.

Reference to Master dispensed with.]—Where the sum is of small amount, the court will decide, without putting the estate to the expense of a reference to the master, whether the application of money sought for is for the benefit of the lunatic or infant. Barnwall, Ex parte, 1 Moll. 4.

Sale of Reversionary Interest.]—On the petition of the committee of the person and estate of a lunatic, reference directed to inquire as to the expediency of raising a fund for his maintenance by sale of his reversionary interest. Burbidge, In re, 3 Mac. & G. 1.

4. Liability of Committee to Account.

Account — Petition in Lunacy.] — Personal representatives of lunatic cannot obtain from committee of his person an account of expenditure of allowance for maintenance, by petition to Lord Chancellor, in lunacy. Semble, an account may, under circumstances, be obtained by bill in chancery. Grosvenor v. Drax, 2 Knapp, 82.

—— Bill for.]—The court allowed the profits of the lunatic's estate to the committee for the maintenance of his person. The lunatic dies, his administrator brings a bill for an account of these profits; the defendant, the committee, pleads this order of court, of the allowance of the profits for the lunatic's maintenance. The plea ordered to stand for an answer; but the court declared they would not relieve in such case, without gross fraud. Sheldon v. Aland, 3 P. Wms. 104.

Savings out of Lunatic's Allowance.]—A., devisee for life, and B., remainderman in fee, were directed by the testator to apply "any sum, not exceeding 400*l.* a year," for the maintenance of testator's eldest son, a lunatic, and charge that sum upon his estates. Testator then appointed A. and B. to be the committee of the lunatic. After A. and B. had died, the court fixed the allowance at 280*l.* a year:—Held, after the lunatic's death, as between the owner of the estate charged and the administrator of the lunatic, that the owner of the estate was entitled to the difference between 280*l.* and 400*l.* a year, and not the administrator of the lunatic. Ponsonby, In re, 2 Con. & L. 30; 3 Dr. & War. 27; 5 Ir. Eq. R. 268.

The committee of a lunatic is beneficially entitled to the savings out of the lunatic's allowance. Ib.

Allowance of fixed Sum—Mortgage or Arrears.]—An order was made that the brother of a lunatic, who was committee of his estate, should be allowed to retain the family mansion and grounds and the heirlooms therein for his own occupation and use, and that of his unmarried sisters, and that 4,000*l.* a year should be allowed him for his expenses in reference thereto. The committee with his sisters occupied the mansion accordingly, and incurred heavy and, as it was alleged unreasonable expenses about the establishment The income being insufficient to pay the allowance, it fell into arrear, and the committee mortgaged the arrears. He subsequently was removed from being committee and became bankrupt, and a large amount of bills incurred in keeping up the establishment remained unpaid. A surplus having arisen applicable to payment of the arrears, the new committee presented a petition for direction as to its application:—Held, that although the allowance was made to the former committee without any obligation to account, and with an intention indirectly to confer a benefit on him and his sisters, still it was an allowance made to a person in a fiduciary position for a particular purpose, and which he had no right to mortgage, and that the mortgagee could stand in no better position than the committee himself. Weld, In re, 51 L. J., Ch. 913; 20 Ch. D. 451; 46 L. T. 397; 30 W. R. 385—C. A.

Held, also, that the person to whom an allowance of this kind is made has no such right to arrears as will prevent the court from dealing with them in such way as it may consider just, and, if the court finds that the expenses incurred for the purposes for which the allowance was granted remain unpaid, it will stop the arrears, and make provision for payment of such expenses. An inquiry was therefore directed as to which of the debts of the committee were properly incurred in keeping up the establishment at the mansion. Ib.

5. Interest taken by Committee in Allowance.

Allowance out of Rent—Committee entitled under Will to Personalty.]—Bequest of all testator's personal estate to the wife, and charge of all debts, and testamentary expenses, on his real estate, expressly exempting the personalty therefrom: after pecuniary legacies to his two children charged on the real estate, he directed maintenance for them, not exceeding 4 per cent. on their legacies; the testator subsequently becoming a lunatic, an order was made for —l. per annum to be paid to the wife out of the rents and profits of his estate; and upon his death:—Held, that the widow being entitled to the whole personal estate and rents of the real estate due at the testator's death, she could not also be entitled to receive the last payment under the order in lunacy, for which the only fund was the rents of the real estate. Jones v. Bruce, 11 Sim. 221.

6. Past Maintenance.

Infant—Allowance to Father.]—After an order has been made for the maintenance of an infant lunatic out of his own estate, the court will not allow anything to the lunatic's father in respect of past maintenance. Booth, In re, 22 L. T. 249.

Debt for Maintenance due from former Committee—Reference to Master to ascertain Amount.]—Where the committee of a lunatic's estate had passed his accounts and resigned his office, leaving a debt for maintenance of the lunatic still due to a third person, and the new committee repudiated the debt, the court, on the petition of the creditor served on the new committee, directed a reference to the master to ascertain the amount of the debt. T——, In re, 5 N. R. 481.

Claim for Arrears—Statute of Limitations.]—A claim for the past maintenance of a lunatic being simply a debt of the lunatic, the court will not pay out of the lunatic's estate in court more than six years' arrears of such maintenance. Harris, In re, 49 L. J., Ch. 327.

The brother of a lunatic lady, not so found by inquisition, advanced money for the maintenance of his sister for several years under circumstances which left it doubtful whether he intended it for a gift or expected to be repaid. He died, and his sister was then found to be lunatic by inquisition. His executors having brought in a claim against the lunatic's estate for repayment of the advances, the court made an allowance to the testator's estate for past maintenance, but limited it to advances made within six years before the testator's death. Weaver, In re, 21 Ch. D. 615; 48 L. T. 93; 31 W. R. 224.

A petition in lunacy, after the death of the lunatic, by his committee, and a reference to the master thereon, followed by a report, finding that a sum of money had been expended by the committee in the maintenance of the lunatic, is not a proceeding which will take the claim of the committee out of the Statute of Limitations, 21 Jac. I. c. 16, as against the heir-at-law of the lunatic, who was not a party to the application. Wilkinson v. Wilkinson, 9 Hare, 204.

Maintenance in Asylum—Fund in Court—Application in Discharge.]—When a person of unsound mind, not found lunatic by inquisition, had been maintained in a lunatic asylum by his parish, the whole of the capital of a fund belonging to him, which had been paid into court under the Trustee Relief Act, was ordered to be applied, so far as it would extend, in discharge of the past charges of the parish for maintenance. Phelps' Trusts, In re, 28 L. T. 350.

A lunatic, not so found by inquisition, was maintained for some years by her brothers in a private lunatic asylum, and they expended more than 700*l.* in so maintaining her. Afterwards, they being unable any longer to pay the expense of her maintenance, she was removed to a county asylum. After she had been there some years a legacy of nearly 650*l.* became payable, which had been bequeathed to her, to be paid to her brothers, as acting on her behalf, and to apply the bequest "for her benefit at such times and in such manner as to them may seem most for her interest." The brothers presented a petition and asked that they might be allowed to retain the legacy, offering to undertake to provide for the future maintenance of the lunatic. The justices of the county claimed to be paid in priority the sum of 310*l.*, which was the cost of the lunatic's maintenance during the time she had been in the county asylum. An order was made that the brothers should retain the legacy, they giving the undertaking which they offered to give. Gibson, In re, L. R. 7 Ch. 52; 25 L. T. 551; 20 W. R. 107.

Expenses incurred by the overseers for the maintenance of a lunatic paid to them, upon petition, out of his share in a sum of stock standing in court. Ward's Estate, In re, 2 W. R. 406.

—— Past Maintenance.]—Where a pauper lunatic has been placed in an asylum, and expenses incurred by the parish to which he belongs in his maintenance and that of family, and he comes into property, the court will order payment to the overseers and guardians out of the fund, for the past maintenance of himself, his wife and child. Drewery's Trust, In re, 2 W. R. 436.

h. Property, Care and Management of.

1. Generally.

Committee of Estate—Jurisdiction of Court.]—The care of the person and property of a lunatic is a trust reposed in the king, who discharges it by bailiff, which bailiff is appointed by the person holding the great seal by virtue of a warrant from the Crown. But the superintendence of the conduct of the committee originates in the authority of the court itself, as being the court from which the commission issues, into which the inquisition is returned, and which makes the grant founded thereon. In this case A. was found next heir by the inquisition. B. (who would have been next heir if A. had been out of the way) had got into possession of the estates as committee of the deceased lunatic, and refused to deliver it to A., whom he alleged to be illegitimate. B. was restrained from interfering with the rents, under the colour of the authority vested in him as committee, and each party left at liberty to assert their claims as they should be advised. Fitzgerald, In re, 2 Sch. & Lef. 432; 1 L. & G. 20.

——— Not determined by Death of Lunatic.]—The control of the court on the committee of a lunatic is not determined by the death of the lunatic. 2 Sch. & Lef. 441.

—— Employment of Agent by.]—Order made without a reference to the master, that the committee of a lunatic should be at liberty to employ a particular person for inspecting the lunatic's property at a fixed salary to be paid out of the rents. Errington, In re, 2 Russ. 567.

It is competent for committees to employ an agent to superintend the details of the management of the estate of the lunatic. Brown, In re, 1 Mac. & G. 201; 1 Hall & Tw. 348; 19 L. J., Ch. 96.

—— Exceeding Authority.]—General rule, that the committee of a lunatic's estate exceeding his authority in the expenditure of money, shall, himself, pay the costs of the additional reference thereby occasioned. Langham, In re, 1 Coop. t. Cott. 228.

—— Assumption of Office by Stranger.]—When a party, without authority, but bonâ fide, assumes the management of the property of one mentally incompetent, this court will not, on his recovery, restore to him his property without making an equitable allowance for the expenses and liabilities. Selby v. Jackson, 6 Beav. 192; 13 L. J., Ch. 249.

—— Expenditure without previous Sanction by Court.]—Expenditure by the committee of a lunatic's estate, without a previous application to court, not to be allowed. Barton, Ex parte, 11 Ves. 397. S. P., Hilbert, Ex parte. Ib.

Where alterations, additions, or improvements are requisite in or to a lunatic's estate, the committee of the estate, in future, must apply to the Lord Chancellor for his lordship's order, sanctioning the necessary outlay, before the commencement by the committee of any such alterations, &c. Buckle, In re, 8 L. J., Ch. 264.

If a committee expend the lunatic's property without the sanction of the Lord Chancellor, the court will direct a reference to the master to inquire whether the expenditure has been beneficial or not, and even if it turns out to have been beneficial, will make the committee bear the costs of the inquiry; but the court refused to act on this rule, where the expenditure had been incurred with the sanction of the master, although such sanction was irregular. Brown, In re, 1 Mac. & G. 201; 1 Hall & Tw. 348; 19 L. J., Ch. 96.

—— Interference with Control.]—The control of the committee over a lunatic's estate will not generally be interfered with, except in cases of improper conduct on the part of the committee; and, therefore, a petition presented on behalf of a joint-stock company, in which a lunatic was a shareholder, praying for a reference, whether it would be for the benefit of the lunatic that the amount due in respect of his shares, by virtue of a call which had been made by the company, should be paid out of his estate, which petition was opposed by the committee, was dismissed with costs. Hitchon, In re, 15 L. J., Ch. 126.

—— Interest of Lunatic alone to be regarded.]—In managing the estate of a lunatic, the general principle is to attend solely to the interest of the owner without any regard to the succession. Oxenden v. Compton (Lord), 2 Ves. 72; 2 R. R. 131.

In administering the estate of a lunatic, the chancellor may apply personal estate in payment of debts to any extent; and is to take every advantage that tends fairly towards ordinary improvement, considering only the immediate interest of the proprietor; but consistently with that, alteration of property is, as far as possible, to be avoided; and great care must be taken that nothing extraordinary is attempted, as purchasing estates, disposing of interests, engaging in adventures, &c. Ib. 73.

Distinction in lunacy, the Lord Chancellor acting under a special commission, does what is for the lunatic's benefit, taking the advice and assistance of the presumptive representatives in managing the property; thus, cutting timber, or selling real estate to pay debts, &c., not regarding the different forms of disposition, the power over each species of property upon a lucid interval being the same. Phillips, Ex parte, 19 Ves. 118; 12 R. R. 151.

—— Nature of Property or Right of Succession not to be changed.]—It is a rule never to change the property of a lunatic, nor to effect any alteration as to the succession to it. Money of lunatic lent in discharge of incumbrances on his estate in Scotland shall go as his personal in England. Annandale, Ex parte, Ambl. 81. And see 2 Ves. 381.

Committees have not power to change nature of estate, real or personal. Audley v. Audley, 2 Dick. 16; 2 Vern. 192.

Committees of a lunatic invest part of his personal estate in purchase of lands in fee. This shall be taken as personal estate, and in case of his death shall go to the next of kin, and not to his heir. Ib.

Rules in lunacy derived from 17 Edw. 2. The first and paramount is to provide for the personal care and comfort of the lunatic. The second and subordinate is, not to vary the nature of the property so as to affect the right of succession, unless it be necessary for the benefit of the lunatic. Weld v. Tew, 1 Beat. 268.

On the petition of a curator ad bona, appointed by a foreign court to administer the estate of a lunatic, to have transferred to him as such curator the share of the lunatic in the proceeds of real estate in England sold in a partition suit by direction of the court:—Held, that, as the fund retained its character of realty the curator was not entitled to call for a transfer thereof. Grimwood v. Bartels, 46 L. J., Ch. 788 ; 25 W. R. 843.

—— Advice of Master.] — The court will not, except in a very special case, supported by affidavits, make a general order authorising the committee of a lunatic's estate to act under the opinion and advice of the master in the management of the estate. Cooper, In re, 1 Myl. & Cr. 33.

The thirteenth Order in lunacy of the 27th October, 1842, does not authorise the master to take upon himself the direction of the lunatic's estate in the matters last mentioned, but was intended solely to enable him to conduct inquiries respecting the person and property of the lunatic, without any previous order for that purpose. Brown, In re, 1 Mac. & G. 201.

—— Power to Sue for Rent accruing after Death of Lunatic.]—The committee of a lunatic's estate cannot maintain an action for rent issuing out of a lunatic's freehold estate, which has accrued after the death of the lunatic, though reserved by lease made by the committee on behalf of the lunatic in which the lessee covenanted with the committee (as such) for payment of rent, and though the lunacy matter has not been dismissed out of lunacy, and the committee has been directed, by order in the matter, to continue in receipt of the rents and income of the lunatic's property. Foot v. Leslie, 16 L. R., Ir. 411.

—— Power to Negotiate Debts.] — Quære, whether the committee of a lunatic has a power to negotiate debts due to the lunatic ; so, for instance, as to convert a separate liability into a joint one. Parker, Ex parte, Stocks, In re, 2 Mont. D. & D. 511 ; 11 L. J., Bk. 26 ; 6 Jur. 541.

Money Paid into Court—39 & 40 Geo. 3, c. 56.] —The statute 39 & 40 Geo. 3, c. 56, does not apply to money paid into court in the matter of a lunatic. Verney, Ex parte, Jacob, 234.

Investment — Government Securities.] — The property of a lunatic is to be invested into government securities only, except under peculiar circumstances. Ellice, Ex parte, Jacob, 234.

—— Private Security.]—The court will never permit any part of the lunatic's estate to be laid out on private security. Calthorpe, Ex parte, 1 Cox, 182.

The court will not lend out the money of an infant or lunatic on mortgage or other private security. Ridgways, In re, 1 Hog. 309.

—— Particular Form.] — An investment of lunatic's property ordered in a particular form. Magnus v. Bingley, 2 W. R. 130.

Partition.] — Order made in lunacy and chancery directing committee to carry into effect decree for partition. Sherard, In re, Lowther v. Cuff, 1 De G. J. & S. 421.

Applications affecting Ownership of Property.] —In ex parte applications seeking to affect the ownership of property, the strictest proof of title will be required, and the bar are expected to assist the court with any authorities that may exist upon the point. Chorley, In re, 16 Jur. 233.

2. Timber.

Authority of Court to order decaying Timber to be Cut.]—Lord chancellor thought that, notwithstanding the words of the statute 17 Ed. 2, s. 1, cc. 9, 10, the court has authority to order timber, decaying on the estate of a lunatic, to be cut ; but did not absolutely decide the point, or whether the produce should be considered as real or personal estate, directing the point to be argued on a bill filed. Bromfield, Ex parte, 3 Bro. C. C. 510. And see 1 Ves. 453 ; Dick. 762 ; 2 R. R. 126.

Timber for Repairs.] — A committee of a lunatic's real estate may cut down timber for repairs. Ludlow, Ex parte, 2 Atk. 407.

Authority of Committee to Cut Timber.]—Committees have no authority of themselves to cut timber, or to expend sums in draining and other improvements, or to consent to an act of parliament for making a railway. Ib.

Purchase-money of Timber.]—The purchase-money of timber belonging to a lunatic estate permitted to be paid to the receiver in order to be by him paid into court. Clayton, Ex parte, Starkie, In re, 1 Russ. 476.

Timber Cut without Authority — Personal Assets.]—If a bailiff cuts timber without authority, and before it is sold the party dies, it is personal assets, and the heir has no action against the personal representative, nor is there any equity between them on the subject. Oxenden v. Compton (Lord), 2 Ves. 74 ; 2 R. R. 131.

Real and Personal Representatives—Equities between.]—There is no equity between the real and personal representatives after the death of a lunatic, to have property which was altered by the court restored ; therefore the produce of timber on the estate of a lunatic cut and sold by order, on report that it would be for his benefit, is personal assets. Ib.

Management in usual Manner.]—The statute of lunatics does not introduce any new right in the crown. The words "waste and destruction" in it are to be construed in the ordinary, not technical sense. Where timber makes part of the general rental of an estate in case of lunacy, it would be a breach of duty not to manage it in the usual manner. Ib.

3. Repairs and Improvements.

Repairs—Ordinary and Extraordinary.]—The ordinary repairs upon a lunatic's real estate will be directed to be borne by the personal estate ; but any extraordinary outlay of the personal estate on the land should retain its character of personalty. Badcock, In re, 4 Myl. & Cr. 440 ; 8 L. J., Ch. 283 ; 3 Jur. 694.

—— Expense allowed as being beneficial to Estate.]—A payment to a lunatic's son, tenant in tail in remainder out of accumulated rents to furnish the mansion house in which he lived, refused ; but a sum was allowed for repairs, it being beneficial to the estate that the son should inhabit it. Tottenham, Ex parte, 11 Ir. Eq. R. 414.

Repairs and Improvements—Expense of—How raised.]—The court will not order the lunatic's personal estate to be turned into real estate, though it might be laid out in repairs. Weld v. Tew, Beat. 270.

The court has allowed part of a lunatic's personal estate to be laid out in repairs, and even upon improvements of his real estate. Sergeson v. Sealey, 2 Atk. 414; 9 Madd. 370.

Repairs and permanent improvements to a large amount upon an estate of which a lunatic was tenant in tail in possession were found to be expedient. There was in court a sufficient fund of personalty to which the lunatic was absolutely entitled, and his income was much more than sufficient for his requirements. The amount required for repairs and improvements was ordered to be raised by mortgage or charge of the settled estate. Gist, In re, 5 Ch. D. 881; 26 W. R. 22—C. A.

A lunatic was tenant for life of the H. estate, and tenant in tail in possession of the D. estate. Expenses were incurred by the committee in improvements on both estates, but chiefly on the former:—Held, that there was no jurisdiction to charge the D. estate with the expenses incurred on the H. estate. Vavasour, In re, 29 Ch. D. 306; 53 L. T. 412—C. A.

—— Premises Destroyed by Fire—Order to Rebuild.]—A. B. being devisee for life of premises, with a condition against committing any manner of waste, and for keeping the same in good and tenantable repair, became lunatic, and the premises were subsequently destroyed by accidental fire. A petition was then presented by the committee of the person, who was also remainderman, praying a declaration that the premises ought to be rebuilt at the expense of the lunatic's estate, and a reference as to the amount of such expense, and out of what fund it ought to be defrayed. The Lord Chancellor made an order for the reference, holding that the words of the will created an obligation upon the tenant for life to rebuild the premises, and that the question of such liability was rightly brought before the court on the petition. Skingsley, In re, 3 Mac. & G. 221; 20 L. J., Ch. 142; 15 Jur. 958.

—— Sanction of Court to Expenditure.]—Where alterations, additions, or improvements are requisite in or to a lunatic's estate, the committee of the estate, in future, must apply to the lord chancellor, for his lordship's order sanctioning the necessary outlay, before the commencement by the committee of any such alterations, &c. Buckle, In re, 8 L. J., Ch. 264.

—— Expenditure without previous Sanction.]—Expenditure by the committee of a lunatic's estate, without a previous application, not to be allowed. Marton, Ex parte, 11 Ves. 397. S. P., Hilbert, Ex parte. Ib.

Receivers and committees not to apply the trust fund in repairs to any considerable extent without a previous application. Upon a receiver's application to be allowed for repairs done, an inquiry was directed whether the repairs were reasonable. Att.-Gen. v. Vigor, 12 Ves. 563.

Repairs made without previous order, though reported necessary, not allowed to committee of lunatic's estate. Anon., 10 Ves. 104.

—— Expenditure beyond Amount Sanctioned.]—A committee, who having been authorised by the court to expend a certain sum in rebuilding a farm-house, expended half as much again in building one of larger size on a different site, was not allowed the excess; although what he had done appeared to be beneficial to the estate. Langham, In re, 2 Ph. 299.

4. Discharge of Incumbrances.

Charge on Real Estate Paid off out of Personalty.]—Where a charge on a lunatic's real estate is paid off out of her personal property by order of the court, the securities are to be assigned without prejudice to the conflicting claims of the real and personal representatives of the lunatic to the benefit of the assignment. Digby (Earl), Ex parte, 1 J. & W. 640.

Redemption of Land Tax.]—Land tax on a lunatic's estate redeemed, by order, out of the produce; decaying timber ordered to be cut for payment of debts, under the master's report that it was for his benefit, no equity for a charge in favour of the next of kin. Phillips, Ex parte, 19 Ves. 118; 12 R. R. 151.

Mortgage—Payment off.]—Timber on a lunatic's estate, ex parte paternâ, cut and applied in discharge of a mortgage on his estate, ex parte maternâ, no equity between the heirs. Ib.

In the management of a lunatic's property, his benefit alone is considered. Lord chancellor may make an order in lunatic's affairs, after the death of the lunatic; mortgage of his estate paid off, and the mortgage term ordered to be assigned to attend the inheritance, and not in trust for the next of kin. Grimstone, Ex parte, Ambl. 706. See also 2 Sch. & Lef. 432.

—— By Committee and Heir Presumptive—Repayment out of Surplus Rents.]—The committee and heir presumptive of a lunatic, who was absolute owner of a freehold estate, subject to a charge of 900*l.*, paid off the charge out of his own moneys, and had it assigned to a trustee for him. He subsequently applied to the court for leave to apply the surplus rents of the estate towards payment of the charge, but there were then judgments affecting the lunatic personally, and the application was refused. When the judgments were paid, the committee, in the lifetime of the lunatic, paid off the charge out of the surplus rents, without any order, but was allowed the amount in passing his account:—Held, that the next of kin of the lunatic had no equity to have it kept alive for their benefit. Newcombe v. Newcombe, 3 Ir. Eq. R. 414; Dr. 358.

—— Savings out of Real Estate—Equities as between Heir-at-law and Next of Kin.]—G. M., who was a lunatic, was seised of an estate in fee, subject to a charge. Pending the lunacy, the owner of the charge applied for payment thereof, whereupon an order was pronounced in the lunacy matter, whereby it was referred to the master to inquire and report whether it would be for the benefit of the lunatic that any part of the charge should be paid off, and if so, out of what funds such payment should be made. The master reported that it would be for the benefit of the lunatic that the charge should be paid off, and that such payment should be made out of the funds to the credit of the lunacy matter (consisting of the savings of the real estate). The court directed the charge to be paid off, and ordered it to be assigned to a trustee, in trust to attend the inheritance, or for the lunatic, his executors and administrators, as should be thereafter determined, without prejudice to any question which might arise upon the death of the lunatic between his heir-at-law and next of kin. In conformity with this order the charge was paid off and assigned to a trustee; and the lunatic subsequently died intestate. Upon a bill filed by the plaintiff, one of the next of kin, and also the personal representative of the lunatic, claiming the benefit of the charge:—Held, that there was no equity in favour of the next of kin, and that the heir-at-law was entitled to hold the estate freed from the charge. Leitrim (Earl) v. Enery, 6 Ir. Eq. R. 357; Dr. 330.

—— Payment out of Personalty—Next of Kin.]—Real estate descended on a lunatic, subject to a mortgage, afterwards exonerated by the lunatic's personalty, not in any way derived from, or connected with, descended estate:—Held, that the order and course of succession was not thereby changed, for the next of kin were entitled, on the death of the lunatic, to have so much of the personalty as had been applied in discharge of the mortgage, considered as a lien on the real estate, and raised accordingly. Weld v. Tew, Beat. 266.

Freehold cottages and hereditaments descended upon a lunatic, subject to an existing mortgage. By an order in lunacy, in 1856, it was ordered that the estates should be conveyed to a trustee for the lunatic, and that the amount due upon the mortgage should be paid out of a portion of the personal estate of the lunatic in court, without prejudice to any question. Upon the death of the lunatic, intestate and unmarried, a question arose between his heir-at-law and his next of kin as to the amount paid off:—Held, that such amount ought to be raised out of the freeholds, and paid to the personal representative of the lunatic. Leeming, In re, 3 De G. F. & J. 43; 30 L. J., Ch. 263; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 115; 3 L. T. 686; 9 W. R. 403.

—— Payment off—Ademption.]—Where part of a lunatic's estate was subject to a mortgage, which it was desired to pay off, an order was made that the mortgage be paid off without prejudice to the question how the debt should ultimately be borne, and that the mortgage must be kept on foot by transferring it to the committee to be disposed of as the court might direct. Leeming, In re (3 De G. F. & J. 43), followed. Melly, In re, 53 L. J., Ch. 248; 49 L. T. 429; 31 W. R. 898—C. A.

—— —— Time for Deciding as to Exoneration of Inheritance.]—The proper time to decide whether the payment of a charge affecting the real estate of a lunatic is to have the effect of exonerating the inheritance is when the payment is made; and the decision ought not to be deferred until after the lunatic's death. Leitrim (Earl) v. Enery, Dr. 333; 6 Ir. Eq. R. 357.

—— By Lunatic when Sane.]—Mortgage made by a lunatic, when sane, for 50*l.* or more, money taken upon it by the committee, ordered to stand as security only for the first 50*l.* Foster v. Marchant, 1 Vern. 262.

Trust for Purchase of Land varied by Act of Parliament.]—A sum devised to be laid out in land, in England, in trust for A. with remainders over, was by act of parliament secured on A.'s estate in Scotland during his minority. A. attained twenty-one, and became a lunatic:—Held, it might be called in and laid out pursuant to the trust; and that it was to be considered as if it were a real estate in England, the interest thereon, however, to be considered as personal estate in England. The master was ordered to settle a rateable proportion for the lunatic's maintenance and his debts, between the real and personal estate in England, and those in Scotland respectively; another sum in the exchequer in England arising from the sale of heritable jurisdiction in Scotland, considered as real estate in Scotland. Annandale (Marquis) v. Annandale (Marchioness), 2 Ves. Sen. 381.

Lunatic entitled to Estate and Charge thereon—Right of Heir.]—A representative must take his interest as fortune has directed it, and has no equity to vary it; therefore, where a lunatic dies, entitled to an estate, and also to a charge upon it, the heir takes it discharged: a trust term to secure the charges makes no difference, for it remains inert, unless required to be executed for proper purposes; the trustees have no discretion. Oxenden v. Compton (Lord), 2 Ves. J. 261; 4 Bro. C. C. 231; 2 R. R. 131.

5. Leases.

Committee—Lease by—Jurisdiction of Court to sanction.]—The court possesses the discretion of a landlord in the management of the real estate of lunatics and infants, and should exercise it in making lettings, to give a preference to the old tenant. It ought to be governed solely by the highest bidding. Ball, In re, 1 Moll. 141.

A gentleman entered into an arrangement by letter with the land agent who acted for the committee of a lunatic's estate, to take a lease of part of the estate for a term of three years. No formal agreement was entered into, nor was the sanction of the master in lunacy applied for, but the tenant was let into possession, and expended a considerable sum in repairs and in improvements. After he had been nearly eighteen months in possession, the committee gave him six months' notice to quit, upon which he applied by petition to have the terms of his arrangement with the agent carried into effect:—Held, that the court had jurisdiction to make an order giving effect to that arrangement. Wynne, In re, 7 Ch. D. 229; 26 L. T. 406; 20 W. R. 348.

—— Consent of Court.]—Committee of a lunatic cannot make leases or encumber the lunatic's estate, without leave of the court. Foster v. Marchant, 1 Vern. 262.

The committee of a lunatic cannot, without statutory authority, make a lease of the lunatic's lands, and if he does, cannot bring an action of covenant on such lease. Knipe v. Palmer, 2 Wils. K. B. 130.

—— Lease without consent—Liability of Committee.]—The committee of a lunatic's estate, who, in conjunction with the wife and heir-at-law of the lunatic, had let the estate at a certain rent, without obtaining the sanction of the court, three years afterwards, upon the report of the master finding that a larger rent might have been obtained, was held responsible for the amount of such larger rent, and ordered to pay all the costs occasioned by his having let the property at an under-value. Wilkins, In re, 6 Jur. 308.

—— Allowing Rent to Fall in Arrear—Personal Liability.]—Where the committee of the estate of a lunatic permitted the solicitor whom he employed in the lunacy to become tenant of a mansion-house, forming part of the lunatic's estate, and allowed the rent to be in arrears for four years, none having in fact been paid except by means of a set-off of a smaller sum, being the amount of the solicitor's bill of costs accruing from time to time:—Held, that the committee was personally liable to make good the deficiency. Swindell, Ex parte, 2 De G. M. & G. 91; 21 L. J. (N.S.) Ch. 748.

Committee not to be allowed for buildings and improvements on the lunatic's estate. Ib.

Upon granting a lease of the lunatic's estate, the usage is, that the committee pays the expenses of the inquiry, and the lessee of the lease. Ib.

Where a lunatic was bound by covenant to grant a renewal of a lease, the expenses incurred by the lessee in applying to the court, under the 1 Will 4, c. 65, s. 19, for a direction to the committee to execute a lease instead of the lunatic, must be borne by the lunatic's estate. Barnes, Ex parte, 17 L. J., Ch. 436.

D. his against another; and the attestation clause was "Signed, sealed and delivered by A. B. and C. D. in the presence of," &c. Held, that the lease was well executed on the part of the lunatic. Lawrie v. Lees, 51 L. J., Ch. 209; 7 App. Cas. 19; 46 L. T. 210; 30 W. R. 185—H. L. (E.)

6. Enfranchisement of Copyholds.

Devolution of Enfranchised Estate.]—The court on sanctioning proceedings for carrying into effect the enfranchisement of a copyhold estate belonging to a lunatic, the rules of descent as to which were different from those as to the descent of freeholds, made a declaration that in the event of his dying intestate as to the enfranchised property, his heir-at-law would stand seised thereof in trust for the persons who would have been entitled thereto as his heirs according to the custom of the manor if it had not been enfranchised. Ryder, In re, 20 Ch. D. 514; 30 W. R. 417.

7. Sale, Portion, Exchange.

Real Estate—Sale—For Payment of Debts.]—The Lord Chancellor cannot, upon a petition in lunacy, order part of the lunatic's real estate to be sold for payment of his debts to prevent a bill by his creditors. Smith, Ex parte, 5 Ves. 556.

—— In Consideration of Rent-charge.]—The court has power under ss. 117 and 120 of the Lunacy Act, 1890, to authorise a sale of the real estate of a person "lawfully detained as a lunatic," in consideration of a perpetual rent-charge instead of a price in cash, and will do so where it is proved that such a sale will be for the lunatic's benefit. Ware, In re, 61 L. J. Ch. 279; [1892] 1 Ch. 344; 66 L. T. 389—C. A.

—— Administration Action—Consent of Master—Appointment of Committee to convey.]—A devisee of real estate, subject to payment of debts, became of unsound mind, and was so found by inquisition. A committee was appointed, and an action for the administration of the testator's real and personal estate was commenced with the sanction of the master in lunacy, in the chancery division, by the lunatic and his committee, and, the testator's personal estate proving to be insufficient for payment of his debts, an order was made for the sale of all the testator's real estate upon payment of the purchase-money into court. Under this order the real estate was sold, and the purchaser paid the purchase-money into court. He, however, raised an objection to the title of the vendors, on the ground that they could not convey without an order in lunacy:—Held, that the administration action in which the order for sale was made, having been properly commenced with the sanction of the master in lunacy, the lunatic plaintiff was entitled to carry on the action, and was, therefore, also bound by the order for sale made in it; that the lunatic was, therefore, a trustee within the Trustee Extension Act, 1852, s. 1, of the real estate, and that his committee should be appointed to convey. Stamper, In re, Stamper v. Stamper, 46 L. T. 372.

—— Disentailing Deed—Execution by Committee.]—A lunatic was tenant in tail of an estate, subject to a charge for portions. In a suit in the court of chancery a decree had been made ordering the charge to be raised by a sale or mortgage of the estate. On a petition by the committee, asking that he might execute a disentailing deed on behalf of the lunatic for the purpose of raising the charge by a mortgage:—Held, that the interest of the remainderman ought not to be barred further than was necessary, and that the mortgage should be made for a term of years, and without a power of sale. Pares, In re, 2 Ch. D. 61; 24 W. R. 619—C. A.

—— Trusts of Proceeds of Sale.]—The court, under its lunacy jurisdiction, has power to bar the estate tail of a lunatic tenant in tail; but it is the duty of the court so to exercise it as not to affect the rights of the persons entitled in remainder to the estate. Where a lunatic was tenant in tail of an undivided share of an estate, and an action was brought for the partition of the estate, the court, under the 6th section of the Partition Act, 1868, authorised the committee of the lunatic to request a sale and to join in conveying the estate to the purchaser, but directed that the proceeds of the sale should be subject to the same uses as the lunatic's estate was subject to before the sale. Pares, In re, Lillingston v. Pares, 12 Ch. D. 333; 41 L. T. 574; 28 W. R. 193—C. A.

—— Sale to Redeem Land Tax—Sanction of Lord Chancellor.]—Notwithstanding the provisions contained in the Land Tax Redemption Act (42 Geo. 3, c. 116, it is the duty of the committee of a lunatic to obtain the sanction of the lord chancellor before proceeding to a sale of any part of the lunatic's estate, for the purpose of raising moneys wherewith to redeem the land-tax. Wade, In re, 1 Hall & Tw. 202.

—— Sale for Building Purposes.]—Land of which a lunatic is tenant for life cannot be sold for building purposes, under 16 & 17 Vict. c. 70, s. 125, which applies only to lands of which a lunatic is seised or entitled in fee. Corbett, In re, 35 L. J., Ch. 793; L. R. 1 Ch. 516; 12 Jur. (N.S.) 679; 14 L. T. 748; 14 W. R. 904.

Neither can such land be sold under the powers conferred by s. 116, unless the sale is actually for one of the purposes specified in that section. Ib.

Semble, where it is desirable that the land of a lunatic tenant for life, who has a sufficient maintenance, should be sold for building purposes, the proper course is to apply to the court under the Settled Estates Act. Ib.

By s. 125 of the Lunacy Regulation Act, 1853, "where a lunatic is seised of or entitled to land in fee simple, and it appears to the Lord Chancellor . . . to be for his benefit that the same or any part thereof should be made available for building purposes, and to that end the same should, in lieu of being demised for long terms of years, be absolutely sold, he may order the same to be sold accordingly, to such persons, in such quantities, upon such terms and in such manner as to him may seem expedient." A lunatic was seised in fee simple of land on which was a house. The house having been burnt down, the committee contracted (subject to the sanction of the court) to sell the land to a person who intended to build thereon:—Held, that the case was not within the section. Tomkins, In re, 60 L. T. 402—C. A.

—— Share of Real Estate.]—The court has no jurisdiction under s. 124 of the Lunacy Regulation Act, 1853, to authorise the committee of a lunatic to sell the lunatic's undivided share of land to the owner of the other shares. Weld, In re, 28 Ch. D. 514; 52 L. T. 703; 33 W. R. 845—C. A. S. P., Woolhouse, In re, 28 Ch. D. 515, n.; 52 L. T. 703, n.; 33 W. R. 845.

—— Sale under Settled Land Act—Tenant in Tail.]—The court will give leave to the committee of a lunatic tenant in tail to take proceedings under the Settled Land Act, 1882, for the sale of his undivided shares to the owner of the other shares. Weld, In re (28 Ch. D. 514) considered. Gaitskell, In re, 58 L. J., Ch. 262; 40 Ch. D. 416—C. A.

—— Conveyance by Married Women.]—The Lunacy Regulation Acts of 1853 and 1862 contain no machinery by means of which a conveyance of the legal estate of a married woman of unsound mind in freehold property can be obtained; and in a case where this was sought, an order was made simply directing a sale, and declaring all beneficial interest of the married woman bound by the order. Stables, In re, 4 De G. J. & S. 257; 3 N. R. 620; 33 L. J., Ch. 422; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 245; 10 L. T. 1; 12 W. R. 513.

—— Covenants for Title—Tenant for Life—Committee's Powers.]—A tenant for life, who is a lunatic so found by inquisition, can sell and convey the fee as a beneficial owner, and the court has power to authorise a committee to enter into covenants for title so as to bind the lunatic. Ray, In re, 65 L. J., Ch. 316; [1896] 1 Ch. 468; 73 L. T. 723; 44 W. R. 353; 60 J. P. 340—C. A.

Fox, In re (33 Ch. D. 37), did not decide that the court could in no case authorise a committee to enter into covenants on behalf of a lunatic. Ib.

Per Kay, L.J.: The word "covenants" in s. 122, sub-s. 2, of the Lunacy Act, 1890, refers to covenants by a lessor as well as to those by a lessee. Ib.

Copyholds, Sale of.]—Sale of copyhold estates of a lunatic are not authorised by statute 43 Geo. 3, c. 75. The statute 59 Geo. 3, c. 80, s. 2, extends the power of sale to estates held by ancient demesne or copy of court roll. Birch, Ex parte, 3 Swanst. 98.

A committee of the person and estate of a lunatic may levy a fine, or suffer a recovery of copyhold lands of which the lunatic is tenant in tail, with immediate reversion to himself in fee, under 1 Will. 4, c. 65, s. 28, for effecting a sale for the purposes of the act. Flint, Ex parte, Brand, In re, 1 Myl. & K. 150; 2 L. J., Ch. 12.

The 28th section of the act applies only to lands, of which the lunatic is tenant in tail, with immediate reversion to himself. Ib.

Title—Reference to Master.]—The Lord Chancellor cannot make a title to a lunatic's estate, but will direct the usual reference to the master if the purchaser be willing to accept the title. Halford, In re, 1 Jur. 524.

Partition—Committee—Execution of Assurance.]—A decree having been made for partition of lands, an undivided share in which was vested in a lunatic, as tenant in tail, an order was made in lunacy and in chancery, directing the committee to execute all necessary assurances for giving effect to the partition. Sherrard, In re, Lowther v. Cuffe, 1 De G. J. & S. 421.

Where a decree has been made by a vice-chancellor for a partition of lands of which a lunatic was entitled to an undivided share as tenant in tail in possession, the court, on the committee appearing and expressing his opinion that the partition would be for the benefit of the lunatic, made an order, intituled in the Trustee Act, 1850, the Lunacy Regulation Act, 16 & 17 Vict. c. 70, the matter of the lunacy, and the suit in which the decree had been made, directing the partition to be carried out, and a conveyance to be executed by the committee. Singleton v. Hopkins, Blomar, In re, 2 De G. & J. 88; 27 L. J., Ch. 173; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 546; 6 W. R. 178.

Exchange of Land—Jurisdiction of Court.]—The court has power under the Lunacy Regulation Act, 1853, s. 124, to make an exchange of the land of the lunatic without the minerals under it. Dicconson, In re, 15 Ch. D. 316; 29 W. R. 222.

Ecclesiastical Lease—Sanction of Court to Sale.]—When the sanction of the court of chancery is required to the sale of an ecclesiastical lease to the ecclesiastical commissioners, by reason of a beneficiary being of unsound mind, the application should, under 23 & 24 Vict. c. 124, s. 38, be made in chancery, and not in lunacy. Cheshire, In re, 41 L. J., Ch. 208; L. R. 7 Ch. 50; 25 L. T. 721; 20 W. R. 49.

Sale to Railway Company—Contract—Sanction of Court.]—The sanction of the Lord Chancellor ought to be obtained in all cases, by the committees of a lunatic, to a contract for sale of a portion of a lunatic's land to a railway company. Taylor, In re, 1 Mac. & G. 210; 1 Hall & Tw. 432.

Purchaser—Liability of—Notice of Charge—Payment of Purchase-money in accordance with Order in Lunacy.]—A purchaser under an order in lunacy paid his purchase-money, in the manner directed by the lords commissioners in lunacy, disregarding a charge of the plaintiff and a suit to enforce it, of which he had notice. The amount was principally applied in payment of the costs of the receiver in lunacy relating to the sale, &c. Upon a bill by the plaintiff to make the purchaser liable for not seeing to the due application of the purchase-money, the master of the rolls, considering himself bound by the order in lunacy, and as having no jurisdiction to alter it, retained the bill, with liberty to the plaintiff to apply in lunacy for the discharge or variation of the order. Norris v. Dudley Stuart (Lord), 16 Beav. 359.

See also post, V. INSANITY IN RELATION TO CERTAIN ACTS OF PARLIAMENT AFFECTING REAL ESTATE, col. 662.

8. Mortgages.

Power to Mortgage—Allowance to Committee—Arrears.]—An order was made that the brother of a lunatic, who was committee of his estate, should be allowed to retain the family mansion and grounds and the heirlooms therein for his own occupation and use, and that of his unmarried sisters, and that 4,000*l.* a year should be allowed him for his expenses in reference thereto. The committee with his sisters occupied the mansion accordingly, and incurred heavy and, as it was alleged, unreasonable expenses about the establishment. The income being insufficient to pay the allowance, it fell into arrear, and the committee mortgaged the arrears. He subsequently was removed from being committee, and became bankrupt, and a large amount of bills incurred in keeping up the establishment remained unpaid. A surplus having arisen applicable to payment of the arrears, the new committee presented a petition for direction as to its application:—Held, that although the allowance was made to the former committee without any obligation to account, and with an intention indirectly to confer a benefit on him and his sisters, still it was an allowance made to a person in a fiduciary position for a particular purpose, and which he had no right to mortgage, and that the mortgagee could stand in no better position than the committee himself. Weld, In re, 51 L. J., Ch. 913 ; 20 Ch. D. 451 ; 46 L. T. 397 ; 30 W. R. 385.

Held, also, that the person to whom an allowance of this kind is made has no such right to arrears as will prevent the court from dealing with them in such way as it may consider just, and if the court finds that the expenses incurred for the purposes for which the allowance was granted remained unpaid, it will stop the arrears, and make provision for payment of such expenses. An inquiry was therefore directed as to which of the debts of the committee were properly incurred in keeping up the establishment at the mansion. Ib.

Power to bar Estate tail.]—When a lunatic is tenant in tail of an estate subject to a charge for portions which it is requisite to raise, the estate tail and the subsequent remainders will be barred only so far as is necessary for that purpose. A mortgage for a term of years without power of sale authorised accordingly. Pares, In re, 2 Ch. D. 61 ; 24 W. R. 619—C. A.

Debts of Prior Owner.]—A lunatic was entitled in fee to one moiety of real estate as one of the two co-heiresses of an ancestor who had died intestate. The real estate was liable as assets for payment of a considerable amount of simple contract debts of the ancestor which his personal estate was insufficient to pay. The court authorised the committee to concur with the other co-heiress in a mortgage of the entirety to raise the amount of the debts, the mortgage being so framed that the lunatic's moiety was only liable for one moiety of the mortgage debt and interest, and could not be made liable for any default of the other co-heiress in payment of the other moiety of the principal and interest, but the court declined to authorise the committee to enter into any covenant on behalf of the lunatic. Foæ, In re, 33 Ch. D. 37 ; 55 L. T. 39 ; 35 W. R. 81—C. A.

Costs.]—A lunatic being tenant in tail of an undivided share of an estate, a decree for partition was made, which directed that the lunatic's costs should be raised by mortgage of the land allotted to her in severalty. On the completion of the partition, the lands allotted to the lunatic were conveyed to her simply in tail, without any provision for raising the costs :—Held, by the lords justices, sitting in lunacy, that they had no jurisdiction to authorise the committee to mortgage the land for the purposes of raising the costs. Bloomar, In re, 2 De G. F. & J. 154.

Duty of Committee to keep down Interest.]—Where a committee of a lunatic, against whom judgment had been obtained, but not duly docketed, paid over rents to a mortgagee of a date subsequent to the judgment :—Held, that he was not liable as for money had and received to the use of one who claimed as tenant by elegit under the judgment ; for it was his first duty as committee to keep down the interest on the mortgage. Braithwaite v. Watts, 2 Tyrw. 293 ; 2 C. & J. 318; 1 L. J., Ex. 97*.

9. Investment.

Real Securities.]—Money belonging to the personal estate of the lunatic, under particular circumstances, to accommodate the family, not a stranger, and on a first mortgage, not otherwise, will be ordered to be laid out on real security, instead of bank annuities, on procuring a report that it is for the benefit of the lunatic. Johnson, Ex parte, 1 Moll. 128.

Government Securities.]—A lunatic's property ought not to be laid out on anything but government securities, except in very peculiar cases. Ellice, Ex parte, Jacob, 234.

10. Transfers.

Railway Stock.]—Railway stock standing in the name of a lunatic in the books of a company, by the constitution of which transfers of stock are required to be by deed, is stock within the meaning of the Lunacy Regulation Act (16 & 17 Vict. c. 70), and transferable by an order under s. 140. Ives, In re, 3 De G. J. & S. 453 ; 2 N. R. 2 ; 32 L. J., Ch. 673 ; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 611 ; 8 L. T. 266 ; 11 W. R. 578.

Unclaimed Stock.]—A sum of 600*l.* consols standing in the name of a lady, now of unsound mind and residing abroad, having been transferred to the commissioners in consequence of the dividends having been unclaimed since 1839 :—The fund ordered, under the 56 Geo. 3, c. 60, to be transferred into the name of the attorney-general in trust in this matter, and the arrears of dividends ordered to be paid to the "curator" of the lunatic. Sargazurieta, In re, 1 W. R. 171.

Stock held by Trustees—Mistake in Name of Beneficiary.]—In a case where a female was found lunatic, under the christian name of Jane Eliza, and there afterwards appeared strong reason to believe that her true christian name was Elizabeth Jane, but there were no means of ascertaining the fact, the lord chancellor directed, there being no doubt as to the identity of the person, that an order for the transfer of stock held by trustees for the lunatic, under the name of Elizabeth Jane C., and the orders upon all future proceedings should be entitled, "In the matter of Elizabeth Jane C. in the commission called Jane Eliza C." Crawford, In re, 1 Myl. & Cr. 240.

—— Lunatic Trustee—Jurisdiction.] — The court of chancery has no jurisdiction to transfer stock standing in the name of two trustees, one of whom is a lunatic. Jeffreys v. Drysdale, 7 Jur. (N.S.) 667 ; 4 L. T. 454 ; 9 W. R. 428—L.JJ.

Debentures.]—A debenture bond of a limited company, according to the constitution of which debentures were transferred by deed, and the deeds of transfer upon presentation to the company were registered in the company's book of mortgages, ordered to be transferred under s. 141 of the Lunacy Regulation Act, 1853. Mitchell, In re, 17 Ch. D. 515; 45 L. T. 60—C. A.

Fund in Court—One of Trustees Lunatic—Reference to Master.]—The lord chancellor declined to order the transfer of funds standing in the joint names of the lunatic and another to the party claiming such transfer, without a previous reference to the master. Were, In re, 3 Mac. & G. 233.

—— Payment in under Trustee Relief Act—Separate Account—Notice to Trustees.] — A fund having been paid into court by trustees under the Trustee Relief Act, one-third was carried to the separate account of one of the cestui que trust, who was a lunatic. Afterwards a petition was presented in lunacy for a transfer of one-third belonging to the lunatic :—Held, that the trustees need not be served with notice of the petition. Young, In re, 5 W. R. 400.

11. Vesting Orders.

Estate under 200*l*.—County Court—Jurisdiction.]—Where the estate of a lunatic is under 200*l*. and the judge of a county court makes an order under s. 132 of the Lunacy Act, 1890, directing some person to take possession of and realise the lunatic's property, the judge has no jurisdiction to direct further that the Bank of England transfer to such person stock standing in the name of the lunatic. Noyce, In re, 61 L. J., Q. B. 628; [1892] 1 Q. B. 642; 66 L. T. 331; 40 W. R. 371; 56 J. P. 564—C. A.

i. Deposit, &c., of Deeds and Documents.

1. Deposit.

Securities.]—Securities belonging to a lunatic's estate ordered to be deposited with the master for the purpose of reducing the amount of the committee's recognisances. Eagle, In re, 2 Ph. 201.

Will.]—Will of a testator subsequently found a lunatic, directed to be deposited in the custody of the master. Thompson, In re, 1 Russ. & M. 355.

2. Inspection.

Proceedings.]—According to the practice in lunacy no person except the parties and those claiming under them may as a right inspect the proceedings; other persons claiming the right to do so must make a case for the purpose. Wood, In re, Banner v. England, 4 De G. J. & S. 134; 33 L. J., Ch. 334; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 63; 9 L. T. 698; 12 W. R. 293.

J. B., a lunatic, was tenant in tail in possession of an estate of which C. B., his committee, was tenant in tail in remainder. An action having been brought after the death of J. B. without issue and without barring the entail, against C. B. to enforce an agreement made in lunacy in respect of the estate, into which it was asserted that C. B. had entered in her private capacity as well as in that of committee, a summons for production of documents was issued against her, asking that she might be ordered to produce, among other documents, counsel's briefs upon, and the shorthand writer's notes of, the proceedings in lunacy:—Held, that these documents were not privileged, and must be produced. Brown, In re, Tyas v. Brown, 42 L. T. 501; 28 W. R. 575.

Privilege.]—No person can inspect documents in the lunacy office without an order of one of the masters in lunacy or of a judge in lunacy, but any person who can satisfy the master or the judge that he desires to see the documents for any reasonable and proper purpose is allowed to do so, provided the lunatic if living is not prejudiced thereby. If the lunatic is dead and the applicant wants to see documents in the custody of the court in order to make good a claim to the lunatic's property, such a purpose is primâ facie sufficient to induce the court to allow inspection, even although the request is opposed by a rival litigant. The court would not under any circumstances make an order for the inspection of the reports confidently made to the court by its own medical advisers, but with this exception the general rule is to allow inspection by any person claiming an interest in the property of the deceased lunatic or alleged lunatic, and who can satisfy the court that he wants inspection for some reasonable and proper purpose. Documents in the custody of the masters in lunacy are not in the possession or power of a litigant, and if a judge in lunacy is applied to for inspection, privilege from discovery is an irrelevant topic for discussion, except so far as it may bear upon the exercise by the court of its discretion in the matter. The duty of the court is to act with perfect impartiality between the parties before it, not assisting either against the other or more than the other where neither can establish any right to such assistance. Therefore, where an inquiry in lunacy was directed, but the alleged lunatic died before anything further was done, and the same issues were raised in a subsequent probate action, a party to such action who claimed under the deceased was not allowed to inspect affidavits filed in the lunacy proceedings, inasmuch as the applicant wanted inspection, not to support her own case but to enable her to ascertain what allegations of mental incapacity were intended to be made at the trial of the probate action, so that she might have an opportunity of rebutting them. Strachan, In re, 64 L. J., Ch. 321; [1895] 1 Ch. 439; 12 R. 148; 72 L. T. 175; 43 W. R. 369; 59 J. P. 102; 60 J. P. 36—C. A.

Deeds and Documents.]—Before a committee had been appointed of a lunatic's estate the court made an order for the official solicitor to inspect the securities and other documents which the lunatic had deposited with a company for safe custody. Campbell, In re, 13 Ch. D. 323; 42 L. T. 108; 28 W. R. 480.

According to the practice in lunacy the court will order production of all documents in the custody of the master or registrar relating to the estate of a deceased lunatic on the application of a person claiming under him. But he must make out a primâ facie title to the estate. Smyth, In re, 50 L. J., Ch. 34; 15 Ch. D. 286; 43 L. T. 234; 28 W. R. 925.

A lunatic having died intestate, and an action having been commenced for recovery of his real estate:—Held, that the defendant, who produced primâ facie evidence of his being heir-at-law of the lunatic, was entitled to an order to inspect the documents relating to the estate which were in the custody of the registrars in lunacy, although it was sworn on the other side, and not contradicted, that the lands had descended to the lunatic from his mother, and that the defendant was no relation to the mother. Smyth, In re, 16 Ch. D. 673; 29 W. R. 585—C. A.

A party claiming to be heir to the lunatic, permitted after the possession of the estate had been given up to the parties reported to be the heirs, to inspect deeds and documents remaining in the master's office, which it seems may be retained till a proper investigation has taken place. Clarke, Ex parte, Jacob, 589; 23 R. R. 150.

But the court made an order in lunacy for the deeds to be retained in the master's office for inspection by the claimants. Ferrior, In re, Carrow v. Ferrior, 37 L. J., Ch. 571, n.; L. R. 3 Ch. 175; 18 L. T. 65; 16 W. R. 298.

—— Lunatic Deceased.]—Order of lunacy requisite for production and inspection of documents, &c., filed in office of master in lunacy where lunatic is deceased. Silcock, In re, 1 N. R. 4—L.JJ.

—— Lunatic Living.]—Order in lunacy requisite for production and inspection of documents filed in office of master in lunacy, where lunatic is living. Sartoris, In re, 1 N. R. 4—L.JJ.

3. Delivery out.

Title-deeds—Heir-at-Law.]—Heir-at-law of a lunatic applying for title-deeds out of court, after his death, must pay the costs of preliminary order. Pearson, In re, C. P. Cooper, 314.

Deeds delivered out upon report as to heir-at-law under order made after the lunatic's death. Ib.

—— Committee.]—Where the title-deeds of a lunatic's estate have been deposited in the master's office, the court will not direct them to be delivered out to the committee, unless circumstances are stated in affidavit showing that the due administration of the estate requires that they should be placed in the custody of the committee. Cooper, In re, 1 Myl. & Cr. 33.

j. Accounts.

Passing Accounts—Default by Committee—Costs.]—A committee should have the previous sanction of the court for not passing his accounts annually. Anon., 1 Russ. & M. 113.

The negligence of a committee is a sufficient reason, though there be no fraud, to induce the court to refuse him costs. Clarke, Ex parte, 1 Ves. 296.

Costs to committee of lunatic refused, because he had not passed his accounts regularly, though no fund. Ib.

Interest.]—Committee of lunatic, neglecting to pass his accounts, and retaining balances, charged with interest on the petition of a creditor. Hall, Ex parte, Jacob, 160.

Brother of lunatic, committee of the estate, had managed it nine years before the commission, during which time there were considerable savings; ordered to pay interest, though alleged he made no use of it, unless particular circumstances to justify that. Chumley, Ex parte, 1 Ves. 156.

—— Inquiry as to Money in Hands of Committee.]—Committee of lunatic's estate not permitted to pass his accounts without inquiry what money in his hands from time to time. Master to state particular circumstances. Catton, Ex parte, 1 Ves. 156.

—— Notice.]—In passing accounts of a lunatic's estate, notice should be given to the parties next entitled, but they are not allowed any costs. Wright, Ex parte, 2 Ves. 25.

Misapplication of Funds by Solicitor to Committee.]—A solicitor to committees received and misapplied part of the estate of the lunatic, and then died insolvent. The court, although it held the committees answerable, yet considering that, under the circumstances, the lunatic, if he recovered, would not enforce the liability, made a declaration that they were not to be charged with the loss, but the costs were not to be allowed out of the estate. Moore, In re, 23 L. J., Ch. 153—L.JJ.

Liability of Surety.]—The sureties in the recognisance of the committee of a lunatic for his obeying the orders of the lord chancellor, with respect to the lunatic's estate:—Held liable, on his making default, not only for the balance reported due from him, but also for the costs of the proceedings taken for enforcing the payment of such balance, although they may have had no notice of the default of their principal until after such proceedings taken. Lockey, In re, 1 Ph. 509; 14 L. J., Ch. 164.

Fixed Amount allowed for Maintenance.]—Where a fixed amount is allowed to the committee of a lunatic for maintenance, as a general rule the committee will not be required to pass accounts in a formal manner with vouchers. French, In re, 37 L. J., Ch. 537; L. R. 3 Ch. 317; 18 L. T. 139; 16 W. R. 657.

Where, however, an order allows the committee of the person such sum, not exceeding a certain fixed amount, as shall be applied for maintenance, the liability to keep accounts and prove how much has been expended is imposed upon the person receiving the money. Ib.

These rules, however, do not apply if the special circumstances of the case require them to be disregarded, as the court has jurisdiction to investigate the expenditure of the committee. Ib.

Passing Accounts—Payment of Rents by Committee to Wrong Person—Claim by Representatives of Lunatic.]—Where a committee of a lunatic received rents of his estate, and on the supposition that the right to those rents was not in the lunatic, but in a third person, paid them to such third person, the committee was not allowed to set up their final account passed in the lunacy as an answer to the claim of the lunatic's personal representative to the rents. Wright v. Chard, 4 Drew. 673; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 1334; 1 L. T. 138; 8 W. R. 35. Affirmed, 1 De G. F. & J. 567; 29 L. J., Ch. 415; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 476; 2 L. T. 104; 8 W. R. 334.

Where such a committee and trustee wrongly takes upon himself to decide to which of his two titles preference is to be given, he must, on appeal, bear all the costs of the whole suit, except so far as they may have been increased by a claim which failed in the court below. Ib.

On the death of a tenant for life of an estate in 1849, the estate, according to one view of the construction of a will disposing of it, devolved upon C. as trustee for Mrs. V.; according to another view it devolved upon W., a lunatic, the committee of whose estate C. was. Mr. and Mrs. V. entered into occupation of part of the estate, and C. received the rents of the remainder and paid them over to Mrs. V., with full notice that the persons who would, according to the second view of the construction, become entitled on the death of W. intended to assert their title. W. died in 1851. A bill was afterwards filed in 1856 by W.'s personal representative to compel C. to account for the rents received by him:—Held, that whether C., if he had not been committee of the lunatic, would have been liable so to account or not, his having filled that position made him clearly liable so to account. Ib.

Death of Lunatic—Order for Payment for past Maintenance without Reference.]—Where, on the death of the lunatic, no order having been made for maintenance, the former committee offered to consent to a payment by the interim committee for past maintenance to avoid the expense of a reference, the estate being inconsiderable, the court refused to sanction such payment, unless with consent of all parties interested in the surplus of the estate. Patrick, In re, 2 Ph. 394.

—— Lien of Committee.]—A committee of a lunatic has no special lien upon the estate after the death of the lunatic for money expended by him on his behalf: and a purchaser having notice of the claim of the committee, is no more bound to see to the application of the purchase-money than if he bought with notice of simple contract debts. Jones v. Noyes, 28 L. J., Ch. 47; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 1033; 7 W. R. 21.

—— Rents accrued since Death—Liability of Committee to Account.]—A lunatic was found by the court to be seised in fee of real estate, and certain persons were found to be his heirs. On his death intestate:—Held, that the committee of the person who had been put by the court into possession of certain part of the real estate, must deliver possession thereof to the heirs so found, but without prejudice to any question of title, and could not retain possession as an adverse claimant. Butler, In re, L. R. 1 Ch. 607.

Held, that the court could not order the committees of person and estate to deliver possession of other part of the estate, which the committee of the person had taken possession of claiming adversely to the heirs, and the committees were not accountable in lunacy for rents accrued since the death of the lunatic. Ib.

—— Liability of Solicitor for Committee to Account.]—Held, also, that the court could not, under its general jurisdiction, order a solicitor to account for rents so accrued and received by him as solicitor for the committee of the estate. Ib.

Action for Account—Jurisdiction.]—The court of chancery, in the exercise of its ordinary equitable jurisdiction, can entertain a suit against a committee of a lunatic's estate, asking for an account of his dealings therewith during the period of his committeeship. Scammell v. Light, 32 L. J., Ch. 53; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 1122; 7 L. T. 414; 11 W. R. 83; 1 N. R. 83.

L. and T. were appointed executors and trustees of the will of S., who was subsequently, by inquisition, found to be a lunatic. T. only proved the will. He had previously thereto been appointed committee of the person and estate of the lunatic. A bill was filed against L. and T. for the administration of the estate, and that accounts of the dealings and transactions of L. and T., in respect of the estate, between the date of lunacy of S. and his death, and of the moneys received by them in respect thereof, might be ascertained, and that the defendants might be charged with the balances and interest thereon. T. demurred to so much of the bill as prayed for accounts, between the date of lunacy and the death of the testator, and as sought for discovery for the purpose of taking such accounts upon the ground that the court of chancery had not jurisdiction to take such account, and that it should be taken in lunacy, and that the plaintiffs were not entitled to any relief or discovery against him. But the demurrer was overruled with costs. Ib.

Trustee—Injunction against—Costs of Committee.]—The costs of lunatic's committee not entitled to be paid by a trustee, the costs of an injunction to restrain the transfer of a fund standing in the name of the trustee, on the death of the lunatic. Toledo v. Vieta, 7 Jur. 336.

k. Costs of Proceedings.

Commission — Groundless Petition.] — If a petition for a commission be wholly groundless, it will be dismissed with costs. Ward, Ex parte, 6 Ves. 579.

—— Never acted upon.]—Lunacy commission kept back for several years, and not acted on, is a contempt of court, and will be discharged with costs. Anon., 2 Atk. 52.

No costs to a party suing out a commission of lunacy, which was never acted upon and afterwards superseded; because the property never having come into the possession of the crown, there is no fund out of which the costs can be given. Glover, Ex parte, 1 Mer. 269.

—— Death of Lunatic before Taxation.]—The wife of A. B. sued out a commission of lunacy, under which he was found a lunatic, and an order was made for taxation of the costs; but before taxation the lunatic died:—Held, that assuming the proceedings to have been proper, the solicitor of the wife was entitled to stand as a creditor against the lunatic's estate in respect of his bill of costs, and to institute a creditor's suit to enforce his right. Chester v. Rolfe, Rutter, In re, 4 De G. M. & G. 798; 23 L. J., Ch. 233; 18 Jur. 114; 2 Eq. R. 19.

Whether he would have been so entitled if employed by a person who was sui juris, quære. Ib.

—— Payment of Costs out of Real Estate.]—Payment of costs of commission out of lunatic's real estate, and the lunatic having died since the return of the commission, leaving no personal estate, refused, the act 11 Geo. 4 & 1 Will. 4, c. 65, s. 28, not applying. Tubb, In re, 1 Jur. 653.

Held, that the costs of a commission of lunacy, and of the trial of a traverse, in which the commission was confirmed, constituted a debt within the meaning of the 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 104, against the real estate of the lunatic, who had died before any order made for payment of the costs. Williams v. Wentworth, 5 Beav. 325.

—— Costs of Opposition.]—Where costs are incurred in opposing a commission of inquiry as to the state of mind of a party and the opposition fails, although circumstances are stated showing previous knowledge and that the opposition was vexatious, a solicitor will be allowed the costs of opposition as between solicitor and client. Field v. Turner, 3 W. R. 469.

—— Recovery of Lunatic—Costs of Petition.]—The wife of a gentleman alleged to be a lunatic, and who was separated from her, presented a petition praying an inquiry into the state of his mind. The petition being ordered to stand over, the husband in the meantime recovered, and it was held, that, unless there were grave reasons against such a course, the costs of the petition must be paid by the alleged lunatic. F——, In re, 2 De G. J. & S. 89; 33 L. J., Ch. 333; 9 L. T. 698.

A father sued out a commission of lunacy against his son, under which he was found lunatic. Before, however, committees either of his person or estate were appointed, and before also his property had come into the possession of the crown, he recovered his sanity. Upon an application by the son to supersede the commission:—Held, that the court had not jurisdiction to make any order against the son for payment of the father's costs of the commission; but such decision was without prejudice to any action the father might bring against his son. Anon., 4 De G. & J. 103; 28 L. J., Ch. 644; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 662.

—— Pendency of Traverse.]—The costs of issuing a commission of lunacy, if for the lunatic's benefit and after the lunatic's death, may be proved against the lunatic's estate, notwithstanding the pendency of a traverse of the inquisition. Cumming, In re, 5 De G. M. & G. 30; 23 L. J., Ch. 261; 18 Jur. 181; 2 W. R. 248.

—— Death of Lunatic—Fund in Court.]—Costs of a commission of lunacy, which had been taxed during the lifetime of the lunatic, ordered to be paid after his death out of funds to which he was entitled, and which at his death were standing to the credit of a cause to which he was a party. Tayler v. Tayler, 3 Mac. & G. 426.

—— Procedure for obtaining Payment.]—Where a commission de lunatico inquirendo has been properly sued out by a solicitor, at the instance of the lunatic's wife, and there is no fund in the lunacy, the solicitor may, in the event of the death of the lunatic, proceed by summons upon his personal representatives, calling upon them for payment of his demand for the costs of the commission, or for the usual administration accounts. Chester v. Rolfe, Rutter, In re, 4 De G. M. & G. 798; 23 L. J., Ch. 233; 18 Jur. 114; 2 Eq. R. 19.

—— Petition—Attendance of Parties Interested.]—Where a petition for a commission of lunacy stated that the alleged lunatic had been of unsound mind for upwards of thirty years, a cestui que trust, under a settlement made during this period, was allowed to attend the execution of the commission, upon an undertaking to abide by such order as the court might make as to the increased costs occasioned by the attendance. Richards, In re, 1 De G. M. & G. 719; 21 L. J., Ch. 739; 16 Jur. 508.

—— Opposition by Nearest Relatives.]—The nearest relations of a supposed lunatic ordered to pay the costs occasioned by their opposition to a petition for a commission of lunacy presented by strangers to the family. Smith, In re, 1 Russ. 348.

Inquiry—Costs of Petitioner.]—In an inquiry as to an alleged lunacy, the costs of the petitioner were ordered to be paid out of the estate of the alleged lunatic, notwithstanding that the alleged lunatic had recovered and was certified to be of sound mind. Anon., 3 N. R. 272.

—— Expenses and Costs of Defence.]—The court has jurisdiction, where an inquiry as to the unsoundness of mind of an alleged lunatic is pending, to sanction an allowance for the necessary household expenses of the alleged lunatic, and for the expenses of preparing his defence upon the inquiry. Bullock, In re, 55 L. T. 722; 35 W. R. 109—C. A.

—— Charges of Witness.]—An inquiry having been ordered under the Lunacy Regulation Acts whether or not the defendant was of unsound mind, the plaintiff, a medical man, was employed by the defendant's solicitor to examine the defendant, for the purpose of giving evidence at the inquiry, but notwithstanding such evidence the defendant was found to be a lunatic. The plaintiff subsequently brought an action in the county court against the defendant for his charges in respect of the services so rendered by him, but was nonsuited on the ground that he could not recover such charges without an order under the above-mentioned section:—Held, that s. 11 of the Lunacy Regulation Act, 1862, did not take away or affect the plaintiff's right of action, assuming the action to be in other respects maintainable, and therefore that the nonsuit was wrong and there must be a new trial. Brockwell v. Bullock, 58 L. J., Q. B. 289; 22 Q. B. D. 567; 37 W. R. 455; 53 J. P. 405; 54 J. P. 19—C. A.

—— Medical Witnesses—Remuneration of.]—Previously to an inquisition of lunacy held in the case of Mrs. C., who was alleged and found to be of unsound mind, she was attended by several physicians, as well in their ordinary capacity as for the purpose of preparing themselves to give evidence in her favour upon the inquisition in question. They received at the time no remuneration for their services except in the case of one of them, to whom a promissory note was given by the lady, bearing date subsequently to the period at which her imbecility was afterwards declared to have begun. Under a suit to administer her estate, these gentlemen applied by motion to vary a certificate of the chief clerk, by adding their names to the schedule of creditors, in respect of their claims for the above services : — Held, that they were not entitled to be included in such schedule, and that their fees ought to have been paid and claimed by the solicitor of the lady; but the amount of the promissory note given to one of their number was ordered to be allowed to him. Elliott v. Ince, 4 W. R. 515.

—— Costs—Alleged Lunatic found of Sound Mind.]—When an inquiry as to the lunacy of a supposed lunatic had been based upon the report of the commissioners in lunacy, and had resulted in his being declared of sound mind, the court ordered the costs of the proceedings in lunacy and of the inquiry to be paid out of the supposed lunatic's estate. C——, In re, L. R. 10 Ch. 75 ; 23 W. R. 377.

A petition presented by a husband for an inquiry into the mental condition of his wife resulted in a finding that she was of sound mind and capable of managing herself and her affairs. The petitioner applied that the court should, in the discretion given to it by s. 109 of the Lunacy Act, 1890, direct his costs to be paid by the respondent. The costs were very large, and the petitioner would have been almost ruined if obliged to pay his own costs. The respondent had considerable property. The court was of opinion that there were ample grounds for instituting an inquiry, and that the petitioner had acted bonâ fide in the interests of his wife, but his conduct had been such as to excite great hostility in her, thereby probably causing extra expense :—Held, that the petitioner's costs must be taxed as between party and party, and two-thirds of the taxed amount must be paid out of a sum of 10,000*l.*, part of his wife's estate, in which he claimed an interest, but which claim he waived so far as was necessary for the payment of the costs. The points to be considered by the court in exercising its discretion under s. 109 of the act stated and discussed. Cathcart, In re, 61 L. J., Ch. 99 ; [1892] 1 Ch. 549 ; 66 L. T. 9 ; 40 W. R. 257—C. A.

Discretion of Judge in Lunacy—Appeal.]—Where the result of a lunacy inquiry is that the person who was alleged to be a lunatic is found to be of sound mind, the judges sitting in lunacy, in exercising their discretion over the costs of the inquiry under s. 109 of the Lunacy Act, 1890, may, if the application for the inquiry seems to them to have been prompted by a desire to protect the person and property of the alleged lunatic, and to have been made on reasonable grounds and in a reasonable manner, order the costs of the applicant to be paid by the person who was alleged to be a lunatic. An appeal lies to the Court of Appeal from the Lords Justices sitting in lunacy, where the latter have made an order under s. 109 of the Lunacy Act, 1890, dealing with the costs of a lunacy inquiry. Cathcart, In re, 62 L. J., Ch. 320 ; [1893] 1 Ch. 466 ; 2 R. 268 ; 68 L. T. 358 ; 41 W. R. 277—C. A.

Inquiry—Costs—Alleged Lunatic found of Sound Mind—Costs of Alleged Lunatic.]—An inquiry was ordered as to the sanity of a young man of large property, on the application of a number of his relations. The inquiry was proceeded with, and the verdict was that the alleged lunatic was of sound mind. He then presented a petition praying that the applicants might be ordered to pay him his costs incurred on the application for the inquiry in the proceedings, on the inquiry, and on the present application. The court being satisfied that the conduct of the alleged lunatic had been such as to render it very doubtful whether he was sane, and that the application had been made bonâ fide, without any personal motive, and with a view to his best interests :—Held, that assuming the court to have jurisdiction to order the applicants to pay the costs, such an order ought not to be made. Windham, In re, 4 De G. F. & J. 53 ; 31 L. J., Ch. 720 ; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 448 ; 6 L. T. 479 ; 10 W. R. 499.

Traverse—Successful—Costs of Commission.]—After the finding of a jury upon a traverse of an inquisition of lunacy, that the alleged lunatic is of sound mind, the court acting in the jurisdiction in lunacy has no authority, under the 6 Geo. 4, c. 53, or otherwise, to direct payment out of the property of the alleged lunatic, of any costs incurred with reference to the commission, although the verdict upon the traverse does not negative the lunacy at the time of the original inquisition. Loveday, Ex parte, 1 De G. M. & G. 275 ; 21 L. J., Ch. 231 ; 16 Jur. 95.

Upon the return of the traverse to the inquisition of lunacy, finding that the party was a lunatic at the time of her marriage, and at the time of taking the inquisition, but at that time (the verdict) was not a lunatic, the commission was superseded ; but the lord chancellor doubted the propriety of such a double issue. No costs to the party taking out a commission of lunacy which is traversed with success, however meritorious the case : the property never coming to the possession of the crown, there is no fund. Ferne, Ex parte, 5 Ves. 832.

Traverse of a verdict of unsound mind, under a commission, being the right of the party, cannot be refused, and prevents the crown taking the custody, and consequently allowing the costs of the proceedings, however meritorious ; but they were given out of a fund of a lunatic in court in a cause, on the principle on which the court protects persons in a state of incapacity, though adult, and objects of a commission, assigning guardians, &c. Sherwood v. Sanderson, 19 Ves. 280 ; G. Cooper, 108 ; 13 R. R. 193.

—— Wife's Costs—Application made without Leave.]—Held, upon the wife's petition, that court had no power to order money to be paid to her out of the produce of the lunatic's property, to enable her to traverse the inquisition, which she had got leave to do. Nugent, Ex parte, 2 Moll. 486.

—— Unsuccessful—Costs.]—The costs of an unsuccessful traverse of an inquisition of lunacy allowed out of the lunatic's estate. Wentworth v. Tubb, 2 Y. & C. C. C. 537 ; 5 Jur. 1150 ; 6 Jur. 980 ; 7 Jur. 738.

Solicitor—Lien for Costs.]—Where a suit was instituted against A. and his wife, and B. and his wife, and others, by a solicitor, for the purpose of obtaining a declaration that the amount of his bill of costs, incurred in lunacy proceedings taken against C., the mother of the married women, at their and their husbands' request, and upon the faith of representations made by them in reference to C.'s estates, was payable out of the copyhold estates which, upon the death of C., descended upon the married women as her co-heiresses in tail:—Held, that as there was no allegation that the property which the married women, as co-heiresses, sought to protect was to be subject to any demand in respect of costs, and as there was no evidence that they clearly and distinctly represented to the solicitor that their estates in the copyholds should be liable to make good the remuneration for his professional services; but that as it appeared that the person and estates sought to be protected were C.'s; that it was, according to the solicitor's allegations, her property to which he must look for his reimbursement of the expenses of the proceedings; that his evidence showed that the representations made related to, and that the married women were desirous of having, proceedings taken in regard to her lunacy to protect her property and their own interests as co-heiresses, the case failed, and that the bill, as against A. and his wife, and the wife of B., and the trustee of the settlement of A. and his wife, must be dismissed, but without costs. Turner v. Ince, 5 Jur. (N.S.) 1072.

But B. and his assignees in bankruptcy consenting, it was declared that the solicitor had a lien for his bill of costs against the interest, if any, of B., in right of his wife, in a moiety of the property. Ib.

Solicitor—Order to Tax—Delay.]—Solicitors, who claimed costs for taking out the commission, and for other business in the lunacy, obtained an order for taxation, but did not tax. Five years after the order, the lunatic died, leaving real estate, but no personal property. The solicitors sued the committees at law, but they set up the statute of limitations, and the action failed. The solicitors now presented a petition, praying an order for taxation, with a view to proceedings to make the real estate liable, and the court made the order, but without prejudice to any question whether the petitioners had any claim on the lunatic's estate. Hart, In re, 21 L. J., Ch. 810.

An order in lunacy directing the taxation of the costs, charges, and expenses incurred by the solicitors employed in prosecuting the commission in lunacy, and subsequently as the solicitors of the committees, and directing an inquiry whether it would be fit and proper to raise these costs, &c., by sale or mortgage of the lunatic's real estate, did not constitute them a judgment debt, nor make them a charge in equity upon such real estate; but such costs, &c., were considered as a simple contract debt due by the lunatic for necessaries. The lapse of six years during the lunatic's life will not bar a debt of this description, for the court of chancery will take judicial notice in a suit to obtain payment out of his assets after his death, that any action against the lunatic for the recovery of the claim would have been restrained by the lord chancellor on petition in lunacy. Stedman v. Hart, Kay, 607; 23 L. J., Ch. 908; 18 Jur. 744; 2 W. R. 462.

—— Petition presented for Personal Profit of.]—A petition for inquiry into the state of mind of a lady was presented by a neighbour who was no relation of the supposed lunatic. The medical visitor appointed by the court reported that there were grounds for an inquiry, and an inquiry was held some months later before a jury. The jury returned a verdict that the lady was of sound mind and capable of managing her own affairs. After the verdict the petitioner obtained a letter from his solicitor indemnifying him against the costs of the petition. The petitioner then presented a second petition, asking for the payment of his costs out of the lady's estate under the Lunacy Regulation Act, 1862 (25 & 26 Vict. c. 86), s. 11. Another petition was presented by the lady asking that her costs should be paid by the petitioner for the inquiry. The court declined to make any order as to costs on either petition, being of opinion that, though the visitor's report showed that an inquiry was justified, the inquiry in this case had been really set on foot by the petitioner's solicitor for his own profit. S., In re, 46 L. J., Ch. 233; 4 Ch. D. 301; 35 L. T. 828; 25 W. R. 133—C. A.

—— Action for Costs.]—A solicitor employed on part of a lunatic can have no action against him for his bill of costs. Barnesley v. Powell, Ambl. 102.

—— Misappropriation by — Proceedings against Estate—Benefit of Lunatic.]—Where the committee of a lunatic allowed a solicitor to receive part of the estate of the lunatic, and the solicitor misapplied the money so received, and died insolvent:—Held, that although the committees were answerable for the acts of their agent, yet, under peculiar and special circumstances, the court made a declaration that the committees should not be charged with the loss to the lunatic's estate; but costs of ascertaining whether it would be for the benefit of the lunatic that proceedings should be commenced against the estate of the deceased solicitor, were not allowed to the committees out of the lunatic's estate. Moore, In re, 23 L. J., Ch. 153—L.JJ.

Heir-at-law—Petition.]—The heir-at-law of a lunatic appearing on a petition relating solely to the life estate of a lunatic, is not entitled to costs. Dyneby, In re, 1 W. R. 294.

Solicitor—Death of Lunatic—Charging Order.]—Various costs were incurred in the lunacy of Mrs. C., who before her death took steps to traverse the lunacy. She died in June, 1853, intestate, equitably seised of an estate tail in copyhold estates, and in February, 1854, her solicitor in the lunacy obtained an order for the taxation of his bill of costs, and the taxation was completed in February, 1855. In October, 1860, he presented a petition under the 29th section of the 23 & 24 Vict. c. 127, praying for an order charging the lunatic's real estate with the costs:—Held, that whether his right to recover his costs accrued on the death of the lunatic, or when the order for taxation was obtained, his case was within the proviso of the 29th section, and that therefore his remedy under the statute against the real estate was barred. Turner, Ex parte, Cumming, In re, 2 De G. F. & J. 376; 30 L. J., Ch. 29; 3 L. T. 391; 9 W. R. 213.

Order charging Costs on Stock belonging to alleged Lunatic—Order for Sale or Transfer of Stock.]—If an order made under s. 109 of the Lunacy Act, 1890, charges the amount of such costs on stock standing in the name of the alleged lunatic, this does not constitute a charging order within the meaning of Ord. XLVI. r. 1; and, therefore, the procedure laid down in 1 & 2 Vict. c. 110 is not applicable. Cathcart, In re, 62 L. J., Ch. 320; [1893] 1 Ch. 466; 2 R. 268; 68 L. T. 358; 41 W. R. 277—C. A.

Such order may direct the alleged lunatic to transfer an amount of stock sufficient to satisfy the said costs; and if the alleged lunatic fails to comply with this direction, an order may be made under s. 14 of the Judicature Act, 1884, directing the official solicitor to make the necessary transfer. Ib.

Sale of Stock to Pay Costs.]—Stock of an intestate dead nearly twenty years being brought into court, an order for selling part thereof for costs in the lunacy of the sole next of kin, and for applying the dividends for such lunatic's maintenance before any report of the debts of the intestate, was refused. Radcliffe v. Carter, C. P. Cooper, 250.

Inquiry—To Pay Costs—Transfer of Mortgage vested in Lunatic.]—There was no available property of a lunatic wherewith to pay the costs of the inquiry as to his lunacy, and he was entitled to a mortgage of freeholds. The mortgage had been made under a power in a settlement. The trustee was dead, and there was no one competent to take a reconveyance, but a person had been found who was willing to take a transfer of the mortgage:—Held, that the court could effect this by ordering the lunatic's interest in the land to be sold, under s. 116 of the Lunacy Regulation Act, 1833, to pay the costs. Brown, In re, 50 L. T. 373—C. A.

Costs incurred by Wife of Lunatic.]—A gentleman was placed under restraint by his relations as being incapable of managing his affairs. He had previously had temporary fits of mental aberration, from which he had recovered. His wife, who was living separate from him, on hearing of this attack, sent medical men to inquire into his state, but they were not allowed to see him, nor was she allowed any communication with him. She thereupon took proceedings in lunacy. The husband in a few months recovered:—Held, that the wife's costs of the proceedings ought to be paid by the husband. F——, In re, 2 De G. J. & S. 89; 33 L. J., Ch. 333; 9 L. T. 698.

Death of Lunatic before Appointment of Committee of Estate—Costs of Inquisition.]—A person was found to be a lunatic by inquisition, but died before a committee of her estate had been appointed. On an application under the Lunacy Regulation Act, the court made a declaration that the costs of the inquisition had been properly incurred, and ought to be paid out of the deceased lunatic's estate in a due course of administration. Meares, In re, 48 L. J., Ch. 190; 10 Ch. D. 552; 40 L. T. 111; 27 W. R. 369.
